FINANCE COMMITTEE BREAKS INTO GARBAGE PUBLICITY FIELD

Mayor Stone Rapped For His Attitude When Budget Was Under Consideration

Interesting Flash Light on Municipal Methods and Finances

The finance committee over their own signatures have broken into publicity, on the garbage problem. The caption of their statement is, "Statement from the finance committee regarding the recent tempest in a garbage pail. As the signatures were all type written, the Editor of the Ledger took the precaution to ascertain the authenticity of the produce and telephone to Chairman John R. Richard, who vouched for the article and stated that all the members of the committee, agreed to the statement and had signed it.

The story of the finance committee is as follows:

As most of the publicity given by the press of Quincy on the garbage collection has evidently been inspired by individuals aiming to present only one side of the controversy, the Finance Committee of the City Council believe it wise to put before the citizens the facts in the matter.

At the time the budget was under consideration the amount appropriated to the Board of Health for collection of garbage was $6000, that being the sum suggested and approved by Mayor Stone, although members of the Finance Committee claimed the amount to be insufficient. At this time the Mayor agreed to make all department heads keep their expenses within their appropriations, even though the chairman of the Board of Health stated in open council that the amount allotted to his department was not sufficient.

At two separate times since the budget was passed, and in ample time to have included a supplementary appropriation in the tax levy for this year, the attention of the Mayor was directed in Council meetings to the fact that the appropriation for garbage collection would not last for more than three-quarters of the year, from estimates based on monthly expenditures.

When the appropriation was exhausted, an order was introduced into the Council for the apropriation of $2000 to be taken from the miscellaneous city receipts. When the order came before the Finance Committee it was agreed that as the estimated city receipts for the year had already been appropriated, there was no money available for the purpose. As a matter of detail the Auditor's statement showed that of estimated receipts of $78,000, $65,000 had been appropriated by the Council, and $13,000 by the Assessors, and that until money in excess of $78,000 had actually been received there were no funds to appropriate.

The committee were assured that there were no unexpended balances available for transfer to garbage collection account. There appeared but the one alternative, to borrow the money. This method is honest and above board, although unquestionably it is very poor business, so poor in fact that seven of the councilmen by their votes recorded their condemnation of the method of saddling this year's expenses over onto next year. The committee considered it wise to attach the borrowing clause and submit it to the Council for their decision, although the MAJORITY OF THEIR MEMBERS WERE UNWILLING TO VOTE in Council for the amended order.

There has been consistent effort on the part of this year's Finance Committee to have their actions stand the test of careful investigation of right-thinking citizens, and the deliberate attempt to charge up the mismanaged conditions of the matter under controversy to the members of the Council who have dared to be honest is a display of petty politics that should be condemned.

The action of the City Council on Saturday night in ordering the transfer of unexpended appropriations to the relief of the Board of Health was a measure that should have been originally recommended by the executive department, so it would seem that the final analysis proves the Finance Committee and the Council to have had the right of the argument.

Men and Women Active in the Demonstration. Pretty Tired and Glad to Rest When the End Came

South and West Quincy, after a day of excitement, is today normal, and the men who suspended work Monday as a protest against Caruso, Ettor and Giovannitti being longer imprisoned at Lawrence, returned to work this morning. Monday the streets were lined with sympathizing laborers mostly Italians and a few Finns. Today it is hard to imagine the prevailing excitement and the intensity of feeling which prompted nearly 1000 men and a few women to parade the streets of Quincy.

The demonstration was recommended by speakers of the I. W. W. at a mass meeting at the Liberty street field Sunday, September 22. Elizabeth Gurley Flynn pointed out the way to show the disproval and Carlo Tresca, a Lawrence Italian agitator urged his countrymen to desperate measures on September 30.

The tinder that was lighted by the last speaker was nursed to a flame by Umberto Gerussi, and Monday morning when he declared a suspension of work the men followed him if they believed in the action of the Ettor and Giovinnitti defence committee.

The early recruits, impelled by a sincere feeling of protest, marched in a group through the granite cutting section. Fellow countrymen, fellow society members, non-sympathizers all who were approached by the pickets immediately dropped their tools and joined the march. Some were influenced by the threats of punishment, others not caring to incur the hatred of their friends declared for the movement, but on the whole, there were few who really knew why they were in league with the leaders, and many did not care.

NEW AGREEMENT MORE FAVORABLE

For Direct Transfer of Freight Over Street Car Lines

CENTRAL DEPOT TO COME

Under an agreement entered into Monday between the Bay State and Boston L. railways it will now be possible for the Bay State Co., to run trolley freight cars directly into Boston. Up to the present time owing to satisfactory arrangements not having been made the Bay State Co., has only been able to run its Quincy trolley freight cars as far as its station at Neponset from which point the freight and express matter was transferred to Boston proper by an auto truck.

Monday the Boston L entered into a contract with the other companies doing a trolley express business whereby a freight station will be established in Boston from which point the freight and express matter will be loaded into the trolley freight cars.

It is understood that a temporary freight depot will be established at the Albany street power station of the Elevated and that later a central freight depot will be established nearer the heart of the market district, and that the trolley freight will be operated on all lines of the Elevated.

MANY CHANCES DEVELOPED IN RECOUNT OF SENATORIAL VOTE

With Canton Missing, Wolcott Leads Langelier by Eleven Votes

Flop Over in Hyde Park Section Favors Wolcott

As a result of the recount of the votes in Quincy Monday night for the Republican nomination for senator from the First Norfolk district Louis F. R. Langelier made a net gain of eight votes in Quincy. The principal change came in the Ward Six ballots. By the returns as given out after the caucus the Quincy vote stood as follows:

Campbell	75
Langelier	958
Wolcott	345
Blanks	85

The recount revises the vote of the city as follows:

Campbell	76
Langelier	966
Blanks	76

There were changes of a vote or two in several of the wards. That is Wolcott or Langelier would gain or lose a vote but there was no great change until it came to the recount of the votes in Ward Six Mr. Langeliers home ward.

Here there was quite a change and it was due to an error of the counters in this ward that Mr. Langelier made his great gain. It appeared that there were fourteen votes which the caucus officers had counted as blanks nine of which the Registrars of voters counted as votes. Of these nine votes Langelier was given eight and Wolcott one. Just how the caucus officers could make this mistake is a question but it is thought that when they came to tally up their sheets that it needed nine votes to make the count balance, and rather than go over the ballots again the missing number was set down as blanks. There were also some minor changes in some of the other wards the result of the revised count being as given above. By these figures it will be seen that Langelier made a net gain of eight votes in Quincy.

The figures of the Quincy vote for Senator as returned by the caucus officers and by the Registratrars of Voters are as follows:

RECOUNT

Ward One	19	179	109	20

Ward Six	11	214	30	14
Totals	76	958	345	85

This morning the vote in Hyde Park was recounted both Mr. Langelier and Mr. Wolcott being present. There have been many rumors of changes in this town, or rather ward, as it is now Ward 26 of Boston, and these rumors were fully verified at the recount this morning.

By the caucus returns Wolcott was given a majority over Langilier of 76, but by the recount his majority is increased to 154. It will be seen by this that in the recount Wolcott made a gain of 78, and Langilier a loss of 21, while Campbell made a gain of 29.

All of the towns in the district have now been recounted with the exception of Canton, where the recount will be held Wednesday evening.

After the recount had been completed Mr. Langilier congratulated Mr. Wolcott and after acknowledging that he was defeated wished the successful candidate all success and promised to do what he could for his election.

All of the towns in the district have now been recounted with the exception of Canton where the recount will be held Wednesday evening. The caucus officers returns in this town gave Campbell 15, Langelier 44 and Wolcott 116. Without Canton it will be seen by the following tables that Wolcott now has a majority over Langelier of 11. The recount and caucus officers returns of the district follow:

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Col. Kincaide and Major Williamson have read a lesson to candidates of all parties in campaigning, which it would be well to follow.

The Langtry idea of male dress may be picturesque, but in practical every day use, it would look sadly out of place in a machine shop or office.

The public is cautioned against paying higher prices than those fixed by the commission for the World's series games. The commission has certainly gone the limit and left nothing for the scalpers to get a strangle hold on.

That was rather a broad threat a Boston striking waiter made with regard to serving the police and chickens with high ball. And according to the up to date slang dictionary, the chickens were by no means dead cold birds, but sports of the first water.

The Worcester minister who has started a matrimonial bureau might find some more profitable occupation for his spare time.

"Police and strikers battle," "riot follows parade," "troops called out," appear to be popular headlines of the newspapers these days.

One Boston minister raps the base ball fans and another says the city is equal to pleasure loving Corinth, all of which make more tallies against the high cost of living score.

As ticket scalpers are licensed in New York and ply their trade in the open how is the base ball commission to prevent those gentlemen turning a few honest pennies, if they get their grip on a bundle of tickets?

If the United States butts into Mexican affairs where will the affair end? Let the men who are credited with supplying the money for the first revolution to satisfy their selfish aims go down there and look after their property.

Jack Johnson's retirement from the prize ring is like that of the average politician or the farewell tour of European artists. It is getting to be perennial.

President Taft is to be commended for the calm, wise, practical and judicial course he is pursuing in the Mexican situation. A Jingo president at this time would be disastrous to peace and might mean a turmoil right at home which would take some time to quiet.

In the meantime the candidates for office are telling of the evils existing, and to come with the election of the other fellow, but when simmered right down has any of them offered a practical, common sense suggestion as to how an improvement can be brought about.

Mary Garden has announced that she will enter the matrimonial ring, inside of five years, and the other principal she declares will not be known as Mary Garden's husband. Mary evidently does not think much of the suffragette movement.

One man has had the courage to call Gov. Johnson of California to account for his language to the president. Mr. Johnson in his intemperate remarks that he is addressing the chief executive of over 100,000,000 people.

All is smooth sailing now as the garbage will be removed and the piggies assured of their daily rations.

AN OPEN THREAT.

The waiters of Boston, who are on strike have a grievance against the police for alleged uncalled for activity in arresting some of the members of the union when parading. The justice or injustice of the arrests of course is for the courts to determine, but one of the speakers at a meeting of the striking waiters came right out into open meeting with a threat that some of the police would be losing their buttons, "if they do their duty as assiduously on the street, as they do to the chickens and high balls in the hotels where the waiters have been employed."

Of course no one at all conversant with present day slang can innocently lift their eyes and ask if the poor policemen are to be censured for partaking of chicken after their arduous duties. The reference is by no means to be confined to a dead cold bird, but to a more lively critter, found around the various hotels, and palm gardens of Boston.

It is a hard blow at the Boston police force. That it should be taken liberally as applying to every member of the force is an absurdity.

In justice to the police force as a whole the person making such assertions should be made to tell all he knows or hold his peace. To reiterate that time honored phrase he has "told either too much or too little," and no doubt the people of Boston would like to know just which he has done.

SURPRISE UNWARRANTED.

A correspondent in another column, innocently remarks that it was a surprise to him that Mr. Langelier's nomination fell short by such a few votes. He says that one might be surprised to know that he criticises the lack of appreciation of Mr. Langelier's record, when he acknowledges that he did not go to the polls. Well it may not be considered so much a matter of surprise as good healthy nerve for one to jump into the arena and criticise people for exercising their right to vote at the caucuses and using that right as they saw fit, because the majority did not vote according to the standards of a man who did not take interest enough in the contest to attend the caucuses.

Mr. Langelier undoubtedly had a good record in the legislature. That he stood well in the Quincy end of the district is shown by the handsome endorsement which Quincy people gave him. But it looks somewhat nervy for any one to criticise the voters for their failure to nominate him when that critic is of the stay at home class who later acknowledges Mr. Langelier's worth and laments the fact that he failed to get the nomination.

If 17 men with the same feeling for Mr. Langelier and entertaining the same sentiments as the critic had gone to the polls, and registered their choice, Mr. Langelier would have received the nomination.

Their action would have been a rebuke of what he terms "party machine" endorsement.

This standing aloof and letting the other fellow carry off the plums may be high minded, lofty and ideal, but in the long run, it does not get the candidate or the advocates of such a propaganda much on which they cling to in the form of a life preserver to maintain their rights.

This vigorous protest against an existing system or condition, that is objectionable is most commendable but experience teaches that the only way such methods can be checked is by the ballot.

If Mr. Langelier is opposed to the present caucus system and we do not contend by any means that it is ideal, in fact believe that there is much in it which could be remedied to the general good, than the men who staid away from the polls, who favored his candidacy, not only did him a gross injustice but deprived themselves of one of the wedges, which if properly entered can upset any obnoxious system. Mr. Langelier would, with others have been elected upon a platform of "reforming the caucus law."

There are few citizens who do not believe that there is good opportunity for change for the better, but this staying away from the caucuses indicates nothing of this kind, and even if it did, what do the machine men care about such a silent and negligible protest. It is the protest of the ballot that counts in the long run and will win its cause.

HOSPITAL WEEK IS COMING SOON

To the Generous Public:

In about a fortnight will begin a Hospital Week campaign different from anything yet seen in Quincy. To state the matter frankly and bluntly at the very start, the City Hospital of Quincy at the present moment needs Thirty-Five Thousand Dollars to free itself from debt and pay annual expenses. That proposition will surely interest everybody, and possibly it may take away a few breaths! To raise thirty-five thousand dollars in a week, right off the reel, is, as the boys would say, "some job!" But it is not always the biggest job that drags the hardest, not if it enlists the eager and enthusiastic support of a whole city.

In one of the levee towns on the Mississippi there was a big mud-puddle right in the middle of a main street side-walk where almost everybody walked every day, and that whole blessed populac walked around and straddled over that mud-puddle all summer, without any one taking enough interest in the nuisance to bring a barrow of dirt and fill up the hole! But in the spring the "Father of Waters" rose in his might and threatened to break the levee and flood the whole town. Here was work cut out for the entire population, and there was no lack of energy and fierce activity day or night until the threatened disaster was fended off. So the herculean and seemingly impossible task was finished in short order, while the little nuisance probably hasn't been abated yet.

Now, if the Hospital should put up a little red box somewhere, with a little hole in it for penny contributions towards patching the roof and setting broken glass, the appeal would arouse only slight interest, and the collection would drag on interminably. But to raise thirty-five thousand dollars in a week is a notion that is likely to lodge in the brain and stick there several days!

At frequent intervals before the campaign begins, short items will be published in this paper, giving ample reasons why the Hospital needs and deserves the generous support of every citizen of Quincy.

Dr. Crafts, Noted Lecturer, Will Speak on Social and Moral Reform

Quincy is to have the opportunity of hearing Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts, superintendent of the International Reform Bureau in Washington, D. C. on Tuesday evening, October 8, at 8 o'clock in Bethany church. Dr. Crafts is called the biggest man in the United States along the lines of social and moral reform. the promotion of purity, temperance and good citizenship. The bureau which he represents has for its platform and program the promotion of those Christian reforms on which the churches unite sociologically while differing theologically. It prefers cooperation to all associations that stand for the defense of the Sabbath and purity, for the suppression of intemperance, gambling and political corruption, for the substitution of arbitration and conciliation for both industrial and international war.

The subject of the address will be "That Boy and Girl of Yours" and the motto of this address is "Laugh and Learn." Dr. Crafts is described variously as being "a very animated and pleasing speaker," "a tall vigorous looking man, who speaks with a clear, strong voice and strikes straight out at the thing he wants to hit," "a man who gives complete satisfaction" and a man of numerous other attributes all of which are highly complimentary.

Dr. Craft comes here with the support of the churches, the Y. M. C. A. and other uplifting organizations.

HALL PLACE M. E. CHURCH.

Claims to Be Son of General Sickles' First Wife

ADVERTISES FOR HIS MOTHER

Has Been Searching For Her Twenty-Seven Years, After Having Been Abandoned by Her In 1858—Incident Happened About Time of Affair Which Led General to Take Key's Life

Hoboken, N. J., Oct. 1.—New interest was added to the life story of General Daniel E. Sickles, whose son recently made public the name of a New York society woman as having for years replaced the second Mrs. Sickles in his affections, when Alfred S. Molyoneux, a railroad employe at Hoboken, declared his belief he is the son of General Sickles by his first wife. So convinced is Molyoneux that he has advertised for the first wife of Sickles, from whom the general was divorced before the Civil war. Her maiden name was Teresa Bagnoli, daughter of a famous Italian musician.

While the aged general maintains his determination not to relent toward the second Mrs. Sickles, from whom he has been estranged for twenty-seven years and who recently saved his home from being taken up on a mortgage, he is confronted with this latest story.

Molyoneux, who is 54 years old, has been searching for his mother for twenty-seven years. Little by little, he says, there has been unfolded to him sufficient to convince him that his mother abondoned him and that General Sickles never knew of his existence.

The man who bears the name of Molyoneux grew up in New Jersey with the idea that his mother and father were Betsy and Henry Molyoneux. After their deaths he learned that he was only a foster child and in September, 1858, had been found in a carpet bag aboard a Camden and South Amboy train when it reached Jersey city.

He has found that Mrs. Mary King, a nurse, noticed that a handsome young woman on the train had kept her eyes on the bag, but had not taken it. When she called the attention of the conductor to it it was carried aboard the boat. There a noise was heard inside it. The bag was opened and a child in expensive clothes was found.

The young woman was on the boat. The captain mounted a barrel and called for the mother to come forward and take the infant. The young woman finally said she hoped he did not mean her. She was nervous; she seemed to think she had been singled out, and gave him a card with an address in Washington.

Mrs. King was found by Molyoneux and she told him that the young woman was Mrs. Daniel Sickles, then the wife of a congressman. The incident happened about the time of the estrangement of General Sickles and his first wife over the affair in which the beautiful wife became involved with Philip Barton Key and for which Key paid with his life.

The belief of the man who thinks he is the son of General Sickles is that his mother decided not to let the general know he had a son, and so abandoned him.

DID NOT ATTEND THE CAUCUSES

Voter Surprised at Result. 17 of Same Mind

WOULD HAVE UPSET THINGS

The following letter is self-explanatory:

Quincy, Mass., September 30, 1912

Editor Quincy Daily Ledger, The returns of the Caucus of September 24th show that Mr. Langelier's nomination was short of only a few votes. That is a surprise to me as well as to many others in the different wards of Quincy where his record is well known in the three years he served in the Legislature. You may find it surprising that I should be one of those to criticise that fact that he was not nominated, when I for one did not go to the polls at the Caucus.

If there was any way to vote directly for a candidate in any office, whatever the office he aspires to hold, and his record is as clean cut as Mr. Langelier's is, I would gladly do so. When I find that a candidate has to be indorsed by a party machine in order to get the nomination, I feel compelled to stand aloof, as my convictions run in a different way. I do not propose to be any man's slave, and I do not propose to sell my rights of independence to any man. Hence as a great many politicians use all the means they have in their power tto foster their interest in the political field, which means misrepresentation of the people instead of proper representation, I abstain from the Caucuses, as well as many a man that you may also know and whose surprise was not lesser than mine.

I stand for the liberty guaranteed by the Constitution of the U. S. A. and the Declaration of Independence, and consequently finding that the voting in the Caucuses or primaries is a violation of the spirit of both the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence, strongly protest against the practice and present system of voting. I believe as many a man I know do believe in voting directly for the candidates according to their merit and the record they have established for themselves. It is not a question of party it is a question of the man whom the constituents sent to represent them and not to misrepresent them, as is the case in many instances.

I stand for the free and direct ballot, and the secret ballot at that, for under the present system of voting you can easily find out how a man votes, and that is nobody's business but the man's own.

Now, if the report is true that Mr. Langelier has not been nominated at the Caucus, many of those who have the pleasure to know him would gladly indorse him as a candidate for Senator, in spite of any political machine, and show what the independent will of the people is, machine or no machine, and as he stands on his clean record, the people whom he has served before as a member of the Legislature for 1909-1910-1911, should make it a duty to themselves as well as a mark of gratitude to elect him as their Senator.

This unsolicited letter is sent you as a public protest against the present Caucus system wherein a citizen is obliged to label himself as a party man before he is able to select whom he thinks is the best candidate for nomination, and it is hoped that you will publish it in that spirit.

PARADERS' JOYOUS CARNIVAL

meeting at Malnati's hall aroused the wildest enthusiasm. A band was formed from men who had never played together before, and from 11 to one o'clock a quietness o'erspread the district, disturbed only by the music.

During the lull the situation was generally discussed by the men and shortly after one o'clock they gathered in front of the Finn hall, Garfield street, West Quincy, to form a parade.

While all were awaiting the coming of leader Gerussi, a Finn saw two baskets hidden beneath some underbrush in the hall yard. Overcome with the spirit of the day's demonstration, he gave a loud cry and the word "dynamite" electrified the air. A stampede in the direction of the find followed quickly and cooler heads examined the baskets and averted disorder.

When Chief Burrell, accompanied by eight uniformed men, arrived at the hall he went into conference with the leader. He examined the banners, and ordered a black flag, labeled "No God, No Boss" returned to the hall. A dispute arose over carrying the American flag and the West Quincy young Italians then and there declared the withdrawal of their sympathy if the stars and stripes was not carried. It may be mentioned it is said that these young men suspended through fear of bodily harm.

About two o'clock Caleb F. Howard gave the order to move and the crowd, four abreast swung down into Copeland street. Foreign merchants around Brewer's corner closed their business and others joined the line.

To the tune of the "Marsellaise" the line moved through Water street. Bunches of men sang the chorus and burst into cheers when Gerussi waved his hand. Passing the crossing at Quincy Adams they proceeded quietly along Franklin to School street.

The first act which called for criticism was a demonstration of defiance of religion, opposite the St. John's Catholic church. One of the marchers, in keeping with the Catholic custom of raising the hat when passing a church put his hand to the rim of his derby, raised it just above his head only to have it crushed down over his ears by surrounding countrymen.

As they swung outside the fountain opposite the headquarters of the granite cutters international association most of them hooted James Duncan's name. They swung their hats over their heads and expressed strongly their feeling against the A. F. of L. of which Mr. Duncan is first vice president.

When they reached Chubbuck street they were tired and dusty. The band was silent, their throats were parched and the twenty Finn women and children were showing signs of weariness.

The Citizens Gas Light Co., are laying a main iin front of the office of the Fore River plant and the Italian workmen jumped from their post when they saw the red flags and heard the Marsellaise. They were pulled into line without knowing why the crowd was marching.

The paraders expected to see several thousand workmen come out of the shipyards but they were disappointed. The paraders made an attempt to halt in front of the main office building of the shipyard, but as their permit called for the men to keep moving, Sergts. Bishop and Larkin insisted that the men obey.

Returning by Quincy avenue they reached the Liberty street field without any disturbance. Sympathizers, men, women, children, policemen and reporters, all squatted on mother earth, more dead than alive.

A speech from C. F. Howard was followed by a few remarks by Leader Gerussi. As he concluded an excited Italian interrupted him, asking why he did not tell the men to go to Salem with guns and show the police up. He maintained he was right and a West Quincy Italian nearly throttled him because he would not stop talking in such a wild way.

There was an address by Warren Carpenter of the I. W. W. headquarters in which the Ettor and Giovnnitti situation was reviewed.

Monday night howls of protest against the demonstration went skyward in West Quincy. Clubs with Italian members took steps to expel them for taking part in the demonstration, and the excuse of fear of bodily harm was all that prompted their associates to accept their friendship.

It is understood that a situation will develop between the granite cutters association and the I. W. W. Most of yesterdays paraders were stonecutters and belong to the association which is part of the A. F. of L. The majority however believe in the principles of the I. W. W. which opposes the A. F. of L. further disagreement between the men in Quincy is expected.

WOLLASTONITES HAD TO HUSTLE

Change In Train Service Upset Some of Their Breakfast Calculations

There was a hustle, even more so than usual, Monday morning, for the Wollaston commuters who, gulping down their last swallow of breakfast coffee and munching the last piece of toast, made in haste for the 8.33 train Boston bound.

The 8.33 now leaves at 8.32 in accordance with the new schedule that went into effect Sunday, and several leading citizens were caught napping One rather stocky individual who generally succeeds in just making connections had his calculations upset and after a futile sprint was forced to cool his heals at the Wollaston depot until the arrival of the 8.56.

This morning told a different story at Wollaston and many of the daily travellers went without that extra piece of toast just to make sure the pesky train didn't leave them behind.

LITTLE BOY'S DREAM.

The little boy smiled in his sleep that night,
As he wandered to Twilight Town;
And his face lit up with a heavenly light
Through the shadows that drifted down;
But he woke next morning with tear-stained eye
In the light of the gray dawn's gleam,
And from out the stillness we heard him cry,
"I've lost my dream—my dream."

And he told us then in his childish way
Of the wonderful dream he'd known;
He had wandered away from the land of play
To the distant Land of the Grown,
He had won his share of the fame and fight
In the struggle and toil of men:
And he sobbed and sighed in the breaking light,
"I want my dream again."

As the years passed by the Little Boy grew
Till he came to the Land of the Grown;
And the dream of his early youth came true,
The dream that he thought had flown;
Yet once again he smiled in his sleep—
When those nearby might have heard him weep,
"I want my dream—my dream!"
For he dreamed of the Yesterdays of Youth,
And the smile on a mother's face.

Prevailing Hard Luck.

The dear old gent was evidently a gatherer of statistics and with a beaming smile was gazing down the street. Suddenly he stepped up to a gentleman who was waiting for a train and, tapping him lightly on the shoulder, said, "Excuse me, but did you drop a five pound note?" at the same time holding out in his hand the article mentioned.

The gentleman questioned gazed a moment at the note, assumed an anxious look, made a hasty search of his pockets and said, "Why, so I did, and I hadn't missed it!" holding out an eager hand. The elderly hunter of statistics slowly drew forth his notebook and said, "I thought so." He then took the name and address of the loser and, putting the note in his pocket, turned away.

"Well," said the other, "do you want it all as a reward?"

"Oh, I did not find one," returned the benevolent one with another beam, "but it struck me that in a big place like London there must be a quantity of money lost, and upon inquiry I found that you are the one hundred and thirty-first man who has lost a five pound note this morning."—London Ideas.

HEN HOUSE AND HUT ON FIRE

Prompt Work of Department Prevented Spread to Other Buildings

A still alarm called out the Wollaston apparatus, shortly before 5 o'clock, Monday afternoon, for a brisk blaze in a disused hen-house off Beale street in the rear of the Merrymount dining rooms.

The building had been used as a clubhouse and hut by some boys of the vicinity and was evidently set off by youngsters.

A few well directed chemical streams put out the fire that at first seemed about to spread to nearby structures.

The building was situated in close proximity to the barn recently half destroyed by fire, the removal of which local improvement association has petitioned.

SAYS MRS. SZABO WAS STRANGLED

Physician's Testimony at Preliminary Hearing of Gibson

Goshen, N. Y., Oct. 1.—"I hope for the best." This was the brief statement made by Burton W. Gibson, the New York lawyer, before being arraigned in court here, charged with the murder of his erstwhile client, Mrs. Rosa Szabo. Mrs. Szabo met death death while boating with Gibson in Greenwood lake, this county, and the county authorities maintain that she was strangled, not drowned.

Dr. Otto H. Schultze of New York, a coroner's physician, took the witness stand and testified that Mrs. Szabo died of strangulation by compression on the throat and not of drowning.

MURPHY CONTROLS DE E ATES

May Back Governor Until Nominations Are Made and Then "Acquiesce" In Having Supreme Court Justice Named For Head of Ticket—Religious Issue Coming to the Front In New York

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 1.—On the day of the Democratic state convention the significant fact that stands out above all others is that Charles F. Murphy of Tammany Hall is in absolute control of the situation; even the insurgent Democrats admit that. Of the 450 delegates to the convention, Murphy controls all but 63, and some insist that 33 is the most that those who are opposed to his domination can muster. So the question on all sides is not whether Murphy can renominate Governor Dix, but whether he wishes to.

Murphy, since he has heard from his followers through the state from the delegates outside New York city, whom he controls, has began to doubt the wisdom of renominating Dix. In spite of the fact that failure to do so would be in effect a repudiation of the two years of Democratic state administration, Murphy has heard that "Dix is a dead duck" from the very delegates who will vote for Dix if he orders them to.

Many observers and not a few delegates believe that Murphy's game is to back Dix up to the time that nominations are to be made, then "confess his defeat" and "acquiesce" in the nomination of Victor J. Dowling, an associate justice of the supreme court of New York, a Tammany Hall man, a prominent Roman Catholic, an intimate friend of Senator O'Gorman and a candidate who would at the same time be acceptable to Governor Wilson.

There has been much talk of Dowling around Democratic headquarters for some time. There is considerable talk about him here now. If Murphy decides to force the nomination of Dix is bad politics it is said he will gladly "compromise" on Dowling. Both are loyal members of the Tammany Hall, although Dowling has a large following outside of the organization on account of his religious affiliations, while Dix has little support in the state except what he gets from Tammany and the organization.

It is realized by the Republicans who are watching events that Dowling would be a much more formidable candidate than Dix.

The placing of prominent Catholics like Dowling at the head of the Democratic ticket in New York with the approval of Wilson would, it is admitted, be good politics for the Democrats.

The keen interest in the state conventions of both parties in New York shows that the country expects that as goes New York next November will go the Union.

Senator O'Gorman was quoted by friends today as asserting that Governor Dix already had been "eliminated." The governor's adherents, however, insisted that his chances were as good as ever.

ROOSEVELT TO BLISS

Wrote In 1906 That He Was Not Influenced by Frauds

Washington, Oct. 1.—A letter from President Roosevelt to Cornelius N. Bliss, treasurer of the Republican campaign committee in 1896, 1900 and 1904, written in 1906, and specially denying that contributions had in any way influenced his attitude or actions toward any of the contributors, was the feature of the renewal of the investigation of the senate committee.

bookkeeping and all other documents further declared that he had refused to name James H. Hyde as minister to Belgium, despite the pressure brought to bear by certain "big financiers."

Every single letter, every scrap of bookkeeping and alll other documents whatsoever bearing upon contributions made to national Republican campaign funds for sixteen years, have been destroyed, according to sworn testimony before the investigating committee.

This testimony was given by Cornelius N. Bliss, son of the late treasurer of the Republican national committee. Bliss also told the committee there is no one now living who knows anything about the campaign contributions received by his father.

This is the vein which runs through Senator La Follette's series of five articles on Roosevelt and his candidacy, which will provide a weekly thrill in the campaign, beginning Friday, when the first will be printed in La Follette's magazine.

La Follette says Roosevelt offered to let him write every word of the platform if he (La Follette) would get out of the race. La Follette refused, because he believed Roosevelt to be a fake Progressive.

NO TEMPORIZING

Taft Advises Third Party Men to Get Into Line

Beverly, Mass., Oct. 1.—"Some of the people now posing as third party men will wake up after the election and find themselves alone. We would be glad to welcome them back to the Republican party, but they must come back as whole Republicans—they must support the national, state and local tickets."

That was the substance of President Taft's message last night to the Republican club of Beverly. The president continued by advising against a policy of temporizing. "It is time to quit temporizing," he said, "if a man is a Republican, let him say so and let him support the ticket. If he is not, throw him out of the party."

She escaped from the Worcester State hospital Saturday evening. She is considered to be dangerously insane.

Circumstances indicate that the victims perished while asleep. Developments indicate that all four were murdered and that the home was set on fire to hide the crime.

FIRST STRIKE IN PROTEST

No Financial Gain From the Ettor Demonstration

ANO HER DAY OF RIOTING

Followed by Mass Meeting at Which Strikers Are Advised to Return to Work—Thirty Arrests and Nearly Half a Hundred Persons Injured—Strikers Ready to Respond to Another Call For Strike

Lawrence, Mass., Oct. 1.—The general protest strike in Lawrence was declared off at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The strikers, however, were told to hold themselves in readiness for another call.

The demonstration of the Industrial Workers of the World, resulting in thirty arrests, nearly fifty persons being injured, one perhaps fatally, and the practical closing of the big textile mills of this city since Thursday, were brought to a close last evening.

Women and children going to and coming from the mills were the chief sufferers in the rioting, being knocked down and trampled. State police, with levelled revolvers, drove the crowds back.

At a mass meeting on the Short street vacant lot the workers were advised to return to their machines in the morning. The day had been replete with rioting. Every effort to assist the operatives who wished to return to the mills was made. The mill gates were kept open, but the looms were silent. Enough workers to halt the industries remained away or were kept away by force.

It was the first strike ever held in protest, and not for financial gain, in the United States. It was marked with wholesale clubbing and the strenuous armed picket work.

In the court yesterday, Vito Lancastorto, fined $5 for disturbing the peace, testified that he was pumelled by officers after he had been placed in a cell. Every one of the prisoners who went on the witness stand testified they had been clubbed. Five wore bandages.

The mass meeting closed the day. At this meeting all of the speakers counseled the operatives to return to work this morning. They told them to hold themselves in readiness for another call for strike. They were told that a parade of 20,000 Industrial Workers of the World would be made to Salem if Ettor, Giovannitti and Caruso were not given a fair trial. Over 4000 people attended the meeting.

Next to Lawrence, the largest number of workers were out in Quincy, where 2500 granite workers struck. Marching through the quarry district the strikers called to the workmen to come out, and at two of the places the polishers were dragged out forcibly.

Five hundred demonstrators in Lynn marched through the shoe manufacturing district trying, generally with small success, to get the operatives to leave their benches. When the police arrested one man waving black and red flags in the crowd, a mob tried to rescue him, but the police retained possession of their man.

About 250 shoe operatives were out at Haverhill. After parading through the shoe district they stopped in front of one of the factories and shouted for the workers to come out, but with no success.

THE ETTOR TRIAL

Examination of Over 100 Talesmen Nets But Two Jurors

Salem, Mass., Oct. 1.—It took five hours work and the calling of 106 talesmen to pick just two jurors for the murder trial of Joseph J. Ettor, Arturo Giovannitti and Joseph Caruso.

Threats of violence to those chosen jurors were heard in the streets here from men supposed to be members of the I. W. W., and the report of these, quickly borne to the court house, increased the difficulty of picking a jury. Timid members of the big panel of 350 veniremen were extremely anxious to escape serving.

The feeling of uneasiness, which in spite of a strong police guard hung over the courthouse all the morning, gradually faded as the day wore away with only the arrival of about 200 I. W. W. men from Lynn to fulfill the promise that had been made of a big demonstration in behalf of the imprisoned labor leaders.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

WHEN DUCK IS IN SEASON.

THE duck should be cleaned as soon as possible after it is killed, for the feathers then come off more easily. If you buy a dressed duck clean it thoroughly, washing it inside and out after the hairs have been singed off.

Stewed and Stuffed.

Stewed Duck.—After the duck has been cleaned and washed, stuff it with forcemeat, to which three finely chopped sage leaves have been added. Clean and wash the giblets, put them into a saucepan, cover with water and cook them for gravy. Add two onions chopped fine and salt and pepper to taste. Let it simmer down.

Put the duck in a stewpan, add the gravy and onion, cover and let stew slowly for about two hours. Place on a dish and squeeze over it the juice of a lemon. Pour on the gravy and serve.

Young Fowls.

Savory Roast Duck.—Select a pair of medium sized young ducks. Roast and then mince the livers and mix with a tablespoonful of finely minced bacon. Add one ounce of butter, a slice of white onion chopped fine and salt and cayenne to taste. Put this mixture into the bodies of the ducks, lay them in a roasting pan and cover the breasts with thin slices of bacon. When cooked, lift them from the pan and to the liquid in it add the juice of an orange, two minced onions, a tablespoonful of butter and as much salt and cayenne as may be needed. Cook the gravy until the onions are tender and then pour it over the ducks.

An Appetizing Dish.

Ragout of Duck.—Clean and cut up a young duck and fry it in bacon fat with a sliced onion. Add two ounces of ham chopped fine and an ounce of flour. Stir and add a cupful of hot water, a tablespoonful of vinegar, a little thyme, a sprig of parsley and a stalk of celery. Cover and cook one hour. Season to taste and serve with a border of mashed potatoes, browned.

With Fruit Dressing.

Baked Wild Duck.—Parboil the wild duck with a pinch of soda to remove the strong taste. Stuff with a dressing made of equal parts of apples and prunes chopped together and seasoned with salt and pepper. When ready for the oven stick a few whole cloves into the duck. Baste with melted butter and salted water.

OKRA RECIPES.

OKRA is a favorite vegetable in Dixie, and truly delicious are the gumbo recipes which are found in the notebooks of many southern cooks. Chicken gumbo soup rightly made is a dish fit for the gods.

A Rarely Good Soup.

Gumbo Soup.—Take a fowl weighing about four pounds, a quart of green okra pods, three or four ounces of ham, a sliced onion, a half pod of small red pepper, a third of a cupful of flour, three tablespoonfuls of lard, three tomatoes and two sprigs of thyme. Cut the fowl into joints and the ham into pieces. Saute these in hot lard till they are golden brown. Do not use any iron vessels when okra is to be cooked. Remove the chicken and saute the onion and the okra pods, cut into pieces. Then add the flour, stirring it in, and when blended with the fat pour in gradually a quart of water. When this boils add to the chicken with another quart of water the peeled tomatoes, red pepper, bay leaf, thyme and salt. Cover the vessel and let simmer slowly until the chicken is cooked. Add more salt or water if necessary. Serve, adding a tablespoonful of boiled rice to each plate.

Minced on Toast.

Okra and Tomatoes.—Boil and drain eight or ten okra pods. Then mince fine with a small onion. Fry slightly in an ounce of butter and add four peeled and sliced tomatoes. Simmer a few minutes, then add the okra pods and season with salt and paprika and cook for a quarter of an hour longer. Serve on slices of buttered toast.

A Simple Way.

Boiled Okra.—Take young and tender okra pods, cut off the sharp ends and place in a saucepan of boiling water, slightly salted. When the okra is tender drain off the water, add an ounce of butter, salt and pepper to taste. Serve hot.

A Novel Salad.

Okra Salad.—Wash, drain and boil young okra pods until tender. Drain and set aside to cool. Then cut them into slices. Rub the inside of the salad bowl with the cut side of a clove or garlic and put the okra into the bowl with a finely chopped green pepper and a little grated horseradish. Sprinkle with salt, pour in two teaspoonfuls of olive oil and toss until these are well blended. Then add a tablespoonful of tarragon vinegar. Serve individual portions on leaves of tender lettuce with slices of tomato.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Mrs. Keziah Coffin, supposed widow, is arranging to move from Trumet to Boston, following the death of her brother, for whom she had kept house. Grace Van Horne, ward of Capt. Eben Hammond, leader of the "Come-outer" religious sect, offers to assist her financially if she will remain. She declines. Kyan Pepper, widower, offers marriage, and is indignantly refused.

CHAPTER II—Capt. Elkanah Daniels, leader of the Regular church, offers Keziah a place as housekeeper for the new minister, and she decides to remain in Trumet.

CHAPTER III—Keziah takes charge of Rev. John Ellery, the new minister, and gives him advice as to his conduct toward members of the parish. Ellery causes a sensation by attending a "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER IV—Ellery's presence is bitterly resented by Eben Hammond, leader of the meeting. Grace apologizes for her guardian and Ellery escorts her home in the rain. Capt. Nat Hammond, Eben's son, becomes a hero by bringing the packet into port safely through fog and storm. Ellery finds Keziah writing a letter to some one, inclosing money in response to a demand. She is curiously startled when informed of the arrival of Nat.

CHAPTER V—Nat calls on Keziah, and it develops that they have been lovers since youth. Daniels remonstrates with Ellery for attending "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER VI—Ellery is caught by the tide and is rescued by Nat. They become friends.

CHAPTER VII—Ellery meets Grace while walking in the fields Sunday, and learns that she walks there every Sunday.

CHAPTER VIII—The clergyman takes dinner Sundays with the Daniels. Annabel, the captain's daughter, exerts herself to make an impression on him. She notices with vexation his desire to get away every Sunday at a certain time. She watches him through a spy glass.

CHAPTER IX—Nat again importunes Keziah to marry him. He says he has had a quarrel with his father, who wants him to marry Grace.

CHAPTER X—Ellery asks Grace to marry him. She confesses that she loves him, but says she fears to displease her guardian, who has been very kind to her, and asks time to think about it. Elkanah Daniels tells Eben about the meetings between Ellery and Grace. Eben declares he will make Grace choose between him and the preacher. Grace finds him in a faint, following the excitement of Elkanah's visit.

She led him over to the rocking chair and gently forced him into it. He obeyed, although with no apparent realization of what he was doing. Still with her hand on his shoulder she went on speaking. She told him of her visit to the Hammond tavern, saying nothing of Mr. Pepper's call nor of her own experience in the grove. She told of Captain Eben's seizure, of what the doctor said, and of the old Come-Outer's return to consciousness. Then she described the scene in the sick room and how Nat and Grace had plighted troth. He listened, at first stunned and stolid, then with growing impatience.

"So you see," she said. "It's settled; they're engaged, and Dr. Parker will tell everybody of the engagement this very mornin'. It wan't any great surprise to me. Those who have been brought up together; 'twas the natural thing that was almost bound to happen. Eben's heart was set on it for years. And she'll have a good husband, John, that I know. And she'll do her best to make him happy. He's a good man and—"

"But I know—"

"Do you suppose she would come to you if she knew it would be your ruin?"

He hesitated. The last time they met, ages before—no, only the previous afternoon—she had told him it was his happiness and his future only that she thought of. He choked and drew his hand across his eyes.

"Mrs. Coffin," he said, "you tell me it will be her ruin. You tell me so. You say she doesn't want me. I tell you that the only thing that will keep me from her is hearing that from her own lips. When she tells me to leave her I will, and not before."

"She'll tell you, John; she'll tell you. And I know Grace. She's made up her mind and won't change it. But I do ask you this: I ask you not to go now. Wait a little while, do. I left her asleep, worn out by what she'd been through and under the effects of the doctor's sleepin' medicine. He said she must rest or he was afraid her brain would give out. For her sake, then, wait a little. Then, if you don't hear from her, maybe I can arrange a meetin' place where you can see her without anyone's knowin' it. I'll try. But do wait a little while, for her sake, won't you?"

At last he was listening and hesitating.

"Won't you?" begged Keziah.

"Yes," he answered slowly. "I'll wait. I'll wait until noon, somehow, if I can. I'll try. But not a minute later. Not one. You don't know what you're talking about, Mrs. Coffin."

"Yes, I do. I know well. And I thank you for her sake."

But he did not have to wait until noon. At six o'clock, through the dew-soaked grass of the yard, came the Higgins boy. For the first time in his short life he had been awake all night and he moved slowly.

The housekeeper opened the door. Ike held up an envelope, clutched in a grimy hand.

"It's for you, Mrs. Keziah," he said. "Gracie she sent it. There ain't no answer."

Mrs. Coffin closed the door and tore open the envelope. Within was another addressed, in Grace's handwriting, to Mr. Ellery. The housekeeper entered the study, handed it to him and turned away.

"Dear John," wrote Grace. "I presume Aunt Keziah has told you of uncle's death and of my promise to Nat. It is true. I am going to marry him. I am sure this is right and for the best. Our friendship was a mistake and you must not see me again. Please don't try.

"GRACE VAN HORNE."

Beneath was another paragraph.

"Don't worry about me. I shall be happy, I am sure. And I shall hope that you may be. I shall pray for that."

The note fell to the floor with a rustle that sounded loud in the stillness. Then Keziah heard the minister's step. She turned. He was moving slowly across the room.

"John, what are you goin' to do?"

He shook his head. "I don't know," he said. "Go away somewhere, first of all, I guess. Go somewhere and—and try to live it down. I can't, of course, but I must try."

She put out her hand. "I know it'll be hard," she said, "stayin' here, I mean. But your duty to others—"

"Don't you think we've heard enough about duty to others? How about my duty to myself?"

"John, What Are You Going to Do?"

"I guess that's the last thing we ought to think about in the world, if we do try to be fair and square. Your church thinks a heap of you, John. They build on you. You've done more in the little while you've been here than Mr. Langley did in his last fifteen years."

"You've never been asked to sit quietly by and see the one you love more than all the world marry some one else."

"How do you know I ain't? How do you know I ain't doin' just that now?"

"Mrs. Coffin!"

"John Ellery, you listen to me. You think I'm a homely old woman, probably, set in my ways as an eight-day clock. I guess I look like it and act like it. But I ain't so awful old—on the edge of forty, that's all. And when I was your age I wa'n't so awful homely, either. I had fellers aplenty hangin' round and I could have married any one of a dozen. This ain't boastin'; land knows I'm fur from that. I was brought up in this town and even when I was a girl at school there was only one boy I cared two straws about. He and I went to picnics together and to parties and everywhere. Folks used to laugh and say we was keepin' comp'ny, even then.

"Well, when I was eighteen, after father died, I went up to New Bedford to work in a store there. Wanted to earn my own way. And this young feller I'm tellin' you about went away to sea, but every time he come home from a voyage he come to see me and things went on that way till we was promised to each other. The engagement wa'n't announced, but 'twas so, just the same. We'd have been married in another year. And then we quarreled.

"'Twas a fool quarrel, same as that kind gen'rally are. As much my fault as his and as much his as mine, I cal'late. Anyhow, we was both proud, or thought we was, and neither would give in. And he says to me, 'You'll be sorry after I'm gone. You'll wish me back, then.' And says I, bein' a fool, 'I guess not. There's other fish in the sea.' He sailed and I did wish him back, but I wouldn't write fust and neither would he. And then come another man."

She paused, hesitated, and then continued.

"Never mind about the other man. He was handsome then, in a way, and he had money to spend, and he liked me. He wanted me to marry him. If—if the other, the one that went away, had written I never would have thought of such a thing, but he didn't write. And, my pride bein' hurt, and all, I finally said yes to the second chap.

"Well, for the first year 'twa'n't so bad. Not happiness exactly, but not misery either. That come later. His people was well off and he'd never worked much of any. He did for a little while after we was married, but not for long. Then he begun to drink and carry on and lost his place. Pretty soon he begun to neglect me and at last went off to sea afore the mast. We was poor as poverty, but I could have stood that; I did stand it. I took in sewin' and kept up an appearance, somehow. Never told a soul. His folks come patronizin' around and offered me money, so's I needn't disgrace them. I sent 'em rightabout in a hurry. Once in a while he'd come home, get tipsy and abuse me. Still I said nothin'. Thank God, there was no children; that's the one thing I've been thankful for.

"You can't keep such things quiet always. People are bound to find out. They come to me and said, 'Why don't you leave him?' but I wouldn't. I could have divorced him easy enough, there was reasons plenty, but I wouldn't do that. Then word came that he was dead, drowned off in the East Indies somewheres. I come back here to keep house for Sol, my brother, and I kept house for him till he died and they offered me this place here at the parsonage. There! that's my story, part of it, more'n I ever told a livin' soul afore, except Sol."

She ceased speaking. The minister, who had sat silent by the window, apathetically listening or trying to listen, turned his head.

"I apologize, Mrs. Coffin," he said dully, "you have had trials, hard ones. But—"

"But they ain't as hard as yours, you think? Well, I haven't quite finished yet. After word come of my husband's death, the other man come and wanted me to marry him. And I wanted to—oh, how I wanted to! I cared as much for him as I ever did; more, I guess. But I wouldn't—I wouldn't, though it wrung my heart out to say no. I give him up—why? 'cause I thought I had a duty laid on me."

Ellery sighed. "I can see but one duty," he said. "That is the duty given us by God, to marry the one we love."

Keziah's agitation, which had grown as she told her story, suddenly flashed into flame.

"Is that as fur as you can see?" she asked fiercely. "It's an easy duty, then—or looks easy now. I've got a harder one; it's to stand by the promise I gave and the man I married."

He looked at her as if he thought she had lost her wits.

"The man you married?" he replied. "Why, the man you married is dead."

"No, he ain't. You remember the letter you saw me readin' that night when you come back from Come-Outers' meetin'? Well, that letter was from him. He's alive. Yes, he's alive Alive and knockin' round the world somewheres. Every little while he writes me for money and, if I have any, I send it to him. Why? Why 'cause I'm a coward, after all, I guess and I'm scared he'll do what he says he will and come back. Perhaps you think I'm a fool to put up with it; that's what most folks would say if they knew it. They'd tell me I ought to divorce him. Well, I can't, I can't I walked into the mess blindfolded; I married him in spite of warnin's and everything. I took him for better or for worse, and now that he's turned out worse, I must take my medicine I can't live with him—that I can't do—but while he lives I'll stay his wife and give him what money I can spare That's the duty I told you was laid on me, and it's a hard one, but I don't run away from it."

She stopped short; then covering her face with her apron, she ran from the room. John Ellery heard her descending the stairs, sobbing as she went.

All that afternoon he remained in his chair by the window. It was six o'clock, supper time, when he entered the kitchen. Keziah, looking up from the ironing board, saw him. He was white and worn and grim, but he held out his hand to her.

"Mrs. Coffin," he said, "I'm not going away. You've shown me what devotion to duty really means. I shall stay here and go on with my work."

Her face lit up. "Will you?" she said. "I thought you would. I was sure you was that kind."

DEATH LIST OF FIVE

Liquor May Have Been Responsible For Fatal Fire

Millinocket, Me., Oct. 1.—As the result of what is believed to have been a drunken orgie among some of the laborers employed in the Great Northern paper mill here, five persons, all Poles, are dead.

The victims were: Anton Maranski, aged 45; his wife and two children, a boy aged 4 years and a girl aged 15 months, and Joseph Dense, a boarder. The men were employed in the paper mills.

The Maranski family lived in a small cottage on the outskirts, which early in the morning was discovered in flames.

Soon after the fire two Polish laborers were arrested. They said they had been in the house, but they had left nearly two hours before the fire broke out.

The general opinion apears to be that the fire started from a lamp or stove and the occupants were so soundly asleep that they suffocated.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

POTATOES WITH WARTS

Wilson Puts Ban on Them by Checking Importations

Washington, Oct. 1.—To protect the American consumer from potatoes with warts on them, all importations from Great Britain, Germany, Austria and Newfoundland, and the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon have been forbidden.

Official reports say that there exists in those countries the disease known variously as potato wart, potato canker and black scab, and designated scientifically as chrysophyctis andobiotico. This vegetable malady is unknown in the United States, and Secretary Wilson intends, so far as he has power, that it shall continue to be unknown.

BATTERS WIFE TO DEATH WITH FISTS

Drink Crazed Man Confesses His Crime to Police

Providence, Oct. 1.—Patrick F. Hanley, 29, a mill worker, awoke and found his wife terribly beaten and bruised and lying prostrate on the kitchen floor of their home in the tenement district of Olneyville. He shook her. She did not move. Hanley cried. The neighbors came in, and found the woman had been beaten to death.

In the next room to that in which the murdered woman lay, the neighbors found four children, sleeping peacefully. The eldest was 7, and the youngest, lying in its crib, was 17 months old.

The police said Hanley told them he had come home intoxicated. He quarreled with his wife. Then he hit her, the police say. In his drunken fury he attacked her and battered her terribly with his fists, the police said the husband told them. Then after the wife had fallen to the kitchen floor, Hanley staggered to his bed in the next room.

Hanley told the authorities who came to arrest him that he remembered the fight. "I killed her with my fists," the police said he confessed to them.

Hanley was arraigned before Judge Gorham. He pleaded guilty and was held without bail.

BUNGALOW ALL ABLAZE

But Chemical Stream Extinguished It with a Loss of $50

A telephone call to the central fire station at 2.54 Monday afternoon sent the auto chemical and the combination on a long run to Squantum for a fire in a bungalow on Standish avenue near the Squantum Inn owned and occupied by Paul Hersey. The fire started in the kitchen and must have been burning some time before it was discovered. A citizen who discovered the fire telephoned the central fire station from which point a telephone was sent to the house of Combination 2 at Atlantic. The latter apparatus was the first to arrive on the scene and soon had a chemical stream playing on the building. While they were at work the Central station auto chemical arrived. A hole was cut through the roof to let out the smoke. The fire was extinguished by chemical streams. The loss will not exceed $50.

AFTER ALCOHOL FOUND FIRE

Drug Clerk's Discovery Averted Probable Catastrophe

A fire of unknown origin was discovered Monday evening in the cellar of Craig's block, Brewer's Corner, under the pharmacy of J. W. Fletcher, by a clerk who started down stairs for denatured alcohol. He ran to box 42 and sounded the alarm at 5.59 o'clock. When the blaze was extinguished by the department it was evident that an explosion had been avirted as the barrel containing the denatured alcohol was charred.

The fire started in a pile of boxes near an open window. It is thought that a breeze blew a lighted match inside although it is possible that someone had dropped a cigarette butt through the grating. The stores on the street floor were filled with smoke which slightly damaged some of the stock. The all out was sounded at 6.17 o'clock. The total damage was nominal.

WOMEN FORMED BUCKET BRIGADE

And Fought the Flames With Good Effect at Squantum

Squantum women with buckets and garden hose fought a fire at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon at the bungalow of Paul Hersey, Waumbeck street until the fire apparatus arrived from Atlantic. Mrs. Nellie Russeau who lives near the Hersey's discovered smoke coming from the roof and telephoned in the alarm. Before the firemen arrived neighbors broke in the doors of the cottage. The house was filled with smoke. The fire which had been smouldering for hours burst into flame. Women formed a bucket brigade and passed pails of water to the small attic where the fire had started. In this way the fire was kept from spreading until the firemen made the long run from Atlantic to Squantum

The fire was confined to the roof and attic but the house was badly damaged by smoke and water The loss was estimated at about two hundred dollars. The cause of the fire is not known. The loss is covered by insurance.

AGED WOMAN KILLED BY TRAIN

Was Crossing Track When Struck by Iron Step

DEATH WAS INSTANTANEOUS

Mrs. Mary A. Gray, 73 years old, of Sheldon road, East Milton, was struck and instantly killed by the step on the right side of the engine drawing the train due at East Milton at 11.03 today for Boston. This train seems to be ill-fated and was wrecked at South Boston on August 8.

The accident happened opposite State street and was witnesed by Mrs. Albert Powell of Willard street, and William Craig, a driver employed by John Cashman.

Mrs. Gray left her home to go to the Tarbox store on Willard street. She passed through a break in the fence, and had crossed both tracks.

Dr. John H. Ash was the first doctor to arrive and said she was probably killed instantly. He stated that the metal step, one inch thick and about nine inches long, was broken off when Mrs. Gray was struck.

Her right side was crushed in. Her body was thrown about 12 feet.

Mrs. Gray was one of East Milton's oldest residents and leaves two sons, Freeman and Jean Gray.

The body was viewed by Medical examiner Fred E. Jones and later removed to the home.

JACKSON RETIRED

Popular Veteran Conductor Completed 47 Years of Service

Paul Jackson of Braintree today completed his 47th year in railroad service. At the time he entered the service of the company, the railroad was known as the Old Colony Railroad Co. He rose step by step to the position of conductor and as such has run trains all over the system. Recently under the new regulation he has been retired from active service and will spend the remainder of his days at his home on Commonwealth avenue, Braintree. He is a member of Rural lodge of Masons of Quincy, and Puritan lodge of Odd Fellows of Braintree. He has a wife, a son, and daughter, the former, George, being a clerk at the Braintree post office and the daughter, is the wife of Irving N. Holbrook.

The name of Paul Jackson is a familiar one to many patrons of the railroad, and he was an object of terror for persons overloaded with Boston rum who trieed to create a disturbance on the late train, from Boston which he ran for many years.

Way back in the early eighties he ran the first train in the morning from South Braintree. This train reached Quincy about 6 o'clock where it was boarded by a large number whose business required them to be in Boston early. He knew most of his regular patrons by name and the passengers of this train made a happy family. His jovial good natured face often dispelled a fit of blues of some one who had got out of bed on the wrong side.

Later he was transferred to the last train from Boston at night. Formerly the railroad officials had considerable trouble on this train but Paul had not been running it long before things underwent a change. He is a tall and powerful man and had a hand which when placed on the shoulder of an unruly passenger meant more than a blow. He was never known to strike a man. All he did was to place that big hand of his on a man's shoulder and say "come," and the offender came. If the man did not move voluntarily the seat usually came with him. Paul would take him to the baggage room door and drop him onto the depot platform where an officer usually picked the unfortunate up. Then he would wave his lantern and the train would depart in peace, minus a part, at least of its disturbing element.

Dr. Stanley F. Duncan who graduated from Tufts medical college last June leaves today for Malden, having accepted a position as house physician in the maternity ward of the Malden hospital.

REGISTRATION OF PARTY CLOSED

Bull Moosers Now Ready For Congressional Contest

CANDIDATES BUSY

Progressive party registration for Quincy closed Monday evening at the Bull Moose headquarters and all who have signed enrollment cards are entitled to vote for the congressional candidate in the 14th district at the primaries October 4.

A large number of men and women sent in cards and while the number could not be determined this morning it is admitted that many will make a choice on Saturday.

Col. Henry L. Kincaide of Quincy, who is a candidate for the congressional nomination is exerting every effort to win out. He is making a steady canvass of the district and it is stated that great enthusiasm is displayed by his supporters.

Major Charles Williamson of Brockton, the other aspirant for the place is also touring the district. He is making his fight in and south of Brockton where there is a large registration.

It has been rumored that in the case of Col. Kincaide securing the nomination, Major Williamson will bolt the ticket and run as an independant Bull Mooser. As far as can be learned the rumor which has been current for two weeks has not been denied by the Williamson faction.

When Mayor Williamson was reached by phone this afternoon at Brockton he said that there was no truth in the rumor and that he had stated to Col. Kincaide he would not bolt the ticket if not elected the congressional nominee, and that he had never considered for an instant any such action.

WHAT OCCUPATION?

The book entitled "Vocophy," written by Lysander S. Richards, formerly of Quincy, some 30 years ago, naming the occupation a young man is best fitted to follow, is beginning to receive marked attention in Boston and other cities. The Vocation Bureau at 6 Beacon street, Boston, is established on those lines. Myron B. Broomfield, is Manager.

Mr. Richards is being known by prominent educators as the founder and pioneer of this movement. Lectures by them are being given upon it. It is being introduced into schools as a study to learn what pursuit a boy or girl is best fitted to follow for many in life have been following occupations that they are ill adapted to and do not find it out until too late to change.

Business houses, such as Jordan Marsh Co. and others are interested in the movement and representatives of those houses are meeting at the Vocational office to see what is best to be done, as many of their clerks are not adapted to their business .

Mr. Richards' book "Vocophy" is to be found in the Thomas Crane Library also his other books; The birth, development and death of our planet in story, entitled "Breaking Up."—another "A Descriptfon of the Universe in Brief"—another, "New Propositions in Practical and Speculative Philosophy" and his two volumes of the history of Marshfield, a town next to Plymouth in Colonial importance.

The Train Robbers.

"Yes," said the distinguished foreigner traveling in this country and being interviewed by the busy reporters—"yes, I've gone about quite a bit in this bally big hinterland, y' see And I cawn't help wonderin' why your bloomin' government doesn't catch the train robbers and lock them up, by Jove!"

"Train robbers?" said the American. "Why, have you met up with train robbers already?"

"Tubby Shaw! Tubby Shaw!"

"Who's that?"

"I meanter say, yes, I have. These bandits black their faces, y'know, and then they come in very politely and take me money."

The American thought it over, and then it began to dawn upon him that this was only another story about Pull man porters.—Cleveland Plain Dealer

More Truth Than Poetry.

If we all told the truth in this Unhappy vale of tears
We'd say goodby to all our bliss,
And days would seem as years.
There'd be no faith, no love, no trust,
No smiles, no peace, no sooth.
We'd soon give up in sheer disgust
If we told nothing but the truth.

THE QUINCY DAILY LEDGER

LARGEST GUARANTEED CIRCULATION IN THE CITY

Vol. 27 No. 231 | QUINCY, MASS., WEDNESDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 2, 1912 | PRICE TWO CENTS

COAL PRICES GO SKYWARD DESPITE CONTRARY ASSURANCES

Claim Supply on Hand Below Medium Premiums Charged for Cargoes

West Being Supplied at the Cost to the East

The retail price of coal of all varieties advanced fifty cents a ton Tuesday in Quincy in common with Boston and other places in the immediate vicinity. According to the morning papers no one appears to advance any particular reason for the raise. The wholesalers say that they have not advanced the price to retailers and are unable to account for the increase at this time although it was expected that the price would rise later in the season.

Local dealers give as the reason for the increase of price, that they are unable to get coal to supply their trade. They have orders with wholesalers for cargos but are unable to get a supply without paying a premium over the usual price, and it is natural if they pay a premium the amount of that premium will come out of the consumer.

According to local coal men, one reason for the shortage, is the shortage of help at the mines and the shortage of coal cars. At this season of the year the mines are shipping their main supply west, in order that that section may be supplied before the lakes freeze up. The result is that there are not cars enough to meet the demands of this section of the country.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Shay Observe Wedding Anniversary

WITH FAMILY GATHERING

Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Shay of Wollaston celebrated their ninth wedding anniversary Tuesday evening by entertaining their immediate families at their home on Norfolk street. It was also Frank's birthday anniversary, but which one he blushingly declined to say other than "you might call him 28 with a question mark" to which Mrs. Shay said add two question marks. Among those present was Mr. Shay's father Thomas Shay of Roxbury who although 83 years of age was fully as spry as some of the younger relatives. The evening was passed in a pleasant manner and both Mr. and Mrs. Shay were remembered in a pleasant manner with numerous gifts

Aside from being in the nature of a family reunion it afforded some of Frank's relatives an opportunity to become acquainted with him, Frank is a representative of Berry Bros., dealers in painters supplies of Boston, and the greater part of his time is spent on the road so that even his own family do not see much of him for when at home he is busily engaged on his farm when he is not doing something else.

Mr. and Mrs. Shay have been residents of Wollaston for the past five years coming to Wollaston from Roxbury. Their many friends unite in wishing them many more years of wedded bliss and hope that his family may be able to see more of him in the future than in the past.

LIVELY DISCUSSION PROMISED.

At tonight's meeting of the Board of Trade it is understood that Dock and Water Front Commissioner Frank Fessenden Crane will submit his report on the public dock question. It is also understood that the gas question which always bobs up about election time will be brought up by A. L. Whitman for discussion.

AMATEUR STARS.

St. John's Dramatic club held a meeting at Parochial hall Tuesday evening and discussed the winter's program. The attitude of the members indicate an amateur theatrical production at an early date.

READY FOR DEGREED.

Several candidates will be given the first and second degrees by Grand Knight Charles J. McGilvray of the Ave Maria Council, Knights of Columbus at A. O. H. hall, West Quincy, Sunday afternoon.

MR. SHAW INVITES PEOPLE TO DRAW OWN CONCLUSIONS

Upon the Facts which He Offers for Their Consideration in His Letters

Claims Administration Did Interfere with Child

Editor of the Ledger:—It was not my original intention to digress from the lines of investigation at first laid down, for the purpose of answering any comments made upon my letters; but in view of some letters recently published in the nature of contradictions to some of the statements contained in my articles, it appears to be wise to add a few words to clarify the situations dealt with, to the end that the people may not be confused by side issues nor mislead by unimportant quibbles.

It has been my plan to deal chiefly with facts:——Facts open to the discovery of any person inclined to look for them and susceptible of such undeniable proof as to be quite indisputable. So far as opinions may be deduced from these facts I am content that the people shall draw their own conclusions.

It is noteworthy that of all the statements contained in my letters,—the eighth of which appeared September 28th, only two points have been deemed worthy of attention by the "powers that be," in whose interests denial would be made if any denial were possible.

Subsequent investigation has revealed the fact that these two conditions were pretty generally known and understood by the people "In touch" with affairs at City hall.

The first point to receive attention was contained in my letter of Septem-

QUINCY MUSIC HALL

THE HIGHEST CLASS OF LICENSE—THE HIGHEST RATING

A THEATRE LICENSE and "EXCELLENT" in every single particular, is now issued to Music Hall— "Excellent" for:—

Structural condition,	Curtains,
Facility of escape of audience,	Protection neighborhood hazard,
Heating apparatus,	General condition of appliances
Water supply,	and apparatus,
Lighting apparatus,	General condition of stage.
Condition of fire apparatus,	Rating as a whole
Condition of sprinklers,	With regard to safety of audience

There are few—very few Halls in the State that thus have the highest class of License and the highest rating in every particular. Previously the fire exits and facilities for fire prevention were ample for a Hall License, but to obtain our present highest class of License and the highest rating in every particular, the whole main exit was torn down and made absolutely fireproof, large automatic smoke and fire vents were constructed over the stage, all scenery was made fireproof, and in addition to chemical fire extinguishers and fire pails throughout the Hall, automatic sprinklers and fire hose were installed on the stage. Further the previous generous exit facilities were very greatly increased so that there are now ten (10) doors opening from the Hall, and six (6) separate exits: two (2) of 3 feet each, one (1) of 7 1-2 feet, two (2) of 5 feet each, and one (1) of 3 1-2 feet, A TOTAL OF 37 FEET OF EXIT. All exits are lighted continuously by both gas and electricity. There is an asbestos curtain, by which the stage can be instantly cut off from the Hall proper.

The Location is in the heart of the city. The street cars with double tracks pass the door.

The Floor is of selected maple laid with the greatest care, and is kept in perfect condition, being covered with canvas when not used for dancing.

The Ventilation—a most important consideration—is such as to keep the air pure with even a crowded Hall. A large fan has recently been installed.

The Hall is Lighted by electricity, brilliantly and pleasantly, and with a switchboard arranged so that all desired effects can be obtained in the Hall proper or on the stage. Gas is used as an auxiliary light.

The Heating is direct—indirect, ample and giving the best results.

The Stage has been designed with care, and is furnished with a particularly generous supply of attractive and appropriate scenery.

For Advertising the Music Hall Billboards are valuable.

To Darken the Hall, there are special window fittings so that at noonday the Hall can be made as dark as at midnight.

As a whole, Quincy Music Hall has been carefully planned to meet the requirements of those who wish an absolutely safe and large and really first class Hall.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The farmer with a bumper crop on hand is willing to hire an able bodied man regardless of his opinions on the tariff, initiative or recall.

The destruction which threatens the famous mosque of Santa Sophia in Constantinople will suggest another opportunity for American wealth to help Europe take care of its art treasures.

But is it not necessarily a sign of a weak mind to go crazy reading the Congressional Record?

Just to be on the safe side, Arkansas voted down all the proposed constitutional changes, some of which were good and some bad. Arkansas takes its reform straight or not at all.

It is slow work procuring jurors at the Ettor trial, principally because men do not care to get mixed up in such a case.

Chief of Police Burrell deserves some measure of credit for his handling of that crowd of paraders, Monday. A man with less tact might have precipitated a riot with undesirable results.

As a God father, no doubt J. P. Morgan handed out a big fat check to the little mite he stood sponser for. Well it is better to be born lucky than rich.

The red flag looks as though it had come to stay in the country for some little time.

The Lawrence police may have had just provocation in some of their dealings with the strikers, but they seem to be getting in bad with the public.

By the way what was the occasion of this country appointing a committee to investigate conditions in Mexico? It looks a little like busy body interference.

Harvard students had another of their unseemly and boisterous revels Monday night, which if committed by paraders in a peaceful way would be set down as riot and handled accordingly.

It may be satisfying to politicians to investigate the campaign doings of eight years ago, but it is doubtful if much good will result. In this rapidly moving world, present day problems seem to be of far greater importance.

Having formed a fire brigade will those Squantum ladies join the suffragetts and demand a place in the fire department

NO PANIC EXPECTED.

Ordinarily, presidential year, means some little uncertainty in business channels, but this year things seem to move along in their wonted groove, without any thought as to the outcome of the election, or the effect it may have on certain enterprises.

This is a good healthy sign and relegates to the tail time the calamity howlers who are all screeching about the country going to the bow wows. The optimist of the present time is in the ascendant. The pessimist has taken a back seat. This is as it should be. It is doubtful if the election of either of the presidential candidates would have much effect, adverse or other wise on big business. That is a department which the captains of industry are capable of handling in a finished manner. Any depression in business can be laid at the door of manipulators who have brought it about for their own gain and to smother the other fellow. However let us hope that conditions will not change within the next few months, and that the prosperity which is now with us may continue to an indefinite period.

'YER 'AND CHIEF, 'YER 'AND.

Without any attempt at undue flattery or patting him on the back, it is only simple justice to give Chief Burrell of the police department his full measure of credit for the manner in which he handled that parade of Monday afternoon. There was neither rioting or blood shed. In the main, while passing through the streets, the paraders presented the appearance of a crowd of happy care free, picnicers. Joyful today, forgetful of the morrow and leaving day before comletely behind them.

They sang and marched until they were tired out and then sat down and rested and returned to their homes peaceful and content, apparently. They had their day. Whatever it meant to them they alone were to determine. The gain of it was also a question for them to decide. They lost their day's pay. It would probably have been better had they worked and if desirous of showing sympathy donated the day's pay as a campain fund for the defense of the men whose cause they espoused. As it was, the day went for naught to them in a way.

But aside from that Quincy should feel some gratification that the demonstration was conducted in such a manner that no disturbance to count for much occurred and not a single arrest was made as a result of the parade.

Chief Burrell seemed to be the right man in the right place. He might have made trouble had he been less diplomatic, but his grasp of the situation was at all stages firm and kind.

No one accuses the chief of being at all timid in meeting an emergency, but here was a case where discretion was required and it was exercised. A certain banner which was to be carried he deemed objectionable. Instead of making a scene on the street, he called the committee of the paraders in conference and pointed out the undesirability of carrying such a banner. They acceded to his arguments. And throughout the day the same good judgment was shown. So every one should feel thankful that a demonstration such as it was, only requiring a match to touch off the flame of disorder, was carried to a successful issue without any trouble. The paraders found no fault. As to the general public it was a kind of diversion for them, passing before them as an ordinary parade and brought forth the usual comments, none of which were unkind.

MUSIC RECITAL.

A recital of unusual interest is announced by Enrice Barraja for Friday evening, October 25th. The program will include some of Mr. Barraja's best compositions both vocal and instrumental besides some of the best known classics.

He will be assisted by Miss Eleanor E. Farrar, soprano; Mrs. T. Ray Blanchard, violinist; Leo Piana, tenor; Olindo Taddei, 'cellist and Barraja Fraunfelder, bass. The interest that Quincy Society takes in this event is shown by the long list of Patronesses, which will be announced at a later date.

OLD SCENES, OLD WAYS MISSED

Tally Ho of Former Days Supplanted by the Automobile

Several of the stores in City Square closed at 10 o'clock today in order that their clerks might attend the Brockton fair. Quincy however misses the sights that they formerly witnessed at Brockton fair days, before the automobiles came into general use. In those days hundreds of tally ho parties passed through City Square every day of the fair and on their return at night there was more or less rowdyism. Now the parties take the route through Milton and Randolph, which is much shorter in addition to being better roads.

COAL PRICES

The supply of coal at the mines is said to be 6,000,000 short owing to the miners having laid off during May and June and that the shortage can not be made up for some time.

Local dealers have their order books filled with orders for coal which they are unable to fill as they can not get the coal from the wholesalers. Certain kinds of coal they are entirely out of and although they have orders filed for cargos they are unable to get it. On the other hand the wholesalers deny that they are holding back the supply in order to increase prices.

The real trouble however is on account of the shortage of coal cars. It is claimed there will be no reduction in the price of coal this winter. The new schedule of prices for coal that took effect Tuesday are as follows:—

Stove	$8.25
Nut	8.25
Egg	8.00
Furnace	7.50
Pea	6.50
Franklin	9.50

OUR HOSPITAL.

To the People of Quincy:

When you read the above words in connection with the coming Hospital Week campaign please put the proper emphasis on the "OUR." In speaking of Hospital affairs some people do not seem to have right ideas regarding ownership of the property. Perhaps it may be well for all of us to be reminded once in a while that a good many years ago Mr. W. B. Rice built the original Hospital, paid for it, and then made a free gift of it to the people of Quincy. The institution has always been, by Mr. Rice's insistent wish, the City Hospital of Quincy, and never the Rice Hospital.

After turning over such a valuable piece of property to the city Mr. Rice might consistently have declined further responsibility, and relied upon the generous and united support of all the people for the proper maintenance of the institution thus placed in their hands. But Mr. Rice did not content himself with the bare gift, for as long as he lived he maintained an unflagging and fatherly interest in the institution; and more than that, when the growing needs of the Hospital called insistently for another building, Mr. Rice and his sons came strongly to the front again with the splendid gift of the Rice pavilion.

While thus standing in the financial gap in cases of unusual need, Mr. Rice never failed to enforce the idea of popular ownership of the Hospital property, and those of us who attended early annual meetings of the Corporation will remember how almost pathetically he sometimes appealed to citizens to realize their privileges and responsibilities in having such a noble institution in their charge.

If some one should make you a present of a fine saddle horse, and lead him up to your door, all saddled and ready to ride, you would accept him gratefully and feel under imperative obligation to feed him generously and take good care of him; now wouldn't you?

Well, that is your relation to the Hospital, precisely, gentle reader, and when the $35,000 proposition is put up to you in a few days, you will realize that a little red box for pennies and dimes will hardly do the business alone, though, of course it will help; but most of us will have to peel off a fairly thick layer from our roll!

CHOP SUEY FEED LIKED BY ALL

The Camp Fire with Its Song and Story Big Feature

PLEASANT CHURCH SOCIAL

One of the most novel affairs in some time was the chop suey supper and camp fire talk held jointly by the choir and Christian Endeavor society in the vestry of the Park and Downs church, Tuesday evening.

Chop suey formed the piece de resistance of the menu and surrounded by boiled rice, rice cakes, tea, preserved fruits and other edibles of Oriental suggestion.

The young ladies attractively gowned in kimonos, who served the dishes were: Misses Stella Cummings Gertrude Pletsch, Lena Kilpatrick, Natalie Scott, Ethel Axberg, Christina Hall, Edna Shay, Miriam Breen and Mildred Podbury.

Miss Mabel Doran, arrayed as a genuine "chink," pig tail and all, was the hit of the evening. The supper was in charge of Mrs. Alonzo V. Bisset and Mrs. W. K. Brown.

For the camp fire talk a tent and artificial camp fire with a back ground of bushes was arranged. With the lights of the vestry turned out and the camp fire turned on the effect was most striking.

With this setting a program of songs and stories was given an opening overture being most acceptably rendered by Miss Mertie Davenport.

"My Chop Suey Babe" brought down the house when sung by some individual behind the bushes. The blame was equally distributed between the pastor, Lieutenant Willson and Mr. Colby.

Rev. William B. Ayers told a most interesting story of adventure which ended with his waking up. The "Battle Hymn of the Republic" was sung by the choir and the audience joined in the chorus.

"Tom's party" was read by Mr. Colby and a poem by Lieutenant Willson, "The foreign winners" was loudly applauded.

"Tenting Tonight" was effectively rendered by Miss Ruth Hardy, accompanied on the piano by Miss Henrietta C. Gram.

The "Tale of the submarine" was read by Artemus Dingwell and "Bertie Arkwrights' Adventures in the Solomon Islands" proved very laughable

"Yankee Doodle" was sung by the choir and the audience chimed in with enthusiasm.

"When I cremated Sam Magee" a thrilling poem of the far north was read by Mr. Willson and the audience departed to the strains of "Home Sweet Home."

In charge of the evening were Miss Musaus and Artemus Dingwell to whom much credit is due, Miss Emily Bjorkman was the accompanist.

Ice cream was on sale by Miss Fannie Fraser, Miss Geraldine Scott and Mrs. Chester A. Boynton. At the candy table were Miss Mildred Podbury and Freda Klingenhagen, Miss Hazel Henry and Miss Maybelle Atkins circulated with a guess cake.

Milwaukee, Oct. 2.—David Bruce-Brown, a wealthy young New York sportsman, and one of the best known auto racers, lost his life, and his mechanician, Tony Scudalari, was fatally injured in an accident on the new Wauwatosa automobile road course on the eve of the eighth running of the Vanderbilt cup race.

Bruce-Brown was driving his high powered Fiat car 90 miles an hour when a rear left tire blew out. The heavy car swerved into a ditch and a second later men and machine were hurled from it diagonally across the road and into a field. The big racer was converted into a tangled heap of wreckage.

Bruce-Brown's skull was fractured, his left leg was broken and he suffered internal injuries. The top of Scudalari's skull was crushed, his right arm was broken and his body was seriously torn.

NEW BOATS FOR SONDER CLASS

Present Craft Disqualified to Race in International Events

A writer in one of the Sunday papers throws new light upon the yacht racing game as it will be persued next season. According to his figuring the Harpoon will not be eligible to meet the German craft.

However, here is the story as it appears

"There will surely be some new Sondor boats built before next season, with good reason, for some of the crack boats that have become famous in the class will not be eligible for racing against the Germans, who will come over with a three-boat team looking for revenge for past defeats.

"It has been announced that the rules of the Germans in regard to building Sonder boats will be observed in the international races—in other words, no boat may be built of lighter wood than red cedar or mahogany. The Harpoon, probably the most famous and surely one of the fastest Sonders ever turned out in the world can not be raced; neither can Beatrice, one of the fastest in light weather nor can several others which might be counted on.

"The Germans at the last international race between Germany and American made objection to the racing of some boats which were of white cedar or white pine, and as the class was built up under German rules, and the races conducted under German regulations, it has been decided by the powers that be to allow the racing of boats, constructed under German rules only, despite the fact that several boats will be made practically worthless in the market by the ruling.

The dates for the international races have not been decided on, but it is fairly certain that the racing will be held at Marblehead, and that as heretofore there will be a bowl given in the name of the President of the United States and another in the name of the Governor of Massachusetts.

"Eligible will be C. P. Curtis' Ellen, J. P. Dabney's Beaver; A. P. Loring's Panther and some others that may or may not stand a show to get on the team. It is fairly certain, too, that there will be a New Charles Francis Adams' 2d boat, and that C. P. Curtis, in case any one wishes to take the Ellen off his hands to try for the team, will have a new boat out after the honors. Others will undoubtedly build boats of the heavier wood.

"A meeting of delegates of the Inter-club Association was held Thursday night at the South Boston Y. C. for the purpose of puting a limit on the over-all length of boats in Class S. No definit action was taken, but the sense of the meeting was that the over-all length should be limited to 30 feet 6 inches, which will admit all boats at present in the class.

It is understood that at least four boats will be built during the Winter for the class, which promises to be one of the most interesting in Massachusetts Bay.

PRESBYTERY IN SESSION

Momentous Gathering of Clergymen in Quincy

INTERESTING DISCUSSION

The last session of the Boston Presbytery of the Presbyterian churches as now constituted is being held at the Water Street Presbyterian church, in this city. The session opened at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon and will continue today.

Dr. James Todd, who has been the able and efficient pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian Church, South Boston for two years offered his resignation as pastor of that church at this meeting. Dr. Todd, who is one of the foremost clergymen in New England desires to take up the work in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont under the direction of the Lord's Day League. The congregation was loath to part with Dr. Todd's services but agreed to his earnest request for release.

Dr. Todd feels that he has been called to a very necessary and a very important work in the New England life. His resignation will take effect the last Sunday of this month when he will declare his own pulpit vacant and his people will seek a new leader.

His associates warmly commended his work and paid him many just tributes to his loyalty.

St. Pauls church of Mattapan presented a call for the services of the Rev. Archibald D. MacKinnon where he has been serving for several months, since closing a very successful pastorate in the province of Quebec.

The opening address was by Dr Todd, who in the absence of Rev. William M. Tufts, retiring moderator who is ill, spoke on "Our Sufficiency in God."

Officers elected Rev. Wallace Iliff of Brookline moderator, Rev J. W Smith of Manchester, N. H., recording clerk and Rev. J. D. Cameron of Lonsdale, R. I. assistant temporary clerk.

The following visitors were invited to sit as corresponding members of the presbytery: Rev. Callum McKay of Dayton, O., Rev. Alexander Jackson of the Presbytery of Cleveland O., Rev. Samuel McNaugher of the Reformed Presbytery of Boston, Rev. A M. Thompson of the United Presbyterian church of Quincy, Rev. Henry B. Townsend of the Presbytery of North Philadelphia and Rev. John M Kyle of the Presbytery of Carlisle, Pa

Dr. Jackson was later received as a member of the Boston Presbytery Joseph Kerrin, a student of theology under the care of the Boston Presbytery and a graduate of Auburn Seminary, Auburn, N. Y. was granted a letter of dismissal to the Presbytery of St. Lawrence, N. Y., in order that he might accept a call to the church within the boundaries of that presbytery.

In view of the division of the Presbytery of Boston into the Presbyteries of Boston. Newburyport, Providence and the consequent disruption of standing committees the moderator, Rev. Mr. Iliffe, Dr. Todd and Elder William F. Cowan of the Fourth church of Boston were empowered to make all appointments necessary to fill the vacancies for re-organzation

In the evening a meeting was held under the directiton of the Home Mission Board and was largely reminescent of the growth of Presbyterianism in New England during the last 25 years. Dr. Todd, Dr. James Craig of Lowell, Dr. S. C. Gunn of Old Orchard, Me. Rev. Lester Conrow of Bedford and Dr. James Mitchell, clerk of the Presbytery whose recollections cover a period of forty years were the speakers.

By the action of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church, in June, 1912. Boston Presbytery is divided as follows: The churches of greater Boston and Lynn will constitute hereafter the Presbytery of Boston, with such other churches as may in the future be established in this territory, at present 13 in all.

The Presbytery of Newburyport will be of the churches of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, together with other churches lying in the northern part of the state of Massachusetts, 19 churches in all.

The Presbytery of Providence will be of the churches in the state of Rhode Island and all of Massachusetts south of the 42 degree of latitude, together with the cities of South Framingham and Worcester, 9 churches in all.

The Presbytery of Connecticut valley will consist of 10 churches detached from the Presbytery of West Chester. New York, all churches being within the state of Connecticut and Massachusetts.

These Presbyteries will constitute the synod of New England churches which is directed to convene in the first church of Boston, October 22, 1912.

The other presbyteries will meet at Providence, Stamford, Conn., and Newburyport, October 8, 1912.

A supper was served by the following ladies of the church: Mrs. Alexander Clark, chairman; Mrs. John MacKay, Mrs. D. McLennan, Mrs. C. Ross, Mrs. R. Phillips, Mrs. T. Bishop, Mrs. D. Dawson, Mrs. M. Lamont, Mrs. G. Johnson, Mrs. D. Ross, Mrs. J. Craig, Mrs. J. Joss, Mrs. D. Muckle, Mrs. J. Milne, Mrs. A. Bishop, Mrs. N. McFayden, Mrs. John Tytler, Mrs. G. O. Shirley, Mrs. D. Evans and Mrs. J. McLennan.

The evening service opened by singing by the congregation which was followed by scripture reading, by Rev. Dr. Gunn and Rev. Mr. Thompson of the Presbytery led in prayer. The moderator spoke and also. Rev. Mr. Craig of Lowell, Rev. James Todd of South Boston spoke on the past life of Missions. Rev. Mr. Conrow of Bedford and Mr. Mitchell, the state clerk of Presbytery on the future of Missions.

Mr. Craig told of the early history of Presbyterianism and that he was affiliated with the Presbytery since 1886.

He spoke of his early start in South Framingham and Holyoke, how he remembered the building of a church and how the stone was taken from Braintree and Long Meadow. He had raised over $50.000 in buildings for good of Presbyterian work. Other strong churches at that time were at Worcester, Lynn, Woonsocket and Brockton. His object was to lift up the Church of Christ and work for its growth.

Rev. Mr. Todd said he came from the West 12 years ago and joined the New England Board of Presbytery and that Presbyterianism has made rapid progress "Be true to our heritage, fight the good fight and glory in the hard things," were his parting words.

Rev. Mr. Conrow told of struggles against evil and unrighteousness. "What shall the future be? Surely no less than the past. We must strive to make it even better. We shall never solve the problems until Jesus Christ predominates. We must exalt Christ and the future presents a large opportunity."

Dr. Mitchell dwelt on the history of Presbyterianism in New England and said there were three eras. The first era was when the Pilgrims landed and established the Independent Presbyterian Church at Plymouth. It was an era of struggle and oppression. This era was from 1620 to 1725.

The next era was from 1725 to 1869 and the third era to the present. He spoke of the growth of the different churches of the four large Presbyteries in New England and a synod and gave some interesting accounts of the work done in that time. He said that independence will not hold up Christianity The meeting closed and Rev. Mr. Fisher of Providence, R. I. pronounced the benediction.

AUTOS STOLEN BY JOY RIDERS

Two Machines Taken From Garage, Later Abandoned

IN DAMAGED CONDITION

Some person desiring a joy ride entered the garage of City Solicitor J. W. McAnarney on South street in the vicinity of 8.30 Tuesday night and taking his automobile out started on a joy ride. The party came to grief however shortly after on Russell park. The fellow was evidently under the influence of liquor for in passing through City Square he ran against a pole on the sidewalk near Saville street taking the spokes out of one wheel. Continuing down Hancock street he turned into Russell park but had not proceeded far before the damaged wheel came off letting the axle drop to the ground. The machine dragged along the street for a short distance and was then run into the sidewalk where it was abandoned more or less damaged. The old car of Ex-Mayor Shea was also taken Tuesday afternoon and was abandoned in a damaged condition near the National Sailors home.

GOOD WAY TO SAVE MONEY

Co-operative Banks Offer Exceptional Facilities and Aid Stockholders

In another column will be found the statement of the Wollaston Co-operative bank, and too much attention cannot be called to the splendid work which this bank, with others of its kind, is doing.

The co-operative banks of Massachusetts are a part of the great league of building and loan associations of the United States, which now have assets of over $1,030,000,000 and it is not generally realized that here in Massachusetts the assets of the co-operative banks alone amount to over $67,000,000.

The main object of these institutions is to help people save their money, and to enable house owners to pay off the mortgages on their homes by small monthly payments.

Any person may become a depositor by buying from one to twenty-five shares and for each share he is obliged to pay in $1.00 each month. Every six months dividends are declared, which are credited to each share,—and these monthly payments are continued until they with the dividends reach the value of $200 each at which time they are paid off. Of course they can be withdrawn by the share holder at any time before they mature

The Wollaston Co-operative bank, whose statement has been referred to, has been remarkably successful from the beginning, it began in a small way and has steadily grown, until now it is issuing 1700 shares every six months, and is loaning every month from $20,000 to $25,000 to home owners, on first mortgages only, or on the shares themselves.

A record of 24 years and no property on hand taken under fore-closure, and with semi-annual dividends at not less than 5 1-2 per cent per annum for the whole time is a record to be proud of.

DAUGHTERS OF THE KING

Unity Circle Enters Upon a Campaign of Good Work

Unity circle of King's Daughters held its regular meeting in Bethany church vestry, Tuesday evening, Mrs. W. G. Shaw, presiding and wecoming the members, whom she had not met since the summer vacation.

Mrs. S. I. Wood conducted the devotional exercises, carrying out in her thought, the motto of the King's Daughters. Reports were given by the various officers after which, Mrs. George Ames and son Percival of North Weymouth entertained with musical selection Master Percival playing the violin, accompanied by his mother. They intepreted the music very effectively and the audience greatly appreciated it. The speaker of the evening, Mrs. Wilson Marsh took for her suject, "The Associated Charities." Mrs. Marsh who keeps in close touch witth charitable work handled the subject with ability and eloquence. She told how cases have to be treated with exceeding tact, discrimination and kindness and cited many instances where aid thus given prevented the parties from becoming paupers and eventually to become self-supporting. The ministers of the city are much interested. and charitable organizations are cooperating. By the conservation of forces much good is being accomplished.

Mrs. Marsh emphasized the efficiency of Miss Purchase who is accomplishing wonderful results and seemed to be the right person in the right place.

The meeting adjourned to October 15.

QUINCY CHORAL SOCIETY.

The date of the first rehearsal will be Tuesday evening, October 22d at the New Colonial Hall, Hancock building.

MR. SHAW'S LETTER

ber 21 where the interference of the "administration" with the collection of taxes was dealt with. The reply signed by Collector Child amounted to a general denial and glossed over the incident related in terms entirely different from those related in my letter.

To save interrupting the continuity of the investigation, an extra letter was published the next evening (Ledger September 24) stating that Mr Child himself had "related the whole incident to me personally, and in reciting it I simply reported, as nearly as possible from memory, the story just as he told it to me; in substance, if not in the exact words." I added that I believed my letter reported the incident fairly as it was related to me at that time.

Not until September 27 did any further statement appear, when Mr. Child addressed another letter to the Ledger stating that he considered it beneath the dignity of his office to enter into any newspaper discussion, and adding that his statement of September 23 was authentic and that he had "not stated conditions otherwise to any individual."

I have since been reliably informed that some time ago when certain matters in the Collector's department were being investigated by the Special Committee on Finance, Mr. Child gave the members of that committee to understand that the "administration" had been interfering with his collection of the taxes. I have the word of three members of that committee to the above effect.

It has also come to my ears that another person had heard the same story related in my letter at the time of its occurrence, from another "inside source" and that my letter related it accurately according to the report he had received. Up to this time I had no knowledge of the affair except from Mr. Child's own lips, and his denial raised the question of veracity between us. I should have been content to let the matter rest there but for the corroborative evidence of the above facts, which seem to prove conclusively that the "administration" has been interfering with the tax collections.

The second point which drew fire was in relation to the bill of Charles J. McGilvray for $400 for examining sixteen titles in conection with the Hancock street widening. This matter was criticised by me in my letter of September 26 and for a clear understanding of the matter I hope every tax payer in Quincy will read that letter and then compare its statements with Mr. McGilvray's reply in the issue of Saturday, September 28.

Mr. McGilvray says that "the titles were complicated and involved, as is the case with nearly all property in the heart of a city, and required a large amount of work. The search consumed forty days, and it was understood that this amount of time had been expended when the bill was approved and paid."

It is not essential to my purpose to quarrel with Mr. McGilvray as to the size of the bill, although two and a half days per title seems extremely large to anybody who has done much title work. Furthermore I have been informed by the treasurer of one of our large banks who has a great many titles examined every year in all parts of Quincy, that his titles are given out to attorneys three or four at a time, and scattered all about, and that the cost to the bank averages under $10 per title.

The general opinion among attorneys in Quincy is that the bill is exhorbitant. I have not talked with a single lawyer who has expressed any other opinion, and one attorney made the statement that he would have been glad to do the work for $150 and felt that he would have been fairly paid at that price.

But the point I am most anxious to make is not in reference to the amount of the bill, but as to the ILLEGALITY OF THE WHOLE TRANSACTION.

Mr. McGilvray further says:—"The City Solicitor having approved the legality of the employment and payment, I think it will be generally conceded that it is safer to follow the advice of a lawyer of his experience than to heed the opinion of Mr. Shaw, who, so far as I have been able to learn, has received no legal training."

I desire to call particular attention to the fact that it was not "the opinion of Mr. Shaw" that the people were asked to rely upon. Six years experience as a member of the Suffolk Bar have taught me discretion in the matter of opinions

There is only one opinion which may be pretty safely relied upon, and that is the opinion of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts; and it was the opinion of this tribunal that was relied upon as to the illegality of the employment. If the judges of the Supreme Court differ from our City Solicitor they must answer for themselves.

In the case of Fletcher vs City of Lowell, (15 Gray 103) referred to in my letter, the Court in speaking of the employment of outside counsel, says:—"Such authority must be expressly conferred, and does not exist in the Mayor by reason of the general duties and powers conferred on him by law," and also "We do not see that the city solicitor has any more ample powers, either under the city ordinances, or the Mayor's directions, than the Mayor himself had, to employ the plaintiff to render the services for which he seeks to recover compensation in this action."

In the case of Butler vs City of Charlestown (7 Gray 12) the Court ruled to the effect that a city is not liable for legal services, beneficial to the city performed by counsel retained without any official action of the city council.

As no more recent case has modified or overruled these decisions they must be taken as laying down a well settled rule of law that neither the Mayor nor City Solicitor have any authority, in the absence of an ordinance to that effect, to employ outside counsel to act in behalf of the city without express direction of the City Council.

The city ordinances of Quincy clearly negative any such construction in the present instance, where they provide that the City Solicitor shall "examine the title of any real estate in which the city has or is proposing to acquire an interest."

It does not seem to require any special legal training to draw these fair conclusions from the clear rulings of the Supreme Court above quoted.

It seems to me the people owe the Ledger a debt of gratitude for its fearless stand in laying these matters before the people and not allowing themselves to be frightened by bluffs into withholding matters which the people are entitled to know about. One naturally wonders how much information of this description has been successfully covered up in the past by the "bluff" method.

No public official need ever wince at the lime-light of publicity, if his official actions can be squared by the square of fair and honest dealing.

Another letter Saturday.

BUMPER RIDERS SCATTERED

Fifteen Young Men Planned Trip to Brockton Fair

NIPPED IN THE BUD

The Fall River freight train which passed through Quincy shortly before 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon had 15 young men stealing a ride from Boston to Brockton. The young men boarded the freight train at Sweet street, South Boston and were on their way to the Brockton fair. They were riding on the bumpers between the cars, a very dangerous place. The boys were seen by train crew but as the train ran express between South Boston it was not until the latter station was reached that the crew attempted to place the parties under arrest. As the train came to a stop the crew drew revolvers and attempted to capture the whole bunch. The revolvers did not frighten them much however for they ran for dear life and all but three of them made their escape. The three captured gave their names as Charles Garvin of 266 Dorchester street, Frank Barrett of 171 West 3d street, and John Mahoney of 19 1-2 Vinton street. All three were arraigned in court this morning, the first two named being fined $5 each. The Mahoney boy was under age and his case was continued until next Tuesday.

THE BALKANS AFLAME

Small Nations Are Preparing to Make War on Turkey

Paris, Oct. 2.—That war in the Balkans is inevitable was the declaration made here by M. Stancioff, Bulgarian minister to France. He recapitulated what he alleges were Turkish acts of oppression towards his countrymen, and declared that the maintenance of peace is now impossible.

Vienna, Oct. 2.—More than 2,000,000 soldiers are on the march throughout the Balkans, Russia and Austria in preparation for war, in which the actual participants will be Bulgaria, Servia, Montenegro and Greece, allied on one side, against Turkey on the other. The mobilization will cost $10,000,000, even if actual warfare does not result.

The military movements in southern Austria and Poland are in anticipation of an eventuality involving the great powers.

MURPHY KEEPS HIS HANDS OFF

Tells Convention Delegates to Do as They Please

DIX IS THUS ELIMINATED

Head of Tammany Refuses to Enforce Unit Rule Because of Opposition to Governor by Rank and File—Sulzer Making Hard Fight For Nomination Against Strong Odds

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 2.—An open New York Democratic state convention—heretofore classed with the "white blackbirds"—materialized here. When the convention adjourned after perfecting temporary organization, the question of a candidate for governor was as much in the air as at the similar period of the recent Saratoga Republican convention.

Leader Charles F. Murphy of Tammany Hall, who could if he so desired dominate the situation, had passed the word along that the delegates could do as they pleased so far as the candidate for governor was concerned.

Murphy, it was well known, was for Dix, but because of opposition against the governor he refused to enforce the unit rule and this was accepted as meaning death to the governor's chances.

But so far as the other incumbents of state offices were concerned, Murphy, and for that matter, the majority of the delegates on the job, believed they were entitled to a renomination.

Congressman Sulzer, making one of the best fights in his career for the nomination for governor, unquestionably was in the lead so far as the sympathies of the delegates was concerned, but there was a feeling of indefinite opposition to be encountered when his chances were discussed with leaders.

Charles A. Tremain of Ithaca, Martin H. Glynn of Albany, Mayor Burns of Troy, Norman E. Mack and Victor Dowling were the leaders in the consideration of the delegates. Mack is a receptive candidate.

All that was done at the session yesterday was to perfect the temporary organization. Most of this afternoon will be devoted to nominations.

The tentative draft of the platform is practically complete.

RESULT NOT CERTAIN

Vermont Legislature Ballots Today For State Officers

Montpelier, Vt., Oct. 2.—Vermont's real election will be held this afternoon, when the legislature will convene and proceed to ballot for a governor, as no candidates received a majority in the recent election. Republicans claim that Allen M. Fletcher will be elected, but certain complications make this result not certain. Other state officers also are involved, and the joint session will ballot for all. A majority is required as in election.

The vote at the election on Sept. 3, as canvassed by the secretary of state, was as follows:

Allen M. Fletcher (Rep.)	26,237
Harlan B. Howe (Dem.)	20,001
Rev. Fraser Metzger (Prog.)	15,629
Clement F. Smith (Pro.)	1,735
Fred W. Suitor (Soc.)	1,210
Scattering	27
Total vote	64,839
Majority	32,420

Progressives Made Hard Fight to Get Bay State Delegates

Washington, Oct. 2.—How vitally important it was to Theodore Roosevelt that he should carry Massachusetts in the fight for delegates last spring was made clear in terms of dollars and cents before the Clapp investigating committee when Elan H. Hooker, treasurer of the Roosevelt campaign funds, testified that more money was sent to the Bay State than to all the other states put together.

The money was disbursed among the states as follows: Maryland, $5000; Massachusetts, $52,134; Maine, $3500; Vermont, $2500; Illinois, $13,500; Oklahoma, $2500.

So far, the receipts for the Roosevelt primary campaign have been shown officially to be $316,419,35.

IS BLOWN TO ATOMS

Farmer Uses Dynamite on Self After Shooting His Wife

West Pelham, Mass., Oct. 2.—George Shaw, a prosperous farmer and lumberman of this town, enacted a fiendish retribution for the alleged desertion of his wife in January, 1911, when he filled her full of bullets in the doorway of a neighbor's house, near his home, and then blew himself to pieces by sitting on several sticks of dynamite placed in a stump.

The man in his maniacal frenzy was so thorough in his attack on his wife that, not content with emptying the contents of a revolver into her, he jumped on her and beat her with his fists and with the butt of his revolver until she was insensible. The woman is believed to be beyond hope of recovery. Nothing remains of Shaw but a few scattered shreds of flesh and bones and remnants of his clothing.

Shaw was about 50 years old and his wife about five years his junior.

Surgeons Say Ex-Champion's End Is Question of Hours

Philadelphia, Oct. 2.—James J. Corbett, former champion pugilist of the world, is dying here at Jefferson hospital following an operation performed as a last resort to save him from peritonitis. There is absolutely no hope, the surgeons say, and his death is only a question of hours.

Corbett had been suffering from acute appendicitis. Blood poisoning had set in because the appendix had ruptured.

When the surgeons made the incision it was found that not only had the appendix ruptured but that part of the wall of the intestines had been torn so severely that there was no chance to repair the lacerated peritonium.

LARGE BEQUEST LOST TO HIM

Fortune of $400,000 Slipped Away From Prodigal Son

HAD RUN AWAY FROM HOME

Legally Declared Dead After Efforts to Locate Him In America Had Failed—Meets Brother In Boston After Separation of Twenty Years

Boston, Oct. 2.—The story of the dramatic meeting of two brothers—one a prodigal who had been legally declared dead and so had lost a $400,000 bequest—the other a stay-at-home, who had shared in the partition of his brother's fortune—in connection with the International Congress of Chambers of Commerce in Boston, has just been revealed.

John C. Beck, a bookkeeper at the Tremont hotel in Providence, is the prodigal who lost the fortune. F. Faithful Begg, delegate from London to the Commerce congress, is the stay-at-home.

Of interest in view of the Russell case, this stay-at-home brother, after five minutes' talk, accepted the man he had not seen for twenty years as his brother and urged him to come home and accept his share of the fortune.

"It took me just five minutes to convince him who I was," says Beck.

Twenty years ago, when a youth of 19, Beck ran away from the home of his father in Edinburgh. He came to the United States, made a precarious living for a time, joined a cheap theatrical troupe, and toured the country, finally landing in Providence, where he secured employment at the Tremont house.

He was known there as John C. Beck, although his name in Scotland had been Begg. Reading the accounts of the Commerce congress he saw the name of F. Faithful Begg, a delegate from London.

Beck came at once to Boston. He hurried to the Copley-Plaza and located F. Faithful Begg. He introduced himself. Five minutes' talk convinced each that they were brothers.

F. Faithful Begg is a member of the London Stock Exchange and the London Chamber of Commerce. He told the Providence man the family news of a fifth of a century, and Beck learned for the first time that a bequest of $400,000 to him had been partitioned among his brothers and sisters, after all efforts to locate him in America had failed, and he had been legally declared dead.

The brothers and sisters include William Begg, an Australian member of parliament; Charles, a physician, at Bath, Eng; Elizabeth, an unmarried sister living in London, and F. Faithful Begg.

BREEN IS RECALLED

Dynamite Planter Loses His Place on Lawrence School Committee

Lawrence, Mass., Oct. 2.—John J. Breen, accused, convicted and fined $500 for planting the dynamite that was found during the big textile strike here last winter, was recalled here Tuesday as a member of the Lawrence school committee, on which he was serving a two-year term, at the first recall election ever held in Massachusetts.

Breen was sent down to defeat by Augustine X. Dooley, who was prominent in the new charter movement here last fall and who was one of the committee to draft the present charter.

He secured 3773 votes and Breen secured 2269, giving Dooley a majority of 1504.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

VEGETABLE MARROWS.

THIS vegetable is delicious if properly cooked and ought to be more generally used than is now the case. The so called custard marrow has a very delicate flavor and the consistency of custard when cooked.

The ordinary vegetable marrow is a gourd of elliptical shape nine or ten inches long and pale yellow when ripe.

Served With Sauce.

Boiled Vegetable Marrow.—Cut two marrows into halves lengthwise, peel and take out the seeds. Put the marrows into a saucepan and cover with salted water. Let it boil for half an hour. Serve with the following:

Sauce.—Place an ounce of butter in a saucepan and when it is melted stir in a tablespoonful of flour, working it until smooth, and then thin with a little stock and boil for a few minutes. Season with salt and pepper.

Puree of Vegetable Marrow.—Cut up two medium sized marrows; put them in a saucepan with an ounce of butter and an onion. Take a little celery seed, a bay leaf and peppercorns (tied in a muslin bag), add salt and enough stock to barely cover the vegetables. Boil them till quite soft; then rub through a sieve. Return them to the saucepan and pour in enough milk to make the soup the consistency of cream. A little corn flour may be added to thicken if liked.

Rich Preparations.

Vegetable Marrows With Veal.—Pass a pound of lean veal through the mincing machine with a slice or two of fat bacon and season with salt, pepper, nutmeg and a little grated lemon rind. Fry a few thin slices of onion in a tablespoonful of butter; then add by degrees a large tablespoonful of flour and when this is smoothly mixed pour in slowly, stirring quickly all the time, half a pint of milk. When the sauce has boiled and thickened add a little blade of mace and let it stand on the side of the stove for about half an hour or until it is required. Remove the peel from a small vegetable marrow and cut it into rounds about an inch and a half in thickness. Place the pieces of marrow in a colander and put the latter into a stewpan of boiling salt water. Cook the marrow until it is tender, but not soft enough to break. Drain the marrow, remove the seeds and the stringy portion, but do not make a hole through the rounds. Then put them on a hot dish, fill them neatly with the minced veal, scatter a little minced parsley over and pour some tomato sauce round the dish.

Baked With Cheese.

Marrows au Gratin.—Peel, cut in half, take out the seed and parboil a couple of vegetable marrows in salt water. Drain the marrows in a sieve or colander and cut them into slices. Have an oval baking dish well buttered and lay the slices of marrow in this and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Spread with white sauce and sprinkle with bread crumbs and grated cheese when enough layers of sliced marrow have been put in to fill the dish. Bake in a hot oven for thirty minutes and serve in the hot baking dish immediately.

—The American Civic Alliance of New York city has sent a memorial to the Board of Education, requesting that public school buildings be made available for "Neighborhood Meetings" between citizens and their representatives of Federal, State and municipal districts, thereby providing facilities for meeting their constituents to report on policies and specific measures of interest to citizens generally and to voters in particular. The memorial suggests that these meetings be convened under the auspices of civic associations which shall be responsible for the good order and proper conduct of their proceedings.

COUNTESS WAS STRANGLED

Coroner's Testimony Results In Gibson Being Held For Grand Jury

Goshen, N. Y., Oct. 2.—Attorney Burton W. Gibson, charged with the murder of Countess Rosa M. Szabo, was held for the grand jury yesterday afternoon.

Dr. Schultze, who performed the autopsy on the body of the countess, was unshaken in his story that the woman's death was caused by strangulation.

Dr. Schultze testified that the dead woman's tongue had been forced out of place and that the epiglottis had been flattened by exterior force. He swore he had diagnosed over 200 cases of strangulation and never yet had been wrong.

Tuesday's session of the examination resolved into a battle of experts, with Professor O'Reilly of the chair of medico-jurisprudence in St. Lawrence university directing the case of the defense.

Keziah Coffin

Author of "Cy Whittaker's Place," "Cap'n Eri," Etc.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Mrs. Keziah Coffin, supposed widow, is arranging to move from Trumet to Boston, following the death of her brother, for whom she had kept house. Grace Van Horne, ward of Capt. Eben Hammond, leader of the "Come-outer" religious sect, offers to assist her financially if she will remain. She declines. Kyan Pepper, widower, offers marriage, and is indignantly refused.

CHAPTER II—Capt. Elkanah Daniels, leader of the Regular church, offers Keziah a place as housekeeper for the new minister, and she decides to remain in Trumet.

CHAPTER III—Keziah takes charge of Rev. John Ellery, the new minister, and gives him advice as to his conduct toward members of the parish. Ellery causes a sensation by attending a "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER IV—Ellery's presence is bitterly resented by Eben Hammond, leader of the meeting. Grace apologizes for her guardian and Ellery escorts her home in the rain. Capt. Nat Hammond, Eben's son, becomes a hero by bringing the packet into port safely through fog and storm. Ellery finds Keziah writing a letter to some one, inclosing money in response to a demand. She is curiously startled when informed of the arrival of Nat.

CHAPTER V—Nat calls on Keziah, and it develops that they have been lovers since youth. Daniels remonstrates with Ellery for attending "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER VI—Ellery is caught by the tide and is rescued by Nat. They become friends.

CHAPTER VII—Ellery meets Grace while walking in the fields Sunday, and learns that she walks there every Sunday.

CHAPTER VIII—The clergyman takes dinner Sundays with the Daniels. Annabel, the captain's daughter, exerts herself to make an impression on him. She notices with vexation his desire to get away every Sunday at a certain time. She watches him through a spy glass.

CHAPTER IX—Nat again importunes Keziah to marry him. He says he has had a quarrel with his father, who wants him to marry Grace.

CHAPTER X—Ellery asks Grace to marry him. She confesses that she loves him, but says she fears to displease her guardian, who has been very kind to her, and asks time to think about it. Elkanah Daniels tells Eben about the meetings between Ellery and Grace. Eben declares he will make Grace choose between him and the preacher. Grace finds him in a faint, following the excitement of Elkanah's visit.

CHAPTER XI—Just before he dies Eben exacts a promise from Nat and Grace that they will marry.

CHAPTER XII—Keziah breaks the news to Ellery and later he receives a note from Grace saying she is to marry Nat, and asking him not to try to see her again. Keziah tells the story of her own marriage with a man who turned out to be a good-for-nothing, and who was reported to have been lost at sea, and of her love for Nat, whom she cannot marry because the husband is alive. Ellery sees in the story a lesson in devotion to duty and decides to remain and attend to his duties.

CHAPTER XIII.

In Which the Sea Mist Sails.

They buried Captain Eben in the little Come-Outer cemetery at the rear of the chapel. The Come-Outers were there, all of them, and some members of the Regular society, Captain Zeb Mayo, Dr. Parker, Keziah Coffin, Mrs. Higgins and Ike. The little company filed out of the cemetery, and Captain

They Shook Hands and Parted.

Eben Hammond was but a memory in Trumet.

Keziah lingered to speak a word with Grace. The girl, looking very white and worn, leaned on the arm of Captain Nat, whose big body acted as a buffer between her and oversympathetic Come-Outers. Mrs. Cohn silently held out both hands and Grace took them eagerly.

"Auntie," she whispered, "tell me: Did a letter— Did he—"

"Yes, it came. I gave it to him."

"Did—did he tell you? Do you know?"

"Yes, I know, deary."

"Did he—is he—"

"He's well, deary. He'll be all right. I'll look out for him."

"You will, won't you? You won't let him do anything——"

"Not a thing. Don't worry. We've had a long talk and he's going to stay right here and go on with his work. And nobody else'll ever know, Gracie."

"O Aunt Keziah! if I could be one half as patient and brave and sweet as you are——"

"Sssh! here comes Nat. Be kind to him. He's sufferin', too; maybe more'n you imagine. Here she is, Nat. Take her back home and be good to her."

"I tell you," broke in the voice of Captain Zeb Mayo, "Keziah, I've been waitin' for you. Get in my shay and I'll drive you back to the parsonage."

Mrs. Coffin accepted the invitation and a seat in the chaise beside Captain Zeb. The captain spoke of the dead Come-Outer and of his respect for him in spite of the difference in creed. He also spoke of the Rev. John Ellery and of the affection he had come to feel for the young man.

"I'm glad to hear you say so. Of course Cap'n Elkanah is boss of the parish committee and—"

"What? No, he ain't nuther. He's head of it, but his vote counts just one and no more. What makes you say that?"

"Oh, nuthin'. Only I thought maybe, long as Elkanah was feelin' that Mr. Ellery wa'n't orthodox enough, he might be goin' to make a change. I didn't mean to stir you up, Zebedee. But from things Cap'n Daniels has said I gathered that he was runnin' the committee. And, as I'm a friend of Mr. Ellery, it—"

"Friend! Well, so'm I, ain't I? If you ever hear of Daniels tryin' any tricks against the minister, you send for me, that's all. I'll show him. Boss! Humph!"

The wily Keziah alighted at the parsonage gate with the feeling that she had sown seed in fertile ground. She was quite aware of Captain Zeb's jealousy of the great Daniels. And the time might come when her parson needed an influential friend on the committee and in the Regular society.

The news of the engagement between Captain Nat Hammond and Grace Van Horne, told by Dr. Parker to one or two of his patients, spread through Trumet like measles through a family of small children. Annabel Daniels and her father had not expected it. They were, however, greatly pleased. In their discussion, which lasted far into the night, Captain Elkanah expressed the opinion that the unexpected denouement was the result of his interview with Eben.

"I think, pa," she said, "that it's our duty, yours and mine, to treat him just as we always have. He doesn't know that we know, and we will keep the secret. And, as Christians, we should forget and forgive."

Kyan Pepper was another whom the news of the engagement surprised greatly. When Lavinia told him of it, at the dinner table, he dropped the knife he was holding and the greasy section of fishball balanced upon it. Remembering what he had seen in the grove he could not understand; but he also remembered, even more vividly, what Keziah Coffin had promised to do if he ever breathed a word. And he vowed again that that word should not be breathed.

Keziah was the life of the gloomy parsonage. Without her the minister would have broken down. He called her "Aunt Keziah" at her request and she continued to call him "John." This was in private, of course; in public he was "Mr. Ellery" and she "Mrs. Coffin."

In his walks about town he saw nothing of Grace. She and Mrs. Poundberry and Captain Nat were still at the old home and no one save themselves knew what their plans might be. Yet oddly enough, Ellery was the first outsider to learn these plans and that from Nat himself.

He met the captain at the corner of the "Turnoff" one day late in August. He tried to make his bow seem cordial, but was painfully aware that it was not. Nat, however, seemed not to notice, but crossed the road and held out his hand.

"Well, Mr. Ellery," said Captain Nat, "I won't keep you. I see you're in a hurry. Just thought I'd run alongside a minute and say good-by. Don't know's I'll see you again afore I sail."

"Before you sail? You—you are going away?"

"Yup. My owners have been after me for a good while, but I wouldn't leave home on account of dad's health. Now he's gone, I've got to be gettin' back to salt water again. My ship's been drydocked and overhauled and she's in New York now loadin' for Manila. It's a long vy'age, even if I come back direct, which ain't likely. So I may not see the old town again for a couple of years. Take care of yourself, won't you? Good men, especially ministers, are scurse, and from what I hear about you I cal'late Trumet needs you."

"When are you going?"

"Last of next week, most likely."

"Will you—shall you go alone? Are you to be—to be—"

"Married? No. Grace and I have talked it over and we've agreed it's best to wait till I come back. She'll stay in the old house with Hannah."

"Good-by, captain."

"Good-by. Er—I say, Mr. Ellery, how's things at the parsonage? Er—Keziah—Mrs. Coffin, your housekeeper, is she smart?"

"Yes. She's well."

"That's good. Say, you might tell her good-by for me, if you want to. Tell her I wished her all the luck there was. And—and—just say that there ain't any—well, that her friend—say just that, will you?—her friend said 'twas all right. She'll understand; it's a—a sort of joke between us."

"Very good, captain; I'll tell her."

They shook hands and parted.

Didama and her fellow news-venders distributed the tale of Captain Nat's sailing broadcast during the next few days. There was much wonderment at the delayed marriage, but the general verdict was that Captain Eben's recent death and the proper respect due to it furnished sufficient excuse. Hannah Poundberry, delighted at being so close to the center of interest, talked and talked, and thus Grace was spared the interviews which would have been a trouble to her. Nat left town via the packet, on the following Wednesday. Within another week came the news that his ship, the Sea Mist, had sailed from New York, bound for Manila.

CHAPTER XIV.

In Which Trumet Talks of Captain Nat.

Summer was over, autumn came, passed, and it was winter—John Ellery's first winter in Trumet. Fish weirs were taken up, the bay filled with ice, the packet ceased to run, and the village settled down to hibernate until spring. The stage came through on its regular trips, except when snow or slush rendered the roads impassable, but passengers were very few. Twice there were wrecks, one of a fishing schooner, the crew of which were fortunate enough to escape by taking to the dories, and another, a British bark, which struck on the farthest bar and was beaten to pieces by the great waves, while the townspeople stood helplessly watching from the shore, for launching a boat in that surf was impossible. Mr. Pepper made no more calls at the parsonage, and when the minister met him, at church or elsewhere, seemed anxious to avoid an interview.

"Well, Abishai," asked Ellery, on one of these occasions, "how are you getting on at home? Has your sister locked you up again?"

"No, sir, she ain't," replied Kyan. "Laviny, she's sort of diff'rent lately. She ain't nigh so—so down on a feller as she used to be. I can get out once in a while by myself nowadays, when she wants to write a letter or somethin'. Writes one about every once in a week. I don't know who they're to, nuther. She's talkin' of goin' up to Sandwich pretty soon."

"She is? Alone?"

"So she says."

"To leave you here? Why! well, I'm surprised."

"Godfreys mighty! so be I. But she says she b'lieves she needs a change and there's church conference up there, you know, and she figgers that she ain't been to conference she don't know when. I s'pose you'll go, won't you, Mr. Ellery?"

"Probably."

Lavinia got herself elected a delegate and went, in company with Captain Elkanah, Mrs. Mayo, and others, to the conference. She was a faithful attendant at the meetings and seemed to be having a very good time. She introduced the minister to one Caleb Pratt, a resident of Sandwich, whom she said she had known ever since she was a girl.

"Mr. Pratt's a cousin of Thankful Payne over to home," volunteered Lavinia. "You know Thankful, Mr. Ellery."

Lavinia confided to her pastor that Mr. Pratt made the best shoes in Ostable county. He could fit any kind of feet, she declared, and the minister ought to try him sometime. She added that he had money in the bank.

Spring once more; then summer. And now people were again speaking of Captain Nat Hammond. His ship was overdue, long overdue. Even in those days, when there were no cables and the telegraph was still something of a novelty, word of his arrival should have reached Trumet months before this. But it had not come, and did not. Before the summer was over, the wise heads of the retired skippers were shaking dubiously. Something had happened to the Sea Mist, something serious.

HIS MISSING ENVELOPE.

He Learned Where It Was and a Lesson at the Same Time.

This happened in a crowded subway express train the other night.

An old man boarded the train at the Fourteenth street station and clung to a strap in front of a young woman who was seated. As none of the men showed a disposition to let the old man sit down, the young woman arose and offered her seat to him.

Before he could sit down a younger man slid into the vacant seat. The young woman was confused, but only for a minute. She leaned down slightly and said to the man in the seat:

"You dropped an envelope on the platform, sir."

The man jumped up and elbowed his way to the platform. Half a minute's search failed to reveal the supposed envelope. The man returned to where the young woman was standing and said:

"Say, lady, where is that envelope? I can't find it out there."

"That envelope," replied the young woman, "is in the same place your manners are."

The young man understood and faded from view. The old man got the seat, while the people in the vicinity looked, listened and laughed. — New York Sun.

NEW SITUATION HAS DEVELOPED

REINSTATEMENT IS DEMANDED

Two Thousand Turned Away When They Report For Duty After Ettor-Giovannitti Protest Strike—General Strike Threatened at Lawrence—Clubbing by Police Denounced

Lawrence, Mass., Oct. 2.—Another textile strike in this city hinges on the reply of the mill agents to a committee of the I. W. W. organization, which will seek the reinstatement of the men discharged yesterday.

At a meeting of the I. W. W. central committee last night it was voted to request this action and a sub-committee was appointed to visit the mills today.

The statements of the agents yesterday were not optimistic for peace. They were, in effect, that they would not take the discharged men back. It is estimated that 2000 men were turned away when they reported for work yesterday morning.

Mass meetings were held throughout the city last night. The largest was at Lexington hall. There were assembled the Italians. The situation here is in a critical stage. The men who gathered in the halls protested loudly against the continued clubbing by the police. They were particularly incensed against the attack at the Arlington mills in the morning.

Archie Adamson stated officially for the organization that the men and women were told to wait outside until it could be learned if there was work for them. He alleged that while they waited someone telephoned for the police and that clubbing followed.

Strike talk was rampant at last night's meetings. The feeling of unrest was manifest. But in the halls there was a dearth of singing and cheering, which usually mark these industrial gatherings. There was a larger attendance than has been noted since the strike of last winter. An ugly feeling seems abroad.

With the return of the 12,000 workers who participated in the Ettor-Giovannitti protest strike on Monday to the mills yesterday morning a brand new situation developed.

At the Wood mill five delegates to the Central I. W. W. committee were discharged. Their reinstatement was asked and refused. Several hundred operatives, members of the organization, were told plainly that there was nothing for them to do. At the Ayer mill, 1000 workers were turned back. The total number discharged, including the other mills, was about 2000.

At the Arlington mill about 200 foreign-speaking operatives were told that there was nothing for them to do, whereupon they massed about the mill gate. Trouble started and two automobile loads of police arrived. About thirty operatives were bruised before the mob was dispersed. This was the only disturbance of the day. No arrests were made.

"FREE IN TWO WEEKS"

Haywood Predicts Acquittal of Ettor and His Companions

Salem, Mass., Oct. 2.—William D. Haywood, national leader of the I. W. W., visited Ettor, Giovannitti and Caruso, the men on trial here for the Lawrence strike murder, in their cells in the Essex county jail last evening.

After his talk with the prisoners, Haywood said: "There need be no fear of violence during the trial, or of I. W. W. men marching on Salem, for the prisoners will be acquitted. The trial will be over in two weeks."

From hints thrown out, it seems certain that the I. W. W. leaders and the defendants' lawyers have something in view which they expect will put a sudden and speedy end to the case.

Haywood's sudden visit and the fact that 129 talesmen were examined without adding even one juror to the two that were chosen Monday were the features of the case yesterday.

WEYMOUTH GIVEN SHUT OUT

By the Quincy Foot Ball Stars on a Muddy Field

RAINED ALL THE TIME

Quincy beat Weymouth at Merrymount park Tuesday afternoon 13 to 0. Shortly after the whistle blew it started to rain and continued to the third period.

Both teams showed poor defense work and fumbling was not an absent feature. Slippery grounds laid out a number of men in the play and Lyons of Weymouth retired with a twisted knee.

Coach Sison is pleased at the prospects of developing a speedy bunch but admits now that they will have to work hard.

The game opened with Weymouth punting to Brown who took the ball on the 30 yard mark and carried it to centre where he fumbled and Weymouth secured the ball. They were held for downs and Prout after a few live plays made a 30 yard run. The visitors held Quincy and were penalized five yards on their next rush. Leonard kicked a long spiral and Prout nabbed it and made 10 yards. On an end run the ball was lost to Weymouth on a fumble and Quincy ttook it back on a fumble in the next play and were held for downs.

The second period opened with Weymouth covering the ball on Quincy 40 yard line, Leonard punted to Crane and on a bum forward by Quincy the visitors got the ball. carried it to the 20 yard line and tried a forward pass which was intercepted by Melville, who carried it back to the centre of the field. Dave made another 10 yard dash and Mecca Larkin started around the right end, was forgotten by his interference and lost six yards. He made good the loss on the next play and Brown plunged through centre and fumbled.

After several line formations Weymouth run Leonard around left end. He got started in good style for a run and had covered 15 yards when in an attempt to dodge Melville he fumbled and Quincy got the ball.

Brown was sent back to punt and Weymouth broke through the line and tackled him before he got the ball away. A forward pass went to a Weymouth player. They tried two plays and punted to Melville on the three yard line. Murphy took the ball around right end, duplicated the feat, and time was called with Quincy on their 40 yard line.

Weymouth opened the third period by kicking to Mecca who made 20 yards. Melville followed with 10 yards inside the left end. The back field worked up and down and Melville made first down to the 15 yard line. Mecca started for the line, was stopped on the 5 yard mark and lost on the rush. Melville was down two yards from the line and Crane carried it over. Larkin kicked the goal.

On the lineup Weymouth kicked to Mecca who made 25 yards to the centre. Quincy was given 5 yards and Weymouth held them for downs. Riley of Weymouth was downed for a 10 yard loss and Quincy held. Mecca pulled a nice pass down and Murphy made first down. Sam Prout was held for a loss when Quincy's line weakened and he was downed before he could pass the ball. A forward to Larkin gained 10 yards and a five yard penalty and another play closed the period with Quincy on their 20 yard line.

Quincy tightened up for another score and Weymouth held them for downs. Live plunges and no gain gave Quincy the ball. A series of short runs netted no ground and Quincy lost the ball. Weymouth carried the ball back and forth inside the line distance and no interference to its back field gave Quincy the ball. Brown punted to Riley who kicked back to Quincy and Crane crossed the line for a touchdown. Larkin failed to kick the goal. Weymouth pulled off to Quincy and the contest from this point to the close was uninteresting.

DISTRICT COURT.

John O'Neil and Thomas Conboy were arraigned for drunkenness at Quincy. Cases placed on probation until October 31.

Michael Cleclese was arraigned for alleged assault at Weymouth. Case continued until Saturday.

Charles Garvin and Frank Barrett were fined $5 each for riding on a freight train without permission. John Mahoney a juvenile charged with the same offence had his case continued until next Tuesday.

—One of the applicants for naturalization papers at Boston recently, in answer to questions by the examining board, said that the colors of the American flag were green, white and blue, and that Theodore Roosevelt was one of the selectmen of Dedham. Strangely enough, the examining board concluded that such an order of intelligence was not sufficient to warrant the granting of citizenship.—Milford Gazette.

BATH HOUSE AT WOLLASTON FAVORED BY BOARD OF TRADE

The Body Pledges Unanimous Support to the Public Dock Question

Resolutions Adopted on the Death of James F. Burke

After a 30 minutes discussion, the matter of a state bath house at Wollaston Beach, was referred to the legislative committee of the Board of Trade, with instructions for that body to use every effort for the establishment of such a public requirement, at the meeting Wednesday evening.

It was a regular meeting of the Board of Trade and William G. Shaw presided.

Reference to the committee on steam railroads of the difference in rates to Boston as compared to Quincy from all points was made by Mr. Sedgwick.

He recommended that the committee compile a table showing freight rates to Quincy from water competitive points from which large shipments are received and the rates to the city of Boston.

A resolution presented by dock commissioner, Frank F. Crane, pledging the support of the board to the public dock question was adopted. The resolution was as follows:

James M. Cantfill, sealer of weights and measures, advised the board that he had submitted a table of weights to all pedlars, and was requiring them to carry a scale according to the statutes.

An invitation to join in the associate membership of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States was referred to the Board of Directors.

"Voted,—That the Board of Trade hereby agree to support the building of a public dock in the immediate future for the use of all citizens and to create a public sentiment in its favor."

Mayor Stone, Joseph Walker, Peter T. Fallon and Andrew Milne, Jr., spoke in favor of the resolve. Joseph Walker said:

"Quincy is ever young and I am growing old. While we are dropping off others are continually taking our places, so in that way our coporations have youth in their favor. There should be a way into Quincy and a way out and it will tend to bring more business to our city."

The committee on train service through J. O. Hall reported that they had conferred with A. G. Smith, General Passenger Agent, regarding train

CHURCH SOCIAL PROFITABLE

To Those Who Partook of the Feast of Reason

AN EXPERIENCE MEETING

Members of the Wollaston Baptist church gathered in the chapel, Wednesday evening, for a home coming social at which the various departments of church work were taken up and the season's work started.

The program opened with a piano duet by Mrs. Joseph Walther and Mrs. Charles M. Roach. Mrs. J. P. Perry presided over the meeting and called upon the pastor, Rev. Joseph Walther who put in an urgent plea for larger attendance at all church services. "The church is doing splendid work at present and we should talk it up to all we meet," he said.

Elford L. Durgan, superintendent of the Sunday school, declared "There is a place for everyone and a good place too in our Sunday school,"

Mrs. J. Arthur Jewell told of the work of the Ladies Social and Benevolent society. She urged all to join in making it bigger, better and busier this season.

William Bullock of the Christian Endeavor the last speaker for the church departments, was followed by a number of members who related their vacation experiences.

Herbert W. Pinkham told of a trip in which Washington, Jacksonville, St. Augustine were among the cities visited.

The orange groves and the ostrich and alligator farms were described. One peculiar incident in Jacksonville was the encounter of a sight seeing auto with a sign reading "Leaves Park Square daily at 10 and 2." The sign looked familiar to Mr. Pinkham and upon questioning it was discovered that driver, lecturer and auto came from Boston.

Edward J. Badger told of the first trip he ever took to New York which he entitled "Where ignorance is bliss 'twere folly to be wise."

Amos D. Albee gave an interesting and vivid description of the life and scenery in the White Mountains. Since his first trip in 1888, Mr. Albee and his wife have been almost yearly visitors to this beauty spot.

Refreshments were served by a committee consisting of Mrs. E. J. Badger, Mrs. Francis H. Corey, Mrs. Wade. Mrs. Wellington Record, Mrs. Grant and Miss Charlotte Scarborough assisted by Mrs. Charles M. Roach and Misses Muriel Badger, Marion Rand, Etta Holmes, Annie McCarthy, Lottie Trenholm and Miss Gertrude Barber.

ABANDONED TEMPORARILY

Owners of Stalled Auto Were at Work When Police Arrived

Word was received by the police this morning that an automobile had been abandoned near the Montclair school building sometime during Wednesday night. It was first thought that the car was the one that figured in the assault case at West Roxbury earlier in the evening. Chief Burrell sent the auto patrol down with an extra driver to bring the car to Quincy. On arriving however it was found that the car had been left intentionally Wednesday night having broken down. The officers found three men hard at work on the car trying to get it in operation.

McDEVITT OPENS HIS CAMPAIGN

Addressed Fore River Men at Noon Rally Today

John J. McDevitt, democratic candidate from the fifth senatorial district, opened his campaign today. He addressed about 500 employees of the Fore River company at noon.

He criticised the record of his opponent, Roger Wolcott of Milton stating that he had opposed the initiative and referendum, all progressive measures that came before him as house chairman of the committee on constitutional amendments, and said he was in every sense a corporation man against the people.

He also attacked Mr. Wolcott's record before the members of the Manet club morning.

On Friday evening he will appear before the Jefferson club at Hyde Park

Candidate McDevitt advocates a bill for the elimination of party designations which will allow a voter to register his choice regardless of party belief. He feels that under the present law a man is hampered in declaring his choice because he oftentimes is handed a party ballot on which appears only the name of the candidate of that ticket.

He stated that this change in the Luce law was of vital importance to the state and that its effect on Quincy would be immediately apreciated by its residents.

BEAN BAG CONTEST.

A regular meeting of the Knights and Ladies of Honor lodge was held at Protection hall, Wednesday night. After the meeting a bean bag contest drew much attention. Prizes were won by Miss Maud Tibbetts, Miss Isabell McBirnie and Miss Nellie M. Cate.

Refreshments were served by a committee consisting of Miss Lena Allen, Miss Isabell McBirnie and Miss Alice Caldwell.

BROKE HIS PROBATION

Mullaney Could Not Keep Out of Mischief

STOLE AUTOMOBILES

William J. Mullaney was arrested Wednesday afternoon at his home on Quarry street by Chief Burrell and this morning returned to Dedham jail, from which institution he was out on probation. Mullaney was suspected of being the young man who helped himself to the automobiles of ex-Mayor Shea and City Solicitor McAnarney Tuesday evening, both of which were abandoned after being more or less smashed. When accused of the theft by Chief Burrell he admitted that he was the guilty party.

Mullaney was arrested on January 15, 1911 with Joseph Hennesey for breaking into Irwin's restaurant on Hancock street. They were held for the grand jury and at the April term of the superior court both were placed on probation for two years. Hennesey violated his probation some time ago and was returned to jail and now Mullaney has gone over. He will have to remain in jail until the December term of the superior court. He is the young man who taught the City Solicitor how to operate his car and it is now believed that he has been using it nearly every night during the past summer without permission.

After an Important Two Days' Session in Quincy

A number of out of town ministers were in attendance, and Rev. A. N. Sproul, a former pastor in this city renewed old friendship.

The committee in charge of the arrangements were Rev. J. A. Matheson, Rev. J. Mitchell of Revere and the session of the First church.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

If the Progressives make good their boast and elect enough members to the legislature to block the senatorial election, it will require some sort of a combination to unravel the snarl. It would be somewhat strange to have Republicans and Democrats unite but in such a situation on whom would the choice fall?

The man who decided to commit suicide by sitting on a keg of dynamite, was bound he would succeed. There was hardly enough of him left to hold an inquest over.

September went out like a roaring lion, even if it was lamb like up to the last kick.

The foot ball players are receiving their regular battering. How much does this department of school life add to the intelligence or ability of the average student?

Quincy is still on the golf map.

President Taft has prepared a whole lot of canned speeches. They will be let off in different parts of the country at the same time. like the opening up of a sky rocket.

The assessment of values on the New York property of Carnegie. Rockfeller, and other big milllionaires indicate that the big fellows in New York are treated much the same as rich men in other parts of the country when it comes to paying taxes.

Will Smith swallow his chagrin and whoop it up for Wilson in New Jersey, now that he has been politically panhandled?

Those burglars are getting too busy for comfort. When they are finally rounded up they will have a lot to answer for.

The Ettor trial is going to cost Essex county a pretty stiff penny. Citizens in general do not feel overburdened with a desire to serve on the jury. Simmered right down, no doubt they are influenced by apprehension for the future and under the conditions one can hardly blame them for being a little timid.

All this talk of marching on the Salem court house, to liberate prisoners is hardly such as could be expected in a law abiding committee. There is little doubt but what Mr. Ettor and his fellow defendants will get a fair trial. If they are proven guilty they should suffer the penalty meted out to any offender against the law. If innocent, the law should be permitted to take its proper course and hand them out a clear cut acquittal. which is their right. Nothing can be gained by mob violence in such a case.

Possibly Harvard may add a new degree to its list, that of R. K., meaning rat killer, which of course should not confound with the other word so near it yet so different in meaning, Ratschkeller.

The Toledo Blade says Americans boast of their independence and then let Paris dictate what they shall wear. We thought it Lunnon old top.

Grand Opera has to take a second place to base ball when it comes to prices and support in the Hub. What of that much boasted high brow stuff?

Anighto Peary, who was born north of the artic circle, has just celebrated her nineteenth birthday, which makes her 38 days old in Eskimo time.

Civilization may not need its army officers for war, but it seems a shame to waste them in aeroplane castastrophes.

It's now an even race between New York justice and the Virginia variety, with the odds on the Old Dominion.

WHIRLIGIG OF PLEASURE.

The season has arrived which announces the entrance upon the stage the whirligig of pleasure. While this department is not confined exclusively to the younger element, it is accepted that the youngsters predominate in its pursuit. Elderly people who have not grown fossilized can enjoy the usual season's recreations, with as much zest, if not quite as much persistence and activity as the younger ones. The gamot of dances, socials. surprise parties, suppers and many other forms of diversion, will be run to the limit. No one objects to innocent enjoyment on the part of old or young. As long as the activities are confined within these limits, there is no harm done. The minute that line is passed it is time for the older people to step in and take a hand, calling a halt upon anything that savors of the unseemly. People should get as much good wholesome innocent enjoyment out of this life as is consistent with good health and morals. We have only one life to lead, and when we are dead we are a long time dead. We know what is before us here, but we do not know what is coming to us in the hereafter, so that we should make the most of our opportunities and get as much pleasure out of life as we can, always keeping those pleasures within bounds and beyond question as to their desirability.

RETURNS GRATIFYING.

While reports have not been received from all sources, enough has been learned to satisfy those who are interested in the Day Nursery movement, that the amount realized Tag day, last Saturday was gratifying in the extreme. Every one connected with the great demonstration that day, should feel a degree of pride at the result of their labors and citizens in general unite in their support of the movement and assisting those who perform the active work of the enterprise.

The young people, boys and girls performed splendidly. They were energetic, persistent and held up every person they met.. No one escaped. In their enthusiasm and zeal the youngsters located near the Adams Academy building, took many risks. They held up automobiles, going in both directions and they dashed back and forth across the street, ahead and behind machines, in a reckless manner. There were many hair raising and thrilling moments, when spectators were almost horrified, expecting to see some of the tireless mites of humanity, knocked down and crushed by some passing machine. But the miracle of it was that not a single one was injured, but goodness knows they took risks enough.

They have their reward in aiding a good and worthy cause, which is rapidly gaining in importance and which offers aid in a manner which is much appreciated without making the beneficiary, really under obligation or in the position of accepting charity.

PARTY CONVENTIONS.

Both the Democratic and Republican State conventions will be held in Boston. Saturday, and while all is apparently harmony for the former and there does not appear to be any cause for difference in the latter. yet it must be acknowledged that the conditions of previous party conventions have in a measure been reversed. Only a few years ago the Fanueil hall convention of the Democrats was almost a riot, while the Springfield convention was not a very creditable affair. But this year after the delightful battle for nominations, in which the candidates threw some pretty hot shot at each other, they have evidently buried the hatchet, clasped hands over the bloody chasm and the rare exhibit of a smooth and harmonious Democratic convention is predicted.

The Republican convention will undoubtedly be free from contests, but this does not mean that the partty as a whole will have easy sledding. The growing ranks of the Progressives or Bull Moosers is a matter of much concern, indicating as it does depleted ranks at the polls in November. The Democrats, united and harmonious, look to have a good fighting chance unless they are affected by the desertions to the Progressives and if there are many of the Democrats who join hands with the Progressives, then the contest between the Republicans and Democrats as parties will be more on a basis of preceding years.

TERRIBLY MUTILATED

George Irwin Lost Three Fingers, Others Hurt

HAND CRUSHED IN ROLLERS

George Irwin, 28 years old, of Franklin street, South Braintree was drawn between the two heavy iron rollers at the Monatiquot rubber mills in that town Wednesday and sustained a badly mutilated right hand. He was removed to the Quincy City Hospital.

The men employed in the room did all they could to aid in the removing of the injured hand, but were unable to do so until a part of the roller gave and his hand slipped out. Medical assistance could not be secured in Braintree and he was brought to this city.

Dr. N. S. Hunting, who examined the wound, said that every particle of skin had been removed from the finger tips to the wrist and that the ends of some of the fingers were taken off. The fingers were crushed so that it was impossible to set the bones and he was obliged to amputate the first two fingers and a part of the third. The thumb and little finger were also badly crushed but an effort is being made by the doctor to save him.

The young man is the sole support of an aged mother and an infirm father.

LIKE A GREAT ARMED CAMP

Balkan Peninsula on Verge of Great Conflagration

A MILLION MEN UNDER ARMS

Bulgaria, Montenegro, Greece and Servia to Act Together For First Time Against Turkey, Their Common Enemy—Great Powers May Be Drawn Into the Conflict

London, Oct. 3.—The whole Balkan peninsula is being rapidly transformed into an armed camp. According to despatches from the capitals of the various states, upwards of a million men have been ordered under arms, and there is a possibility that they may decide once for all in a trial by combat the question of changing the conditions of the inhabitants of the European provinces of Turkey.

The effect of a demonstration of the military forces of the Balkan states is first to be tried. For this purpose Bulgaria, Servia, Greece and Montenegro have ordered the mobilization of their entire available armies, and if this open threat does not secure what they demand from the Ottoman government, the next few hours may see further steps taken.

The four states of the new Balkan alliance are rapidly organizing to act together in arms for the first time against the common enemy—Turkey. The Ottoman authorities are no less busy. The entire Turkish army has been mobilized and the country seems a unit for war.

Dispatches from Vienna say that Austria will find it impossible much longer to refrain from taking military precautions in order to keep the Servians from encroaching on territory which Austria-Hungary insists must remain part of Turkey and not become an adjunct of greater Servia.

The slightest untoward incident will start a general conflagration, according to the prevailing opinion in diplomatic circles, and the great powers might easily be drawn into this.

The only bright feature is that the Balkan states seem inclined to give the great powers a little more time in which to try to induce Turkey to introduce the reforms demanded in Macedonia. It is reported that they intend to send a collective note to Turkey explaining the reasons for their action in mobilizing their armies.

As they necessarily must await a reply to this note, the ambassadors of the great powers in Constantinople will be able further to impresss the porte with the advisability of granting their demands. The porte must, in the meantime, however, deal with two notes, both of which are practically ultimatums.

One of these is from Servia and demands the release of Servian ammunition which has been retained in transit through Turkey, while the other is from Greece, and protests against the detention of Greek shipping, which Turkey has decided to hold up and utilize for the transport of her troops.

OUT OF STOCK EXCHANGE

Dow's Expulsion by Boston Board Is First In Quarter of Century

Boston, Oct. 3.—Summary action was taken by the Boston Stock Exchange in regard to Stephen R. Dow, and he was expelled. This is the result of his action in connection with the various mining companies of which he was president.

The house of Stephen R. Dow & Co. failed last week, and it was brought out that he had been borrowing money from the companies of which he was the president. District Attorney Pelletier is investigating the failure at the present time.

The Boston Stock Exchange has not found it necessary to take similar action against a member for more than a quarter of a century, the last case being that of William Reed in 1886.

East Dennis, Mass., Oct. 3.—After a search lasting three weeks, in which the entire population of East Dennis was engaged, the body of Mrs. Joseph Hedge of this town was found in the water of Cedar pond by Wallace P. Sears. Mrs. Hedge was the wife of Joseph Hedge, a wealthy business man.

Mrs. Hedge was 48 years old and was regarded as sane until she left home. The police and relatives are satisfied she committed suicide. She is believed to have been out of her mind, as her husband says she asked him to send her to an institution the morning when she disappeared.

Armour Company Has Big Stock on Hand at Kansas City

Kansas City, Oct. 3.—Following an attempt to corner the Kansas city market, the Armour Grain company has 4,000,000 bushels of wheat, September delivery, on hand here. The company is not worried about getting rid of the grain, but is buying heavier than ever, local grain men say.

The September corner was successful only in raising the prices moderately, the action of the board of trade in allowing deliveries in cars on track instead of elevators preventing skyrocket points.

GOVERNMENT CASE ALREADY PREPARED

Will Be Read as Soon as Dynamite Trial Begins

Indianapolis, Oct. 3.—Thirty-four veniremen had been excused and twelve remained in the box still under consideration at the conclusion of Wednesday's examination for the selection of a jury to try the forty-six men accused by the government of complicity in the "dynamite plots."

It was thought the jury might be complete today or Friday. The trial of the defendants, headed by Frank M. Ryan, president of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, and including other officials of that union, together with members of two other unions, will then begin.

District Attorney Miller will open the case for the government. His opening statement, already prepared, contains 800 typewritten pages and will cover the ground upon which the prosecution intends by testimony to sustain its charge.

SCHOOL MASTER'S CLUB.

The School Master's club held its first meeting of the season Wednesday evening in the library of the High school with a full attendance. The new men teachers who have come to Quincy since the close of the last school year were admitted to membership. The work of the evennig was devoted to a consideration of the Montesser method of teaching. Charles Sampson, read a paper upon this sugject and this was followed by a general discussion.

LINCOLN SCHOOL.

For the month of September, Miss Sullivan's class led with a per cent of 99.369. Three of the weeks the attendance was perfect. Miss Donovan's room was a close second with 99.058 per cent.

Soccor football teams have been organized withh Ivat Anderson, captain of the first and K. Albion Smith, captain of the second.

JOHN HANCOCK SCHOOL.

The banner for best attendance was won by Miss Underwood's first grade.

QUINCY TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION.

The Executive Committee of the Quincy Teachers' Association met yesterday afternoon in the Coddington School. The Committee on Speakers announced that Jacob A Riis of New York would be the first speaker at the meeting of the Association on October the 15th. Mr. Riis will take for his subject "My Neighbor." Dr. David Snedden, State Commissioner of Education, will address the Association on the evening of January the ninth. In the early part of April, Mr. Edward Avis, the bird mimic, will give his illustrated lecture on "An Evening in Birdland.' The May meeting will be wholly musical and the talent is to be announced at a later date.

ADAMS SCHOOL.

The Executive Committee of the Parents' and Teachers' Association met in the Adams school, Tuesday evening and made plans for the ensuing school year.

Every member was present and more than two hours were spent in arranging the program for the coming yearr. There are to be six meetings of the Association this year the first of which is to be held on the evening of October the twenty-fourth

Through the kindness of Miss Mary Griffin there is in the Adams school a full grown cotton plant with several blossoms upon it. The plant is taken from room to room and the pupils are learning first hand just how cotton grows. The buds burst forth into a delicate pink blossom which quickly fades into a dull white. The petals close and in a few days a little the ball of cotton delights the eyes of the pupils.

WILLARD SCHOOL.

Capt. Walter Eagan of the Willard soccer football team started practise last week with a squad of twenty-four men, the largest number that ever reported for this sport in the school. Two teams were chosen, Primo Franzi being made captain of the second team. Two games were played last week between the first and second teams, the first winning both by the small margin of one to nothing. This week the boys defeated Gridley Bryant Monday, and played a nothing to nothing game with the Lincoln eleven Tuesday, and also, a game with the John Hancock aggregation in which neither side scored.

The players for the first team have not been definitely decided on yet,but the best from the two teams will represent the school in the league which opens next week. Russell Johnson, grade eight, fairly stated the situation in his composiiton a few days ago. He said:

"Selecting boys for the Willard School football team will be a difficult thing to do. Twenty-four candidates have reported and two teams have been formed. They turn out to practise every night after school. By the way they play, it seems that all are eager to be chosen for the first team. Anyway there will be a struggle to the end."

Both of the pre-vocational classes are making consistent progress. The boys have finished partitioning off the room in the attic for the girls sewing and cooking room. doing a very creditable piece of work. They are now busily engaged in making work benches. Next they will build a room for their own use similar to the one made for the girls. A printing outfit has been ordered, sufficiently large enough to print a school paper, and plans are already being laid for launching such a publication.

The girls are doing good work in sewing; making aprons, darning stockings, mending, etc.. while the lessons on the care of the hands, hair, and the desirability of clean personal appearance are of the most practical nature.

The best attendance for the month was in grade five, three, their record being 98.9 per cent. with no tardiness or dismissals. The attendance banner has been placed in their room much to the delight of the pupils.

Speed tests for the standardization of instruction in arithmetic based on the experiments given by Mr. Courtis of the Liggett School for Girls in Detroit to 75,000 children, have been given in grades three to eight. The tests consist of a series of simple examples in addition, multiplication and substraction. Many valuable deductions can be made from them. These tests are not "examinations," but measures of the fundamental abilities of arithmetic involved in simple work with whole numbers. Their purpose is to show how efficiently the work of the entire school is conducted and they are of most value in making a critical study of school conditions. These tests show at once the knowledge of each individual pupil. If results indicate that a pupil is above the standard in addition, but below in subtraction, the teacher knows exactly where to place the emphasis in her teaching . If the pupil is up to standard in all the processes, but below in reasoning the teacher knows the pupil must have more problems which teach him to reason. It helps the teacher to reach the individual in place of prescribing the same work for all, regardless of their individual needs.

CODDINGTON SCHOOL

A meeting of the Parents'-Teachers' Association of the Coddington school will be held in the Assembly hall of the school on Wednesday evening October 9, at 8 o'clock. An interesting program has been arranged by the committee, and a large attendance is desired.

MUSIC DEPARTMENT.

Music in the public schools is universally recognized now as the foundation and cultivation of the music standard for the next generation. Foremost among systems is the Weaver system, giving a thorough course in singing, writing and sight-singing. The practical presentation and gain in individual knowledge has brought a wide spread adoption of the system all over the country and its work is now going into curriculum of the largest normals and colleges.

For the past two years the Weaver System has been given in the City of Quincy.

From the second grade through the eighth, classes are now taking three lessons a week in concert singing, two lessons a week in individual sight singing and writing of all music principles.

The interest of the parents is warmly welcomed and if parents wish to do so in the case of monotones among the young children, imitation at the piano forte at home will be invaluable to acquire pitch and power to sing for the life time.

SCHOOL NOTES.

By the way of further explanation of the Evening Industrial courses, which open at High school, Monday of next week, it should be said that applicants for registration must be at least 17 years of age and must be engaged in the particular trade with which the course offered is allied. At the time of registration, too, the applicant must be prepared to show that he can profit by the course offered as work of this character is intended only for those who can make proper use of it. Just now if the courses will have full registration is of course, a complete uncertainty but there would seem to be a demand for most of the evening work that the school committee is offering.

The length of each course will be 20 sessions of two hours each and in case of a demand for it. an advanced course of the same length will be offered at the conclusion of the first course.

A regular meeting of the Washington school parent's and teachers association was held Wednesday evening. About forty were present and listened to an interesting address by Miss Mabel E. Adams of the Horace Mann school on "Correct English in the home." President Joseph Fitton presided and during the evening A. L. Hayden sang two solos. Nothing but routine business was transacted at the business session.

CHIEF'S DRIVER TAKES A BRIDE

Kidnapping Plans Were Not Carried Out as Planned

Within a stones throw of the central fire station where he keeps an eagle eye on Chief Litchfield's automobile, Richard Williams, son of Mrs. Sarah Williams and one of the nerviest chauffeurs in the state, and Miss Georgiana Sarah McLean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel McLean, 198 School street, were married by Rev. Richard E. Armstrong at the Christ church Wednesday evening.

The bride was attended by Miss Ruth Farmer and the best man was Sydney Williams.

The bride was dressed in white crepe de chine, wore a veil caught up with lilies of the valley and carried bridal roses. Her attendant wore pink messaline, and carried pink carnations.

After the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents and friends from Boston, Braintree, Weymouth, Milton, Dorchester, Roxbury, Dedham and Gloucester were present.

A number of the men in the fire department were present and with the assistance of the boys of the Copeland Club and the other guests a good time continued until midnight.

The couple left during the evening for a honeymoon trip and their departure was marked by cheers and hurrahs for a safe return.

THE HOSPITAL'S FIRST BIG JOB

To the People of Quincy:

The Hospital had just been built and was barely ready for business when on a certain day some twenty years ago occurred the terrible railroad accident almost at its doors, nearly in the rear of the Adams Academy. Citizens above middle age will recall the circumstances. A gang of track repairers, hurrying out of the way of an approaching train, inadvertently left an iron lifting-jack on the track, with the result that the engine jumped the rails, plunged into the bank and quickly stopped, while the cars following it crunched and splintered themselves against the fallen iron monster, killing, wounding and burning scores of passengers amid a scene of indescribable confusion and horror.

Here was work cut out for the new Hospital with a vengeance, a right strenuous introduction to real business a true baptism of fire, as it were!

We know how the contingency was met, and how the Hospital justified its existence on the instant, and we know equally well that there has never been a single moment since that fateful opening that the beneficent institution on the hill has not been in use for the relief of disease, pain and suffering. We have now enjoyed benefits of the Hospital so long that we take them as a matter of course; but thoughtful persons must sometimes be led to imagine what the conditions would be without the Hospital. If today there is a case of sudden, critical illness, or an accident, the attending doctor, after a hurried examination, says "away to the Hospital as quickly as possible!" And what if there were no Hospital!

This is the sort of institution which the people are asked to support in the coming financial campaign. They are the only ones to care for it any way, and it would seem that a simple statement of its needs ought to bring an immediate and generous response from everybody in the city.

OPPORTUNITY COMES SELDOM

Those Who Seek Technical Education Have Rare Chance

An exceptional opportunity is afforded young men to get a technical education in the evening industrial schools which open next Monday evening. It will be the first time that evening industrial education has been undertaken by the public school department and it will be interesting to see how much interest is taken in them, which will be shown by the attendance on the opening evening. If the attendance does not warrant the classes will not be continued. Able instructors have been engaged for all departments taught.

SULZER HEADS THE TICKET

HE WINS ON FOURTH BALLOT

Chairman Parker Answers Criticisms —Says Action of New York Delegates to Baltimore Convention Was Dictated by Desire to Promote Harmony—Objects of Bryan's Attack

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 3.—Congressman Sulzer was nominated for governor on the fourth ballot this morning by the state Democratic convention after an all night session.

Alton B. Parker took the opportunity afforded by his speech yesterday as permanent chairman of the Democratic state convention to answer his critics at the Baltimore convention. It was the first political speech the former presidential candidate had made since he was the storm centre of the battle waged at Baltimore by William J. Bryan against his selection as temporary chairman of that gathering.

In defending himself he also defended the New York state delegation, which with him was the object of Bryan's most fervid attacks.

Judge Parker told the state convention that the action of the New York delegates was dictated by the desire to promote harmony.

"You may ask me," he said, "why did the New York delegation with ninety men, at least twenty-five of whom were capable of entering upon that platform, fail to discuss the attack which was made indirectly and directly upon the delegates and upon myself—why did they keep silent?

"I will give you the answer, my fellow Democrats—because we believed it was better that we should suffer a little indignity than by entering into a dispute with the gentleman upon the platform (Bryan) we should divide that convention in two, and we held our peace.

"We held our peace for the good of Democracy; we held our peace believing that either Clark or Wilson would be nominated, and we determined that New York state should take no part in that contest which would prevent the people of the United States from uniting all together to elect whichever one of them should be the nominee of the party."

Judge Parker's defense was called forth by the opposition to his candidacy for the permanent chairmanship expressed by delegates Frank H. Mott of Jamestown and John K. Sague of Poughkeepsie.

Parker was chosen chairman, 412 to 35, most of the opposing votes being cast by those delegates identified with the organized movements against Charles F. Murphy and Tammany Hall.

The first words of Judge Parker's speech were "I am a Progressive Democrat. It is true that there was a suggestion at Baltimore that I was put forward to represent one Thomas F. Ryan of New York"

Judge Parker emphatically denied that Ryan ever was his client or had paid him any money.

TAFT LAYS CORNERSTONE

Praises Boston Y. M. C. A. For Display of Zeal and Activity

Boston, Oct. 3.—President Taft yesterday afternoon laid the cornerstone of the new million dollar building of the Boston Young Men's Christian association on Arlington avenue. He made an address in which he complimented the organization on its work, praising the energy, zeal and activity displayed by its officers and members in raising the fund which made possible the laying of the cornerstone and the future erection of the new building.

After the exercises, President Taft went to the Harvard stadium and was escorted from there to the state armory, Cambridge, where the industrial exhibition in connection with the Cambridge carnival is being held.

BIG CORPORATIONS WERE VERY LIBERAL

Contributed Vast Sums to Aid Roosevelt In 1904

Washington, Oct. 3.—George R. Sheldon, former treasurer of the Republican national committee, made startling revelations as to the campaign of 1904 while he was testifying before the senate committee investigating campaign contributions.

In response to sharp questioning, he admitted that the Standard Oil company contributed $100,000 to the campaign that year under the name of John D. Archbald; that J. P. Morgan gave $100,000; George J. Gould, $100,000, and Henry C. Frick $100,000, these four contributions totalling $400,000.

These contributions were made to the Republican campaign fund and were used to further the election of Theodore Roosevelt, who was the Republican presidential candidate in 1904.

Mr. Sheldon expressed his belief that the corporations contributed 73½ percent of the Roosevelt campaign fund in 1904.

One million, eight hundred thousand dollars was the approximate amount mentioned by Sheldon as the total of the 1904 contributions.

LINE OF ACTION IS MAPPED OUT

Prospects of Another Industrial Contest at Lawrence

PEACE PROSPECTS ARE FADING

Strategists of I. W. W. Believed to Be Veiling Big Move—Mills Give Cold Reception to Committee Which Seeks Reinstatement of Discharged Employes—Haywood on the Ground

Lawrence, Mass., Oct. 3.—In a statement issued last night the central committee of the Lawrence I. W. W. local warns its members in the mills to prepare for action, when such action is deemed necessary.

Rumors are rife that in its executive session the central committee mapped out a definite final line of action. The meeting was dominated by the master hand of William D. Haywood. His life threatened by what is believed to be the plot of an assassin, Haywood came to Lawrence last night to take personal control of the situation. Just what the program will be is problematical.

The stategists of the I. W. W. are believed to be veiling a big move. The rank and file, as well as committeemen, seem to take the strike possibility seriously.

While the committee of the Industrial Workers attempted to seek out the mill agents throughout the day, the small army of men discharged, numbering something over 1500, marked time at their local headquarters, a hall with one of the largest auditoriums in the city.

By afternoon the only mill in the city which had accepted the call of the committee was the Kunhardt mill. There the I. W. W. leaders were told that the men who were laid off would be put to work just as soon as the work could be made ready for them. The committee went away satisfied.

At the Wood mill, the committeemen stated, a cold reception was awaiting their arrival. The officials, they said, refused to discuss the matter with them. This is the largest plant of the American Woolen company. Most of the men out are from this mill.

At the Everett mill they also were refused admission. Agent Milliken declared that he did not intend to go into conference with any persons other than the employes of the mill.

The committee was also turned down at the Ayer mill. The prospect of peace, which seemed so flattering in the morning, when the committee started its tour, began to take on a gloomy aspect by the time the big plants shut down.

There was no picketing or violence during the day. The uniformed police kept away from the mill district.

Several agencies were abroad trying to get the mill owners to capitulate in the interests of a common good. They had apparently made no headway.

Judge Quinn ordered that a new venire of 350 citizens of Essex county be drawn and summoned to appear on Oct. 14. It took three days to examine the present venire of 350. Two jurors qualified on the first day, none qualified on the second day, and two were chosen yesterday out 114.

Arguments will be heard next Monday by Judge Quinn on a motion to have Ettor, Giovannitti and Caruso released on bail.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

MADE WITH MUSHROOMS.

FRESH mushrooms are generally plentiful in the autumn. If not the mushroom lover can fall back on the dried or canned variety.

A test of the genuineness of mushrooms is to place a washed and scoured silver coin in the water in which they are cooked. If the coin blackens there are poisonous mushrooms in the vessel and they must be thrown out.

Served on Toast.

Mushrooms on Toast.—Take two cupfuls of mushrooms, place them in a saucepan with two tablespoonfuls of butter rolled in a little flour. Add one teaspoonful of salt, a pinch of red pepper and a squeeze of lemon juice. Stew gently until the mushrooms are tender. Serve on toast.

Broiled Mushrooms.—Cut off the stems and mash the mushrooms. Place them in a greased fine wire broiler and broil gill side down for five minutes. Then turn and broil the other side. Brush the gill side while still in broiler with melted butter. Remove from the broiler to slices of buttered toast. Brush with butter on top. Season and serve.

Savory Viands.

Sauted Mushrooms.—After having washed, dried and chopped the mushrooms in large slices season them with salt and pepper and toss them with butter in a frying pan over a hot fire. Sprinkle with chopped parsley at the last moment and serve hot.

Grilled Mushrooms.—Remove the stalks and peel carefully. Spread the gill side liberally with butter. Dust with salt and pepper. Place on a grill over a clear fire and cook slowly until they are soft all through. They must be served on a very hot dish, which should not be uncovered until its contents are to be served. Each mushroom may be flavored with a few drops of anchovy sauce, a dash of red pepper or lemon juice or simple salt and pepper, according to taste.

BAKED EGGS.

BAKED eggs make delicious breakfast foods. They may be prepared in individual baking dishes either plain or fancy and garnished with bits of parsley or sprigs of celery.

Baked Eggs and Bacon.—Take four hard boiled eggs and four slices of thin lean bacon. Mix together two tablespoonfuls of breadcrumbs, one dessertspoonful of chopped parsley, one small onion, finely chopped, and a teaspoonful of mixed herbs, pepper and salt. Spread this on the slices of bacon, place an egg on each and roll it up. Tie it in shape with a string. Put on a tin in the oven and bake about half an hour.

Attractive Offerings.

Baked Bird's Nests.—Take six eggs and separate the yolks from the whites, leaving the whole yolks in the half shells. Beat the whites to a stiff froth, seasoning with a little salt.

Have ready on the baking dishes slices of buttered toast. On each arrange a large spoonful of the beaten whites in the form of a nest. In each nest place a yolk of egg and on it drop a tiny bit of butter. Bake in moderate oven until eggs are set, but not hard.

Baked Eggs and Oysters.—Mince a half pound of cold stewed oysters and add an equal quantity of moistened cracker crumbs. Moisten and spread the mixture on a platter. Scoop out holes in the mixture for the eggs, and, breaking the shells, drop an egg into each hole. Pepper with cayenne, salt and butter and put into the oven to bake.

A Well Seasoned Viand.

Mexican Baked Eggs.—Take two cupfuls of stewed tomatoes, using the solid part and not the juice, a half cupful of finely minced pimentoes, a half cupful of chopped onions, two tablespoonfuls of finely cut green peppers, four eggs, a tablespoonful each of salt and flour. Put the tomatoes and onions on in a saucepan, boil ten minutes and rub through a strainer. Add the pimentos, pepper and salt, boil three minutes and add the flour, which has been mixed with a little cold water, and boil three minutes. Put the sauce in an earthenware dish or on an agate platter, break the raw eggs into the sauce and bake until the eggs are firm, or you can have the eggs hard boiled, cut in slices and pour over the sauce. Garnish with toast.

NURSE DEFIES CAPTURE

New England Police Conducting Active Search For Amelie Leonard

Boston, Oct. 3.—Amelie M. Leonard, the Boston nurse, who went to prison for jewel thefts, became a homicidal maniac there, and escaped from the Worcester asylum to which she was committed, still defies capture.

The police of all New England are alert, and the several people against whom the girl made death threats have been notified to be on their guard against attacks.

The cleverness with which the girl contrived her escape is the best indication of the difficulties which her capture presents. She secured possession of her clothes by affecting to think nurses were wearing them. She secured a false key to the front door, probably with outside help.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Mrs. Keziah Coffin, supposed widow, is arranging to move from Trumet to Boston, following the death of her brother, for whom she had kept house. Grace Van Horne, ward of Capt. Eben Hammond, leader of the "Come-outer" religious sect, offers to assist her financially if she will remain. She declines. Kyan Pepper, widower, offers marriage, and is indignantly refused.

CHAPTER II—Capt. Elkanah Daniels, leader of the Regular church, offers Keziah a place as housekeeper for the new minister, and she decides to remain in Trumet.

CHAPTER III—Keziah takes charge of Rev. John Ellery, the new minister, and gives him advice as to his conduct toward members of the parish. Ellery causes a sensation by attending a "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER IV—Ellery's presence is bitterly resented by Eben Hammond, leader of the meeting. Grace apologizes for her guardian and Ellery escorts her home in the rain. Capt. Nat Hammond, Eben's son, becomes a hero by bringing the packet into port safely through fog and storm. Ellery finds Keziah writing a letter to some one, inclosing money in response to a demand. She is curiously startled when informed of the arrival of Nat.

CHAPTER V—Nat calls on Keziah, and it develops that they have been lovers since youth. Daniels remonstrates with Ellery for attending "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER VI—Ellery is caught by the tide and is rescued by Nat. They become friends.

CHAPTER VII—Ellery meets Grace while walking in the fields Sunday, and learns that she walks there every Sunday.

CHAPTER VIII—The clergyman takes dinner Sundays with the Daniels. Annabel, the captain's daughter, exerts herself to make an impression on him. She notices with vexation his desire to get away every Sunday at a certain time. She watches him through a spy glass.

CHAPTER IX—Nat again importunes Keziah to marry him. He says he has had a quarrel with his father, who wants him to marry Grace.

CHAPTER X—Ellery asks Grace to marry him. She confesses that she loves him, but says she fears to displease her guardian, who has been very kind to her, and asks time to think about it. Elkanah Daniels tells Eben about the meetings between Ellery and Grace. Eben declares he will make Grace choose between him and the preacher. Grace finds him in a faint, following the excitement of Elkanah's visit.

CHAPTER XI—Just before he dies Eben exacts a promise from Nat and Grace that they will marry.

CHAPTER XII—Keziah breaks the news to Ellery and later he receives a note from Grace saying she is to marry Nat, and asking him not to try to see her again. Keziah tells the story of her own marriage with a man who turned out to be a good-for-nothing, and who was reported to have been lost at sea, and of her love for Nat, whom she cannot marry because the husband is alive. Ellery sees in the story a lesson in devotion to duty and decides to remain and attend to his duties.

As the weeks and months went by without news of the missing vessel, this belief became almost a certainty. At the Come-Outer chapel, where Ezekiel Bassett now presided, prayers were offered for the son of their former leader.

One afternoon Keziah came into Ellery's study, where he was laboring with his next Sunday sermon, and sat down in the rocking-chair. She had been out and still wore her bonnet and shawl.

"John," she said, "I ask your pardon for disturbin' you. I wanted to ask if you knew Mrs. Prince was sick?"

"No. Is she? I'm awfully sorry Nothing serious, I hope?"

"No, I guess not. Only she's got a cold and is kind of under the weather I thought p'raps you'd like to run up and see her. She thinks the world and all of you, 'cause you was so good when she was distressed about her son. Poor old thing! she's had a hard time of it. I just heard that she was ailin' from Didama Rogers. Didama said she was all but dyin', so I knew she prob'ly had a little cold, or somethin'. If she was really very bad, Di would have had her buried by this time, so's to be sure her news was ahead of anybody else's. I ain't been up there, but I met her t'other mornin'."

"Didama?"

"No; Mrs. Prince. She'd come down to see Grace."

"Oh."

"Yes. The old lady's been awful kind and sympathizin' since—since this new trouble. It reminds her of the loss of her own boy, I presume likely, and so she feels for Grace. John, what do they say around town about—about him?"

"Captain Hammond? Why, if you mean that they've all given up hope, I should hardly say that. Captain Mayo and Captain Daniels were speaking of it in my hearing the other day and they agreed that there was still a chance."

"A pretty slim one, though, they cal'lated, didn't they?"

"Well, they were—were doubtful, of course. There was the possibility that he had been wrecked somewhere and hadn't been picked up. They cited several such cases. The South Pacific is full of islands where vessels seldom touch, and he and his crew may be on one of these."

"What? Are you going to leave me? You?"

"Oh, 'twouldn't be because I wanted to. But it seems almost as if there was a kind of fate hangin' over me and that," she smiled faintly, "as if 'twas sort of catchin', as you might say. Everybody I ever cared for has had somethin' happen to 'em. My brother died; my—the man I married went to the dogs; then you and Grace had to be miserable and I had to help make you so; I sent Nat away and he blamed me and—"

"She Ain't So Hard-Hearted as Maybe You Might Think."

"No, no. He didn't blame you. He sent you word that he didn't. Aunt Keziah, you're my anchor to windward, as they say down here. If I lost you, goodness knows where I should drift. Don't you ever talk of leaving me again."

"Thank you, John. I'm glad you want me to stay. I won't leave yet awhile; never—unless I have to. John, I had another letter t'other day."

"You did? From—from that man?"

"Yup, from—" For a moment it seemed as if she were about to pronounce her husband's name, something she had never done in his presence; but if she thought of it, she changed her mind.

"From him," she said. "He wanted money, of course; he always does. But that wa'n't the worst. The letter was from England, and in it he wrote that he was gettin' sick of knockin' around and guessed he'd be for comin' to the States pretty soon and huntin' me up. Said what was the use of havin' an able-bodied wife if she couldn't give her husband a home."

"The scoundrel!"

"Yes, I know what he is, maybe full as well as you do. That's why I spoke of leavin' you. If that man comes to Trumet, I'll go, sure as death."

She hurried out of the room. Later, as the minister passed through the dining room on his way to the door, she spoke to him again.

"John," she said, "I didn't say what I meant to when I broke in on you just now. I meant to tell you about Grace. I knew you'd like to know and wouldn't ask. She's goin' away, Gracie is."

"Going away?"

"Yup. She's goin' to stay with a relation of the Hammonds over in Connecticut for a spell. I coaxed her into it. Stayin' here at home with all this suspense and with Hannah Poundberry's tongue droppin' lamentations like kernels out of a corn sheller, is enough to kill a healthy batch of kittens with nine lives apiece."

Ellery took his hat from the peg and opened the door. His foot was on the step when Keziah spoke again.

"She—it don't mean nothin', John, except that she ain't so hard-hearted as maybe you might think—she's asked me about you 'most every time I've been there. She told me to take good care of you."

Ellery was thinking deeply as he walked up the main road on his way to Mrs. Prince's. Keziah's words were repeating themselves over and over in his brain. She had asked about him. She had not forgotten him altogether. Mrs. Prince was very glad to see him. He found her in the big armchair with the quilted back and the projecting "wings" at each side of her head. She war wrapped in a "Rising Sun" quilt which was a patchwork glory of red and crimson. A young girl, a neighbor, who was apparently acting in the dual capacity of nurse and housekeeper, admitted him to the old lady's presence. Mrs. Prince's good spirits were of short duration. Her conversation soon shifted to the loss of her son and she wept, using the corner of the quilt to wipe away her tears. "Eddie" had been her idol and, as she said, it was hard to believe what folks kept tellin' her, that it was God's will, and therefore all for the best.

"And there's Nat Hammond," continued Mrs. Prince. "A fine man—no better anywhere, even though his father was a Come-Outer—just goin' to be married and all, now they say he's drowned—why? Why was that necessary?"

Ellery could not reply. The old lady did not wait for him to do so. The mention of Captain Nat's name reminded her of other things.

"Poor Gracie!" she said. "It's turrible hard on her. I went down to see her two or three times afore I was took down with this backache. She's an awful nice girl. Land sakes alive! talk about angels! I snum if she ain't comin' up the road this blessed minute."

John Ellery had risen. Now he seized his hat and moved hastily toward the door. Mrs. Prince called to him to remain, but he would not. However, her good-bys delayed him for a minute, and before he reached the yard gate Grace was opening it. They were face to face for the first time since they had parted in the grove, so many months before.

She was thinner and paler, he saw that. And dressed very quietly in black. She looked at him, as he stood before her in the path, and her cheeks flushed and her eyes fell.

"Er—Miss Van Horne," he stammered, "I merely wanted to tell you how deeply I—we all feel for you in your trouble. I—I—I am so sorry. I have heard so much of the captain from—"

"From Aunt Keziah? Yes, she was Nat's warmest friend."

"I know. Er—Mrs. Coffin tells me you are going away. I hope you may hear good news and soon. I shall think of you—of him— I want you to understand that I shall."

She held out her hand and he took it. He knew that his was trembling, but so, too, was hers. The hands fell apart. Grace entered the house and John Ellery went out at the gate.

CHAPTER XV.

In Which the Minister Boards the San Jose.

"Hey, Mr. Ellery!"

It was Captain Zeb Mayo who was calling. The captain sat in his antique chaise, drawn by the antique white horse, and was hailing the parsonage through a speaking trumpet formed by holding both his big hands before his mouth.

The minister and Mrs. Coffin, the former with a napkin in his hand, had emerged from the side door of the parsonage and now came hurrying down to the gate.

"Land of Goshen!" exclaimed the captain, "you don't mean to tell me you ain't done breakfast yet, and it after seven o'clock. Why, Mr. Ellery, I tell you: Em'lous Sparrow, the fish peddler, stepped up to our house a few minutes ago. He's just come down from the shanties over on the shore by the light—where the wreck was, you know—and he says there's a 'morphrodite brig anchored three or four mile off and she's flyin' colors half mast and union down. They're gettin' a boat's crew together to go off to her and see what's the row. I'm goin' to drive over and I thought maybe you'd like to go along."

A moment later the minister, having donned his hat and coat, ran down the walk and climbed into the chaise beside Captain Zeb. The white horse, stimulated into creaky trot by repeated slappings of the reins and roars to "Get under way!" and "Cast off!" moved along the sandy lane.

They found a group on the beach. A few fishermen, one or two lobstermen and wreckers, and the lightkeeper were gathered on the knoll by the lighthouse. They had a spyglass, and a good-sized dory was ready for launching.

"Where is she, Noah?" asked Captain Zeb of the lightkeeper.

"She's a brigantine, Zeb," observed the keeper, handing up the spyglass. "And flyin' the British colors. Look's if she might be one of them salt boats from Turk's Islands. But what she's doin' out there, anchored, with canvas lowered and showin' distress signals in fair weather like this, is more'n any of us can make out. She wa'n't there last evenin', though, and she is there now."

"She ain't the only funny thing along shore this mornin', nuther," announced Theophilus Black, one of the fishermen. "Charlie Burgess just come down along and he says there's a ship's longboat hauled up on the beach, 'bout a mile 'n a half t'other side the mouth of the herrin' crick yonder. Oars in her and all. And she ain't no boat that b'longs round here.'

Captain Zeb, who had been inspecting the anchored vessel through the spyglass, lowered the latter and seemed puzzled. "Blessed if she don't look abandoned to me. Can't see a sign of life aboard her."

"We couldn't neither," said Thoph "We was just cal'latin' to go off to her when Charlie come and told us about the longboat. I guess likely we can go now; it's pretty nigh smooth as a pond. You'll take an oar, won't you Noah?"

"I can't leave the light very well. My wife went over to the village last night. You and Charlie and Bill go Want to go, too, Zeb?"

"No, I'll stay here, I guess. The old lady made me promise to keep my feet dry afore I left the house."

"You want to go, Mr. Ellery? Lots of room."

The minister was tempted. The sea always had a fascination for him and the mystery of the strange ship was appealing.

"Sure I won't be in the way?"

"No, no! 'course you won't," said Burgess. "Come right along. You set in the bow, if you don't mind gettin sprinkled once in a while. I'll steer and Thoph and Bill'll row. That'll be enough for one dory. If we need more, we'll signal. Heave ahead."

The steersman, who was staring hard in the direction they were going scowled.

"Humph!" he grunted again. "I swan to man, fellers, I believe she is abandoned!"

"Rubbish!" panted Bill, twisting his neck to look over his shoulder "'Course she ain't! Who'd abandon a craft such weather's this, and Provincetown harbor only three hours' run or so?"

The rowers "hit her up" and the dory moved faster. Then Burgess, putting his hand to his mouth, hailed.

"Ship ahoy!" he roared. "Ahoy!"

No reply.

The dory slackened speed, turned in obedience to the steering oar, and slid under the forequarter of the anchored vessel. Ellery, looking up, saw her name in battered gilt letters above his head—the San Jose.

Getting Around It.

A Washington official was talking about a certain resourceful corporation.

"They can get round anything," he said, a touch of admiration in his voice. "They remind me of a Narragansett girl.

"'Yes, I've accepted David.'

"'Why,' said the girl beside her, 'you told me positively that, if David proposed to you, your answer would be a word of two letters.'

"The other girl, blushing a little, said softly:

"'But I answered Dave in German.'"—Los Angeles Times.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL

Health is Worth Saving, and Some Quincy People Know How to Save It.

Many Quincy people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help. Weak kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health, but there is no need to suffer nor to remain in danger. Use Doan's Kidney Pills—a remedy that has helped thousands of kidney sufferers.

Richard Smith, S. Central Ave., Wollaston, Mass., says: "I suffered from kidney trouble for a long time. My back was so lame and painful that I could hardly get around in the morning. All through the day I had a dull heavy ache across my loins. The contents of two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills fixed me up alright. I now have no trouble from my back."

MRS. WHEELER'S GOLF TRIUMPH

Won Over Miss Semple in a Thrilling Contest

IN SECOND ROUND

Mrs. E. C. Wheeler. Jr., of the Wollaston Golf club passed the second round successfully, at Wednesday's play in the Woman's championship golf tournament at the Essex County club, at Manchester, defeating Miss Hyde.

The third round is in progress today, and Mrs. Wheeler will meet. Miss Grace Semple of St. Louis.

Mrs. E. C. Wheeler, Jr. never has won a National championship but has shown play for years that would make her a worthy and very popular champion. As "Miss Mollie Adams" she was one of the first of the women players to take golf seriously and to set about learning how to play the strokes, finding more enjoyment every time she had become mistress of a new wrinkle.

Mrs. Wheeler will meet Miss Semple, who is from Missouri, and the most popular of the young women who play golf. She is well known in Boston and is, or was, a member of the Wollaston G. C., the home club of Mrs. Wheeler.

Mrs. Wheeler's win yesterday was considered a triumph of the golf season.

PLAN TO WEAR SAME VEIL

Miss Narka Lee Second Bride of Six Club Girls

Lee's Inn was the scene of a very brilliant affair Wednesday night when the marriage of Narka Lee to Henry Binga Dismond of N. Y., took place at 8 o'clock. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Walter McLean, rector of St. Bartholomew Church Cambridge, in the main dining hall which was beautifully decorated with potted plants and cut flowers. The double ring Episcopal service was used.

The bride who was stunningly gowned in a white satin creation carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and was given away by her brother Howard Lee. Her attendants were Genevieve Lee, a sister as maid of honor and six bridesmaids Misses Constance Ridley, Marie Kennard, Theresa Stubbs. Maud Young, Bertha Bauman and Elizabeth Lee, another sister of the bride. Gladys Freeman acted as ring bearer. The best man was Robert West. The ushers were Dr. John Jay Smith, John Peake, William Lee and Ernest Gould.

The bride belongs to a club of six young ladies who are planning to wear the same veil at their weddings. Miss Lee was the second one of the six girls to carry out this plan and it is expected that one or two others will soon have the same honor.

A reception followed the ceremony attended by 200 friends and relatives who extended best wishes to the bride and groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Dismond were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Joseph Lee, the bride's mother and a sister Miss Genevieve Lee.

Many beautiful and costly gifts were displayed. Mr. Dismond is a rising young doctor in New York and he with his bride will make their future home on Franklin avenue, Brooklyn.

MARRIED IN HARTFORD

Quincy Couple Travelled to the Nutmeg State to Wed

Miss Olive Pierson Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Redfield Howe Allen, and Henry Bernon Tourtellot were married at Hartford, Conn., Wednesday morning by Rev. Samuel T. Pearl. The ceremony was witnessed by a party of relatives and friends.

After the ceremony the party returned to Quincy where a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 34 Avon Way. The couple were assisted in receiving by the parents of the bride and Mr. and Mrs. C. Saure of Derry, N. H.

The bride wore white crepe meteor with princess lace. Her veil was caught up with orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley.

The veranda of the house was decorated with banners and lanterns, and a screen of oak leaves extended from the railing to the roof. Refreshments were served in this miniature fairyland.

Guests were present from Hartford, Conn., Derry, N. H. Hingham, Brookline, Andover and Boston.

The bride is a well known President's hill young lady and a prominent social leader in this city. She is a graduate of the Quincy High school, 1907 and of the New England Conservatory of Music. The groom is a salesman and prominent in Y. M. C. A. circles.

The couple left in the evening amids a shower of confetti and after a honeymoon trip will reside at 34 Park Lane, Quincy, where they will be at home to their friends after December 1.

—Efforts are being made to secure the pardon of the McNamaras, and while the crime for which they were convicted was a matter of state jurisdiction, their plotting was a matter of national concern. The attitude of Gov. Johnson, now candidate for vice-presidency of the third party, is of interest to the whole nation. He has promised to show "all clemency possible" to these men, and it is a point to be made note of how far a man seeking to obtain such a high office, can subordinate the law and decrees of the court to his personal sympathies or prejudices.—Old Colony Memorial.

BOYS COOKED THE FEED

Girls Satisfied with the Dainties Set Before Them

A most enjoyable period was spent by the members and friends of the Hall Place M. E. Sunday school in the vestry of the church, Wednesday evening, when the boys and men of the Sunday school gave a supper to the girls.

Last spring the Sunday school decided to hold a contest in the school, placing the boys against the girls. At that time it was thought that both sides were evenly balanced. The merits of the contest were to be based on new scholars, attendance at church, attendance at Sunday school, time spent on study of lesson outside of classroom, memorizing new verses, good conduct and collection, each part to receive a specified number of points in proportions to its importance. At first the contest was a close one but it did not take long for the girls to lead off by several thousand points. The girls were the "Blues" and the boys boys the "Reds." The contest lasted three months closing July 1st, the Blues at that time being considerably ahead. A close examination of the records revealed that there was some slight difference in numbers at the start and so it was decided that before the final announcement of the winning side was made, the number of points scored by each side would be averaged more evenly. Even this method failed to help the "Reds" in any way. The boys were cheerful losers however, and according to the agreement made at the start, they set about arranging for the supper as soon as the hot weather should cease. Mr. Francis' class of boys and Mrs. Martin's class of boys, assisted by the men in the pastor's class were the committee in charge. It was a success in every way and judging by this supper there are some good cooks among the boys of this Sunday school.

At the close of the supper the pastor made the announcements for the week and then called on the Superintendent of the Sunday school, Alex Steward. He said he was sure that the children had enjoyed themselves and urged them all to attend the Sunday school, October 6th on Rally Day.

A. H. Merry of Wollaston spoke earnestly and from a personal standpoint on the importance and work of the Sunday school, and said that no matter what other department of the church work must be let go, the Sunday school should be maintained. He laid special emphasis on the particular work of the young men's class and the way in which he handled his subject showed that he was both familiar and deeply interested in the work of the Sunday school.

The Sunday school greatly appreciate the kindness of Mr. Elcock of Copeland street for the beautiful dahlias he contributed. The girls hope the boys will provide another supper as good as this one in the near future.

A BONE IN THE THROAT.

Lemon Juice, It Is Said, Will Quickly Melt It Away.

Sitting at a planked shad dinner, a laughing guest drew a bone into his throat, and he began to strangle. Some one suggested that the sufferer swallow a fragment of dry bread.

"Oh, no!" exclaimed one man. "Don't give him bread. It might catch the bone, and it might not. Give him something that is sure to give relief." Beckoning to a waiter, he said, "Bring me a lemon, cut in two." And it was brought without delay. Taking one section, he offered it to the choking guest and told him to suck the juice and to swallow it slowly. Directions were faithfully followed, and in about a quarter of a minute the afflicted one placed the half lemon on his plate, looked into the anxious faces around the table and smiled.

"Well, Joe," said one, "how about it?"

"It's gone," was the reply. "The bone has slipped down."

"Not exactly that," said the man who suggested it. "The bone slipped down all right, but it was melted first by the citric acid. I never knew it to fail to dissolve a fishbone. You can test the power of lemon juice by dropping some on the fishbones you may have lying on your plate."

Several diners made the experiment. In each case the acid reduced the bone to liquid gelatin.—New York Press

LARGEST GUARANTEED CIRCULATION IN THE CITY

Vol. 27 No. 233 QUINCY, MASS., FRIDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 4, 1912 PRICE TWO CENTS

THE OCCUPANTS ESCAPED INJURY

ENGINE ALL RIGHT

Aldenago Racchi one of the Argentine naval officers stationed at the Fore River and his family had a narrow escape Thursday evening when an automobile in which they were driving turned turtle on Adams street at the foot of Rice hill. It is reported that in the car at the time of the accident besides Mr. Bacchi was his wife and little child. The car came down the hill on Adams street and as the foot of the hill was reached one of the wheels skidded on the turn and before he could regain control of the car it went over one side into the stone wall and turned turtle.

The occupants were thrown out but they escaped with a few bruises. The car was later righted and as the engine was all right it was driven home. The residence of the owner is given as 14 Quincy street.

The first one to arrive on the scene was Daniel McGerigle caretaker of the Rice estate on Adams street. He heard the crash when the machine hit the wall and hurried to the spot, arriving in time to pick up the baby. The baby's face was somewhat scratched.

Miss Flaherty has made arrangements to take a course of nursing at the Tewkesbury hospital next Monday. The girls and young men present were mostly from West Quincy, although Milton, Dorchester Braintree and Weymouth faces smiled brightly in the crowd.

An impromtu musical and literary program was rendered by those present, accompanied by Leo Kenny. Songs were given by Joseph O'Rourke, Frank Mullen and Miss Mazie Joyce.

AVERAGE BOY HALF AND HALF

Mr. Gibson Gives Graphic Illustration of the Normal

ALL AGES CONSIDERED

H. W. Gibson, state secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association addressed the Parents and Teachers Association at its opening meeting, Thursday evening, upon "The Boy."

"The normal boy," he said, "is 50 per cent noise and 50 per cent dirt. The boy who is never dirty or noisy has something the matter with him and should be taken to a physician at once."

Mr. Gibson recalled the Saturday afternoons of his youth which were the most uncomfortable of the week. On the other days he washed with a circular motion but at this time received a regular scrubbing.

"The home is not in sympathy with noise or dirt," he said, "and I wonder if parents do not thoughtlessly drive boys out by too good housekeeping."

"The greatest peril of the American people lies in losing the old type of American home. The greatest peril in the home lies in losing the boy from the lack of something for him to do to make him part of it.

"The things boys used to do to keep them from doing wrong are now done by machinery or someone else. Instead of the former virile man we are bringing up a dependant type of creature.

"If a boy leaves his cap around, the mother picks it up and then complains about her boy being careless. It is an excellent thing to have a revolution in the home and let it lie. Mothers add greatly to their work by being kind hearted and what the boys call 'a little easy.'

"The community life and school life can only be determined by the home life and can never rise higher than it. We are today in great danger of becoming over institutionalized and relieving the parents of duties that God intended only parents should have. If we get the home to assume its God given responsibilities we would need but a third of the institutions we have today."

Mr. Gibson said that the age of a boy could be told by the name he was called. The speaker commenced with the "little Willie Jones" period and continued up to the time when he was called "old man Jones."

The speaker called special attention to the "W. Frothingham Jones" period when the youth is scarcely ever without a mirror and would not go down street without a well defined crease in each trouser leg.

"When he asks for his first night latch key," said Mr. Gibson, "is the time when he needs his father most and gets the least from his father.

"The unfortunate part is that he is changing physically, socially and mentally and is compelled to receive information outside instead of inside the home.

"If the boy goes downward to the gutter through wrong information,

UNIDENTIFIED BODY FOUND

Floating Near River Bank at Squantum

PROBABLY A SHOEMAKER

While Arthur Welch of Walnut street, Neponset, was picking up drift wood on the banks of the Squantum aviation field he discovered the body of a man about 65 years old on the shore Thursday evening. He notified station 11 officers at Neponset of the find and they telephoned the Quincy police.

The police ambulance was immediately sent to the scene and Dr. Fred E. Jones, medical examiner, ordered the body removed to Hall's undertaking rooms. After an examination he said that death was due to drowning.

The man was five feet, three inches in height and his hair and mustach were almost white. A number of shoe maker's stools were found in his pockets, together with an antomizer and newspaper clippings.

The body had evidently been in the water for a week or more, and had probably floated over to the Squantum shore from Neponset. It is possible that he fell off the Neponset bridge during the night. Up to noon the body was unidentified.

One of J. F. Shepperd & Sons horses fell through a covering of a cess pool in the yard of Patrick Sullivan on the corner of Paine and Phipps streets this noon and it was with considerable difficulty that he was rescued. The animal was severely injured. The team had gone into the yard to deliver a load of coal when the horse stepped on the cover which gave way letting him down.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Not much is heard of Nick Longworth these days but if asked to give his opinion he would undoubtedly say the New York campaign will be one of Sluzer and lemon.

What rare birds American financiers are. They give $100,000 for a campaign fund, just like the average person would handle a dime and of course they do not expect any returns for the same.

With one venire exhausted and only four jurors drawn the Ettor trial will break all records for jury drawing if the present gait is maintained.

President Taft has again offended some one. This time it is the labor men who claim that he laid the corner stone of a building being erected by non-union workmen. It is hardly fair to blame the president for this slip. He could not possibly be expected to run around and find out if every function he attends is under approval of the labor organizations.

Breen the man convicted of planting dynamite, received 2000 out of 6000 votes for school committeeman. It was supposed to be a recall. Breen's vote, if set up as rebuke to the I. W. W., affords no excuse for the men intelligent enough to vote who would desire to see such a man hold office.

Dr. Wiley is throwing some hot shot about that pure food law, which may in a measure account for some big campaign contributions of the past.

Tickets for the ball games in New York can only be obtained on the day of the game, which may mean that the licensed scalpers will have a hit and run game all to themselves.

Turkey is to have another ultimatum handed out to it. For a supposedly weak power its control of the Dardanelles gives it a grasp on the other nations which amounts really to a balance of power.

The death of Rear Admiral Young removes another of those conspicuous figures of the Spanish war of whom very little was heard at the time.

In the last few years fatalties have been more frequent on United States battleships in time of peace than in time of war.

The average citizen who is fond of railing at the laws delay may possibly find some cause for the same in the difficulty of procuring jurors to sit on those cases in Salem.

The public will be sceptical of accepting assurances of the coal barons in the future.

Attorney General Wickersham favors compulsory voting, and a Hartford paper thinks too many people vote as it is. If such was the case what is the use of the ballot any way.

Let a man lose his chance to vote, through his own negligence by not getting on the voting list, and he will raise an awful howl no matter how many times he carelessly declined to accept his chance of suffrage.

Job Hedges says government is something to live under and not on. Job may be all right, but has he been a firm advocate of any such policy up to the present time?

And can the wise man who suggests putting coal dealers under a license tell how it will reduce the price of coal. It looks as though some one was planting a job to be a coal license commissioner.

LICENSE COAL DEALERS.

Some one has suggested that it is not improbable that at the next session of the legislature, a bill will be introduced to license coal dealers in this state. with a provision that the licenses may be revoked when prices are boosted against the public welfare. This sounds very good, but why stop at coal? Why not include all commodities as well, provided however that such a law would be constitutional and there are some who have grave doubts upon that subject.

May not this be an ambitious desire of some worthy legislative aspirant to look further ahead and plan an office with a permanent salary, to which as the public spirited author of the measure, he is entitled appointment. It would not be the first time that such long-headedness had been developed on the part of some legislators.

But even at that, how is a remedy to be affected? How are people who have been long established in business to be driven out of it, by any such legislation. We do not hold that the rise in the price of coal is justifiable. We do not contend that lower prices could not prevail and still a fair profit maintained. But we would call attention to the numerous freak laws now on the statute books which are not worth the paper they are written on. And we could even go further than that and point out good and just laws, which have been adopted for the benefit of the whole people of the state, yet are permitted to lapse in a measure, until some person directly interested in their enforcement prods the state or other police to take them up.

The state of Massachusetts by any such law as suggested can never remedy an evil, which is widespread in its operations, and applies to every conceivable product and commodity. The question, not confined by state lines, must be met by a unity of action from all parts of the country. Inflated stocks, wild cat ventures, water process of big corporations and stock market gambling, on margins, are some of the things which tend towards high cost of living. Other things enter into the combination.

The remedy must come sooner or later, but it must be by a Federal movement which is broad enough to embrace all conditions and meet them adequately, which will appeal to all people and do away with the irrational movement of combinations and cliques, each working against the other and accomplishing little, retarding more than aiding in a reform which every one knows is needed.

THE LAWS DELAY.

Many a time and oft criticisms are hurled at the laws delays. Few people stop to think over this matter with due deliberation, without flinging out their self-centered opinion. In some cases there is occasion for such a stand, but at the same time there are also many cases where the people themselves are responsible for delays in court proceedings. In all of the big cases which have attracted the attention of the country within the past few years, it has taken fully as long to empanel jurors as it has to try the cases. This is due to the average citizen manifesting a dislike to serve on juries. Some years ago, selectmen of towns and registrars in cities were heckled continuously by persons, who desired to escape jury duty to have their names kept off the list, while on the other hand they were pestered by people who took a professional pride in serving on juries and desired that their names should be placed on the lists.

Fortunately the state stepped in a few years ago and remedied this by making it an offense to either solicit selection as jury men or using persuasion to keep their names from the lists. But in those latter day cases conditions have been different. In some of them however it has been held that fear has been a factor in influencing men to accept any excuse which offered to save them from appearing in such cases. If such is a fact it is a poor commentary on our boasted freedom and liberty to exercise our rights as American citizens and especially when the law requires such service.

COMPULSORY VOTING.

Attorney General Wickersham is credited with advocating compulsory voting and penalties for failure to exercise the right to appear at the polls and vote in case the initiative and referendum should prevail throughout the country. It does not follow that such a course would not be desirable even without these two mentioned attachments. In every election it is really distressing to see how many people fail to appear at the polls. Many of them through carelessness or indifference, and possibly a very small number because of extenuating circumstances. The New York Sun however differs with the Attorney General and insists that it deserves a monument for silliness. Other papers attack it from other view points, some of them claiming that it will minimize the performances by a rampant minority. A rampant minority, as one paper styles such a vote is not always in the wrong. The Sun is heartily in favor of a penalty to keep fools from voting. A man who has passed the tests required to cast a vote cannot be justifiably termed a fool. All the wisdom regarding voting is fortunately not bottled up in the New York Sun Office. Because men vote contrary to our own way of thinking, is no sure sign that he is a fool, or that we may be right and he wrong. Such a drastic summing up of a situation is uncalled for. It is however on a par with some of the recent editorials in the New York Sun, which might cause some doubts as to the absolute wisdom of the writer or give rise to the query as to what style of vitroil was used.

The Hartford Times says "Sometimes we are almost forced to believe that too many people vote as it is."

Another illuminating opinion, flung at the intelligence of voters.

As to compulsory voting "minimizing the radical performance of the rampant minority" it is difficult to understand just where that comes in except as a throwing together of words irregardless of their effect or meaning. The size of a vote does not indicate that the minority has not carried his point. In cases like Vermont where a majority vote is required to elect officials, and failure of such throws the election into the legislature accomplishes nothing. In the last election, the plurality was insufficient but the Republican candidate was triumphant because he had a Republican legislature. If on the other hand the legislature was Democratic, this law would have deprived a majority of the voters of having their will carried out. That is the person receiving a lesser number of votes would have been chosen to fill an office, to which a majority of the people clearly did not desire him to hold. By a change of the law in this state. a plurality in such a case would have at least been sufficient to prevent a minority from overriding the will of the majority. While the suggestion of Mr. Wickersham may not be adopted. it has nothing pernicious in its provisions, and its adoption might mean a great deal.

The lack of interest on the part of many voters in years past is responsible in no small measure for many of the things on which those same negligents stand upon their hind legs and find fault at .

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

Pepper—Panama to Patagonia. An interesting book describing the effect of the Panama Canal on the West Coast countries of South America with some space devoted to the history past and future of each country, and a final chapter on the basis of the Monroe doctrine in its historical and political aspects.

Cornish—Panama Canal and its makers. "An impartial account by a British geographer, based on a thorough inspection in 1907-8. Beside a description of present activities, he gives a chapter each to the canal's history, its cost, the men who are building it, health on the isthmus, and deductions as to the benefits and changes the canal will cause. There is a map plan and many reproductions of the author's photographs."

Edwards—Panama: the canal, the country and the people. "Lively journalistic account, of lasting interest because of its history of colonization, piracy, early travel on the isthmus and history of the canal enterprise. Gives a vivid picture of Americanization and of the success of the Panama Canal Commission."

Weir—Conquest of the isthmus. Gives an interesting account of the men who have helped to make the Canal, in order that the American nation might win the greatest industrial victory in the history of the world.

A fuller list on this subject will be found on the Bulletin board, with a bird's eye view of the canal also a picture of Col. George Washington Goethals.

MURPHY SEEMS WELL PLEASED

Has Knocked Prop From Under Candidacy of Straus

SULZER AND GYLNN TICK T

Expected to Gather Large Jewish and Progressive Democrat Vote—Congressman Says Nomination Is Worth His Long Wait—Neither Candidate Close to Tammany Hall

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 4.—By placing at the head of the Democratic state ticket Congressman Sulzer, the author of the house resolution abrogating the Russian treaty because of the country's treatment of American Jews, Charles F. Murphy has knocked a powerful prop from under the candidacy of Oscar S. Straus, the Roosevelt gubernatorial candidate in this state.

By associating with him on that ticket Martin H. Glynn of Albany Murphy made another shrewd move, in that he pleased the Progressive Democrats and the supporters of Governor Wilson, who desired the nomination of a man like Glynn for governor.

While it is true that in times past Sulzer has not always trained with Tammany, Murphy is responsible for his nomination and is well pleased with the selection. Although Murphy declared his first choice was Dix, he has no particular fondness for the governor.

The argument which Murphy originally advanced for the renomination of the governor was that the party must make this campaign on its record of state administration for the last two years. It goes before the people on a platform that heartily indorses the "clean, efficient and economical administration" of Governor Dix, to whom in convention it has just refused a renomination.

Congressman Sulzer said:

"Well, it was a long wait, but it was worth waiting for. I am deeply sensible of the honor conferred on me by the Democracy of New York. I shall carry the standard, ever conscious that it is not for mortal to command success, but I shall strive to deserve it. I am full of gratitude."

That the delegates were not boss-ruled in making the nomination of Sulzer and Glynn was the statement made by Murphy, who said:

"I had a candidate when I came here. My candidate was John A. Dix. I was of the opinion that Governor Dix on his record should have been renominated. The delegates to this convention thought differently. Every delegate registered his choice"

With the nomination for governor and lieutenant-governor out of the way, the Democratic state convention settled down to rapid work at its final session.

Mitchell May of Kings county was nominated for secretary of state to succeed Edward Lazansky, the present incumbent.

State Comptroller Sohmer was renominated.

John J. Kennedy of Erie was renominated for state treasurer.

Thomas Carmody of Yates was renominated for attorney-general.

TAFT TICKET BARRED

California Voters Will Have to Write Name on Ballots

San Francisco, Oct. 4.—President Taft will be without representation from California in the electoral college, and not a vote for him can be cast in the state unless it be written in, following a decision by the state supreme court, under which electors pledged to him cannot appear on the November ballot as Republicans.

The issue was presented in the form of an application by attorneys for the Taft Republican organization, seeking to have made permanent an alternative writ obtained some days ago, directing Secretary of State Jordan to designate on the ballot as Republicans the presidential electors named by the Taft adherents.

Attorney General Webb, for the secretary of state, filed a general denial of the allegations and a demurrer to the petition. His argument was sustained by the court.

MORGAN GAVE $150,000

Contributed to Republican Campaign "For Good of the People"

Washington, Oct 4.—Facing a senatorial inquisition for the first time in his long career as "money king," J. P. Morgan told the Clapp committee that his $150,000 contribution to the 1904 Republican campaign war chest was made "for the good of the people" and "without expectation of any return."

Morgan said he made two separate contributions—one of $100,000 on Oct. 24, 1904, and on Nov. 1, $50,000. The last named was donated, he testified, "because of the necessities of the New York state situation."

DOW HELD IN $50,000

Broker Charged With Larceny of $146,764 Gives Himself Up

Boston, Oct. 4.—Stephen R. Dow of Brookline, the expelled member of the Boston Stock Exchange, surrendered himself at police headquarters yesterday afternoon after a warrant had been issued by Judge Wentworth in the city police court charging seventeen counts of larceny aggregating $146,764.

Dow was taken to the rogues' gallery, where his measurement and picture were taken. He said he was 40 years of age and lived at 1089 Beacon street, Brookline.

Dow was then taken to the police court, where he was arraigned before Judge Ely. Attorney Williams, his counsel, waived the reading of the complaint and entered a plea of "not guilty."

Judge Ely set the bail at $50,000, and Dow was held for the lower court until Oct. 17.

Attorney Williams stated after the arraignment that he saw no immediate prospects of the bail being procured, and that he considered the amount exorbitant.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE IN BOSTON AND VICINITY

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

Boston will have the pleasure of the first big engagement after the effective six months' run in New York last season of the joyous operetta, "Little Boy Blue." Henry W. Savage will offer the original production and cast of the Lyric Theatre success there at the Majestic theatre for the week beginning Oct. 7. The long run of "Little Boy Blue" in New York, playing to steady capacity business, marked it the most praiseworthy of Mr. Savage's musical productions since "The Merry Widow," and it is now placed alongside of that sensational Viennese operetta and the perennial "Prince of Pilsen" as the best results of the great producer's career.

GERTRUDE BRYAN,
In "Little Boy Blue," Majestic Theatre

"Little Boy Blue" glorifies the romance of old Scotland. It is in two acts and three scenes. The score is by Henri Bereny and the text by Rudolph Schanzer and Carl Linday. As is customary with Mr. Savage, a palatable American text was prepared by A. E. Thomas and Edward Paulton.

That Mr. Savage will present here the original New York production is a foregone conclusion since he promised it. Maude Odell and the other members of the Lyric Theatre production will also be present. To the public Mr Savage is "a reliable man," for he has always kept the faith of his promises There will be an enlarged orchestra worthy of the beautiful score The plaintive melodies of the Scottish Highlands have found a musical resting place as soft as the down of the thistle itself.

B. F. KEITH'S.

One of the most diversified and brilliant all-star vaudeville bills of the season is announced for B. F. Keith's Theatre next week, no less than six splendid headline attractions being on the list. Dave Donare and Ray Bailey, known as "The International Favorites," will make their first appearance at this house in years in a series of startling and sensational dance specialties. Among the new songs they will appear in are "The Wedding of Antonio and Marie," "If I do I'm Bound to lose My Wife," "I'm The Lonesomest Gal in Town," "L'Impressario Et La Daneuse," and "La Danse Flirtation." Miss Bailey will wear a number of new and stunning costumes each number being presented with appropriate scenery and effects. Another brilliant spectacular novelty will be Ma-Belle and her Sylvan Ballet, a troupe of pretty and graceful dancers who present a fantasy entitled "The Dance Dream." A young man falls asleep and in his dreams the various dancers of the different periods appear before him. The big laughing features of the week will be "Who's Brown," by the Providence Players, and Bert Melrose, the daredevil clown, with his funny tables and chairs Marshall Montgomery, the peer of all ventriloquists, will present his remarkable specialty, and several other acts to be announced.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

"The Aviator" will offer excellent comedy at the Castle Square next week. It has a plot that is humorous and cleverly ingenious, and it is thoroughly up to date in every respect. The hero has written a novel in which he tells of the exploits of an aeroplane expert, and he imagines that he himself could take a successful flight in the air if the opportunity offered. The chance comes, the presence of the girl he loves emboldens him, he takes his seat at the wheel of a monoplane, and as the curtain goes down on the first act, he is just about to whizz away into the air. Then with the second act come reports of his marvellous performances, and thereafter he is a veritable hero. He comes back uninjured and the girl he loves is his.

There are both comedy and emotional effects in "The Aviator," and it is thoroughly timely in every respect. It will be seen at the Castle Square for the first time next week, and its production will also mark the first appearance of Wilson Melrose at that theatre. Mr. Melrose has been engaged by John Craig as a regular member of his company. Nothing need be said to introduce him to the Boston public. He has in previous seasons become popular with Boston playgoers, and the cordiality of his welcome is therefor assured. During the season he will share with Mr. Craig the leading roles, at the Castle Square. The rest of the cast of "The Aviator will be well apportioned among the members of Mr. Craig's company.

ALASKA-SIBERIA PICTURES.

Something unique in motion pictures is now being presented in Jordan Hall in Boston, where the Carnegie Museum Alaska-Siberia Motion Pictures are filling a limited engagement. The views are the work of Capt. F. E. Kleinschmidt, who headed the Arctic expedition sent out last summer by the Carnegie Museum of Pittsburg. The expedition penetrated as far North as Wrangel Island and thousands of feet of films were among the most important results of this journey of scientific research into practically unknown lands. The pictures are the most intimate ever taken of Arctic animals and have excited much controversy, since they show feats never before witnessed by naturalists.

No words are adequate to convey any idea of the beauty of scenery, the wonderful studies of bird and animal life and the picturesqueness of the Eskimo villages. The spectator is transported from Seattle to the Arctic Ocean, stopping to view magnificent waterfalls, wonderful glaciers, great herds of seal, sea-lions and the vast bird rookeries. The journey is continued inland to the haunts of mountain sheep and the moose and caribou in their native wilds. The Eskimos are pictured at work and play on land and sea. The matinee presentations are on Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30 o'clock and the evening views at eight o'clock.

TECHNOLOGY STILL POPULAR

Student Body of Present Compares Favorably with Past

The Massachusetts Institute of Technology begins its new year with the large figure of 1460 students enrolled. This number has been surpassed only once at this date, when last year the crude figure was about fifty greater. This indicates no falling off in the popularity of Tech, for certain groups like the students who come for special work, numbering up to between 50 and 75, have hardly yet given in any names.

A most interesting feature is the large percentage of students, averaging for the regular lower classes not less than 75 per cent, who have returned to continue their studies in regular form, the third-year students of last year returning for their fourth year with 85 per cent of those who were registered when school closed in the Fall. This is a fine record which is testimony to the consistency of the courses. The men new to the Institute, more than 500 in number have the usual characterics in point of distribution, there is the usual preponderance of New England men, the many others who come from the ends of the earth to study in Boston and the large number, now already 180 on the rolls, who come to the Institute from other colleges.

NATIONAL BODY TO MEET

First Assembly of U. S. Chamber of Commerce for Washington

Washington, D. C., October 4—The first annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States will be held in this city during the week beginning January 20, 1913. This was decided upon by the Board of Directors in Boston last wek. Seventeen were present to discuss the affairs of the National Chamber. All unfinished legislation of the 61st Congress affecting business interests was assigned to committees for study and report. A referendum on the subject of a National budget was authorized to be immediately submitted to the commercial organizations of the Nation. The Directors remained in Boston to participate in the International Congress of Chambers of Commerce. The Directors will next meet in St. Louis, Missouri, November 19, to arrange the program of the January meeting.

TAKE A LOOK AT YOUR PROPERTY

People of Quincy:

How many of our citizens ever walk up on Cranch hill and get near enough to the Hospital buildings to see how they really look? Some persons seem to be rather afraid to go near them, as though there might be some malign influence in the surrounding air! The other day the writer talked with a big, full-grown man who spoke rather shudderingly of allowing himself to get very near the Hospital physically, though he was an enthusiastic supporter of it in every other way.

Now, good people, get rid of such foolishness at once, if you are guilty of it. Take a little stroll up Whitwell street and walk boldly into the Hospital grounds. You will meet no lurking giant who will drag you forcibly into his retreat, there to put you to bed and give you nasty medicine against your will; and least of all is there a hustling surgeon anxious to cut you up when there is no need of it. In fact the casual visitor is not allowed to enter the buildings at all at odd times and unannounced, since such freedom would obviously interfere with the regular routine of work.

But take a good look outside, any way. Right in front as you enter the driveway is the new Nurses' Home, perhaps the show piece of the institution both on account of its architectural beauty, and because it is to be occupied by a bevy of gentle and charming young women, upon whose skilled and faithful services next to those of the doctors, the success of the Hospital depends.

Step up on the front piazza of the main building and enjoy for a moment the lovely sea view which is revealed above the pretty lawn and through a vista of forest trees flanking each side. You might go a hundred miles and see nothing finer. Glancing at the various buildings as you pass, you may stroll round to the big south lawn, a pretty sight in itself, and doubly so if on some bright, sunny day you should happeen to see a group of convalescents there. These are the real and visible fruits and proofs of the Hospital's usefulness—men, women, and children who are on the sure road to health after you know not what grim and doubtful battle with disease and death. The Hosptal offered, perhaps, their last and only chance of life. Is not the refuge on the hill pretty well worth while?

What Surprised Him.

The minister of a certain church was greatly exercised by the drowsy habits of his people. Taking them to task on this score on Sunday afternoon, he remarked: "I see a great many of you overcome with sleep. I do not wonder at it, for the weather is oppressive, your work is hard, and many of you have come a long way. Therefore," he added, "I am not surprised to see many of you sleep, but what surprises me is to see many sleeping who have such a comfortable sleep here in the morning."—Pearson's Weekly.

ANOTHER ROUTE TO THE FAIR

Quincy People Welcome Change Which Time Has Brought

Crowds that in the past came through Quincy on their way to the Brockton Fair were not noticed yesterday, and Milton and Mattapan now has the dust kicked up by the string of automobiles. About 10 years ago, before the common use of the auto Quincy was on the line of march. The other highway was not completed, and the tallyho parties furnished considerable excitement since most of them were loaded and good spirits were evident in the people using them.

Quincy people heartily welcome the change since some of the sights were of a disgusting nature.

The Manet club left here Thursday morning for the fair and returned early in the evening. They had a large machine from the Wollaston Garage which carried thirty-five members.

Very few landed in Quincy on the last car Thursday night, but from reports received of the crowds it is admitted the Brockton "New Year" celebration was the biggest ever.

AWAIT THE CALL OF FATHERLAND

Local Greeks Ready to Respond When Country Summons

The prospects of war between Greece and Turkey are so alarming that Thursday evening a representative of Consul Timogenis of Boston called on the Greek residents of Quincy and explained the needs of the mother country if war is declared.

The young men of the city are deeply patriotic and are members of the Pan Hellenis society which was organized to stimulate an enthusiasm in Greeks residing in America.

An international convention was held in Fanneil hall last winter and leaders of the Greek nation delivered addresses which was charged with sentiment and all Greeks were exhorted to flock to the standards of the homeland if a crisis came to assure the safety of the Greek nation and the homes of their parents and friends.

In Quincy this morning all were eagerly awaiting the New York papers, and if it comes to the point of war it is certain that most of the young men here will sail for Greece immediately.

WINS REPUBLICAN HONOR

Boston Chinaman Nominee For House of Representatives

Boston, Oct. 4.—Charles K. Shue, who won the Republican nomination for the house from Ward 7, is the first member of the Chinese race to receive a nomination for public office in this state, if not in the entire country. He is a merchant by occupation and was born in Seattle.

The district which he will represent, if he is elected, is strongly Democratic and has never elected a Republican. It includes Boston's Chinatown, however.

BULL MOOSE MEN IN BIG HUB RALLY

Active Campaigning of Fall Is Fairly Opened

Boston, Oct. 4.—Charles S. Bird, Progressive candidate for governor, and the rest of the state ticket were given a tremendous reception last night at a packed rally in Tremont Temple and an overflow meeting in Faneuil hall.

The Progressive rallies fairly opened the active campaigning of the fall. A marching club of 200 led the cheering within the temple. There were three bands, and Ross McKenney, the Maine guide started the moose call, which hundreds kept going. Bandannas plentiful.

After the temple rally a delegation marched to Faneuil hall, where they found Bird and escorted him to the South station. "Onward Christian Soldier" was the battle hymn of the temple rally.

For the first time in Massachusetts campaigning a collection was taken up. It resulted in the addition of about $200 to the Bull Moose cause.

WOMAN SHOT TO DEATH

Alleged Slayer Is Prevented From Taking His Own Life

Millinocket, Me., Oct. 4.—Charged with the murder of Mrs. Ethel Grant, aged 32, at her home in East Millinocket, James Cannon, a mechanical engineer, was placed under arrest, after an alleged attempt to take his own life had been prevented by the woman's husband, a mill laborer.

According to the police, Cannon followed Mrs. Grant home yesterday afternoon. In the presence of her husband and her mother, Cannon is said to have fired two shots, both of which struck Mrs. Grant in the region of the heart.

Cannon is 45 years old. Two years ago he secured lodging at the home of the Grants, remaining there until a month ago, when, it is said, there was trouble because of his attentions to Mrs. Grant.

DYNAMITE PLOT TRIAL

Judge Rules That Government Has Right to Show Motive

Indianapolis, Oct. 4.—Not only evidence of the alleged illegal interstate shipment of dynamite and nitroglycerine, but also evidence as to what was done with the explosives, will be admitted at the trial of the forty-six men accused of complicity in the "dynamite plots."

Federal Judge Anderson has so ruled. His decision, thus opening to the prosecution the right to show a motive by going into the details of many explosions, followed the empanelling of a jury and a severe arraignment of the defendants in the opening statement by District Attorney Miller.

Eight farmers, two retired farmers, one grocer and one grain dealer, all residing in country towns or rural districts in Indiana, comprise the jury.

Boston, Oct. 4.—The Nantasket Steamboat company announces that, owing to its inability to procure at present a sufficient number of life boats to satisfy the new federal regulations, the service between Boston and Nantasket, Hull and Pemberton will be discontinued on and after next Monday.

AVERAGE BOY

who is to blame? The boy's father! Ninety-five out of every hundred men never say a word to their sons.

"They say. 'The boy is too young.' I tell you such information had better come two years too early than fifteen minutes too late!

"Instead of hushing it over we should see the wisest thing to do is to sit down and tell the boy how he came into the world. The school cannot do it and ought not to do it. It is far too sacred. The home should be aroused to its responsibility.

"The greatest thing a Parents' and Teachers' association can do is to sanely and wisely arouse in the parents a feeling of responsibility for their own children.

"Fathers are negligent. They are so busy making a living they have not the time to make a life. We have got to stop this rush and there is a tendency in that direction, now. The reason a boy of high school age is such a problem is because he is a problem to himself.

"His salvation lies in outdoor life. Football has saved more boys than it has killed. A boy must have an outlet and be kept busy doing things. Tire a boy out with football or work and when night comes he is ready to tumble into bed."

In closing Mr. Gibson spoke strongly in favor of vocational education and urged the co-operation of the parents with the school teachers.

During the evening vocal solos were rendered by Artemus C. Dingwell, accompanied by Miss Emily Bjorkman. Among the numbers were "Here's to the frontier life," "Twilight." "Gipsy trail" and "The jolly miller."

ORIGINAL DRAWINGS

INTERESTING SIDE LIGHTS

Prof. Charles B. Breed, 5 George street, Lynn, engineering expert, well known for his connection with railroad projects which interest Lynn, has in his possession the original drawing of the Quincy Granite railroad and of the first railroad turntable ever built in America, which was built on that road. The Quincy Granite railroad was accepted as the first railroad built on the western hemisphere.

Prof. Breed prizes these drawings not only for their historic value but also because they are souvenirs of one of the best stunts that the expert ever pulled off. He did not build the railroad, for the tracks were first laid in 1826, long before this young man first opened his eyes in this world of activity. But it was Prof. Breed who brought to light the existence of part of the old railroad which had been buried for years He dug up the railroad. One of the important cases of the land court of Massachusetts came to a sudden termination when Prof. Breed appeared in the courtroom with physical evidence in the form of some of the old irons which were attached to the wooden stringers which fastened the rails to the stone ties.

There are many big jobs all over the country which are monuments to Prof. Breed's ability as an engineering expert, but none of those accomplishments give him greater satisfaction than his exploit in discovering the locus of the Quincy Granite railroad. It's an interesting story.

About two years ago the Quincy Quarries Railway Co., which owns the equity in the old Quincy Granite railroad, applied to the land court to have its title proved through a piece of property known as the Wigwam quarry in West Quincy. John Cashman, a well known contractor, owned the Wigwam quarry. The property was very valuable for quarry purposes and naturally John Cashman did not want the Quincy Quarries Railway Co., to usurp his rights. He defended his title. The engineer representing the Quincy Quarries Railway Co., presented a plan which he claimed was the location of the old Quincy Granite railroad. He claimed that it passed through two old woods properties owned by a Mr. Fenno and a Mr. Hall. These two properties are what is now the Wigwam quarry. The belt of land through the Fenno and Hall estates was claimed to be the location of the old Quincy Granite railroad.

An old survey was found made in 1870 by a surveyor by the name of Garbett, who apparently had made at that time, a survey of all that was left of the old Quincy Granite railroad. Around this survey line the engineeer of the Quincy Quarries railway built two old deed descriptions, one of which Mr. Hall had given to the Quincy Granite railroad when they put a location through the Hall land, and the other deed had been passed by Mr. Fenno to the Quincy Granite railroad for a location through his land.

John Cashman had no idea of giving up without a fight, even if he was up against a railroad. He showed good judgment when he employed J. W. McAnarney as attorney. Attorney McAnarney knew what he was doing when he employed Prof. Breed as engineer.

Prof. Breed proceeded to look over some of the claims of the Quincy Quarrier railway. He objected to the locus proposed by the railway company. He claimed that the old survey made by Garbett in 1870 did not show in its original notes any conclusive evidence that Garbett's survey followed the line of the old railroad.

Prof. Breed got that keen mind of his to work. He had a plan. He suggested to Mr. McAnarney that if the old Quincy Granite railroad could be found they would have evidence that would give a solar plexus blow to all the deed descriptions the opposing side might marshal together. Deed descriptions appeared to be the foundation on which the Quincy Quarries railway had established its case. Cashman, McAnarney and Breed were up against a pretty good man in Attorney Robert M. Morse, counsel for the Quincy Quarries railway.

Prof. Breed got to work. He began by making a study of the old railroad. He studied its construction. He was lucky in being able to gain possession through relatives of the old chief engineer of the Quincy Granite railroad, of the original drawing made by the latter of the railroad. This is the first railroad built in America. The engineer was Gridley T. F. Bryant He had a son, Gridley T. F. Bryant, Jr., who was the architect who drew the plans for the Lynn City Hall, and also drew the plans for the Boston City Hall.

The Quincy Granite railroad was first built in 1826 and a portion of it was rebuilt in 1833. It was constructed on stone cross ties, spaced eight feet apart, upon which were laid wooden stringers, one foot high and six inches wide. Upon these was nailed a 2x4 joist laid flatwise and on top of this joist, on the inner edge was a strap of iron 2 3-4 inches wide. This strap of iron represented the rail. The guage of the road was five feet, and all transportation was done by horsepower. The road was constructed for the purpose of taking the granite from what was known as the Bunkeer Hill quarry down to the tide water in Neponset river, where the granite was loaded on to schooners and transported to Charlestown, and from there hauled up Breed's hill, where the Bunker Hill monument was constructed.

All of these details Prof. Breed discovered. He took the old plan made by Gridley T. F. Bryant as a basis and went to work. One fine morning Prof. Breed became the boss of a gang of laborers. He took his laborers and went to the territory where he was confident of unearthing something tangible in the way of evidence. They struck the Wigwam quarry property. Under Prof. Breed's direction the laborers stuck their picks into the ground and made the dirt fly with their shovels. They were successful even beyond his fondest dreams. The laborers found things which caused a quiet smile to play around the young man's mouth. Pickaxes and shovels, with a plan to follow, had knocked the bottom out of the case of Attorney Robert M. Morse and the Quincy Quarry railway. It was like digging for hidden treasure, and the results were just as thrilling.

From one end of the Wigwam quarry to the other, Professor Breed found a continuous set of the cross ties and old wooden stringers, and in some places the old stone stringers were found in place, so that the actual physical location of the railroad was determined from one end of the property to the other. This practically threw the contention of the other side entirely out of court. The physical evidence of the location of the railroad was far superior as evidence to any descriptions of where the railroad was probably built. It was a dramatic movement when Professor Breed appeared in court carrying the old irons which attached the wooden stringers. The old nails which fastened these irons were practically intact, and had rusted but very little although they had been in the ground for about 90 years.

It was a great victory. The plaintiffs in the case could not dispute such tangible evidence. The result of this case was the judge would not grant the petitioners' claim for location, because they did not file proper plans, and further because the Wigwam quarry owners had used the locus of this railroad for more than 20 years notoriously, and for all sorts of purposes. They had thereby obtained what is called "adverse possession."

Prof. Breed was retained by the City of Quincy in the grade crossing case.

REBUKE FOLLOWERS OF THE RED FLAG

Lawrence Citizens Declare "For God and Country"

Lawrence, Mass., Oct. 4.—Patriotism and devotion to the Stars and Stripes such as never before has been displayed in Lawrence was stirred among old and young, professional and business men and toilers, at a meeting of 2000 citizens to discuss a mammoth demonstration "For God and country," as a rebuke to the I. W. W. for parading the streets Sunday flaunting the blood-red flag and with Old Glory conspicuous only by its absence. This demonstration of the people of Lawrence will be held on Oct. 12.

Following the meeting, groups of the city's leading men paraded the downtown streets, carrying or wearing the national emblems and quickly resenting even the suggestion of insult or disrespect among those whom they passed. The city last night was a mass of flags.

At the meeting speeches of the most virile type were delivered to an audience stirred to the depths of patriotism for their country. The speakers representated all branches of business, civic and church life.

Miss Evans will be compelled to report periodically to the authorities during the remainder of the term of five years to which she was sentenced on Aug. 7 on the charge of setting fire the theatre Royal here the day before Premier Asquith was to speak in the theatre on home rule.

MAKE DEMAND FOR AUTONOMY

Turkey's European Provinces Draft Collective Note

ALLOW A WEEK FOR ANSWER

Recourse to Arms If Response Is Not Satisfactory—Diplomats See Little Hope of Averting a War—France and Russia, In Accord, Feel Menace of Mobilization In the Balkans

London, Oct. 4.—The draft of the collective note to be presented to Turkey by Bulgaria, Servia, Greece and Montenegro has been received by all the Balkan legations. The foreign officers of the various powers are to be made acquainted with its contents before its presentation to the Ottoman government.

The note demands autonomy for Macedonia, Albania and Old Servia, which shall be at least equal to that enjoyed by Crete under the protecting powers. The ultimatum will demand an answer within three days. In the event of failure to comply with this demand, the Balkan coalition will repeat it and at the same time address a collective note to the great powers, notifying them that after the expiration of another three days the Balkan states will enforce the demand by recourse to arms.

The slowness with which diplomacy is moving in this matter and the fact that a week's grace is given to Turkey to comply with the demands of the note tend to make the public more optimistic. Diplomats who know how difficult it will be to induce Turkey to grant the autonomy demanded for her European provinces see, however, little hope of averting a war. It is believed in many quarters that the Turks will prefer to take the hazard of a war to complying with the note.

The only news reaching here from the near east concerns preparations for war and the enthusiasm of the Balkan people for it. General Butnik has been appointed chief of the general staff of the Servian army, giving up his portfolio as minister of war for the purpose, while the skupsahtena is holding a special session to provide ways and means.

Crisis a Serious One

Paris, Oct. 4.—The governments of France and Russia are in complete accord on all questions relating to the Balkan situation. Their program has not been divulged. The delicate condition created by the presence of nearly a million armed men face to face on the frontier lines is recognized, and the government in the same way as the other European powers is considering the best means of preventing a conflict.

It is admitted that the crisis is a serious one. The calling out of the reserves by all the Balkan states and the report that they have entered into a coalition against Turkey are looked upon as grave features, especially in view of Turkey's firm attitude.

Urging Turks to Holy War

Constantinople, Oct. 4.—Throughout Turkey, priests of the Moslem faith are preaching a holy war against all Christendom. Fanatics are demanding that the government declare war not only against the Balkan states but against all Europe.

Sheik Ul Islam, head of the Mohammedan priesthood, is in daily consultation with the Turkish ministry.

The Turks are distributing inflammatory circulars throughout European Turkey urging all Turks who are old enough to bear arms to rise up against the Christians. Practically all the Christians throughout the Balkans are members of the Greek Catholic church.

There are fears of wholesale massacres of Christians.

When interviewed the managers of Boston's leading hotels stated that bread and butter will for the time being, remain on the free list.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Mrs. Keziah Coffin, supposed widow, is arranging to move from Trumet to Boston, following the death of her brother, for whom she had kept house. Grace Van Horne, ward of Capt. Eben Hammond, leader of the "Come-outer" religious sect, offers to assist her financially if she will remain. She declines. Kyan Pepper, widower, offers marriage, and is indignantly refused.

CHAPTER II—Capt. Elkanah Daniels, leader of the Regular church, offers Keziah a place as housekeeper for the new minister, and she decides to remain in Trumet.

CHAPTER III—Keziah takes charge of Rev. John Ellery, the new minister, and gives him advice as to his conduct toward members of the parish. Ellery causes a sensation by attending a "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER IV—Ellery's presence is bitterly resented by Eben Hammond, leader of the meeting. Grace apologizes for her guardian and Ellery escorts her home in the rain. Capt. Nat Hammond, Eben's son, becomes a hero by bringing the packet into port safely through fog and storm. Ellery finds Keziah writing a letter to some one, inclosing money in response to a demand. She is curiously startled when informed of the arrival of Nat.

CHAPTER V—Nat calls on Keziah, and it develops that they have been lovers since youth. Daniels remonstrates with Ellery for attending "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER VI—Ellery is caught by the tide and is rescued by Nat. They become friends.

CHAPTER VII—Ellery meets Grace while walking in the fields Sunday, and learns that she walks there every Sunday.

CHAPTER VIII—The clergyman takes dinner Sundays with the Daniels. Annabel, the captain's daughter, exerts herself to make an impression on him. She notices with vexation his desire to get away every Sunday at a certain time. She watches him through a spy glass.

CHAPTER IX—Nat again importunes Keziah to marry him. He says he has had a quarrel with his father, who wants him to marry Grace.

CHAPTER X—Ellery asks Grace to marry him. She confesses that she loves him, but says she fears to displease her guardian, who has been very kind to her, and asks time to think about it. Elkanah Daniels tells Eben about the meetings between Ellery and Grace. Eben declares he will make Grace choose between him and the preacher. Grace finds him in a faint, following the excitement of Elkanah's visit.

CHAPTER XI—Just before he dies Eben exacts a promise from Nat and Grace that they will marry.

CHAPTER XII—Keziah breaks the news to Ellery and later he receives a note from Grace saying she is to marry Nat, and asking him not to try to see her again. Keziah tells the story of her own marriage with a man who turned out to be a good-for-nothing, and who was reported to have been lost at sea, and of her love for Nat, whom she cannot marry because the husband is alive. Ellery sees in the story a lesson in devotion to duty and decides to remain and attend to his duties.

"Stand by, Thoph!" shouted Charlie. "S'pose you can jump and grab her forechains? Hold her steady, Bill. Now, Thoph! That's the time!"

Thoph had jumped, seized the chains, and was scrambling aboard. A moment later he appeared at the rail amidships, a rope in his hand. The dory was brought alongside and made fast; then one after the other the men in the boat climbed to the brig's deck.

"Ahoy!" yelled Burgess. "All hands on deck! tumble up, you lubbers! Humph! She is abandoned, sure and sartin."

"Yup," asserted Bill. "Her boats are gone. See? Guess that explains the longboat on the beach, Charlie."

"Cal'late it does; but it don't explain why they left her. She ain't leakin' none to speak of, that's sure. Rides's light's a feather. Christmas! look at them decks; dirty hogs, whoever they was."

Thoph led the way aft. The cabin companion door was open and they peered down.

"Phew!" sniffed Burgess. "She ain't no cologne bottle, is she? Well, come on below and let's see what'll we see."

The cabin was a "mess," as Bill expressed it. The floor was covered with scattered heaps of riff-raff, oilskins, coats, empty bottles, and papers. On the table a box stood, its hinged lid thrown back.

"Medicine chest," said Burgess, examining it. "And rum bottles aplenty. Somebody's been sick, I shouldn't wonder."

The minister opened the door of one of the little staterooms. The light which shone through the dirty and tightly closed "bull's-eye" window showed a tumbled bunk, the blankets soiled and streaked. The smell was stifling.

"Say, fellers," whispered Thoph, "I don't like this much myself. I'm for gettin' on deck where the air's better. Somethin's happened aboard the craft, somethin' serious."

Charlie and Bill nodded an emphatic affirmative.

"Hadn't we better look about a little more?" asked Ellery. "There's another stateroom there."

He opened the door of it as he spoke. It was, if possible, in a worse condition than the first. And the odor was even more overpowering.

"Skipper's room," observed Burgess, peeping in. "And that bunk ain't been slept in for weeks. See the mildew on them clothes. Phew! I'm fair sick to my stomach. Come out of this."

On deck, in the sunlight, they held another consultation.

"Queerest business ever I see," observed Charlie. I never—"

"I see somethin' like it once," interrupted Bill. "Down in the Gulf 'twas. I was on the old Fishhawk. Eben Salters' dad from over to Bayport skipped her. We picked up a West Injy schooner, derelict, abandoned same as this one, but not anchored, of course. Yeller jack was the trouble aboard her and— Where you bound, Thoph?"

"Goin' to take a squint at the fo'castle," replied Theophilus, moving forward. The minister followed him.

The fo'castle hatchway was black and grim. Ellery knelt and peered down. Here there was practically no light at all and the air was fouler than that in the cabin.

"No, I don't see anything. But I thought—"

He seemed to be listening.

"What did you think?"

"Nothing. I—"

"Hold on! you ain't goin' down there, be you? I wouldn't. No tellin' what you might find. Well, all right. I ain't curious. I'll stay up here and you can report."

Ellery descended the almost perpendicular ladder gingerly, holding on with both hands. At the foot he stopped and tried to accustom his eyes to the darkness.

A room perhaps ten feet long, so much he could make out. The floor strewn, like that of the cabin, with heaps of clothing and odds and ends. More shapes of clothes hanging up and swaying with the roll of the brig. A little window high up at the end, black with dirt. And cavites, bunks in rows, along the walls. A horrible hole.

He took a step toward the center of the room, bending his head to avoid hitting the fo'castle lantern. Then in one of the bunks something stirred, something alive. He started violently, controlled himself with an effort, and stumbled toward the sound.

"What is it?" he whispered. "Who is it? Is anyone there?"

A groan answered him. Then a voice, weak and quavering, said:

"Gimme a drink! Gimme a drink! Can't none of you God-forsaken devils give me a drink?"

He stooped over the bunk. A man was lying in it, crumpled into a dreadful heap. He stooped lower, looked, and saw the man's face.

There was a shout from the deck, or, rather, a yell. Then more yells and the sound of running feet.

"Mr. Ellery!" screamed Burgess, at the hatchway. "Mr. Ellery, for the Almighty's sake, come up here! Come out of that this minute. Quick!"

The minister knew what was coming, was sure of it as he stepped to the foot of the ladder, had known it the instant he saw that face.

"Mr. Ellery!" shrieked Burgess. "Mr Ellery, are you there?"

"Come up!" called Burgess. "Hurry! It's the smallpox. The darned hooker's rotten with it. For God sakes, come quick!"

He ran to the rail, yelling orders to Bill and Thoph, who were frantically busy with the dory. Ellery began to climb the ladder. His head emerged into the clean, sweet air blowing across the deck. He drew a breath to the very bottom of his lungs.

Then from behind and below him came the voice again.

"Gimme a drink!" it wailed. "Gimme a drink of water. Ain't one of you cussed swabs got decency enough to fetch me a drink? I'm dyin' for a drink, I tell you. I'm dyin'!"

The minister stood still, his feet on the ladder. The three men by the rail were working like mad, their faces livid under the sunburn and their hands trembling. They pushed each other about and swore.

Thoph and Bill sprang over the rail into the boat. Burgess turned and beckoned to Ellery.

"Come on!" he called. "What are you waitin' for?"

The minister remained where he was.

"Are you sure—" he faltered.

"Sure! Blast it all! I found the log. It ain't been kept for a fortnit but there's enough. It's smallpox, I tell you. Two men died of it three weeks ago. The skipper died right afterwards. The mate— No wonder them that was left run away as soon as they sighted land. Come on! Do you want to die, too?"

From the poison pit at the foot of the ladder the man in the bunk called once more.

"Water!" he screeched. "Water! Are you goin' to leave me, you d—n cowards?"

"For Heaven sakes!" cried Burgess, clutching the rail, "what's that?"

The minister turned. "Hush!" he called, in answer to the voice, "hush! I'll bring you water in a minute. Burgess," he added, "you and the rest go ashore. I shall stay."

"You'll stay? You'll stay? With that? You're crazy as a loon. Don't be a fool, man! Come on! We'll send the doctor and somebody else—some one that's had it, maybe, or ain't afraid. I am and I'm goin'. Don't be a fool."

Thoph, from the dory, shouted to know what was the matter. Ellery climbed the ladder to the deck and walked over to the rail. As he approached, Burgess fell back a few feet.

"Thoph," said the minister, addressing the pair in the dory, "there is a sick man down in the forecastle. He has been alone there for hours, I suppose, certainly since his shipmates ran away. If he is left longer without help, he will surely die. Some one must stay with him. You and the rest row ashore and get the doctor and whoever else you can. I'll stay here till they come."

Thoph and his companions set up a storm of protest. It was foolish, it was crazy, the man would die anyhow, and so on. They begged the minister to come with them. But he was firm.

The oars dipped, bent, and the dory moved off. The sound of the creaking thole pins shot a chill through Ellery's veins. The water butts stood amidships, not far from the open door of the galley. Entering the latter he found an empty saucepan. This he filled from the cask, and then, with it in his hand, turned toward the black hatchway. Here was the greatest test of his courage. To descend that ladder, approach that bunk, and touch the terrible creature in it, these were the tasks he had set himself to do, but could he?

SICKLES AND WIFE MAY BE RECONCILED

No Further Airing of Their Troubles In Newspapers

New York, Oct. 4.—General Daniel E. Sickles and his wife have, if not become reconciled after twenty-seven years, at least decided to cease the recriminations and counter recriminations which have recently passed between them, according to a friend of Mrs. Sickles, at the Hotel LaFayette.

"Stanton Sickles," he said, "has decided for the present not to give out any more letters written by his father to a prominent New York society woman and which came into the son's posession some years ago. The general, in the same spirit, realizing that he made a technical blunder in making public what he did, has declined to make further public statements."

TRAIN WRECK KILLS SEVEN

Train on the New Haven Road Goes Into a Ditch

FAILED TO TAKE CROSS-OVER

One Report Says Sixteen Are Dead and Fifty Hurt—Four Women In Pullman Among the Victims—Fire Adds to Horror of Crash In Connecticut—Cars Quickly Consumed

New Haven, Oct. 4.—The Springfield express, second section, running from Boston to New York on the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, was wrecked near Westport, when the engine, driven at high speed, failed to take a cross-over from one track to another.

The train went into the ditch alongside the tracks, and the four Pullmans which followed the mail and baggage cars were completely demolished. The wreckage took fire, adding to the horror of the scene. Seven lives are known to be lost, four of these women who were passengers in the first Pullman coach, which had to bear the brunt of the shock, and the others being the engine crew.

While the official report of the New Haven gives seven dead and thirteen hurt, a report from Westport says sixteen are dead and fifty hurt. Another message from Bridgeport gives the death list as twenty. Owing to the fact that all wires are down it is difficult to get full details.

The dead: Engineer George L. Clark of Springfield, Fireman J. J. Moker of Springfield, Mrs. James C. Brady of Albany and Mrs. C. S. Ransom. The other three bodies are as yet unidentified.

The wreck was not unlike that on the Fairfield viaduct on July 11, last year, when the federal express went off the embankment after the engine had failed to make the cross-over at high speed.

Although the work of rescue was pushed as rapidly as possible, it was several hours before the bodies in the first parlor car were reached and removed to the morgue. Meantime wild rumors of loss of life had spread, most of these describing the disaster as far greater than that of the Fairfield viaduct.

When the railroad officials were making heir preliminary report, fixing the number of dead at seven, there were rumors of many bodies, charred by flames, being taken out of the wreck.

Private inquiries as to the cause of the accident elicited only the response that the rate of speed was too great to take the cross-over successfully.

Two of the passengers on the wrecked train were Everard Thompson, graduate manager of athletics at Yale, and H. L. Merry, manager of the Hotel Taft, New Haven. They were badly shaken up but were not otherwise injured. Merry said:

"The cars burned so rapidly that when the Saugatuck department was summoned the flames were beyond control. Just how many were killed I do not know. From the hysterical actions of people I saw around the forward parlor car I think at least one or two persons have been caught in this car and burned.

"Everybody was hurled from his seat in the different cars and all more or less scratched up, but I did not see any seriously injured.

"After the wreck the boiler of the engine exploded and this set fire to the coaches. Most of the men who were killed were in the engine and mail car, I think. The engine and tender went over the embankment and the rest of the cars bumped along the ties, some of them turning over.

"I have seen trains take fire before but I never saw one burn so quickly. You see the wreck occurred 'miles from nowhere' and we could not get a stream of water on it."

EELS IN SERVICE PIPES

Water System Crippled and School Forced to Suspend Sessions

Somerville, Mass., Oct. 4.—The city water system has suffered during the past few days as a result of eels finind their way into the service pipes. As a result the pipes at a distillery, the Prescott school and hose 5 were blocked. The Prescott school was obliged to suspend sessions.

The Boston and Maine railroad was put to a great disadvantage at its roundhouses as a result of eels getting into the pipes that supply the boilers of the locomotives and it was some time before sufficient water could be procured.

FORE RIVERS FOR BOWLING

Six Team League, With Twenty Week Season, Formed

A six team bowling league was organized Thursday night and the Fore River company employees plan to have one of the busiest winters ever seen in bowling circles. The matches will be held at the Coliseum alleys.

The season will run 20 weeks and it is possible some exceedingly high scores will be made.

The different departments captain's are as folows: Electrician, Theodore Andrews; Machinist gallery, Frederick Morril; Machine Floor, George Williamson; Pattern Makers, Walter Williamson; D department, George Bliss; Y department, Edward White.

McDEVITT BUSY.

John J. McDevitt, candidate on the Democratic ticket for senator in the first Norfolk district opened his campaign Thursday at the Fore River company gates where he spoke to over 500 men. Tonight he appears before the Jefferson club at Hyde Park.

He takes issue with Mrr. Wolcott for his opposition to the initiative referendum, and for his attitude during his legislative career. Mr. McDevitt advocates a bill for the elimination of party designations, a lifting jack bill which will require a jack to be carried on all cars so that it will not be necesary to run the trucks back over a person unfortunate enough to be drawn underneath.

Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott of the Bethany Congregational church will deliver the address at the laying of the cornerstone of the Braintree Congregational church, Sunday. The new edifice will be ready for use about Christmas and is built on the site of the church which was destroyed by an early morning fire last winter.

Shall we see men sitting together on the piazzas busy with the latest embroidery, now that a Harvard student has just returned from a trip to Europe with a trunk full of lace handkerchiefs that he made himself, saying that it is just as artistic to do fancy work as to paint a picture?

MR. LILLBACK RECOVERED

From Severe Illness, Resumes Ministerial Duties

Rev. John Lillback, pastor of the Finnish Congregational church is out again after a hard seige of illness which kept him confined to the house for several weeks. Mr. Lillback was pretty sick when he started on a so-called vacation trip, but continued speaking for several nights at various places until he was finally forced to give up and take the advice of his physicians. He was operated upon by Drs. Sheahan and Reynolds. Although able to be out at the present time he shows the signs of his hard seige of illness.

He says that the people of his parish were more than kind to him during his enforced absence from his usual walks and he fully appreciates the many sentiments of good feeling expressed towards him.

This evening there will be a meeting of the elders and deaconesses of his church at his home.

Mr. Lillback's parishioners are very glad to see him once more ministering to their spiritual wants.

THE DAY OF REST.

A Tart Word Picture of How the Strict Observance of the Puritan Sunday Has Given Place to the Free Observance of the Modern Sunday.

The weariness of the Puritan Sunday of our boyhood is completely outdone by the yawning insipidity of the average modern day of rest.

The family breakfast is no more. In its place we find a long-drawn-out meal to which the weary-eyed members of the family trail down, one after the other, at irregular intervals.

Everybody is tired, especially those that have been out Saturday evening. What apology for conversation there is deals with the play visited on Saturday, the moving-picture show, the dance, or baseball.

By the time the church bells ring the entire family, save perhaps father and mother, are buried in the blanket sheets of the Sunday newspaper. In fact, one newspaper does not contain sporting news enough to go around, so two have been purchased; and the comic supplement is a favorite.

In the afternoon the house is deserted. One member of the family is motoring. Another is canoeing on the river. A third has gone driving with a friend. The others are out walking. Mother and father are at home, and their first task is to gather up the litter of papers that the young folks have left behind.

The Puritan Sunday may have been a mistake. It certainly filled some children's minds with distaste for religion. But the modern Sunday is a still more gigantic blunder. It offers absolutely nothing of value to life, and it destroys the power of quiet meditation, of sane thought, or preparation for the duties and the tasks of the week.

If the Puritan Sunday did violence to the social nature, the modern Sunday does far more violence to the religious nature. The social instincts are so strong that no strict rules could utterly crush them; but religion is a tender plant which withers if it is not properly cultivated.

The Puritan Sunday may have developed sombre souls; the modern Sunday kills the soul most effectively with indifference.

Surely we can do better with the Lord's Day than make it forbidding on the one hand, or morally destructive on the other.

We must get back the old-fashioned idea of a day of rest and reverence. These things are vital for our welfare. We need a Sabbath that brings peace.— Christian Endeavor World.

AUTOGRAPH POEM BY NOGI.

Gave It to Berlin Newspaper Man Last Year.

The London Daily Mail quotes an original verse which General Nogi inscribed in 1911 on a photograph of himself on which the correspondent asked him to place his autograph. The verse translated into English reads:

East and west, north and south, mine eye hath seen;
Mountains many and rivers swift mine eye hath seen;
Glorious spring and summer fair, autumn's leaves, winter's snows, all these mine eye hath seen;
A year of battle and more,
Man and horse are old, but my spirit remaineth young.
Thoughts of home are banished thoughts;
My country and emperor alone matter.

Autos Spread Consumption.

Automobiles are spreading disease and death in the Philippines, according to the bureau of public works of the islands. This is due to the great cloud of dust raised. The dust finds its way into the houses, and the high mortality among the Filipinos from tuberculosis is attributed in large measure to it. The Philippine government now is experimenting with native oil on the roads.

"Naps" Again In Style.

"Naps," once a popular style of cloth, have been out of vogue so long that many people, writes an English journalist, will be surprised to hear they are now in such request that manufacturers cannot keep pace with the demand.

REPUBLICANS OPTIMISTIC

See Steady Drift Toward the Republican Candidates

STAND OF ROOSEVELT MEN

Nomination of Joseph Walker a Popular Move—Republican Club of Massachusetts to Give Him Reception

There is an unmistakable solidifying of the Republican ranks all over the state, which is quite apparent to the leaders of all the parties. Furthermore, there appears to be a very steady trend of sentiment toward President Taft. The drift toward Mr. Taft has been somewhat in evidence for several weeks, but not so decisive as it is today.

The leading Republicans of the state today have a very optimistic feeling in regard to the election, not only in the state but in the country. The message which Senator Lodge brought back from his speaking campaign in the central states brought fresh courage to everybody interested in the campaign of the president in this state. Mr. Lodge declared that there was a distinct subsidence of the Roosevelt wave in the sections visited by him, and that there was a strong current back to the Republican party. The same testimony is given by many others who have returned from trips across the continent. In many of the states where the Roosevelt sentiment was extremely strong last spring, there has been a great change in the last two or three months.

Intentions of Roosevelt Men

The recent primaries threw some light on the question of what the Roosevelt men are likely to do when it comes to election day in regard to voting their state ticket. The figures show that the Republican party cast as many votes this year as last, within something like 15,000. Either that is the strength of the Roosevelt movement today or else all the rest of the Roosevelt people intend to vote the Republican ticket for everything below the candidates for electors, and in the latter case the Republican ticket ought to be successful Nov. 5. The reiterated demands of the Roosevelt leaders that Roosevelt men absent themselves from the Republican caucus evidently fell upon deaf ears. It seems to be evident that they were greatly interested in the fortunes of many Republican candidates; otherwise, they would not have voted in the primaries Sept. 24. It is perfectly well known that a great many of the Roosevelt men propose to make their votes count when it comes to voting for candidates to the legislature. They feel there is too much at stake in the election of a United States senator to throw the legislature into the hands of the Democrats and thus insure the choice of Mayor John F. Fitzgerald of Boston to succeed Senator Crane.

Nomination of Walker Popular

The nomination of former Speaker Joseph Walker for governor has given general satisfaction throughout the state, and the party leaders are unanimous in the opinion that the Republican party will stand behind him to a man. The contest between Mr. Walker and Colonel Benton has left no scars, and Colonel Benton has made it his business to put all his friends in line for the nominee of the primaries. He will do all in his power, not only upon the stump, but wherever he goes, to aid in the election of Mr. Walker.

The nomination seems also extremely pleasing to all true Progressives. They say they recognize in Mr. Walker a man of the highest ideals, of sterling integrity, great ability and unflagging energy. His work as a Republican leader in the Massachusetts legislature is regarded as of the most valuable character. Reforms which have been instituted in the state departments, at his suggestion, have proved to be very valuable to the commonwealth.

Prominent Democrats are authority for the statement that Mr. Walker will secure a large number of Democratic votes. Governor Foss was renominated after the most persistent fight, and the method of his campaigning in the last hours of the canvass have been bitterly denounced by Democrats all over the state. There seems to be a feeling that the arguments used to defeat District Attorney Pelletier had no place in a political campaign in Massachusetts. The friends of Mr. Pelletier feel that his defeat was accomplished in the seventy-two hours previous to the day of the primaries and that up to that time he had a clear lead over Mr. Foss. It was with the utmost difficulty that many Democrats were driven to support the governor last fall and there is quite a general feeling that the task will be even more strenuous in this canvass.

Working Men and Prof. Wilson

It is noticeable that the working men take very little interest in the Wilson campaign and candidacy. As a matter of fact, the great majority of working people in Massachusetts believe in a protective tariff. This has been demonstrated so often in presidential campaigns, as well as congressional, that it hardly needs to be stated. The language of the Democratic platform declaring it "To be a fundamental principle of the Democratic party that the federal government, under the constitution, has no right or power to impose or collect tariff duties except for the purpose of revenue," is sufficiently clear to indicate just where the party stands on that issue. A working man realizes whatever may be the personal views of Mr. Wilson on the tariff issue, that he will have to be governed by the platform, if elected, and that congress, if it should chance to be Democratic, would be bound to frame a tariff bill according to its declaration of principles contained in the platform. Even a novice knows that a revenue tariff framed according to Democratic principles would be as likely to impose duties on non-competitive as on competitive imports, and by that means wholly upset the business of the country. They much prefer the Republican policy of imposing duties on competitive imports and thereby protecting labor from the lower wages of Europe.

Undoubtedly the campaign, both state and national, will immediately take on great activity. The close of the conventions will be the signal for a state wide canvass of the Republicans on the stump, and local speakers as well as speakers from other states will be heard in all the centers of population.

Reception to Former Speaker Walker

The Republican club of Massachusetts plans to give Hon. Joseph Walker, Republican candidate for governor, a great reception and a dinner at the Boston City club on the evening of Wednesday, Oct. 9. Mr. Walker was for two years president of the club and the executive committee, in honor of his nomination for governor, thought it would be a fitting thing to give him this reception and allow an opportunity for the members to meet him personally.

The executive committee of the club also voted to extend the courtesies of the organization to the Republican candidates for the Massachusetts house and senate.

The reception will be at 6 o'clock and the speakers will be Hon. Samuel J. Elder, president of the club, Hon. Joseph Walker, former Governor John L. Bates and others. It will be one of the first events of the campaign and the club is working to make it a great success.

MME. SARDOU'S WORK OF ART.

The Curtain Raiser That Preceded Her Husband's Comedy.

Not merely in a domestic but also in a business sense are the Frenchwomen the admirable partners of their husbands. The first wife of Sardou, the dramatist, considered herself as such, despite the fact that she conducted a different line of business, wherein she achieved a fair success while the young playwright was vainly endeavoring to get his plays produced. The first Mme. Sardou was a skillful milliner. She trimmed hats while waiting for the fame and fortune she was certain Sardou would achieve. Also she kept an eye on his branch of business also, and it was really she who obtained the opportunity for his first real success.

It appears that a bright comedy had long lain in the hands of a manager who would neither read nor return it. Without saying a word to her husband Mme. Sardou withdrew this work, herself carrying it to an actress she believed peculiarly fitted for the leading role. By her cleverness she succeeded in extracting a promise from the actress that the play should be read. In response to the actress' request for an address the dramatist's wife handed her a card inscribed "Mme. Sardou, Modiste." A few days later the wife of the manager at whose theater the actress played entered the little millinery parlor of Mme. Sardou. She asked to be shown a hat. Several were tried on. Then, handglass still in hand and the hat selected still upon her head, she turned suddenly from the mirror and inquired whether M. Sardou were at home and could be summoned.

Sardou, greatly astonished, came, and the stranger, announcing her name and her husband's position, delivered the gratifying message that the play had been accepted, was to be given an immediate production and that the author was expected at the theater that evening at 9 o'clock for the first reading and the distribution of parts.

After her departure the young couple held an explanation and jubilation. The clever little modiste caught up the hat just ordered and held it aloft. "Never say that I, too, do not compose works of art!" she cried gayly. "Behold my curtain raiser, which precedes your comedy! It has succeeded—yours will succeed!" And her prediction was fulfilled. The comedy, long since popular with English audiences as "A Scrap of Paper," was itself a success and the first of a long line of successes.—New York

Vol. 27 No. 234 QUINCY, MASS., SATURDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 5, 1912 PRICE TWO CENTS

QUINCY PEOPLE PAY FOR MORE WATER THAN REALLY USED

According to the Deductions of Mr. Shaw Who Draws Deadly Parallel

Suggests a Three-Cornered Board of Water Commissioners

Editor of the Ledger:

Before proceeding with the investigation of "What's the matter with Quincy?" I desire that it shall be clearly understood that I am not a pessimist, and that I deplore as much as anybody the necessity of laying bare the errors and defects of our recent and present administrations.

That any unsavory noteriety Quincy may acquire through giving publicity to the unfortunate condition of our city, will cause any lasting depression of business interests or interruption of Quincy's growth or expansion, I very much doubt. It can certainly have no worse effect than has already accrued through the conditions themselves, not the least of which is the abnormal tax rate.

But even if such a course should cause temporary dejection, I still believe that the end in view would justify the means; because I am firmly convinced that our main hope of salvation from our heavy debt and high tax rate depends upon a thoroughly aroused public interest and a strong, united effort to bring about a much needed reform in leaders and methods.

The sole object in view in writing this series of leters is to lay before the people a clear understanding of the conditions, in order that every citizen may realize the importance of taking active part in municipal affairs to the end that we may all cease our ineffectual grumbling, put our shoulders to the wheel of reform and help lift Quincy out of the mire of debt and mismanagement which is so surely clogging the wheels of her progress.

To-be-sure, conditions are not as bad as they might be, but they are bad enough to merit the serious and thoughtful attention of every citizen who is interested in Quincy's welfare, and this means, or ought to mean, everyone.

With these thoghts in mind, let us examine some of the conditions in the water department, and see if here may be found any part of the answer to our question.

We all have cause twice a year to realize that the minimum water rates in Quincy are extremely high:—higher in fact than those of any other city or town in the Metropolitan District. An examination of the following table showing a comparison of the minimum yearly meter rates and the number of cubic feet of water allqwed by Quincy and some of our neighboring municipalities will show just where we stand:

	Allowed per year	Minimum rate per year
Somerville	5000 cubic feet	$6
Malden	4375 " "	7
Boston	5714 " "	8
Melrose	4500 " "	9
Watertown	4000 " "	10
Chelsea	7143 " "	10
Newton	3800 " "	10
Everett	8806 " "	11
Medford	6000 " "	12
Milton	4800 " "	14
Quincy	7300 " "	16

A careful analysis of this table shows some interesting facts. In the first place the average yearly water consumption of the average family is less than 4000 cubic feet per year. Even in Newton, where only 3800 cubic feet per year are allowed at the $10 rate, not many families use in excess of this amount, and of these many are traced to leakage. As most of us in Quincy do not use much over half of our allov ance, but have to pay $16 just the same, the effect of Quincy's large allowance and high rate is that actually we are paying nearer 40 cents per 100 cubic feet than the 23 cents it would cost us if we used it all.

HANDS AND FACE BADLY BURNED

KRASNOGER AT HOSPITAL

Harry Krasnoger of Cyril street was very seriously burned about the face and hands and Albert Foderland of 57 Arthur street also badly burned about the face and hands at the Fore River works this noon. The men were employed in the plumbers department when the gasoline torch which they were using took fire and exploded. They were given first aid treatment at the Red Cross hospital at the works after which Krasnoger was taken to the City Hospital in the police ambulance. Foderland although badly burned was able to go to his home.

FALLON BUSY WITH AUTOS

Gathered in a Crop of Nine Drivers Who Could Not Resist Temptation

Brockton Fair means a busy time for officer Fallon, the driver of the Milton police automobile catcher as hundreds of autos passed through Milton on their way to Brockton and the good streets is a strong temptation to let the car out. This year was no exception to the rule and as a result of their diligence nine drivers were in court this morning for overspeeding and had fines imposed on them ranging from $10 to $20.

GARBAGE ORDER AGAIN ON TAP

Will Probably Be Sidetracked at City Council Meeting

The meeting of the City Council on Monday evening will be an important one as several matters of moment are to come up for action. Not the least of these are the two orders making transfers to the appropriation for collection of garbage, which will probably be passed, and the order appropriating $2,000 for this work which will come up under the head of unfinished business. As transfers have been made to care for the garbage collection it is doubtful if the $2,000 order passes. Several committees have met since the last regular meeting and several commttee reports will also be received.

OLD RESIDENT DEAD.

Mrs. Catherine, wife of Henry T. Brown, Sr., of Chestnut street, one of the oldest residents of the city, passed away this morning, aged 92 years. She leaves a husband, two sons and a daughter. She was one of those highly respected women who will be missed in the community.

—The primaries demonstrated one thing and that is that as to expressing the opinion of the voters, they are a good deal of a failure. With twenty-five per cent of the voters availing themselves of the opportunity to express their opinions, as in our town, it can hardly be said to have been a great success thus far.—Rockland Standard.

QUINCY PROGRESSIVES FIRE FIRST GUN IN THE CAMPAIGN

State and County Candidates Launch Initial Movement

Group of Speakers Express Views of the Situation

Red fire reflected an invitation to all in Quincy square Friday night to attend the grand rally of the Progressive Party at Alpha hall, and a crowd of about 500 was present when the rally was called to order by John H. Johnson of the state committee.

The Wollaston Band gave a concert of popular airs before the meeting and also played between the speeches.

The speakers were, Daniel Cosgrove of Lowell candidate for lieutenant governor; Dr. H. S. McIntire of Sharon, candidate for county treasurer; James P. Roberts of Quincy; candidate for representative in the fifth Norfolk district; Prof. Joseph L. Larsen of Everett and Col. Henry L. Kincaide, candidate for the nomination for congressman.

CHAIRMAN JOHNSON.

John H. Johnson chairman in opening the meeting said:

"The chief reason for the founding of the Progressive party was the apparent impossibility of securing clean honest government in the interest of all the people by means of the boss ridden, invisibly and corruptly controlled, machinery of the old parties.

We believe every honest man and every good woman is a Progressive at heart and we do not believe they wish to see government by all the people and for all the people perish in this nation.

There are a few who claim the progressive party is composed solely of a few discontented Republicans and that the only result of this movement will be to elect Democrats to office.

In Quincy we have an actual signed enrollment of nearly 20 per cent of the entire registered vote—a signed enrollment which means that a conservative estimate of our strength in this city should show that there are now in Quincy nearly if not quite as many Progressives as there are Democrats and Republicans together.

This shows that all the Democrats are not in favor of having our legislation controlled by an invisible government through the political lepers which infest both the National Democatic and Republican parties.

We do not believe that because a man is a Democrat that he is any less a high minded citizen and an honest man. The Democratic Party has had its Russell, Cleveland, Carlisle, Gaston, Douglas as well as its present famous bosses.

The Progressive party is founded in the interests of humanity, to protect the weak against the strong, to establish industrial conditions throughout the nation which will safeguard the health, well being and chastity of all women who through misfortune are compelled to work in stores or factories for their daily bread and last but not least, to prevent the exploitation of the bodies and souls of helpless little children as a factor of profit in any commercial enterprise.

In our membership we know, as such, neither Jew or Gentile, neither Catholic nor Protestant, neither land of birth nor country of adoption, neither Democrat nor Republican.

We demand one essential of our candidates, clean hands and a pure heart.

The candidates of the Progressive party are the best proof of my statement that this party knows, no race, no creed, no previous political allegiance. It gives me pleasure to present ladies and gentlemen, Daniel Cosgrove of Lowell, Progressive Candidate for Lt. Governor.

CANDIDATE COSGROVE.

As Mr. Cosgrove came to the front of the platform the band played "Come Back to Erin" and many joined in singing the chorus while the progressive candidate quietly stood waiting for the band to finish.

He said that all came to have a plain sociable talk for the uplift of the mass against the classes and the bosses. (Applause.) We progressives will try to do away with the greed, graft and other unwelcome conditions created through Democratic and Republican regimes.

The majority of the Democrats are honest men, but Wilson is a frost to the party. Parties have worked along lines in campaigns and victories that were in sight have been spoiled by the trimmer at the head. We must eliminate those possibilities and will try to if we elect the progressive ticket.

"The gallant rough-rider, Theodore Roosevelt, accepting the nomination from the progressive party enunciated one of the finest articles of faith heard in centuries when he said 'I want equal justice to rich and poor alike,' and his associates on the ticket, the namesake of your chairman, Governor Johnson of California repeated it and said 'tip the scale in favor of the poor fellow, he needs it most.' (Applause.)

"The conditions have been going from bad to worse. The Republicans and Democrats found themselves dominated by the same bosses and we want to set affairs of this nature aside. We are against the boss system. (Ap-

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Dakota Dan is ungallant. He cannot recall holding Hattie's hand after all these years and her recent efforts in his behalf.

A two cent postage stamp with a return postal card would have secured all that was really necessary of J. P. Morgan's testimony before that congressional investigation committee.

The Greeks have been notified to immediately repair to the old country to manifest their patriotism. How will that affect those who have become American citizens and does it apply to the recently appointed Boston copper?

Candidate Bird is soaring all right but will he capture the votes?

The Bull Moosers are having their own troubles in the 12th district. If Tim is the same man of old, the other candidate will not have plain sailing.

The Boston Bull Moosers have leased quarters for six years. Looks as though they planned to have a long and merry life.

What was it a case of cold feet, Mr. N—— or something else?

Will it be women first in the 12th congressional district?

Morgan contributed $150,000 for the good of the people and the country. Fine. On a par with the politician running for office who only seeks to alleviate the sufferings of the down trodden and oppressed.

The vote on the base ball automobile contest only goes to show how short lived is the popularity of the average base ball player however much of a star he may be.

The office boy base ball enthusiast may have as many dying grandmothers as the Mormon law permits, but unless he has the dough his chance of seeing the world's series are slight.

Lawrence has been stirred by a spirit of patriotism. It is about time that the American flag cut some figure in the city.

The silly statement that is going around that racial voting will cut any figure in the coming election is only on a par with other wild cat claims of some, would be politicians.

With the Bull Moosers divided, Jim Curley does not appear to be worrying much over the outcome. Jim has a reputation of sticking by his friends and constituents which other aspirants for office would do well to copy.

In the 14th district there is gentleman's agreement between two worthy candidates. Both of them will live up to their promises and after their little contest is over come together for party work.

ONLY POSTAGE STAMP NEEDED.

Probably the members of the congressional committee who are investigating the campaign fund contributions of 1904 are getting a lot of inside information and possibly amusement from their probing up to the present time. As an educational product it furnishes food for the average citizen as a choice morsel of indigestible extravagance. For example Mr. J. P. Morgan was on the stand the other day, and freely admitted that he produced $150,000 as a fund for the Republican party, because. In his whole heartedness, he believed that the "good of the people and the country demanded the re-election of the Republican candidates." On the other hand the great philanthrophist admitted he would as cheerfully given to the Democratic party if their election pointed towards the same sublime condition of things. Delightfully simple. pleasantly romantic, clearly disinterested on the face of it. Aside from that what did the committee glean from the great financier. Absolutely nothing except that he knew nothing of certain things which were put up to him.

A two cent postage stamp with an enclosed envelope bearing a stamp of the same denomination with the brilliant questions propounded would undoubtedly have elicited the same information from Mr. Morgan. And this method would have saved the country a few dollars. Mr. Morgan was frank, delightfully so, in his admissions, that is the admissions he made, which by the way were few. He stated that when they wanted something they got it and then his interest ceased. Giving $150,000 for the good of the people and the country and then his interest ceased.

His interest in what. we might be asked. In the people, the country the party or the solicitor. If in the former two his feeling for them must have been thin skinned, somewhat superficial when he admits he was willing to seperate himself from $150,000 in their cause. The newspaper reports of Mr. Morgan's supposed grilling would lead one to suppose that the mighty investigating committee had been turned into a special Washingtonian reception body to do homage to the financier. He was ushered into the private room of the chairman. The mighty wearers of the toga who were supposed to annihilate the man of money by the brilliancy of their questions, dwindled into a body of comedians who laughed when he laughed and joked when he joked.

Their questions, so far as bearing upon the real merits of the case, are a reminder of the fellow who having friends visiting him at the Danvers insane asylum, pointed with pride to the buildings and to the administration building as his choice hotel, "but no one but a ——— fool would live there," was his declaration.

Mr. Morgan said he gave freely and fondly without any hope or suggestion of return.

Mr. Cortelyou was the man whom he said received the money or at least requested it. Later in 1907 Mr. Cortelyou was secretary of the treasury There was a panic. It is said the $27,000,000 of the government money was turned over to the Morgan banks to save the panic which threatened at that time.

The government gave of the People's Money, without charging a cent of interest. It is said that those who borrowed that money at the time, paid 6 per cent, to those who secured it from the government to save commercial interests.

A little figuring now if you please Interest on $27,000,000 for one year at 6 per cent, would be $1,420,000, for one month, it would be $118,333.33 1-3. It is not at hand just how many months this vast amount of the people's money was diverted from its customary receptables to enable certain people to secure a good fat interest on it to avert a panic. Who created the panic? Who profited by the panic. Who handled the dough to use a slang phrase? John Jones did not. Tom Smith had no hand in it unless there are men bearing such names in the monetary combination Did the plain people benefit? Did the plain people draw any interest? Did the plain people profit by the rise or fall of the stock market, which created or averted a panic? We venture to say that they did not.

Then in the name of common sense where have the plain people been figuring all this time?

To tell the plain unvarnished truth they have been simply paying the freight and will continue to do so until the end of the chapter, unless they wake up and discriminate who is for the plain people on one hand while coddling with the moneyed interests with the other and endeavoring to fool both.

If that committee had any desire to probe, the members could have asked some embarrassing questions instead of holding a quasi afternoon pink tea with J. P. Morgan as the guest of honor.

LEST WE FORGET.

Ancient Rome and Greece, those wonderful countries where art romped madly with ease and luxury during the declining years of both, fell from their high estate through the very elegance and leisure and inability to cast a far seeing and discerning eye into the future. Or perhaps it may be more carefully said because they did not care to look into that which was to come, being content with their present day ease and luxury and putting before them and into the lips of that later French monarch, the phrase which since has become famous, "After me the deluge." The Romans and Grecians at the zenith of their power, ease,, grandeur and effulgence, without a thought of the morrow. may not have thought of that phrase, which has since become a bon-not, but they laid the foundation for its utterance.

In the chronicling of present day events, to the careful student of practical politics and existing conditions is there not something in the Roman and Grecian history and that far famed French utterance to cause a pause and wonderment as to whether we are drifting. The growth and development of this nation has been the wonder of the world. May we not be too optimistic as to the future when we consider the things that are happening every day. Switzerland, the oldest and possibly the smallest republic on the face of the earth has to all outward appearances shown nothing, like the stupendous strides made by the United States, in whatever branch of commerce or science we may probe.

The European republic of course lacks the territory for such marvelous expansion. It has plodded along so far as we know in the even tenor of its way and in the world press of the period little is heard of it. But does that signify that it has not been progressive and happy? Evidently the latter condition prevails else if there were disturbances they would find their place in the public print. And this brings us back to the start, "Lest We Forget." Note the difference. In almost every daily paper which we take up, there is something of industrial disturbance in one section or another of the country. There is no lodging it. Those happenings or incidents crop out almost daily. They gain in magnitude like a snow ball rolling down a snow clad hill.

Every one notices them. All give them a cursory consideration and what then?

They are laid to politics or frenzied finance and soon forgotten in the wild rush to absorb something else sensational. Undoubtedly both should share the responsibility, but individuals are accountable and the problem is to whom should we turn upon to attach the blame for existing conditions. Yet the question is not so difficult of solution as some would have us believe. We are all partly to blame. It has been said that the public press is a great moulder of public opinion. But of late years it has likewise been claimed that this high honor has evaporated to a positive negative issue. In the city of New York this has in a measure been amply demonstrated from the fact that candidates who have been assailed unmercifully by an almost united press have been successful in winning out in their desires for political office.

Ths of course may be laid at the threshold of Tammany hall or to the system which has just been exposed in the great metropolis. All this leads up to the true consideration of existing conditions and problems.

It causes thinking people to wonder where we are at in the present and what the future holds forth. Again we must revert to the hackneyed phrase that "the newspaper moulds public opinion." Allowing for the sake of the argument that there is some merit in this claim, in what manner is the press of the present day endeavoring to "mould public opinion?"

As an illustration let us look over the columns of a big daily that boasts of its rapid increase in advertising. One of such the other day devoted little over a stick of matter with a small head to proclaim to its readers that coal had taken a jump. Not a word upon this important subject editorially. Yet millions of people were affected by this advance in price. But turn to the other pages of the paper and columns of space are devoted to base ball, and the man who secured the first ticket for the world's series, had his picture produced.

Editorially the same paper referred to the paramount importance of this great event, which alternately cost the people of New York and Boston $80,000, as compared with "hunger and privation and strife, stalking abroad," or "myriads of men clashing in warfare." All this because some few thousands in both cities think and pride themselves upon being base ball fans, but why they do it they themselves could not answer, as it neither benefits them or the community. What does the fan get out of it? He swells the bank roll of the high salaried players and adds to the dividens of the magnates.

The $15 a week clerk contributes to the diamond pin, gold watch or automobile which are showered upon the favorites and the favorite does not know him from a hole in the ground. And in return for this he has the privilege of receiving a gratuitous swat on the jaw if he criticises a bone head play or expresses disapproval of the favorite.

And all this is of more importance to the public in the minds of many newspaper managers than the rise in the price of coal, the stalking of hunger, privation and suffering and yet some people wonder at their inability to mould public opinion, than matters which affect the comfort and welfare of the millions. When a base ball series holds a higher position in the public mind than hunger, privation and suffering stalking abroad. or warfare with its possible toll of thousands of lives, its cruel demands of humanity, it is only human that we should pause and consider things "lest we forget."

One naturally wonders why our water should cost us so much more in Quincy than in other cities and towns using the same supply. It is not an intricate matter to understand if we give it a few moments careful thought.

All the water that comes into the Quincy mains is metered, and we have to pay for all the Metropolitan supply delivers, whether we use it and get paid for it, or waste it and get no pay.

According to a table on page 439 of the City Report of 1911, our average consumption of water per day is nearly three million gallons. We pay the state for that much, because that is what the state delivers into our mains. According to the above mentioned table over two and a quarter million gallons were wasted each day in 1911, and we used less than three quarters of a million gallons a day: that is, Quincy got paid for only 22 per cent of the water she had to pay for, and 78 per cent went to waste somewhere.

This seems to show an appalling condition of affairs, and if these figures are accurate, it is no wonder we have to pay dearly for our water.

If our system of mains and connections is in such a poor condition as to permit of such a leakage as these figures indicate, it seems as if the present administration could have performed a greater service by giving a little more attention to our practical needs in the water department, and talking less about our theoretical needs along our water front.

Furthermore, a glance at the pamphlet issued by the Department of Public Works, page 7, seems to show too large a difference between the retail and wholesale rates for water. As has already been pointed out the average consumer pays at the rate of nearly 40 cents a hundred cubic feet for his water. He would pay at the rate of 23 cents a hundred for his 7300 cubic feet if he used it all. As the rate of use increase, Quincy sells large quantities of water as low as 6 cents a hundred cubic feet. This latter rate was established about a year ago.

Now let us see how well Quincy can afford to sell water at this rate,—nearly four times smaller than the rate the average consumer pays.

Bonds maturing in 1911	$48,500.00
Int. on outstanding bonds	26,378.50
Maintenance	11,001.45
Clerical services	1,352.00
State assessment	54,410.43
Total expense	141,642.38

The total amount of water delivered into Quincy's mains for the year was about one billion sixty seven million gallons, so that the gross cost of Quincy's water for 1911 was .0132 per 100 gallons, or .0986 per 100 cubic feet.

If the water cost Quincy nearly TEN CENTS per 100 cubic feet, how can Quincy afford to sell it, even to large consumers at SIX CENTS per 100 cubic feet?

I am informed at the Water Department office that there are no consumers who happen to fall within the 7 cent or 8 cent rates, and that there is only one consumer taking at the 6 cent rate. But this one consumer—The Fore River Shipbuilding Co., uses at the rate of over 200,000 gallons a day (estimate of Water Department) or nearly 10 million cubic feet a year. a quite large proportion of our whole supply, if the figures are correct.

If Quincy is selling water to this very large consumer at almost four cents a hundred cubic feet less than cost, it seems to me that the average consumer has a good reason to complain at the excessively high minimum rate of $16 a year.

It also seems clear that this department of the administration needs a little careful attention. The water rates are established by the Commissioner of Public Works, who is under the appointment of the Mayor, and who has general supervision of highways, public buildings, bridges, sewers, water works and numerous other matters.

Personally it seems to me that the Commissioner of Public Works has more to attend to than ought reasonably to be expected of any one man, however able and industrious he may be, and perhaps an improvement in these conditions could be brought about through the establishment of a board of Water Commissioners of three men who would give considerable time and study to the conditions under which Quincy is laboring in this important department.

A comparative statement of collections made by the city in various departments published in the Ledger of October 2, shows a falling off of collections in the water department of nearly $3000 for 1912, while the normal increase seems to have been about $10,000.

Has this new 6 cent water rate been responsible for much of this falling off in the receipts?

Was this low rate the result of sheer incompetancy, or does the situation savor of special privilege?

Tea was served under the direction of Mrs. Edwin R. Olin, chairman of the Hospitality committee. Those presiding at the tea tables were: Mrs. George H. Hamblett, Mrs. Edward A. Haskell, Mrs. Franklin P. Virgin and Mrs. John G. Worster. The tables were decorated with yellow and white chrysanthemums, the club colors.

There was a beautiful display of autumn flowers and a large variety of vegetables from gardens belonging to school children in all parts of the town. This exhibition spoke volumes for the work done by the civics and conservation department, of which Mrs. Frank A. Bower is the chairman.

FAREWELL RECEPTION

To Deacon Blake More Like Breaking of a Loving Family

The farewell to Deacon W. F. Blake in Memorial church Thursday evening was one of the most touching services ever held in the church. It showed the esteem and love in which Mr. Blake was held in the community, and was more like the breaking up of a loving family than the removal of a church member.

The choir sang two of Mr. Blake's favorite selections and Miss Maud Read read a poem written by Spenser Apollonio for the occasion. Rev. T. W. Davison spoke of the love and affection which all felt for Mr. Blake, and the effectiveness of his life, influence and work in the church. It seemed as if no three however good they might be could fill his place.

Mr. Davison said that many had used the expression since last Sunday "The bottom has fallen out," meaning that the loss was great. But he expressed confidence that there would come a deeper consecration.

Mr. Blake spoke words of encouragement for the future of the church. He takes up his work in Toronto on Monday.

The State Board of Health has issued its edict relative to the usages of the common towel which is as follows:

It shall be unlawful to provide a common towel.

In a lavatory used in connection with any public institution, schoolhouse, hotel, restaurant, theatre or public hall;

In a lavatory used in connection with any railroad station, railroad car, steam or ferry boat.

The term "common towel" as used in these regulations shall be considered to mean a roller towel or a towel available for use by more than one person without being washed after such use.

OUR HOSPITAL IS COSMOPOLITAN

An Appeal to All:

We read that at a certain critical moment in the building of the Tower of Babel the workmen found themselves strangely handicapped by inability to understand each other. We are not informed how many tongues were permanently twisted on that historic occasion, but if a dynamite explosion had been added to the general confusion it is doubtful if the resulting company of hospital patients would have surpassed in their polyglot character, the annual output of Our Hospital.

The Hospital records of 1911 show that 409 patients were treated, and that in this number, aside from citizens of the United States, fourteen other nationalities were represented, several of them, of course being English-speaking.

The list includes natives of Canada, England, Scotland, Sweden, Finland, Italy. Germany, Hungary, Austria, Spain, Syria, Holland, Ireland, and Russia.

Here is a record which must appeal with convincing effect to our fellow-citizens of foreign birth who have made their homes in Quincy.

No race or creed is known within the Hospital walls, and every sick and wounded unfortunate is received there with equal welcome, no matter what his language, nor whether he is rich or poor.

Many of our foreign neighbors are not richly endowed with this worlds goods, and the above record shows that while just about one half of the patients were able to pay wholly or partly for their treatment, the other half enjoyed the benefits of the Hospital free.

So the Trustees of the Hospital look confidently for the hearty and united support of every nationality in the coming big financial campaign.

QUINCY PROGRESSIVES

plause) Taft is dead politically and there is not salt enough in the United States to save them. (Applause)

DR. McINTIRE.

Dr. McIntire said he did not select the office, but that he was drafted into the service. Every generation and age has its contest for human liberty. Go back in history and you will find we have had several contests.

In 1775 we fought for our liberty; in 1812 we renewed the conflict and again in 1861 the call to arms was sounded. In the 50 years that has passed since the contest the struggle has assumed a different shape. Industrial expansion has developed another kind of oligarchy; one of wealth, bosses, special privileges, one that by various means assisted in the enslavement of the people and achieved their purpose to a great extent. (Applause.)

It is because of this that the progressive party has existed. The tariff planks in the Democratic and Republican parties are insincere declarations. The progressive party plank is a new declaration of independence. If the party is carried into power every proposal will be carried into effect.

The policy of protection is acceptable and the only problem we now face is that of determining the tax and the only way to solve it is to appoint a committee to determine the differential between the cost of production in this and other countries.

Then we can take the tariff out of politics and overcome the juggling of the other two parties. (Applause.)

Dr. McIntire explained in detail the principles of Theodore Roosevelt, their reference to the progressive party, closed by urging all to be progressive in ideas and actions after talking an hour and a half.

JAMES P. ROBERTS.

James P. Roberts said he launched his campaign on the waves of the sea of discontent which was eddying around his opponent, Mr. Piper's record. The peaceful persuasion bill and the initiative and referendum were supported by Mr. Piper, but he did not support six other bills of value to the masses.

He voted against the workingmen's insurance bill, the establishment of a public utilities commission, senatorial primaries, the public ownership of gas and electric light plants, the public opinion bill and the corrupt practice act.

Mr. Roberts advocated a municipal ownership bill which would make it possible for cities and towns to run their own plants and went into detail considerably.

"I submit and ask for a response. Why should our mis-representative vote as he did?"

The people have been receiving the short end of the deal and when we have a tariff which does not reach down into the pay envelope of the poor man. I do not wonder that red flags are carried on the streets of Lawrence.

PROF. LARSEN.

Prof. Larsen exhibited a bandana, the gift of Roosevelt which he presented on his way to the Chicago convention and as he hung it under an electric light he was loudly cheered. He told why he was a progressive and his belief in Roosevelt. He said he had studied the works of Wilson, Taft and other statesmen, but Roosevelt alone measured up to the standards of a Gladstone. He spoke for the success of the progressive ticket and was given loud applause when he finished.

COL. KINCAIDE.

Col. Kincaide was given a most cordial reception and spoke as follows:

"It was not of my own solicitation that I became a candidate for the nomination of Congressman in the 14th district, but on the urgent appeal of large numbers of my fellow citizens and with a full realization of the responsibility, that such a decision on my part would incur.

"We are all progressives at heart, whether republicans or democrats, prohibitionists or social reformers. We are a part of the most progressive nation on earth, citizens of a great republic and protected by a progressive flag, that commands the respect of every nation throughout the world. We are proud of our heritage of American citizenship, giving equal rights to all mankind, the freedom of speech, clean ballot, and the will of the majority to carry on our popular government.

"But friends, when candidates for office to represent your will, must first receive the endorsement of the machine before their names are permitted to go before the people, when the fixed rule of succession becomes an unwritten law of politicians, when you of this great free republic, find your only choice for representatives in public office are from these machine made politicians, then indeed are you justified in raising your voice in opposition to a system of ring rule, which courts favors, permits of special privileges, and takes away from the people the possibility of electing men to voice their wishes, permitting an invisible government, in Washington and throughout our great States to dominate both parties to the advantage of big interests and the favored leaders and to the disadvantage of the great mass of people who are looked upon as the small interests.

"For half a century more or less, the responsibility and honor of American government have been shared by two parties, the Republican and Democratic. At no time in their history, as you are well aware, was either party responsive to the peoples will. When the people grew tired of one party, and turned it out of power, they found that they had not accomplished much, that it was merely a change of man, not of methods. One party appeared to be as bad as the other. They both fell under the influence and domination of interests which were selfish, corrupt and hostile to free government.

"Look back 20 years to the administration of Benjamin Harrison, and follow the country's history down to the present day. What do you find? Simply this, that the individual was nothing, the machine was everything. The trusts came into existence, and one of the first things they proceeded to do was to get control of both machines, so that which ever party got into power they could go on robbing the people and piling up wealth. They succeeded in getting on the statue books under the guise of protection, tariff laws which oppressed the average man and kept him bewildered at the same time. In other words the average man was being robbed and he wasn't sure of it.

"Humane legislature was practically unheard of. The rich were growing richer and the poor were growing poorer. Such my friends was the condition of things until about eleven years ago when the assassination of President McKinley brought to the front Theodore Roosevelt, and from the start his voice was raised in condemnation of corrupt politics. Little by little the people began to see the light. They began to ascertain their rights and insist on justice. Mr. Roosevelt deserves great credit for calling attention to that commandment which the politicians had forgotten 'Thou shalt not steal,' and he kept up his agitation so persistently that the crooked politicians and trusts began to think there was something in that old commandment after all. They kept on stealing but they were more cautious about it.

"Roosevelts great dream was to bring about an era of justice, common honesty, social reform and fair play. When he laid down the reins of government he had shaped his policies. He entrusted them to a man whom he thought equal to the task. The people have been disappointed. They now turn to their former champion and he has responded to the call.

"The Republican party is so dominated by the trusts, we can hope for nothing from that quarter, and the other party has generally failed to make good its pre-election promises. The only solution of the difficulty lies in a new party, a party of the people. Such a party is the Progressive Party. It aims to resume the work that Roosevelt began 10 years ago and left 4 years ago.

"I tell you gentlemen, as has been so admirably expressed, it is worth while to be on the field of Armageddon at sunrise. Its a priviledge to enroll in the new party.

Now what do I propose to do if nominated for Congress and elected? I propose to work earnestly and constantly to redeem the pledges in our platform, everyone of them.

If you wish to wrest the affairs of the American people from the evil hands of the invisible government behind the throne, and place things where they honestly belong.—If you wish to bring the big trusts and monopolies under government control permitting them to charge honest prices, and pay fair dividends, but preventing them from squeezing the life blood out of the people for the sole purpose of amassing fortunes that are almost incomprehensible to the human mind.—If you wish to remove the tariff from politics and the guiding hands of favored interests. If you wish to seperate the government from the dominating influence of Wall Street and desire our government to have a currency sound enough and elastic enough to cope with any emergency—If you favor a minimum wage for women which will provide a living scale of wages in any industry—If you favor greater social and industrial justice for all our citizens removing the burdens of sickness, old age and loss of labor through a system of government insurance and guidance adopted to American conditions. Then my friends vote for progressive candidates By so doing, your voice will be heard in Washington and in every Capitol in the nation. In short gentlemen—we hope to accomplish in the progressive party what the older parties have failed to do—and to insure to you a square deal to which your American citizenship justly entitles you.

In conclusion let me say that if chosen the standard bearer there will be no personal abuse in this campaign so far as the Bull Moose are concerned There will be nothing said before election that we will want to take back after election for

"The worlds a battle ground for all
Go forth and conquer if you can,
But if you win or if you fall
Be each—please God, a gentleman."

CAMPAIGN IN THE BAY STATE

Ball 's Finally Set Rolling by Hub Conventions

BOTH M ET ON SAME DAY

Republicans and Democrats Hear Speeches by Their Leader on Political Topics—Candidates of Both Parties Receive Delegates at the Customary "Night Before"

Boston, Oct. 5.—The Republican state convention was held in Tremont Temple this morning at 10:30 a. m. Senator Lodge presided and, in a carefully prepared speech, struck the keynote of the Massachusetts campaign. Joseph Walker and Lieutenant Governor Luce made speeches of acceptance. Representative Cox of Boston, as chairman of the committee on resolutions, presented the platform. Eighteen presidential electors will be chosen.

The Republican "night before" took place at the American House last night. There was the customary reception, with Senators Lodge and Crane, Joseph Walker, the candidate for governor; Lieutenant Governor Luce, Secretary of State Langtry, State Treasurer Stevens, State Auditor White, Attorney General Swift and the Republican congressmen and congressional candidates in the receiving line. The Lincoln club, of which Speaker Cushing is president, held its usual "night before" festivities and the senators and the various candidates were on the list to speak.

The Democratic state convention was held in Faneuil hall this forenoon. Mayor Fitzgerald presided. Charles S. Hamlin was chairman of the platform committee. Governor Foss was present a short time, although he had an afternoon engagement at Palmer. Eighteen presidential electors will be chosen.

A grand reunion of all the Boston Democrats and a reception to all the out-of-town delegates to today's state convention in this city was the feature of the annual Democratic "night before" last night at the Quincy house.

Governor Foss, David I. Walsh, the party nominee for lieutenant governor, and all the other candidates on the state ticket, as well as all the congressional, senatorial and house candidates attended. President Maynard had secured a large suite of rooms on the second floor of the hotel for the reception.

FLAG IN EVIDENCE

Feeling Against I. W. W. Leaders In Lawrence Has Increased

Lawrence, Mass., Oct. 5.—Behind the gay spetacle of American flags and bunting draped about Lawrence in a patriotic expression of protest against the red banners carried in the I. W. W. parade last Sunday, is a feeling of animosity that has a sinister aspect.

Threats are freely made that violence may be used to get the I. W. W. leaders out of the city. The talk comes from reliable persons, which makes the situation more serious.

Thousands of tiny flags were distributed throughout the city yesterday. This led to a few minor clashes between citizens and mill workers, although none were serious.

His daughter, who accompanied him from Salisbury, was with him when he died. His wife arrived a few moments afterwards.

NEVER SOUGHT CONTRIBUTIONS

Roosevelt Under No Obligation to Financial Interests

FUND RAISED BY HARRIMAN

Colonel Says It Was Used Expressly For New York State Campaign—Never Heard of Morgan's Contribution Until He Read It In Papers—Makes Sweeping Denial

Washington, Oct. 5.—Ex-President Roosevelt presented to the senatorial committee investigating campaign contributions evidence to refute charges that he had sought or accepted contributions from Standard Oil, E. H. Harriman and other financial interests in 1904, when he was elected to the presidency. This evidence was in the form of letters written by Roosevelt, and produced yesterday for the first time.

Mr. Roosevelt swore that he had never asked Harriman for a cent, and that he never heard of J. P. Morgan's $150,000 contribution until he read of it in the papers.

He admitted, however, that he had met John D. Archbald several times, and that he had the Oil Trust magnate as a guest at luncheon at his home at Oyster bay. He testified that he had on several occasions invited trust leaders to the White House.

On cross-examination, he admitted he knew in 1904 that Henry C. Frick had contributed heavily to his campaign fund, but denied knowledge of any Gould contribution. His general answer was "I don't know" when asked about specific trust donations.

The ex-president appeared before the committee at his own request, to answer to statements made in August by John D. Archbald, that the Standard Oil company had given $100,000 to the Republican fund in 1904, under the impression that Roosevelt knew of, and approved acceptance of the contribution.

Not only did Roosevelt deny this, but he put into the formal records of the committee a sweeping denial that he had ever solicited funds from anyone while president; that any money had been received by the 1904 campaign committee with an expressed or implied promise of favors from the administration; that excessive funds had been used in his 1904 or 1909 campaigns; or that money had ever been improperly used in his behalf, so far as he knew.

In reference to the Harriman fund of $240,000, raised in 1904, Roosevelt declared the statements of Morgan, Sheldon and others had fully corroborated his earlier statements that this fund was raised expressly for the New York state campaign, and had not been solicited by him for his own support in the fight for the Republican nomination that year.

"That $100,000 from Mr. Morgan probably meant less to him than the dollar I received from the widow of a veteran in the Soldiers' Home," explained the colonel.

Following are some of the snappy things Roosevelt said to the committee:

"If ever I find my virtue is so frail that it will not stand being brought in contact with trust magnates, labor leaders, or any one else, I'll get out of public life."

"But it is true that neither Mr. Bliss nor any other human being had the slightest influence with me so far as getting me to refrain from prosecuting any corporation for breaking the law."

"When the use of the word 'practical' is taken to indicate some improper motive on the part of the user, then I think there is some moral weakness in the man who makes the accusation."

"And I hold that the senate of the United States should throw Mr. Penrose out of the senate for the admission he made before this committee."

Expressions that brought laughter from committee and spectators interspersed the colonel's remarks throughout the day. Once he said: "I have actually sent for, while I was president, trust magnates, labor leaders, Socialists, John L. Sullivan, 'Battling' Nelson"—there was a pause—"and Dr. Lyman Abbott."

This was a response to questions as to the propriety of his sending for E. H. Harriman in 1904 to discuss matters of legislation or campaign affairs.

"It is true that when I was president I administered darkest Abyssinian treatment to the Standard Oil company, but it was because it needed it. If I am president again I will again administered to any corporation of the Standard Oil type that may need it."

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Mustaches Come Back at Harvard and Amuse Bostonese Maids—Everybody's Wearing Them at the Football Games, except the Football Girls—Hub Stores Report Great Sales of Out Sizes of Women's Stockings — Outdoor Living Has Done It—New and Improved Facilites for Reaching Stadium Interest all New England.

Spectators at the first Harvard football game were surprised and, be it said in a whisper, somewhat amused at the sudden development of mustaches among the entering and returning students. Even among the huskies of the team there were disturbing signs of a return to the fashion which many had supposed to be done away with forever, except among the old reliables of many years' growth. None of them, to be sure, looked very formidable—somewhere scarcely more than dinky little threats—but that they are here is undeniable. They look real cute, and one cannot but wish that they might remain in their present infantile purity, innocent of the soup-straining and tobacco-retaining proclivities of their full grown elders. However, whether or not the Boston girl approves of them, everybody's wearing one now.

The modern American girl is said to be the cause of manufacturers having to install new knitting machines in their mills to make extra large size stockings for her wear. Can it be that, after all, the late Alfred Dickens was right when he accused Boston women of having beefy ankles? Agents of the hosiery mills, at any rate, claim that while a few years ago, a woman would be stared at as crazy if she asked for a 10 1-2 size stocking, nowadays the demand is such that this size is carried in all grades. Time was when our mothers wore 8 1-2 ordinarily but now the demand for this size is comparatively small, 9, 9 1-2 and 10 being the most in use. This change is attributed to the fact that the American woman of today is much more athletic than her predecessors. The larger size stocking is not sold to any one class of women, but equally as many of the silk as of the cotton grades. And the manufacturers say the end is not yet—that soon the elevens will be on the market and in as much demand as the smaller sizes at present.

The backward pupil's problem may be solved by a novel experiment at one of the grammar schools of a Boston suburb. A special teacher has been appointed to give instruction to thirteen pupils who for various reasons were unable last spring to pass the examinations allowing them to proceed into the ninth grade work. These pupils are expected to graduate with the ninth grade next June, nevertheless, as a result of the special training which they will receive through the winter. Some are cases of children losing a good start in a given subject on account of being out sick when the fundamental principles were taught; some of children backward in a single study; some because of home conditions; or because of a dozen and one different reasons which in themselves should not be allowed to keep a child in subsection while its companions pass on to higher grades. Keen interest is attaching to this experiment and if it proves as successful as hoped the plan will doubtless be extended into other schools and made a part of the general system.

Easy access to the big games at the Harvard stadium is assured this year by the new arrangements which the Boston Elevated Railway Company is installing for handling crowds through the Cambridge Subway. The Yale game is played at New Haven but the contests with Princeton and Dartmouth in November will normally fill the big amphi-theatre to overflowing. The service in former years has always been regarded as remarkably effective, since the traction company by exercise of foresight and of painstaking methods has managed to keep its hundreds of cars moving to and from the stadium without a single record of a bad delay or tie-up in many seasons. From the nature of the case, however, the bevy of cars that have focused on the Brighton part of the university grounds from Park street and Hanover street have generally moved in a stately procession at moderate speed. The Cambridge subway, it is expected, will enable the company to get a heavy quota of the football enthusiasts from Park street to the Stadium in about quarter of an hour, whereas formerly the sagacious allowed at least 45 minutes for the trip. To facilitate the handling at the Cambridge end the company is building a commodious platform on the Boylston street side of its storage yard where the subway cars are kept. This new terminall, as inspection during the construction process shows, is no improvised emergency structure, but a solid concrete affair, long enough to accommodate eight car trains, wide enough for the comfortable passage of a vast throng and with capacious exits to the street through an ornamental brick-and-concrete fence with which the entire storage yard is being surrounded. Architecturaliy the treatment of this utillitarian proposition is consistent with the high standard which the traction corporation has set in all its recent work, making a conspicuous addition to the attractiveness of the stretch of the Charles River in the neighborhood of Soldiers' Field. The platform itself is scheduled to be in readiness for this season's more important games. The improved facilities will mean that thousands of New England people can attend the most notable of autumnal athletic contests in a degree of comfort never before experienced. Football's gala days are good days to be in Boston.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Mrs. Keziah Coffin, supposed widow, is arranging to move from Trumet to Boston, following the death of her brother, for whom she had kept house. Grace Van Horne, ward of Capt. Eben Hammond, leader of the "Come-outer" religious sect, offers to assist her financially if she will remain. She declines. Kyan Pepper, widower, offers marriage, and is indignantly refused.

CHAPTER II—Capt. Elkanah Daniels, leader of the Regular church, offers Keziah a place as housekeeper for the new minister, and she decides to remain in Trumet.

CHAPTER III—Keziah takes charge of Rev. John Ellery, the new minister, and gives him advice as to his conduct toward members of the parish. Ellery causes a sensation by attending a "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER IV—Ellery's presence is bitterly resented by Eben Hammond, leader of the meeting. Grace apologizes for her guardian and Ellery escorts her home in the rain. Capt. Nat Hammond, Eben's son, becomes a hero by bringing the packet into port safely through fog and storm. Ellery finds Keziah writing a letter to some one, inclosing money in response to a demand. She is curiously startled when informed of the arrival of Nat.

CHAPTER V—Nat calls on Keziah, and it develops that they have been lovers since youth. Daniels remonstrates with Ellery for attending "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER VI—Ellery is caught by the tide and is rescued by Nat. They become friends.

CHAPTER VII—Ellery meets Grace while walking in the fields Sunday, and learns that she walks there every Sunday.

CHAPTER VIII—The clergyman takes dinner Sundays with the Daniels. Annabel, the captain's daughter, exerts herself to make an impression on him. She notices with vexation his desire to get away every Sunday at a certain time. She watches him through a spy glass.

CHAPTER IX—Nat again importunes Keziah to marry him. He says he has had a quarrel with his father, who wants him to marry Grace.

CHAPTER X—Ellery asks Grace to marry him. She confesses that she loves him, but says she fears to displease her guardian, who has been very kind to her, and asks time to think about it. Elkanah Daniels tells Eben about the meetings between Ellery and Grace. Eben declares he will make Grace choose between him and the preacher. Grace finds him in a faint, following the excitement of Elkanah's visit.

CHAPTER XI—Just before he dies Eben exacts a promise from Nat and Grace that they will marry.

CHAPTER XII—Keziah breaks the news to Ellery and later he receives a note from Grace saying she is to marry Nat, and asking him not to try to see her again. Keziah tells the story of her own marriage with a man who turned out to be a good-for-nothing, and who was reported to have been lost at sea, and of her love for Nat, whom she cannot marry because the husband is alive. Ellery sees in the story a lesson in devotion to duty and decides to remain and attend to his duties.

CHAPTER XIII—Captain Nat sails for Manila to be gone two years. He says he and Grace have decided not to marry until he returns.

CHAPTER XIV—Nat is overdue, and it is feared that he has been lost at sea. Keziah gets a letter from her husband saying he is coming back. Grace goes on a visit to relatives of the Hammonds.

The sick man was raving in delirium when he reached him, but the sound of the water lapping the sides of the saucepan brought him to himself. He seized Ellery by the arm and drank and drank. When at last he desisted, the pan was half empty.

The minister laid him gently back in the bunk and stepped to the foot of the ladder for breath. This made him think of the necessity for air in the place and he remembered the little window. It was tightly closed and rusted fast. He went up to the deck, found a marlin spike, and, returning, broke the glass. A sharp, cold draught swept through the forecastle, stirring the garments hanging on the nails.

An hour later, two dories bumped against the side of the San Jose. Men, talking in low tones, climbed over the rail. Burgess was one of them; ashamed of his panic, he had returned to assist the others in bringing the brigantine into a safer anchorage by the inlet.

Dr. Parker, very grave but business-like, reached the deck among the first.

"Mr. Ellery," he shouted, "where are you?"

The minister's head and shoulders appeared at the forecastle companion. "Here I am, doctor," he said. "Will you come down?"

The doctor made no answer in words, but he hurried briskly across the deck. One man, Ebenezer Capen, an old fisherman and ex-whaler from East Trumet, started to follow him, but he was the only one. The others waited, with scared faces, by the rail.

"Get her under way and inshore as soon as you can," ordered Dr. Parker. "Ebenezer, you can help. If I need you below, I'll call."

The minister backed down the ladder and the doctor followed him. Parker bent over the bunk for a few moments in silence.

"He's pretty bad," he muttered. "Mighty little chance. Heavens, what a den! Who broke that window?"

"I did," replied Ellery. "The air down here was dreadful."

The doctor nodded approvingly. "I guess so," he said. "It's bad enough now. We've got to get this poor fellow out of here as soon as we can or he'll die before tomorrow. Mr. Ellery," he added sharply, "what made you do this? Don't you realize the risk you've run?"

"Some one had to do it. You are running the same risk."

"Not just the same, and, besides, it's my business. Why didn't you let some one else, some one we could spare— Humph! Confound it, man! didn't you know any better? Weren't you afraid?"

Dr. Parker Looked at Him.

His tone rasped Ellery's shaken nerves.

"Of course I was," he snapped irritably. "I'm not an idiot."

"Humph! Well, all right; I beg your pardon. But you oughtn't to have done it. Now you'll have to be quarantined. And who in thunder I can get to stay with me in this case is more than I know. Just say smallpox to this town and it goes to pieces like a smashed egg. Old Eb Capen will help, for he's had it, but it needs more than one."

"Whore are you going to take—him?" pointing to the moaning occupant of the bunk.

"To one of the empty fish shanties on the beach. There are beds there, such as they are, and the place is secluded. We can burn it down when the fuss is over."

"Then why can't I stay? I shall have to be quarantined, I know that. Let me be the other nurse. Why should anyone else run the risk? I have run it. I'll stay."

Dr. Parker looked at him. "Well!" he exclaimed. "Well! I must say, young man, that you've got— Humph! All right, Mr. Ellery; I'm much obliged."

CHAPTER XVI.

In Which Ebenezer Capen Is Surprised.

Before sunset that afternoon the San Jose was anchored behind the point by the inlet. The fishing boats changed moorings and moved farther up, for not a single one of their owners would trust himself within a hundred yards of the stricken brigantine.

The largest of the beach shanties, one which stood by itself a quarter of a mile from the light, was hurriedly prepared for use as a pesthouse and the sick sailor was carried there on an improvised stretcher. Dr. Parker and Ellery lifted him from his berth and, assisted by old Ebenezer Capen, got him up to the deck and lowered him into the dory. Ebenezer rowed the trio to the beach and the rest of the journey was comparatively easy.

The shanty had three rooms, one of which was given up to the patient, one used as a living room, and, in the third, Capen and the minister were to sleep. Mattresses were procured, kind-hearted townspeople donated cast-off tables and chairs, and the building was made as comfortable as it could be, under the circumstances. Sign boards, warning strangers to keep away, were erected, and in addition to them, the Trumet selectmen ordered ropes stretched across the lane on both sides of the shanty. But ropes and signs were superfluous. Trumet in general was in a blue funk and had no desire to approach within a mile of the locality. Even the driver of the grocery cart, when he left the day's supply of groceries, pushed the packages under the ropes, yelled a hurried "Here you be!" and, whipping up his horse, departed at a rattling gallop.

The village sat up nights to discuss the affair and every day brought a new sensation. The survivors of the San Jose's crew, a wretched, panic-stricken quartette of mulattos and Portuguese, were apprehended on the outskirts of Denboro, the town below Trumet on the bay side, and were promptly sequestered and fumigated, pending shipment to the hospital at Boston. Their story was short but gruesome. The brigantine was not a Turks Islands boat, but a coaster from Jamaica. She had sailed with a small cargo for Savannah. Two days out and the smallpox made its appearance on board. The sufferer, a negro foremast hand, died. Then another sailor was seized and also died. The skipper, who was the owner, was the next victim, and the vessel was in a state of demoralization which the mate, an Englishman named Bradford, could not overcome. Then followed days and nights of calm and terrible heat, of pestilence and all but mutiny. The mate himself died. There was no one left who understood navigation. At last came a southeast gale and the San Jose drove before it. Fair weather found her abreast the Cape. The survivors ran her in after dark, anchored, and reached shore in the longboat. The sick man whom they had left in the forecastle was a new hand who had shipped at Kingston. His name was Murphy, they believed. They had left him because he was sure to die, like the others, and, besides, they knew some one would see the distress signals and investigate. That was all, yes. Santa Maria! was it not enough?

Captain Zeb Mayo went about cheering for his parson. Mrs. Mayo cooked delicacies to be pushed under the ropes for the minister's consumption. The parish committee, at a special session, voted an increase of salary and ordered a weekly service of prayer for the safe delivery of their young leader from danger.

Keziah Coffin was, perhaps, the one person most disturbed by her parson's heroism. She would have gone to the shanty immediately had not Dr. Parker prevented. Even as it was, she did go as far as the ropes, but there she was warded off by Ebenezer until Ellery came running out and bade her come no nearer. Keziah, after more expostulation, went back to the parsonage. She wrote to Grace and told her the news of the San Jose, but she said nothing of the minister's part in it. "Poor thing!" sighed Keziah, "she's bearin' enough already."

BLAME PLACED ON ENGINEER

Wreck Caused by Skipping Signals Placed Aganist Him

TESTIMONY BEFORE CORONER

Repeated Warning by Head of Construction Gang Unheeded by Clark, Who Took Cross-Over at Speed of Sixty Miles an Hour—Was Leaning Out of Cab at Time of Disaster

Westport, Conn., Oct. 5.—The preliminary investigation into the wreck on the New York, New Haven and Hartford, in which seven persons were killed and two score maimed, placed the blame on the shoulders of George L. Clark, the engineer who was killed.

Bartley H. Gordon, foreman of a construction gang, under examination by Coroner Phelan, stated with emphasis that he believed the engineer was either dead or unconscious minutes before his train took the switch of the crossover, and charged that if the man was not he had deliberately skipped two danger signals set against him between 2000 and 3000 feet apart.

"I saw the engineer leaning out of the cab watching the track ahead," said Gordon, "and waved at him repeatedly, but he paid no attention to me. When he took that crossover he was going at least sixty miles an hour, whereas the rules of the road forbid greater than fifteen miles an hour at such crossings."

For some unexplained reason, Clark drove his heavy train at top speed into the crossover. The engine leaped the rails after crossing a bridge spanning a roadway, and toppled on its side half way down a fifteen foot embankment. Almost immediately the boiler burst. In an instant the baggage and mail cars plunged down the embankment to the roadway, where they were splintered.

The first Pullman car leaped on top of the engine and burst into flames, incinerating some of the imprisoned passengers. Debris from the explosion scattered for hundreds of yards and many windows in the vicinity were smashed.

The baggage car completely catapulted the engine, but a baggage man and a newsboy in it escaped with their lives. The four chair cars next following were overturned, and in the first of these occurred the loss of life. The three day coaches, although derailed, remained upright. To add to the distress the wreck carried down the poles carrying wires alongside of the tracks and delay ensued before outside assistance could be secured.

In respect to the wreck, Vice President Horn of the New Haven road says:

"In this particular case, the 'home' and 'distant' signals were set against the train, which was the second section of train No. 53. The first section went through the crossover under the rules; the second section ignored both signals and struck the crossover at a speed estimated by many at close to sixty miles per hour, while the engineer has been cauticend to take the crossover at fifteen miles per hour.

"The accident happened in daylight. The engineer could see the distant signal 4000 feet before he reached it, and after he passed the distant signal, had 3000 feet to go and bring his train under control before he reached the home signal.

"We have, at the present writing, no way of knowing why the engineer ignored these two signals. We know from statements of signal men who happened to be on the wrecked train and made a careful investigation immediately after the wreck, that the signals and track were in standard working condition. We also know that the first section taking the train thirteen minutes ahead of the wrecked train, in using the signals exactly as the wrecked train should have used them, went through in safety."

With the exception of the registered letters all the mail was lost on the New York express which was wrecked at Westport.

According to Assistant Superintendent Shepardson of the railway mail service, the mail was burned when the steel mail car was shoved up against the firebox of the derailed locomotive. The thoughtfulness of one of the injured mail clerks, who took the registered mail pouch with him when crawling from the wreckage, was the only thing that saved that small portion of the mail. Most of the lost mail was Boston matter addressed to New York; Worcester, Springfield and Hartford mail was also included.

Doctor Hits Childless Rich

CINDER TRACK FOR RUNNERS

With An Athletic Field Within the Enclosure

AT MERRYMOUNT PARK

Active work has been commenced and is now underway on the new Athletic field for which the Council made a special appropriation earlier in the season. The new field is located in that part of Merrymount park adjoining the street railway car barn. The location in a natural amphitheatre the high bank on the Hancock street side of the new field affording an unobstructed view of the new field, which is located at the bottom of the hill on a level spot.

In the field is to be a quarter mile cinder running track, inside of which is a grassed plot which will make an ideal foot ball field. The work is being done under the supervision of the Park Commissioners who will have charge of the field. WALKOVER FOR QUINCY

Hingham Made Poor Showing Against the Local Boys

FINAL SCORE 26 TO 6

Quincy high had no trouble beating the Hingham boys at Merymount Park Friday afternoon and when time was called they had rolled up a score of 26 to 6.

The only touchdown for Hingham was made by Cross who picked up the ball after Crane had fumbled on the first kick off. Crane however overcame his nervousness and displayed great ability for the rest of the game. All the boys were in for a win and played a snappier game than last Tuesday. Sam Prout had to carry the ball less and it is evident someone is studying the signals.

This was Hingham's first game of the season although coach C. Jenney said that they had played a few class games. Mitchell played a good game at full for the visitors and towards the last of the game seemed to be suffering from a kick in the head. When the last touchdown was made he was not in the scrimmage, but the lineup was so fast his absence was not noticed.

The field was very dusty and it was disagreeable to the players and onlookers alike. The day was a trifle too warm for football.

Mecca kicked long ones on the start off and sent the ball over the bar twice. He missed two difficult angles however.

Quincy kicked to Hingham who fumbled the ball, recovered it and were held for downs. They were penalized five yards for offside play on a punt. Mitchell kicked to Crane who caught the ball on the 15 yard line, started towards the sidelines and into a bunch of the visitors, one of which butted him. He fumbled on the 20 yard line and Cross of Hingham picked the ball up and crossed for the first touchdown. Umpire Manning ruled that the ball was set and that they could not kick the goal.

Hingham kicke to R. Larkin who made 20 yards. Melville and Murphy rushed for first down. Crane plugged centre for a gain, Melville worked around the left for a gain and Crane made first down. Mecca went around left for no gain, Murphy around right, White around right for first down. Murphy went through tackle and Melville through right tackle for first down. Quincy lost five yards on offside play. Paul Larkin shot around the left, Brown went through the right guard, and the period closed with Quincy on the 15 yard line.

Crane started the second period by plugging through the left for five yards, and was held on the next rush. Crane made three yards on the next rush and Sam Prout crossed for the first score. Mecca missed the bar.

Quincy kicked to Hingham, Fee went through the right tackle, Mecca caught Mitchell after a long run and tackled for no gain. Mitchell punted to Crane on centre line who carried the ball 20 yards without any interference. Crane went through the right tackle, White stole around the right tackle and Mecca cleared the right end for first down. Crane pushed through the right tackle, Melville went around the left end for 15 yards, Crane plugged for two yards, Sam carried for two yards, Murphy lost two yards and a forward to Mecca was not allowed for interference.

Hingham started third period by kicking to Paul Larkin who made a 25 yard run. Melville plugged for five yards and Paul circled right end for first down. Crane went through the left tackle, then through right tackle and White plunged through left guard for first down. Sam made a yard, Crane went through right tackle for five yards and then made the first down on plunging. Mecca circled the left end for five yards, Mecca passed to Paul who made 10 yards around the left and Brown crossed the line for a score. Mecca missed the goal.

Melville got the ball on the kick off to Hingham when Henderson fumbled and Paul made a 35 yard run across the line for a score. Mecca missed the goal.

Quincy kicked to Mitchell on the 20 yard line who carried the ball 10 yards. Andrews went through the right tackle, Thaxter went around the left and Hingham was given 15 yards for the illegal use of hands. Melville jumped and caught the ball on a forward and Hingham went outside and the play not allowed. Bergan made three yards through left tackle, Mitchell shoved through the right tackle and was started for the line but Mecca dropped him.

The last period opened with the ball in Hingham's possesion on the 20 yard line. Mitchell dropped back for a place kick and Quincy broke through and tackled him for 15 yard loss. Hingham made a forward which was not allowed and Mitchell punted to Crane on a bum pass. Murphy made five yards through right tackle, Crane plugged the line for three yards, and then made the first down. Brown circled the right end and and Quincy was penalized five yards for offside play. Mecca circled the right for five yards and Paul was held when he tried the left end. Crane pushed for three yards and made first down.

Hingham was penalized for offside play. Murphy made 10 yards, Dave pushed for five yards and Crane made two yards. Paul circled the left for the first down. Dave plugged for five yards, White made 10 yards through the right tackle and Mecca carried the ball to within two yards of the line. Crane went over on the next play and Mecca kicked the goal.

Quincy kicked to Hingham and after a few scrimmages time was called.

ALL LANDED SAFELY

Tax Collector Oscar S. Sandberg and a party of friends were given an involuntary bath Sunday afternoon when within two feet of the landing float at the Quincy yacht club house. In the party with Mr. Sandberg were Theodore Hermanson, John Robertson and Sven Swanson.

The party had been out for a sail in Mr. Sandberg's power boat Naughty Girl and were on their way to the float in the tender. When about two feet from the float one of the party stood up ready to jump off. This caused the tender to tip and before it could be righted all four were in the water. All were good swimmers and were in no danger, the ducking being the only discomfort they experienced.

Walke will Be at Fore River to Have Repairs Made

It is thought that the torpedo boat destroyer Walke, on which the forward part of one of its turbine engines blew out at Newport last week during speed trials causing four deaths will be sent to the Fore River for repairs. It is estimated by the Board of Survey that the cost of repairs will be more than $35,000. She will take part in the review of the Atlantic fleet in New York and will doubtless be sent to the Fore River where she was built. The Walke is still able to go under her own steam and make 20 knots an hour.

KINCAIDE SCORED EASY VICTORY FOR CONGRESSIONAL NOMINATION

Quincy Progressives Stood By the Local Man Almost to a Unit

Candidate Will Enter Upon Aggressive Campaign

The returns from the Progressive caucuses throughout the fourteenth congressional district which were held Saturday evening showed that outside of Quincy there was apparently but little interest. The caucus was to select a party candidate for Congressman and Col. Henry L. Kincaide was an easy winner over Mayor Charles Williamson of Brockton. The defeat of Major Williamson it is claimed by the Brockton progressives to be due to the slowness of the party machinery.

Following the rally and flag raising at Brockton enrollment cards were distributed among the audience and it is said that some 400 were signed. It was stated that the signers would be allowed to vote in the caucus Saturday but the cards were not received at the progressive headquarters in Boston at the time ordered and the signers were therefore barred from taking part in the caucus. As a result the vote in Brockton was small, Major Williamson receiving 182 and Col. Kincaide 12.

The movement however was not sufficiently developed in some of the towns of the 14th district with results that no caucus was held in the towns of Avon, Canton, Dedham, Milton, Randolph, Sharon, Stoughton and Westwood.

In Abington it was reported that there were about 150 enrolled progressives, both men and women, and on the night of the caucus a house to house canvas was made with automobiles to get out the vote. The polls closed at 8.30 but the caucus officers did not atempt to count the ballots that night.

In Quincy there was little excitement about the polls. Several automobiles were in use and an effort was made to get out a large vote. A visit to the polls in City Hall where three wards were voting showed nothing unusual and quite a large number of women who had been registered exercised the right of suffrage accorded them by the progressives and cast their first ballot in a caucus for any candidate. It is not the first time that many of them had voted however for there are a few women who exercise the right to vote at the municipal elec-

THAT BOY TUESDAY.

What promises to be one of the most interesting and instructive addresses of the season will be given in Bethany church, Tuesday evening, by Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts of Washington. Through some misunderstanding announcements of this meeting sent from Washington gave the date as this evening. Dr. Craft's will speak on "That Boy and Girl of Yours," and according to reports from other places in New England where he has been, what he doesn't know about them, isn't worth considering. At recent meetings in Providence, New London, and Boston he made a very favorable impression upon large audiences and held them throughout his address by his keen wit, his apt illustration and his wisdom based upon twenty years experience in his work.

Dr. Crafts is superintendent of the International Reform Bureau which has done great work in pushing through laws aimed at the white slave traffic, gambling, and other powerful factors in immorality throughout the country. Out of his wide experience Dr. Crafts has obtained a vast fund of information which he serves up in an interesting manner. Parents, teachers and all others interested in the moral welfare of the youth of the city should attend this meeting and hear from the lips of a leader, things that they should know about the situation in this country.

MAC HOPEFUL OF ELECTION

Assures South Quincy People that He Has Hold on Senate Seat

"The flattering support I am receiving all over the first Norfolk district assures me of my election to the senate at the November election," were the opening words of John J. McDevitt at a large open air rally at Liberty Square, South Quincy, this noon. He was given loud applause and spoke on measures of interest to the laboring man.

He took up in detail his advocacy of a bill to eliminate party designations, saying that the men of this city have been handicapped in the past by being enrolled as members of the party while their sympathies were with another. He feels that the voter should be given some consideration and states that he will do all he can to amend the present Luce law with regard to primary election enrollment.

He said that in his voting against the initiative and referendum bill, Roger Wolcott of Milton misrepresented the constituency and that similar acts had characterized his administration.

Mr. McDevitt spoke on the bill prohibiting young girls from entering Chinese restaurants, saying that the bill which was discussed in the 1910 session of the legislature was killed because of an influence brought to bear on the representatives by the vice trust and that if all the parents in this and other cities knew the purport of the bill they would do all they could to place in office, men who would give it their unqualified support.

This evening the candidate will address a meeting at Canton. Other speakers will be Edward Gilmore of Brockton, democratic candidate for congress from the 14th district and Dr. J. Ratigan of Hyde Park, democratic candidate for the governor's council from that district.

ARRANGES OWN SURPRISE PARTY

T. Wood, who boards with Mrs. Margaret E. Parnaby, 162 Main street had the novel experience of arranging his own surprise party and purchasing the gift to be presented to him, believing all the time that the surprise party was to be on a friend. The affair was held Saturday night. Woods thinking the party was for his chum, went around issuing the invitations so as to be sure there would be a good crowd present and was the committee selected to buy the watch. His surprise can better be imagined than described when the tables were so neatly turned upon him and he was presented with the time piece. The young people had a jolly good time. Refreshments were served and Mrs. Paranaby was assisted by her daughter, Mrs. H. Newson in caring for the guests.

One of the young men looked like a miniature I. W. W. parade, with the flaming red necktie he wore, which created a sensation. Among those present were Claude Brown, Clark Brown, Ernest Stirling of East Braintree, T. Wood, W. D. Mulling, C. Sandblow, J. Collins, J. Muir, W. Shaw, R. W. Parnaby, T. J. Parnaby, and B. Parnaby, of Quincy. Misses Ruth Thayer and Gertie Woltke of East Weymouth, Misses Minnie Atkinson, Maud Atkinson, Ethel Greenhalch, Madge Peterson, Annie Guthrie, Lillian Ridge, Sadie Mullen and Dorothy and Janet Parnaby.

MAST SNAPPED LIKE PIPE STEM

CARRYING IT OVERBOARD

A sudden puff of wind Sunday afternoon came near resulting seriously for the party on board the yacht Busy Bee while she was between Grape and Sheep islands. The yacht was on the port tack when a heavy gust struck her and her mast snapped off like a pipe stem, before sail could be taken in.

Luckily the stick fell forward although those standing near the wheel had a narrow escape as the boom swished by their heads. A passing power boat took the Busy Bee in tow and landed her at the Quincy Yacht club float. In the boat at the time were Frank S. Hardwick, George Newcomb, Miss Florence Wyman and Miss Nickerson of Dorchester.

Had the stick fallen aft it would probably have struck some of the party and serious results would have followed.

AGED WOMAN LAID AT REST

The funeral of Mrs. Catherine Brown, wife of Henry T. Brown, Sr., took place this morning from the home of her husband, Chestnut Street. A high mass of requiem was celebrated at St. John's church by Rev. John T. Casey. Burial was at St. Mary's cemetery.

Mrs. Brown was in her 92nd year and was one of the oldest residents of this city. She lived in Quincy about 65 years and was active in the early days of the town. She leaves a husband, Henry T. Brown who is in his 82nd year, two sons and a daughter.

There was a profusion of floral tributes. The pall bearers were her four nephews, Andrew Scully, Michael Scully, Timothy Sullivan and Michael T. Sulivan.

THE CHAPERON TO BE STAGED

Young Ladies of St. Margaret's Guild in the Cast

The St. Margarets Guild of the Christ Church are to stage "The Chaperon," on the evening of November 22. The production will be under the direction of Mrs. A. Isabella Davis, October 15, Mrs. Davis will hold tryouts for the parts and nearly all of the young ladies of the guild have signified their intention of trying for a part.

The play is a semi-comic, moderately serious representation of what occurs when a chaperone is thrust upon a party of young ladies, and in this case the unwelcome offender is a foreigner. The play abounds with funny situations and gives promise of being one of the best mirth producers ever given in this city.

At the regular meeting on October 18, Mrs. Walter E. Burke will entertain the members. Mrs. Burke has in the past, always presented an original novelty and it is expected that she will not be lacking in her usual cleverness on this evening.

The meeting Friday, October 11, will be devoted to work.

The American Lady Shoe
$3.50 and $4.00

Every woman is interested in the question of becoming footwear. The selection of the right shoe insures the finishing touch to her costume. An ungainly foot will mar the prettiest gown and make the daintiest foot unattractive.

The makers of the American Lady Shoe are leaders in the manufacture of fine footwear for women.

At my store you will find the new models with new toe shapes, and every shoe gives a degree of comfort that is unapproached. The "breaking-in" ordeal is entirely done away with.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Was the senate committee really conducting that hearing or T. R. directing it?

Lawrence has at last asserted her loyalty to the stars and stripes.

The new holiday will make its appearance Saturday.

Will it be the Giants or the Red Sox tomorrow?

Boston may have a statue of Columbus which will rival the famous Liberty statue in New York harbor.

Saturday was certainly a better summer day than many experienced earlier in the season.

It is pretty easy to say a dead man lied especially when he left no papers as there is little chance for any one to say "You're Another."

That hotel guest who went to dinner, leaving the door of her room ajar, with valuable jewels in sight was inviting robbery all right.

Aeroplane flying as a mere amusement for a crowd should be checked. Too many lives have been sacrificed for such an attraction.

How can Sulzer reconcile his press bureau announcement that he did not seek the gubernatorial nomination, with his exclamation, "It was a long time coming," when told the news of the convention?

Now that both the Republican and Democrats have formally launched their candidates, the campaign promises to be red hot for the next few weeks.

Peace is in sight between Turkey and Italy, but war cloud still hovers over the land of the Crescent.

Another railroad engineer is reported to have ignored signals, and he paid the penalty with his own life, and there were several other innocent victims.

No Glidden tour this year, all because those interested do not want to be too far, and long from home with a National election coming on.

The Sons of Jove plan a big time and there is a heavy scramble for the throne of Jupiter among the members.

Ex-King Manuel declares he loves his Portuguese people, but they cannot be said to return the bond of affection to any marked degree.

The legislature next year would make no mistake in making a uniform time for primary voting.

Those New York papers who have loud in their proclamation that Sulzer was a joke may change their tune.

The four Ettor jurors already chosen are having a fine vacation at the expense of Essex county. While in the custody of an official, they go around to shows and visit points of interest, probably a good deal more than if they were paddling their own canoe. There are few however who envy them, their good with the hard time is coming to them later.

Better luck for Mrs. Wheeler, the next time is the ardent wish of her many friends and admirers.

ANOTHER DEATH.

Another death, which it is believed is a part of the New York police graft investigation, and trial of Lieut. Becker, another chapter in the Rosenthal tragedy occurred Saturday night, when Jack Zelig, the man who is supposed to have furnished the gun men, who did for Rosenthal, was murdered while riding on an electric car. The murderer claimed that his act was in the nature of an retaliation as Zelig had held him up earlier in the day and at the point of a revolver robbed him of $400.

As the victim had less than $3 on his person at the time he met his death, a few hours after the alleged hold up, there would seem reasonable grounds to assume that the hold up story was manufactured to shift the real cause of this second tragedy.

The district attorney's office inclines to this view of the case. One man a witness in the case made a getaway to Europe and declined to return to testify. His grounds that fear animated him in this determination in the light of the killing of Zelig appear tenable. If the New York gangsters, or any one responsible for the graft condition which existed in New York, plan to seal all the lips of the material witnesses in this noted case with death, they have undertaken quite a proposition. In this last murder the perpetrator was not successful in making his escape. His possible fate may lesson the courage of others who may be similarly inclined, and in time a period of peace, may reign in New York, which it seems is still very much stirred up over the disclosures already made and those which are promised.

FEAR OF VIOLENCE.

The I. W. W. leaders now at Lawrence have in an open letter to Governor Foss sought his protection, as they fear violence. The letter contains these phrases, "there is every reason to believe active violence against the I. W. W. members and sympathizers, unless some action is taken by the state looking to the protection of life and property." Again, "should you be desirous of fulfilling the function of your public office and exercising the power vested in you to protect life and property, you can count upon us to assist you in every way."

Whether the authors of this letter had anything to do with the threats of a march upon the Salem court house to release prisoners on trial or not, does not appear, but the threat made was not repudiated by Haywood or others who now fear of violence from the other side when the statement was made to them.

The appearance of the state militia in February to protect the lives and property of those who desired the right to go to work, was not to say the least, endorsed by the I. W. W.

There has been little on the part of the people of Lawrence, to indicate violence to any law abiding citizens.

If a desire on the part of the people to show respect for the United States flag, in preference to any other emblem, is looked upon as violence, there is not much danger of any one getting hurt or being consumed with fear.

INVESTIGATING WRECK.

Quite two months have passed since the railroad tragedy near South Boston, where eight people lost their lives and many others were severely injured. At the time several investigations were started, the effort to probe the cause of the train leaving the rail, but very little was learned. It is doubtful if any more than a casual report was made by some of the investigating bodies. The engineer and firemen were both killed and the wreckage of the engine was of such a character that it was quite impossible for any evidence of an enlightening nature to be procured from that source. Still the public would probably like to hear something as to the conclusions reached.

RATHER NEAT ACT.

That was rather a neat act of the New York street railway to permit sailors of the warships to ride free while the ships were in port during the coming mobilization. But the naval department could not permit the men to accept the free transportation, owing to a 1906 law, prohibiting the acceptance of voluntary service for the government. There have been instances however where sailors have been furnished with free riding since that law went into effect. For instance when war ships are designated to assist in celebrations at any given point, committees of municipalities provide cars for the transportation of the sailors to and from the landing place to the point where their presence is desired, but evidently free riding on street cars, when not on duty is different from the cases cited.

Undoubtedly New York will make it up to the jackies in some other way.

NIGHT JOY RIDE BRINGS DEATH

Nine Young Men Killed in Automobile Accident

CAR SIDE SWIPES ANOTHER

Plunges Over Fifty-Foot Embankment and Drops Into Coal Yard While Speeding at Rate of Fifty Miles an Hour—Party were on Way Home From Road House

Philadelphia, Oct. 7.—Nine young men were hurled to almost instant death when an automobile crashed through iron rail of the viaduct which carries Thirty-third street over the Pennsylvania railroad tracks, and dropped fifty feet into a coal yard below.

Eight of the victims, none of whom was more than 27 years old, died instantly, while the other lived only a few hours after he was taken to a hospital.

The machine, speeding at a fifty mile-an-hour rate, was racing with another car. It struck the rear wheel of another car coming in the opposite direction a glancing blow and swerved to one side. At full speed, it continued on its way and crashed through the iron guard rail and went over the embankment with the engine still speeding. For an instant the car sped in a great arc through the air and then turned over just before it struck the ground. It landed in O'Brien's coal yard, alongside the tracks of the New York division of the Pennsylvania railroad.

The machine was the property of James Shaw, a lumber merchant, and was driven by his son, who was among those killed. The son was taking a party of his friends for a ride through Fairmount park.

On the return journey home the Shaw party engaged in a race with another large touring car. They were racing side by side as they crossed the viaduct. The auto of Charles I. Spayd was approaching from the opposite direction. The Shaw car endeavored to pass the other racing machine and side swiped the car of Spayd. The force of the impact deflected its course and at full speed it darted across the roadway and disappeared in the darkness below the viaduct.

The bodies of eight of the victims were so badly crushed that it was almost impossible to identify them The other racing car did not stop, but kept up its mad dash.

Evidence gathered showed the accident was the culmination of an all-night joy ride, which started at Broad and Washington avenue, and ended at the Riverside mansion just before midnight on Saturday. The party of thirteen men and two women started what they said was going to be a "joy ride" in two automobiles from the road house, and before another quarter of an hour had passed, nine of their number were crushed to death beneath one of the automobiles.

The police and coroner's officials directed every energy to the discovery of the persons who were in the automobile which was racing with the big touring car. They were rewarded by the discovery of Thomas A. Lawrence of 4823 Ridge avenue, a brother of one of the dead young men. Lawrence had come to his home, hysterical and dazed, crying that his brother was dead. Questioning by Deputy Coroners Ward and Braun revealed the fact that Lawrence had been a passenger in the second car, in which there were two women, according to the testimony.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

FIRST CHURCH.

"The safety of Modern Society de pends on the restoration of a vital re ligious faith," said the Rev. Adelber Lathrop Hudson in the pulpit of th First church, Sunday morning.

"When a marching company of nea Revolutionists started to display upo. our public streets, a few days ago, a placard bearing the inscription: 'N Boss! No God!', it was serving rud notice upon us of how rapidly the ol order changeth, giving place to th new. And when, in passing a Roma Catholic church, one of the compan undertook to salute the cross, only t have his hat smashed down over hi eyes by his companions, it emphasize the fact that ecclesiastical authority i declining and that the ancient churci can no longer hold in check the law lessness of its irresponsible childrei in the presence of the religious indif ference—the refined paganism of th respectable and well-to-do.

"This rapid disintegration of a ancient faith has a striking paralle in the breaking down of dogmatic cer tainty among the protestant churches —so fundamental and far reachin that no one seems especially surprise or shocked when such eminent ortho dox clergymen as Dr. Gordon of th Old South, and Prof. E. C. Moore o Harvard, speak without reserve of 'th collapse of New England Calvinism.'

"But along with this 'collapse' o the rigid orthodoxy of our forefathers we are feeling also the decline of thei fine spirit of reverence and of tha splendid moral earnestness whic gave stability and character to th young republic. Unless this tendenc can be checked, it means disaster.

"Over the downfall of narrownes and bigotry we may well rejoice; but we dare not watch complacently th lawlessness around us, and fail t recognize that this growing disorde is due in no small degree to the ab sence of that fear of endless future punishment, which in the past has been so strong an incentive to right conduct.

"Modern liberalism has done a brave and self sacrificing work in freeing religion from theological shackles. It has contended that reli gious faith is not a necessary yoke fellow of fear and superstition, but that it can work quite as well in double harness with the scientific spirit of the age. The world has so far accepted this contention as to fling ancient superstition to the winds The important question now is, can the newer faith develope equal moral power to assist in maintaining law and order, and in promoting the pro gress of mankind.

"In its negative fight for intellectual freedom, modern liberalism has won. But a much larger task remains be fore it,—to build upon the ruins of a decadent theology, a nobler temple for the faith of man.

"The problem of salvation has shift ed from the individual to society. In their collective life men have discov ered, created or released gigantic forces which now we seem unable to control or guide. Our most hopeful leaders have found as yet no effective remedy; while many intelligent men can see nothing before us but chaos and disaster.

"What seems most needed at this time is a religious faith at once ra tional enough to command the confi dence of thinking minds and strong enough to save the social order from the disintegrating forces which threat en its destruction—a staunch and stalwart faith that there is, in the universe, a mighty power which works with us when we strive for righteous ness and strengthens our courage when we pray.

Such a faith, loyally supported by those who desire the welfare of so ciety, might restore the moral force which now seems lacking, and usher in a new career of human progress."

Mr. Hudson's sermon, from which the above remarks are quoted was the first in a series upon "Faith as a Pow er in Human Life." The special theme for next Sunday will be "Faith in God."

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL.

Ezekiel, the Prophet of Visions fur nished the inspiration of the theme, chosen by Dr. Sneath as a fitting mes sage to his people on Rally Sunday, at the threshold of the year's activi ties. Of the mysterious and won drous Spiritual Beings of the Seer's dream, the text, Ez. 1:24 says. "when they stood, they let down their wings." Dr. Sneath's plea for spirit ual activity in the Church hinged up on the thought that drooping wings signify stagnation and loss, that spiritual progress and spiritual strength are gained only by constant spiritual endeavor.

Reminding his hearers that spirit uality is not idealism, that religious ness is inherent in every marr, and unreligion is an abnormal state, he warned them that indifference and neglect of natural spiritual desires produce atrophy and decay of spirit ual sense.

The music was fully up to the standard of interest established by the music committee and the excel ent quartette. To Mrs. Long, con tralto, fell the burden of morning music and she has never appeared to better advantage. She gave the solo, Stevenson's "I sought the Lord," and later with Mr. Everett, Bass, gave Schnecker's beautiful duet, "The Lord is My Shepherd." Both her voice and method were most pleasing and show ed careful training and study.

Sunday School met at 12.15. The program included some special sing ng by the school, a pleasant talk from Mr. C. A. Randall, Supt., outlined the work accomplished and plans for the future. Dr. Sneath made the address, which was along the lines of loyality, to ourselves and to our re ligious convictions. Plans are being made for an increased attendance.

The Christian Endeavor Consecra ion at 6 p. m. was conducted by Mrs. Bessie Ducey, who chose for her topic 'Humility," and provided a session full of thought for her hearers. The monthly Church Social will take place Thursday evening next, the first of the season. This occasion is and al ways has been deservedly popular, an evening purely social, giving an ex cellent opportunity to all to extend their acquaintance. Wollaston is growing fast and many new faces are constantly to be seen amongst Dr. Sneath's congregation. Supper at 5.30 p. m., price 25 cents. Come and get acquainted.

Dr. Sneath will address the regular meeting of the Women's Auxiliary, Y. M. C. A. in the Church on Friday af ternoon at 3 o'clock. All ladies who do not belong are urged to join on this occasion. Y. M. C. A. work is too important a factor n Quincy's wel are to be overlooked by any good citizen of either sex. Dr. Sneath will as usual lead the Friday evening Prayer meeting in the vestry at 7.45. His theme will be "Searching the Scriptures." Dr. Sneath is invariab ly interesting and efficient, and grow ing attendance at Friday evening meet ngs should assure him of the ap preciation which is felt for his efforts on these occasions. The formation of the Men's Bible Class was post poned one week owng to the press of other matters in the Sunday School yesterday.

All seats in this church are free and a cordial welcome is extended to all, especially those having no fixed church home, to attend the religious and social meetings here.

An exceedingly interesting and high class program is being mapped out for the coming winter by Prest dent William A. Mann of the Men's Club of the church. Better speakers and better dinners than ever before will be provided this season and a large and active committee will at tend especially to seeing that each member becomes acquainted with all of his fellow members. One hun dred members are expected on the roster this season, and everyone who cares for a personal acquaintance with one hundred good men should not overlook this oportunity to get it. A good acquaintance with your neighbors is a mighty good help in smoothing out life's difficulties and inducing contentment.

CHRIST CHURCH.

This evening at 8 o'clock Laymen's club.

Tuesday, 3.45 P. M. Junior Auxiliary

Wenesday, 7.00 P. M., Boys' Club.

Friday, 7.45 P. M., Reapers' Circle at Rectory.

Foreword—We are beginning anoth er year of work together in the Church of God. How successful and productive of good our work will be depends upon the spirit of consecra tion and service we bring to it. Let us resolve that however we have failed in the past we will not fail this year for lack of earnestness, zeal, and honest effort. To our resolution let us join our prayers that we may be given grace to fulfill it to the glory of God's Holy Name and the benefit of His Church. So shall we, each one of us, verify the truth of St. Paul's words that our "labor is not in vain in the Lord."

Laymen's Club—This is a new or ganization formed by the coalition of the Galahad Brotherhood and the Men's Club. Its object is to promote the social, civic, and moral interests of our City through the parish of Christ church.

The co-operation of the men of the parish and their friends, whether or not connected with the parish, is asked in furthering this worthy pur pose. Any man 18 years of age or over is eligible to membership. The officers elected are: President, A. Macleod; Vice-President, F. H. Wrig ley; Secretary, Bryon C. Miller; Treasurer, Harvey Smith.

Junior Auxiliary—Under the new leadership of Mrs. Turtle, assisted by Mrs. Haslett and Miss May Opie, the Junior Auxiliary cannot fail to be of both spiritual and educational value to the children. The Rector asks that all the parents will interest them selves in the work of this Guild, which is sure to benefit the child and also the home.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN CHURCH.

In spite of the glorious golden weather which must have tempted many to the woods and hills, a goodly number of people gathered at the morning service of the Wollaston Unitarian church.

The scripture reading chosen by Rev. Carl G. Horst was the familiar and always beautiful 13th chapter of I Corinthians.

The sermon was the first in a series of four on "Four Cornerstones of the Republic" and the topic was the Home: Text Ps. 68-6th verse—"God setteth the solitary in families."

"I have designated the home as the first in importance," said Rev. Mr. Horst, "because there can be no question but it is the chief of the four cornerstones which we shall consid er as supporting our great Republic. Long before establishment of churches or state affairs, the sacred in stitution of the home was set up, and in the centuries that have intervened, with their many and radical changes in every direction, nothing has taken its place in permanence and stability.

"In these modern days when the pursuit of the material is so keen that the spiritual and unseen, are almost overlooked, we shall do well to pause and to recall that home means more than food and shelter and raiment, and opportunity to recuperate from the weariness of one day's labor to be ready for the next. The home must be a refuge where members may seek and find the quiet in which they may make soul development. The fire place which invites to communion and meditation and the evening lamp which is the outward emblem of growth and enlightenment, will draw and bind together members of one household as no social diversion has power to do. In the home one has scope for great abilities and large gifts, here one may find and cultivate all the elements of companionship and friendship, here learn forbearance and generosity, and the charity whose larger name is love."

There was a large attendance at the kindergarten service at 10.45 o'clock.

The Sunday school resumed its ses sions Sunday and starts out with a full list of teachers and officers.

HAYWOOD DID NOT APPEAR

Quincy I. W. W.'s Pleased at Failure to Get Juryman

The local members of the I. W. W. did not hold their scheduled open air meeting at the Liberty street field, Sunday afternoon. A number of curious non-members were on hand in the hopes of hearing William Hay wood, but the word had evidently been passed arounr amongst the members that he was not coming since very few were on hand.

The rumor was current amongst these people that Haywood had been warned away from Quincy and that he hesitated coming in view of the feel ing developed against the I. W. W. of which he is a leader.

The Quincy Italians and Finns are quiet, awaiting the outcome of the trial at Salem.

ON EVE OF THE BECKER TRIAL

"Big Jack" Zelig Killed With Policeman's Gun

SLAYER IS QUICKLY CAUGHT

District Attorney Worried at Silencing of Gunman Who Was to Be Chief Witness Against Becker, Charged With the Murder of Rosenthal—Graft Case Against Police Killed

New York, Oct. 7.—Baffled so far in their efforts to connect Philip Davidson, the slayer, and the events surrounding the murder by him of "Big Jack" Zelig as the latter sat complacently smoking a cigarette on the end of an open northbound Second avenue street car, with the killing of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, who met death in somewhat similar circumstances, the police are bringing every influence at their command to bear on Davidson to induce him to give a complete and detailed account of the events which led to the murder of the leader of the east side gunman Saturday night.

The first and most important circumstances being investigated is the revolver which was taken from Davidson less than a minute after he sprang onto the running board of the street car and, placing the muzzle of the weapon close behind the gunman's ear, pulled the trigger and sent a bullet crashing through his brain.

Leaping from the car the murderer was escaping across Fourteenth street toward First avenue, when Policeman Schmidt, in citizen's clothes, seized him, threw him to the ground and took the still smoking gun from his hand.

An examination of it disclosed that it was the pattern carried by policemen. Further sifting developed that it had been the property of a policeman who travels out of the Fifth avenue station, Brooklyn. While the name of the policeman who once owned the revolver has been kept secret, it is known that his number is 4812.

In an effort to trace the steps which followed the loss of the gun by the policeman, Deputy Commissioner Dougherty is responsible for the statement that the policeman has told him that he lost the revolver some time ago. Dougherty, accompanied by Detective L'Heureaux, went to a pawnshop in Jersey City in an effort to corroborate Davidson's story that he bought it in sucha shop for $8 that he might avenge himself on Zelig for the theft from him of nearly $500, which sum has after been proved, the police say, to have been but $17.

District Attorney Whitman took part in an eight hour grilling of Davidson, which, to a large extent, only brought about confirmation from him of his original story, to the effect that he shot Zelig because the latter had backed him into a doorway, beaten him up and robbed him of his savings.

That the district attorney is worried over the killing of Zelig cannot be denied. He, it is said, had just about convinced Zelig that the best thing he could do would be to go the witness stand in the trial of Lieutenant Charles Becker, which begins today, and tell all he knows about the arrangements which were made between him and "Bridgie" Webber and "Jack" Rose, by the terms of which he supplied for them the quartet of gunmen who killed Herman Rosenthal in front of the Metropole cafe.

His removal by death is looked upon by the prosecution in the Becker case as one of the greatest setbacks they have received since the investigation following the murder of the gambler started. It was expected, it is said, that Zelig's test would furnish the connecting link, the link that would forge the chain of evidence connecting Lieutenant Becker directly with the lowest stratum of the underworld. Just how he will accomplish this, now that Zelig's lips have been closed by a murderer's bullet, the district attorney as yet has not indicated.

Incidentally, perjury charges which it was thought by the district attorney would be easy to prove against Steinert and White, two of Becker's "strong arm squad," are now certain to fall for lack of evidence.

Zelig charged that the two men "framed up" on him by placing a revolver in his pocket after arresting him in the very cafe from which he started to his death. He was charged, after the alleged "frame up," with carrying concealed weapons. It was on this accusation that the police expected to send him to Sing Sing for a long term.

Herman Rosenthal was shot before dawn on the day he was to unfold a story of police graft to District Attorney Whitman.

"Big Jack" Zelig was slain two days before the trial of Becker for the murder of Rosenthal. He was to testify that Becker's order forced the murder of Rosenthal, and he was approached several imes by men close to the police lieutenant with the suggestion that he provide some of his followers for the killing of Rosenthal.

THE NEW HAVEN WRECK

Five Bodies Probing Death of Seven People

Westport, Oct. 7.—Five separate and distinct investigations into the wreck of the Sprnigfield express of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad near here, which resulted in the death of seven, are under way.

The public utilities commission of Connecticut is hard at work on the part it will play in the investigation as conducted by the state. The railroad's own inquiry is in full swing, while the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers is busy endeavoring to discover just why railroads continue to issue orders to engine drivers which must sooner or later cause them to meet with accidents such as the one of last week.

The fifth and the last investigation is that of Coronor Phelan, whose inquest is now going on without interruption.

REPLY TO NOTE OF LEADERS OF I. W. W.

Mayor Will Hold Them Responsible For Any Injury

Lawrence, Mass., Oct. 7.—In answer to a telegram sent to Mayor Scanlon and Commissioner of Public Safety Lynch by I. W. W. leaders, in which they declare they will hold the city officials responsible for the death or injury of any I. W. W. member, the mayor is preparing a statement declaring that he will hold the I. W. W. leaders responsible for any injury to any man, woman or child in Lawrence.

"We know that Haywood is in danger of his life from the Italians of his own organization, and if he is injured in this way he is trying to hold the city responsible," said Mayor's Secretary O'Connell last night.

With the leaders of the Industrial Workers of the World being guarded by small detatchments of mill-workers following the persistent threats of violence and their eviction from the city, the condition of unrest which has marked the course of the dramatic events of the last few days is still in evidence.

MUST SAVE THE CONSTITUTION

Up to the Republican Party to Do It, Says Lodge

HEARTY CHEERS FOR TAFT

Policies Endorsed and Delegates to Bay State Republican Convention Warned Against Any Change—Democrats Unite In Declaring That Wilson and Foss Will Win

Boston, Oct. 7.—"Save the constitution," was the slogan of the Republican state convention which assembled in Tremont Temple to select presidential electors and ratify the state ticket at the primaries.

The delegates represented both the Progressive and stand-pat wings of Republicanism, and they cheered the mention of "our wise and sagacious leader," William Howard Taft, for four minutes.

In a masterly speech, Senator Lodge, as chairman of the convention, voiced the opposition of his party to the doctrines of the initiative and the referendum and the recall of judicial decisions.

The argument against the initiative and the referendum was that it is a scheme to let organized majorities rule. The proposal of the recall of judicial decisions, he declared, was an effort to turn the constitution into a statute to be altered by the whim or passion of the moment.

Senator Lodge urged the Republicans to support President Taft as representing principles vital to the perpetuity of free government. He called for election of a Republican legislature that the traditions of the state may be upheld in the United States senate. He defended he Republican tariff policy and declared against the Democratic proposal to abolish party enrollment in the primaries.

The platform introduced practically no surprises. It went so far in the plank dealing with the regulation of public service corporations as to declare in favor of mandatory powers for the railroad commission.

The woman suffrage plank was most mild. The only new feature was the resolution touching on the situation at Lawrence, as follows:

"We denounce as dangerous and un-American all attempts by public demonstrations or private intimidation to influence the action of courts and juries in matters before them. We approve the efforts of the loyal citizens of Lawrence to give prominence to the American flag as the insignia of justice and liberty, law and order."

Democrats of Massachusetts in convention at Fanueil hall adopted a progressive platform, nominated presidential electors for Wilson and Marshall, elected state committeemen at large and hailed with enthusiasm predictions of all the speakers that Governor Wilson would be elected president in November and that Governor Foss would be given a third term as chief magistrate of Massachusetts.

Massachusetts Democrats never held a more harmonious convention. John F. Fitzgerald was permanent chairman. No trace of differences in the recent Democratic primaries were found in the convention.

The platform demands that the Paine-Aldrich tariff act be repealed and demands the removal of duties or all foodstuffs which are necessary to life as a means of lightening in material measure the sufferings of the people from the increased cost of living.

It says the raw material of manufacture of our great industries should be made at once free of duty or subject only to the lowest rate of duty consistent with a revenue tariff.

The question of equal suffrage, it says, should be submitted to the vote of the people, in the manner provided by the constitution.

BROKER DOW BAILED

Friends Contribute Necessary $50,000 to Secure His Release

Boston, Oct. 7.—After spending forty-eight hours in the Charles street jail, Stephen R. Dow, the former stock exchange broker, who is charged with larceny of nearly $200,000 from various stockholders in companies of which he was the head, was released in $50,000 bail.

It was stated that the bail had been raised by some of Dow's friends who had been urged to contribute by Attorney Williams.

BARON WAS IN LOVE

Objection to Marriage Leads Him to Commit Double Crime

Berlin, Oct. 7.—Baron von Reden, Austrian minister to Abyssinia, shot and killed Fraulein Pirsche, a dressmaker with whom he was in love, then killed himself, at Lemberg, according to a telegram received from there.

The tragedy grew out of objection of von Reden's family to his proposed marriage to the woman, who was considered beneath his station. The Baron was 37 years old.

If Your Voice Gets In, You Win

A Palmer (Mass.) subscriber told this story:

"I got word of a possible big contract in Western New York, packed my grip, and started on the night train. All next day I waited around that city, trying to see the head of the firm. He was busy—busy. I couldn't get at him. When night came I went home disgusted.

"As my eyes rested on the telephone in my office next morning, I said to myself: 'Wonder if you couldn't get me into that office---get my voice where I can't go myself?'

"It could and did. Within a half hour from the time I put in the call, I was awarded the contract.

The announcement of a long-distance call usually will secure a hearing. Many busy men prefer to transact business by telephone. It enables them to concentrate, to escape the emphasis of personalities---to make quick decisions.

DAINTY DISHES WITH APPLES.

LIGHT and luscious desserts may be made of apples combined with other foods.

Tart fruit is best for this purpose, as it cooks quickly to the necessary smoothness. Powdered sugar instead of granulated is a good thing for sweetening.

Flavor the desserts to taste and decorate them with whipped cream or nut meats.

Dainty Fare.

Apple Froth.—Peel and slice some apples and boil them in a little water until they are cooked to a froth. Whisk them when cold with powdered sugar to sweeten and add a cupful of cream. Drop a spoonful of jelly at the bottom of some custard glasses, fill up with apple froth and serve.

Apple Cutlets.—Boil some apples until they make a stiff sauce. Sweeten to taste and stir in a little softened gelatin. Set aside to cool. Cut and trim some slices of sponge cake and lay them on a dish. Moisten each with a little fruit juice and when the apple sauce is partly cool cover each sponge slice with a layer of sauce. When cold arrange on lace paper doilies or a fancy dish. Ornament with whipped cream.

Light and Wholesome.

Apple Custard.—Pare and quarter several apples and steam until soft, then put in deep dish. Put three cupfuls of milk in a double boiler. Mix together one egg yolk, a large tablespoonful of cornstarch, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, a tiny bit of salt and stir into the hot milk until it thickens. It should be quite thick. Flavor with lemon. Beat the whites of the egg to a stiff froth and sugar to sweeten, spread over the top and set in the hot oven to brown. Serve cold.

Apple Float.—Pare and core about a dozen apples. Put the apples on with enough water to cover and let them stew until they look as if they would break, then take out and put a pound and a half of sugar into the same water. Let the sirup come to a boil, put in the apples and let them stew until done through and clear. Then take them out and add an ounce of gelatin dissolved in a pint of cold water. Let the whole mix well and come to a boil, then pour upon the apples. To be eaten with cream.

"BENEVOLENT DESPOT"

What Progressive Plan Would Make President, According to Taft

Beverly, Mass., Oct. 7.—To President Taft's mind the Progressive party is seeking changes which would make the president a benevolent despot and a more absolute monarch than the czar of Russia; Colonel Roosevelt is a remarkable example of the combination of unbounded ambition, with certain attractive personal qualities; the Republican party is still the choice of the sane and sound American voters, and his own re-election is bound to come.

He explained this in a lengthy interview, assailing Roosevelt, but taking care to make plain that he felt no personal animosity against the ex-president. He also defended his course as president, especially his veto of the wool, cotton, chemical and steel schedules, and stated his position in favor of the income tax and the direcct election of United States senators.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Mrs. Keziah Coffin, supposed widow, is arranging to move from Trumet to Boston, following the death of her brother, for whom she had kept house. Grace Van Horne, ward of Capt. Eben Hammond, leader of the "Come-outer" religious sect, offers to assist her financially if she will remain. She declines. Kyan Pepper, widower, offers marriage, and is indignantly refused.

CHAPTER II—Capt. Elkanah Daniels, leader of the Regular church, offers Keziah a place as housekeeper for the new minister, and she decides to remain in Trumet.

CHAPTER III—Keziah takes charge of Rev. John Ellery, the new minister, and gives him advice as to his conduct toward members of the parish. Ellery causes a sensation by attending a "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER IV—Ellery's presence is bitterly resented by Eben Hammond, leader of the meeting. Grace apologizes for her guardian and Ellery escorts her home in the rain. Capt. Nat Hammond, Eben's son, becomes a hero by bringing the packet into port safely through fog and storm. Ellery finds Keziah writing a letter to some one, inclosing money in response to a demand. She is curiously startled when informed of the arrival of Nat.

CHAPTER V—Nat calls on Keziah, and it develops that they have been lovers since youth. Daniels remonstrates with Ellery for attending "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER VI—Ellery is caught by the tide and is rescued by Nat. They become friends.

CHAPTER VII—Ellery meets Grace while walking in the fields Sunday, and learns that she walks there every Sunday.

CHAPTER VIII—The clergyman takes dinner Sundays with the Daniels. Annabel, the captain's daughter, exerts herself to make an impression on him. She notices with vexation his desire to get away every Sunday at a certain time. She watches him through a spy glass.

CHAPTER IX—Nat again importunes Keziah to marry him. He says he has had a quarrel with his father, who wants him to marry Grace.

CHAPTER X—Ellery asks Grace to marry him. She confesses that she loves him, but says she fears to displease her guardian, who has been very kind to her, and asks time to think about it. Elkanah Daniels tells Eben about the meetings between Ellery and Grace. Eben declares he will make Grace choose between him and the preacher. Grace finds him in a faint, following the excitement of Elkanah's visit.

CHAPTER XI—Just before he dies Eben exacts a promise from Nat and Grace that they will marry.

CHAPTER XII—Keziah breaks the news to Ellery and later he receives a note from Grace saying she is to marry Nat and asking him not to try to see her again. Keziah tells the story of her own marriage with a man who turned out to be a good-for-nothing, and who was reported to have been lost at sea, and of her love for Nat, whom she cannot marry because the husband is alive. Ellery sees in the story a lesson in devotion to duty and decides to remain and attend to his duties.

CHAPTER XIII—Captain Nat sails for Manila to be gone two years. He says he and Grace have decided not to marry until he returns.

CHAPTER XIV—Nat is overdue, and it is feared that he has been lost at sea. Keziah gets a letter from her husband saying he is coming back. Grace goes on a visit to relatives of the Hammonds.

The sick sailor grew no better. Days and nights passed and he raved and moaned or lay in a stupor. Ebenezer acted as day nurse while Ellery slept, and, at night, the minister, being younger, went on watch. The doctor came frequently, but said there was no hope. A question of time only, and a short time, he said.

"Do you know, parson," he said, "seem's if I'd seen the feller somewheres afore. 'Course I never have, but when I used to go whalin' v'yages I cruised from one end of creation to t'other, pretty nigh, and I might have met him."

That night the sick man was much worse. His ravings were incessant. The wooden clock, loaned by Mrs. Parker, the doctor's wife, ticked steadily, although a half hour slow. Ellery, glancing at it to see if the time had come for giving medicine, suddenly noticed how loud its ticking sounded. Wondering at this, he was aware there was no other sound in the house. He rose and looked in at the door of the adjoining room. The patient had ceased to rave and was lying quiet on the bed.

The minister tiptoed over to look at him. And, as he did so, the man opened his eyes.

"Halloo!" he said faintly. "Who are you?"

Ellery, startled, made no answer.

"Who are you?" demanded the man again. Then, with an oath, he repeated the question, adding: "What place is this? This ain't the fo'castle. Where am I?"

"You're ashore. On Cape Cod. At Trumet."

"Trumet! Trumet!"

He was struggling to raise himself on his elbow. Ellery was obliged to use force to hold him down. He struggled again. Then his strength and his reason left him simultaneously and the delirium returned. He began to shout a name, a name that caused Ellery to stand upright and step back from the bed, scarcely believing his ears.

All the rest of that night the man on the bed raved and muttered, but of people and places and happenings which he had not mentioned before. And the minister, listening intently to every word, caught himself wondering if he also was not losing his mind.

When the morning came, Ebenezer Capen was awakened by a shake to find John Ellery standing over him.

"Capen," whispered the minister, "Capen, get up. I must talk with you. You used to be a whaler, I know. Were you acquainted in New Bedford?"

"Sartin. Was a time when I could have located every stick in it, pretty nigh, by the smell, if you'd set me down side of 'em blindfolded."

"Did you ever know anyone named—" He finished the sentence.

"Well's I wanted to. Pretty decent feller one time, but a fast goer, and went downhill like a young one's sled, when he got started. His folks had money, that was the trouble with him. Why, 'course I knew him. He married—"

"I know. Now, listen."

Ellery went on talking rapidly and with great earnestness. Ebenezer listened, at first silently, then breaking in with ejaculations and grunts of astonishment. He sat up on the edge of the bed.

"Rubbish!" he cried at last. "Why, 'tain't possible! The feller's dead as Methusalem's grandmarm. I remember how it happened and—"

"It wasn't true. That much I know. I know, I tell you."

He went on to explain why he knew. Capen's astonishment grew.

"Judas priest!" he exclaimed again. "That would explain why I thought I'd seen— There! heave ahead. I've got to see. But it's a mistake. I don't believe it."

The pair entered the sick room. The sailor lay in a stupor. His breathing was rapid, but faint. Capen bent over him and gently moved the bandage on his face. For a full minute he gazed steadily. Then he stood erect, drew a big red hand across his forehead, and moved slowly back to the living room.

"Yup," he said, "it's him. Mr. Ellery, what are you goin' to do about it?"

"I don't know. I don't know. I must go somewhere by myself and think. I don't know what to do."

The minister declined to wait for breakfast. He said he was not hungry. Leaving Ebenezer to put on the coffeepot and take up his duties as day nurse, Ellery walked off along the beach. By and by he heard Capen calling his name.

"Mr. Ellery;" shouted Ebenezer. "Mr. Ellery, where be you?"

"Here!" replied the minister.

The old man came scrambling over the sand. He was panting and much excited.

"Mr. Ellery!" he cried, "Mr. Ellery! it's settled for us—one part of it, anyhow. He's slipped his cable. Yup. He must have died just a little while after you left and after I gave him his medicine. I thought he looked kind of queer then. And when the doctor came we went in together and he was dead. Yes, sir, dead."

"Dead!"

"Um-hm. No doubt of it; it's for good this time. Mr. Ellery, what shall we do? Shall I tell Dr. Parker?"

Ellery considered for a moment. "No," he said slowly. "No, Capen, don't tell anyone. I can't see why they need ever know that he hasn't been dead for years, as they supposed. Promise me to keep it a secret. I'll tell—her—myself, later on. Now promise me; I trust you."

"Land sakes, yes! I'll promise, if you want me to."

The next day the body of "Murphy," foremast hand on the San Jose, was buried in the corner of the Regular graveyard, near those who were drowned in the wreck of that winter. Capen remained at the shanty another week. Then, as the minister showed no symptoms of having contracted the disease and insisted that he needed no companion, Ebenezer departed to take up his fishing once more.

Ellery himself was most urgent in the decision that he should not go back to the parsonage and his church just yet. Better to wait until he was sure, he said, and Dr. Parker agreed.

Dr. Parker told him of Grace Van Horne's return to the village. She had come back, so the doctor said, the day before, and was to live at the tavern for a while, at least. Yes, he guessed even she had given up hope of Captain Nat now.

"And say," went on Parker, "what I want to know is whether you think I could leave you for a couple of days? The Ostable County Medical Society meets at Hyannis tomorrow and I had promised myself to take it in this year. But I don't want to leave you, if you need me."

Ellery insisted that he did not need anyone, was getting along finely, and would not hear to his friend's missing the medical society's meeting. So the physician went. John Ellery did not feel cheerful that afternoon. The tired feeling he had spoken of so lightly was worse than he had described it, and he was despondent, for no particular reason. That night he slept miserably and awoke with a chill to find a cold, pouring rain beating against the windows of the shanty.

He lay down on his bed and tried to sleep, but though he dozed a bit, woke always with a start and either a chill or fever fit. His head began to ache violently. And then, in the lonesomeness and misery, fear began to take hold of him.

Night came. The rain had ceased and stars were shining clear. Inside the shanty the minister tossed on the bed, or staggered back and forth about the two rooms. He wondered what the time might be; then he did not care. He was alone. The smallpox had him in its grip. Why didn't some one come? Where was Mrs. Coffin? And Grace? She was somewhere near him—Parker had said so—and he must see her before he died. He called her name over and over again.

The wind felt cold on his forehead. He stumbled amidst the beach grass. What was this thing across his path? A rope, apparently, but why should there be ropes in that house? There had never been any before. He climbed over it and it was a climb of hundreds of feet and the height made him giddy. That was a house, another house, not the one he had been living in. And there were lights all about. Perhaps one of them was the light at the parsonage. And a big bell was booming. That was his church bell and he would be late for the meeting.

Some one was speaking to him. He knew the voice. He had known it always and would know it forever. It was the voice he wanted to hear. "Grace!" he called. "Grace! I want you. Don't go! Don't go! Grace! oh, my dear! don't go"

Then the voice had gone. No, it had not gone. It was still there and he heard it speaking to him, begging him to listen, pleading with him to go somewhere, go back, back to something or other. And there was an arm about his waist and some one was leading him, helping him. He broke down and cried childishly and some one cried with him.

Early the next morning, just as day was breaking, a buggy, the horse which drew it galloping, rocked and bumped down the lighthouse lane. Dr. Parker, his brows together and his lips set with anxiety, was driving. He had been roused from sleep in the hotel at Hyannis by a boy with a telegram. "Come quick," it read. "Mr. Ellery sick." The sender was Noah Ellis, the light keeper. At the ropes, early as it was, he found a small group waiting and gazing at the shanty. The lightkeeper was there and two or three other men. They were talking earnestly.

"How is he, Noah?" demanded the doctor, jumping to the ground.

"I don't know, doc," replied Ellis. "I ain't heard sence last night when I telegraphed you."

"The devil!" Dr. Parker swore impatiently. "Who is with him then? You haven't left him alone, have you?"

"No-o," Noah hesitated once more. "No-o, he ain't alone. She's there."

"She? Who? Keziah Coffin?"

"I don't cal'late Keziah's heard it yet. We was waitin' for you 'fore we said much to anybody. But she's there—the—the one that found him. You see, he was out of his head and wanderin' up the lane 'most to the main road and she'd been callin' on Keziah and when she come away from the parsonage she heard him hollerin' and goin' on and—"

"Who did?"

"Why"—the lightkeeper glanced at his companions—"why, doc, 'twas Grace Van Horne. And she fetched him back to the shanty and then come and got me to telegraph you."

But Parker did not wait to hear the rest. He ran at full speed to the door of the shanty. Grace herself opened it.

"How is he? demanded the doctor.

"I think he seems a little easier; at any rate, he's not delirious. He's in there. Oh, I'm so thankful you've come."

"Is that the doctor?" called Ellery weakly from the next room. "Is it?"

"Yes," replied Parker, throwing off his coat and hat. "Coming, Mr. Ellery."

"For God's sake, doctor, send her away. Don't let her stay. Make her go! I've got the smallpox and if she stays she will die. Don't you understand? she must go."

"Hush, John," said Grace soothingly. "Hush, dear."

Dr. Parker stopped short and looked at her. However, he waited no longer, but hurried in to his new patient.

REBELS GET WARNING

Strongholds May Be Attacked by Americans Unless they Surender

Washington, Oct. 7.—Following the killing of four American marines and the wounding of seven, including a lieutenant, in the engagement which resulted in the capture of the insurgent Nicaraguan fortresses of Maysaya, on Barranca and Cayotepe Hills, Rear Admiral Southerland, who is in command of the American forces in the Central American republic, has resolved to put a speedy end to the revolt.

The rear admiral reports that the rebels suffered heavily in the battle. He has ordered a force of 1200 men to surround Leon, which is held by General Irias. He will get the same warning as General Zeledon. If he also refuses to surrender the American forces will be sent to attack his stronghold.

These two rebel leaders held the last remaining strongholds of the revolutionists.

ROSLINDALE DEFEATED

By the Strong Quincy A. A. Aggregation 6 to 0

BOYLE STAR OF GAME

The Quincy A. A. fotball team which last season met and defeated some of the best teams in the state opened its 1912 season by defeating the Roslindale A. A. at Merymount Park, Saturday afternoon, 6 to 0.

The feature of the game was a 75 yard run of Boyle who circled right end with the ball and plugged down the field for what looked like a touchdown, but when about one yard from the line he was tackled by fulback Bridges, McDonald took the ball across the line for the only touchdown on the next rush.

The first two periods were defensive during which time the Quincy boys studied out the weak points of the opposing team. In the third they loosened up and from then on there was no question of who would be the winner. In the second period Quincy lost the ball on a fumble while they were on the 10 yard line.

Harkins at centre played a wonderful game for a young player, and the training he received while a member of the St. John's Preparatory school team was demonstrated by the way in which he opened holes for line plunges and held the Roslindale team when they tried centre rushes. It was his first apperance with a local team.

Hunter, who played left end for Quincy showed great class throughout the game. The way he ran down punts was a caution and in every instance the man receiving the ball was immediately tackled. He displayed all his old time form and spoiled a few dangerous plays by smashing a formidable interference and getting his man.

Cummings and Boyle were also in the game from the time the whistle blew and it is certain that the Quincy A. A. has as fine a backfield as any of the Eastern Massachusetts teams. McDonald at quarter kept the team on the run and had the play well in hand. His eagerness for victory was only excelled by the earnest playing of his team mates and he ran the game with a snap and vim which was remarkable for a first try.

Hebert made a good impression and he will no doubt be retained as one of the regular men. Tocci of last year's eleven was in for business and made good. Capt. Wood was highly pleased with the showing of the boys and feels that this season will be a repetition of last season when they were scored on but twice.

LARGE ARMY OF INJURED

First Two Months of Compensation Act Operation

91 FATAL CASES

During the month of July there were 5,080 injuries to employees reported; during the month of August, 7,721 were reported, making a total of 12,801 for the two months. If the ratio of accidents reported to the Board in August is maintained, there will be more than 80,000 reported during the first year of the operation of the act. Yet it is believed that, even with the large number of reports received, some employers are not complying with the law requiring reports of all accidents to employees, and calls attention to the penalty clause in the Workmen's Compensation Act, which imposes a fine of $50 on the employer if an accident is not reported to the Industrial Accident Board within forty-eight hours of its occurrence. It should be further emphasized that this provision requiring a report of all accidents within forty-eight hours applies to all employers of labor, whether insured or not.

An analysis of the reports of 91 persons, all males, fatally injured in the course of their employment in the industries of this State during the months of July and August, shows the average age of the fatally injured to be thirty-five years, and the average age of the fatally injured to be thirty-five years, and the average wage reveived $14.51.

Of these 25 left no dependents. The remaining 66 left dependents as widows, 47; children, 86; parents, 18; other dependents, 11.

Of the 66 leaving dependents, 55 were insured under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 10 were not insured, and for 1 the record is not complete.

The dependents of the 55 insured, 15 of whom left no dependents, comprising 30 widows, 56 children, 10 parents and 9 other dependents, are entitled to $90,199 under the terms of the act.

The dependents of the 35 non-insured, 10 of whom left no dependents consisting of 17 widows, 30 children, 8 parents and 2 other dependents, would be entitled, if insured under the act, to $53,900.

The total liability for the fatal injury of the entire 91 employees, under the provisions of the act, insured and non-insured, and figuring the liability in all cases of "no dependency" upon the $200 limit for burial expenses, would be $144,099.

The reports as to safety devices in use at the time of injury indicate that in 99.4 per cent. of all the accidents there were no safety devices in use; and pursuing the inquiry further, employers or their agents making the reports stated in nearly every case that no safety device or regulation could have prevented the accident. The act does not authorize the appointment of investigators by the Industrial Accident Board, and there is no fund available for the purpose of investigating the causes leading up to the injuries sustained or the methods by which such injuries might be avoided in the future.

The Ramblers and the Redmen Soccer football teams met at the Ward three playground, Saturday afternoon neither being able to score. The Ramblers lineup consisted of former high school stars who still claim they can play the game. The Redmen are South Quincy young men who have organized for the second season.

The game was on the old style, very little open playing being furnished to the spectators. The Ramblers used a close formation which netted large gains and the forward pass which Everett Prout snapped to his outpost landed in an Indians arms and came close to being dangerous for the Ramblers.

The Ramblers kept the Redmen on the defensive most of the game, and when the last period ended they had the ball on the Redmen's five yard line.

Jenkins, Chapman brothers and E. Prout starred for the Ramblers, and Leonard and Carlson for the Redmen.

YOU DON'T WANT TO BE CUT UP

But if you must, there is nothing like having it done nice and pretty! There have been marvellous strides in surgical knowledge and practice since Our Hospital was built, and though the doctors could not, of course, advertise our shortcomings, it has been a matter of humiliation to them that the operating room was so inadequate and out-of-date by modern standards. So marked has been this condition of things that the expert visiting surgeons who figure so largely in the work of the hospital have been reluctant to come here, even if they did not actually decline, in some difficult cases.

Without stopping to describe the old operating department, with its single room used for all purposes, and the primitive conveniences (or rather inconveniences) for patients, nurses and surgeons, the public is at this time entitled to a short description of the new surgical building, since it is by far the largest item of expense for which we shall be asked to pay in the great campaign next week.

First and most important, there are three operating rooms instead of old single one, two of these being twin apartments exactly alike and adjoining each other, so that if there are two urgent cases demanding immediate treatment, it is possible for two surgeons to work at the same time, or for one room to be made ready for a new case while the other is in use. The third room, which is of the utmost need, is reserved for accidents and sudden emergencies, and is kept ready for instant use, no matter what other work may be going on.

And then there is the innocent little etherization room, the place where you, the patient, get your only knowledge of surgery. For do they not take you quietly into this little room give you a strange, subtle vapor to breathe, which puts you into a slumber so profound that you might shame the Seven Sleepers! And seemingly in a few minutes you find yourself waking up in your own bed, feeling rather queer, and perhaps inquiring why they didn't perform the operation! And they tell you smilingly that it's all done!

O the blessing of it, compared with the hideous cruelty of the ante-ether surgery!

Space fails for further description but everything connected with the new department is of the highest order, and may well be a matter of pride for our city. C.

INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS OPEN

Sessions Will Commence Tonight. Good Chance Offered Young Men

Tonight the industrial evening schools open their season. An exceptionally good oportunity is afforded young men to get an education in the branches of trade in which they are interested. If the attendance does not warrant the school will be discontinued. This is the first time that evening industrial schools have been tried in Quincy an apropriation for which was made in the annual budget. This apropriation covers half the expense the other half being paid by the state.

Explosion of Hot Water Tank Blows Up Police Station

Fitchburg, Mass., Oct. 7.—An explosion of a forty-gallon hot water tank in the basement of the central police station here badly damaged that structure and caused great excitement in the neighborhood.

Lieutenant Roy was the only person in the building at the time, and he was not hurt, although the guard room next to him was practically demolished. The street outside was showered with broken glass and windows in nearby structures were broken. The cause of the explosion is not known.

QUINCY LEADS SOCCER LEAGUE

Has Not Lost One of the Five Games Played to Date

MAKING A GREAT RECORD

The Quincy soccer team leads the Greater Boston league, with four wins and one tie, scoring nine points out of a possible 10.

The first home game was played on the Old Colony grounds, Saturday afternoon, when they defeated the strong St. George A. A. of Boston, 5 to 3. It would be difficult to pick any particular star as all played their positions to perfection.

The short passing of the Quincy forwards was a delight to the lovers of soccer football. Quincy kept the visitors on the defensive.

Next Saturday afternoon at the Old Colony grounds, the Quincys will play the Trimos of Jamaica Plain. This will be the second home appearance and accommodations are being made for a large holiday crowd.

The teams of the Greater Boston Soccer league have been recently organized. The Fore Rivers of this city do not appear in the list since they are to play only in the American Cup contests. However there are a number of the Fore River players on the Quincy team and will probably continue in the lineup.

The following teams are in the league and will each play against Quincy on the Old Colony grounds: Brockton, St. George, A. A. of Boston, Beverly, Lynn Fosse, Charlestown, Trimos of Jamaica Plain, Boston Americans of Roxbury, Celtic of Waltham and the Riverdales of Brighton.

The officers of the Quincy organization are Manager John Drysdale, Secretary Thomas Raleigh, treasurer William Taylor. The president is William Elrick, a man thoroughly acquainted with the ins and outs of soccor and present appearances indicate a most successful season for the Quincy team and possibly the championship of the league.

BOYS AND GIRLS URGED TO SAVE

High School Pupils Told of Their Real Value

GREATER CHANCE TO SPEND

Harry W. Kimball, field secretary of the Massachusetts Savings Insurance league spoke to the pupils of the High School Monday, upon the subject of "Thrift as illustrated by Savings Bank Life Insurance."

He spoke in part as follows:

"Thrift is an old-fashioned virtue which our forefathers had but which is too often neglected in this age when there are so many temptations to spend money. Recently, an investigation was made of 50,000 well-to-do American families whose estates had recently passed through the Probate Courts and it was found that less than two thousand of these estates were possessed of sufficient means to be settled without debt. Many of the emigrants who come to this country are very thrifty.

There are more temptations now for boys and girls to spend money than there used to be. Moving-picture shows, amusement parks, trolley lines, and athletic sports all demand money. Yet a large number of our high school scholars have deposits in the savings banks but they do not add to these deposits as in times gone by.

Life insurance is one form of saving and is intended to protect the value which is invested in one's life against the hazard of loss by unexpected death. Every boy or girl in a high school is worth something,—time, money and thought have been put into making them what they are. At a low estimate, it costs at least $5000, expended on the part of the parents and the community, to bring a boy or girl in Massachusetts to the age of sixteen years. Insurance, therefore, simply protects the value which has actually been invested in them. It is a wise provision for any father or mother to take out life insurance policies upon the lives of their children.

In Savings Bank Life Insurance, Massachusetts has provided the best form of insurance in the world. Since insurance is a real necessity of life it should be furnished to the people at actual cost and at the least possible expense. This is what Massachusetts Savings Bank Life Insurance does. The general expenses are paid by the Commonwealth and the Insurance Departments of the Savings Banks are not allowed to spend money for soliciting business and all profits belong to the policy holders.

Four Savings Banks, have opened insurance departments and there are today more than 6600 policy holders and about $2,500,000 of insurance in force. There are many agencies in manufacturing establishments and also an increasing number of public agencies where applications can be made and premiums paid.

The young man or young woman who wishes to place their life on a sound business basis will get the habit of saving money and will use some of the money which they save to purchase life insurance.

NIGHT SCHOOLS OPEN SESSIONS

Encouraging Outlook for Large Attendance Shown

MANY TAKING THE COURSES

The Free Evening classes at the Adams, Lincoln, Willard and High schools opened Monday evening. The school department was not prepared to submit its enrollment figures this morning but a report is being prepared for Thursday.

At the Adams, Lincoln and Willard schools elementary classes were opened to all persons without any restrictions. A number of foreign born residents attended the sessions.

At the High school advanced courses and commercial work and general drawing course consisting of free-hand and mechanical drawing will be taught.

At the Lincoln school which is situated in the granite cutting section a special course in drawing and clay modelling is arranged for.

Cooking and the study of foods will be taught at the Willard school in addition to the elementary work.

The industrial courses at the High school offers exceptional opportunity for young men and women to start a technical course and everything possible in connection with industry will be taught.

A sewing and dressmaking class was also started Monday evening.

If, after the figures are compiled the registration is not large enough, the instruction in classes falling short of a necessary number of pupils will be discontinued.

This is the first time industrial education has been offered in the public schools and the tables showing the registration will demonstrate the interest and ambition of Quincy's young men.

Commissioner Crane Makes Exhaustive Report and Recommendation. $25,000 For Town River Improvement Would Be Possible

New Streets Built in 1910 and 1911 Under the Betterment Act Will Cost Over $35,000. Orders For Same Adopted

Much business of importance was transacted at Monday night's meeting of the City Council. In the absence of President Hobbs, who was confined to his home by illness the meeting was called to order by Councilman Gauthier and on roll call Councilman Bailey was elected President pro tem, Councilmen Gilliatt, Hobbs and Studley were absent.

A communication was received from the Mayor inclosing a report of Dock Commissioner Crane on the question of a public dock for Quincy. The report was in print and in it the Commissioner recommends a site for a public dock. The report deals with the question at length and of the benefits that would come to Quincy from its establishment. He also gives correspondence with experts with whom he consulted and a summary of answers received by the Board of Trade in reply to a circular letter sent to various granite manufacturers and others, asking to what use the dock would be used by them. In summing up his report he submits two locations. The Johnson Lumber Co., property and the Faxon wharf at the foot of River street. Each of these two sites he describes at length and in summing up recommends the leasing of the Faxon property for a term of ten years, also that the legislature be petitioned giving the Mayor the power to appoint three dock commissioners who shall have charge of all funds for building and development and the control of the dock, its rate of wharfage, receipts control and management of its railways, the leasing of land and all other matters in any way connected with its management, said commissioners to be appointed for not less than five years. Placed on file.

A detailed description of the two sites recommended by the Commissioner will be published at a later date.

In addition to submitting his printed report the Commissioner addressed the Council briefly as follows:

Your Honor, Mr. President, and Gentlemen of the City Council:

Do not believe that if the city establishes a public dock on Town River that a sudden and immediate rush of industries to locate on its banks will take place.

As a City Council, first advocate a safe and sane policy for the acquisition of a location; secondly, advise the building of storage warehouses, and freight handling appliances as fast as a reasonable amount of income can be derived from them.

In presenting to you this report, I have careuflly considered what the city ought to do now in the year 1912 to encourage future development, and at once to lower the excessive freight rate of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R.

Remember this, that we as City Officials are building this dock for all the needs of all the citizens of our great city now and in the future, and not for the advancement of any one particular industry or person.

If the plan recommended should be adopted tonight, within a week Quincy would have established a public dock, and the granite dealers and other industries of the city would at once be entitled to the water rate of the railroad, which would mean a saving of thousands of dollars to them in the next year, whether they use the dock or not, and the city would be in a position to secure the $25,000 for the improvement of Town River, by the State.

I am informed by one of the most reputable lumber dealers in the city of Boston, that should the city of Quincy establish a dock with proper berths and storage space for lumber, his firm would take a lease of a certain amount of space and wharfage facilities for a term of from five to ten years, and give a guarantee bond for the payment of same.

A plaster and cement dealer has also informed me that he would lease a space for storage purposes.

The Citizens' Gas Light Company would also like space.

At several enthusiastic meetings of the Granite Manufacturers' Association I was told that cutting and polishing sheds would probably be erected near the dock, and thus eliminate the haul from the dock to the yards; also that a storage space for granite would be needed. Up to the time of making this report, no granite firm or individual has noified your Commissioner that they would use any space for above, if the dock should be acquired.

In conclusion I wish to say, that I thoroughly believe in the proposition for a public dock as advanced in this report, calling your attention to the fact, that if the dock does not get the support, which in my opinion it should, the city can retire from the public dock proposition in either five or ten years, with a very small percentage of loss.

THAT LAWRENCE EXODUS.

The intimation that there is to be an exodus of I. W. W. mill operatives from Lawrence to other parts of the country affords some food for sober reflection by all parties concerned and more particularly it would seem by the very people who are to be deported. It is a question if Lawrence would not be more prosperous and happy by the removal from that city of many men and women who have been agitating and stirring up strife, for months, aye years. Lawrence for many years has occupied an unenviable position in the public mind because of its frequent labor troubles.

Boards of trade and chambers of commerce have sent repeated invitations to mill owners to move their plants and they would be free from labor disturbances. Such a course would mean tremendous outlay by the manufacturers who have erected expensive buildings, and if the concerns should decide to move, those buildings would become useless, and the concerns would be forced to erect adequate and costly plants wherever they decided to locate.

Such a course does not appeal very strongly to business men. If however those big concerns did decide to move it would mean a serious blow to the city's prosperity if not ruining it completely commercially. The wholesale removal of operatives from the city is a far more serious matter for the laborers themselves. It is claimed that they can procure employment in Pittsburg or other places. Is there not room for serious doubts as to the correctness of this claim. The history of the labor troubles in Lawrence have gone broad cast. If those poor people through following the blind leadership of certain men should leave there present source of employment, what assurances have they that they would find immediate employment in some other place. The men who employ help in Pittsburg and the other places claimed will undoubtedly be sceptical of employing people who are liable to influences such as have been dominant in Lawrence, which would mean, unrest, dissatisfaction, and a recurrence of labor trouble.

The men who advocate such a measure should be absolutely sure of their ground. They should be certain beyond a doubt that those people would secure immediate employment.

None of them can have saved any great amount for the ever recurring rainy day. In a strange place without employment, their situation would be trying and unfortunate in the extreme.

The men who are guiding those people have a great responsibility upon their shoulders. A false move might spell, hardship, privations and untold suffering. It is a bad time of the year for people to be out of employment, and if those poor people following blindly their leaders decide to move and then are unable to secure employment, to whom will they turn for redress? It is a situation which calls for the coolest calculation, earnest consideration and a strict adherence to the well established principle of making haste slowly.

WHO IS RIGHT?

There seems to be some little question as to who is right on that Archbold $100,000 contribution. Mr. Roosevelt appearing before the Clapp committee, stated that he had the assurance of Mr. Cortelyou that such a contribution was not made. Sheldon and Duell who were associated with Mr. Bliss who had charge of the funds corroborate Archbold. In view of the fact that Mr. Cortelyou is again to appear before the committee, it will be interesting to hear what he has to say on the matter this time. It is now a question of veracity of men who have enjoyed the public confidence for many years and the public is very much concerned as to which one of them has been bamboozling the public for so long and covertly but not openly implying that famous phrase of a dead and gone Vanderbilt.

WHO CAN TELL?

There is a difference of opinion as to our exact position in Nicaragua or at least people differ on the point as to whether we should interfere in deciding the inert affairs of that country. The action of landing troops, some of whom were killed, undoubtedly saved many lives of innocent women and children of the United States. If we do not interfere in some way, what is to prevent a recurrence of affairs which will jeopardize those lives. It is all very well to talk about protecting those under the flag, but some means should be devised to eliminate the cause of danger to those lives.

EUROPEAN WAR.

Reports from Eastern Europe are not very encouraging for a continuance of peace. The atmosphere is more than threatening. The war clouds hang heavy upon the horizon. It has extended to this country because of the call which has been sent to the Greeks living here to repair to their native land and defend the flag and fatherland. The sentiment as expressed by those young men on this side of the water is patriotic in the extreme. It shows a love of home, a devotion to flag and country and an allegiance that is higher than mere personal feelings. It is to be hoped that the fears entertained however may be dispelled. That wisdom and prudence may create a pathway towards the goal of peace and strife and disorder may be side tracked by that more progressive spirit which holds recourse to arms, as only the last expedient. And by the way, why cannot the differences which now exist be referred to the Hague peace tribunal. Much was expected of this august body. Its maintenance has been no small consideration. But it would seem as if its usefulness and functions were speedily forgotten if reference was made to it for consideration of differences, before the tocsin of war is sounded.

TO EDUCATE THE PUBLIC.

Brooklyn physicians want more autopsies. They believe that this will be a form of public education, which is warranted. 200 of them, in the interests of science and public education have agreed to donate their bodies to this work after death. They have gone further and requested other physicians to induce relatives of patients who may die to give the bodies for the purposes of autopsy. The action of the doctors is commendable and they are animated by public spirit and a desire to aid humanity as far as lies in their power, but as a wholesale suggestion it is doubtful if it will met with general approal. Few people are willing that the bodies of their dear ones should be mutilated after death and cast aside like a collection of old junk. Some people may have the same feeling as those doctors and may voluntarily donate their bodies, but relatives are not inclined that way and feel that they have no right to dispose of the remains of those who go before them in this way.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

Topics and Announcements For Coming Week

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

FIRST M. E. CHURCH, WOLLASTON

Rally Day was observed at the Methodist church Sunday with appropriate services. At 10.15 a love-feast was held, led by the pastor. A large audience was present at the morning worship to listen to the sermon preacheed by Rev. Wesley Wiggin, the pastor, who spoke of The Bible School It's Place, Purpose and Opportunity.

He said in part: "The Sunday school is one of the greatest movements in the world today. It is one of the greatest educational forces in the church. It is an institution of the church. It is not or at least, should not be thought of as seperate from, or independent of the church. It is a part of the church. We cannot for a moment consider the Sunday school without associating it with the church as its proper place for work and development. The church was instituted first. The Sunday school is the child of the church.

"The church sustains a vital relation to the Sunday school similar to that which the state sustains to the Public school. Its future is wrapped up in it. The church of tomorrow will be determined and directed very largely by the Sunday school of today. Hence there should be the most hearty co-operation between the church and the Sunday school. They cannot be seperated. Each is essential to the other for the greatest efficiency of both in the work for the Master in the evangelization of the world.

"What else the Sunday school may stand for, the one thing above all others is to promote christian education. If we fail in our conception of the purpose of the Sunday school of today we shall fail in the results to be realized, for an aimless purpose whether of individual or organization, will fail to bring forth results.

The Sunday school should co-operate with the family in its work of christian education. Christian education should aim at three things.

The relating of the scholar to the kingdom of God, the development of his christian character and the enlisting of his personal co-operation with the church in the evangelization of the world.

"The age at which most are won to God is found among those of our Sunday schools, 92 per cent. of the members of the christian churches of the United States were gathered into membership before they were 23 years of age, and the great majority of them before they were 18. Less than 2 per cent of those who pass 23 years or age ever become members of any church.

"By means of the Sunday school the church is extended. 87 per cent. of the church members in this country were once Sunday school scholars. Only 13 per cent were gathered from those who had no Sunday school training.

"And yet the Sunday school has fallen far below its opportunity for it is estimated that only 20 per cent. are brought into the church while in the school and only 20 per cent. unite with the church after leaving the school, hence we at once see the need of winning the child while it is young.

"The next step should be the development of christian character. The young should be encouraged to express their spiritual lives. We should solicit the co-operation of the scholar with the church in the extension of Christ's kingdom. The Sunday school is to secure the adjustment of the scholar to the church, that is his qualification for and his co-operation with the church in its world wide commission to disciple all nations.

"The music at the morning service was rendered by a double male quartet with Allan Painten as soloist. At the close of the sermon the pastor received eight into full membership into the church which was followed by the communion service which was observed by a large number.

J. A. Sedgwick, superintendent of the Sunday school, took charge of the school and carried out the special program to the satisfaction of all who were privileged to be present. The program consisted of readings by F. A. Bennett, Marjorie Fownes with exercises by several of the classes and a solo by Miss Irma Douglas. The superintendent spoke taking for his subject, The Bible, after which he read letters of greetings from Samuel Kay, of Albuquerque, New Mexico, a former Superintend of the school, also from Rev. H. A. Cassidy of Nortth Easton, and George Taylor of North Hanson, former scholars. John L. Miller of Quincy addressed the school bringing greetings and speaking of the wonderful dealings of God with his children.

The Junior League led by Miss Nevers was full of interest. S. N. Belcher led the Epworth League meeting at 6 o'clock, which was largely attended. At 7 o'clock the pastor preached, taking for his subject The Power of the Bible. The choir for the evening service was from the Junior League which sang with good results and which drew a large audience.

FINNISH CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. John E. Lillback, pastor of the Finnish Congregational church, was fairly busy, Sunday, although he has not yet fully recovered from the illness and operation he underwent. At 9.30 o'clock he addressed the Sunday school classes in general, on the subject, "The child life, how to live it." At 10.15 o'clock he addressed the Bible class, taking for his subject, "Attending Funeral in Nature."

At 11 o'clock the morning service was well attended and the pastor delivered a sermon, taking his text from Romans, 12:12, and subject, "The Prayerful Life."

At 2 o'clock he attended the funeral of Helen Toiviasven, daughter of Peter Toiviasven, of 11 Nelson street.

At 3.30 o'clock a Lord's supper was held in the church and guests were present from other cities.

The regular Christian Endeavor society service was held at 5 o'clock.

A general evening service was held at 7.30 oclock with a sermon "The Invitation to the Royal Wedding."

CHURCH WEDDING OF FINN COUPLE

Finnish Church Scene of Brilliant Nuptial Event

The Finnish people of the city were treated to a brilliant church wedding of two prominent members of the colony, at the Finnish Congregational church, Sunday evening, when Arvi I. Heinonen of Fitchburg and Miss Cecilia M. Kronholm a bookkeeper from Hakingfars, Finland, were united in marriage. The ceremony was performed by the pastor of the church Rev. John E. Lillback, a college class mate of the groom.

The wedding took the form of a part of the regular Sunday evening service at the church. The pastor preached a sermon appropriate to the occasion, taking his text from Matt. 22: 1-5, and his subject, "The invitation to the Royal Wedding."

The church was crowded with relatives and friends and invited guests. The male chorus of the church sang several selections. At 8.30 o'clock, Miss Kokkinen, the new organist of the church, took her place at the piano. The pastor took his station at the end of the middle aisle, with the Pilgrim manuel in his hand.

As the wedding march sounded over the hushed assemblage, John Hakkila, of Quincy, a brotherinlaw of the groom conducted the matrimonial candidates to the place in front of the pastor where with their attendants they were grouped on the platform. The bride was attended by Miss Tyne Heinonen of Quincy and the best man was Hannes Suomi of Fitchburg.

After the ceremony the male chorus again sang. This was followed by a reception in which all present tendered their hearty congratulations to the happy couple.

The information that Irving Shaw is giving to the citizens of Quincy at this time will have more effect than if presented at any other time. The Advertiser has been repeatedly giving similar information, but conditions were not ripe for it, so no lasting impression was made. There has been a minority of the City Council who have been talking along the same lines, but they were put in the class with the other "kickers." It is singular to see how a large share of the people were willing to be fooled during the past five years and now they are paying for their folly. One thing is certain, they will not stand for a repetition of the same conditions during the next five years. Mr. Shaw should keep up the good work and as the Advertiser is in possession of a lot of interesting material perhaps the people will be so stirred that things will change for the better after this year.—Quincy Advertiser.

If Your Voice Gets In, You Win

A Palmer (Mass.) subscriber told this story:

"I got word of a possible big contract in Western New York, packed my grip, and started on the night train. All next day I waited around that city, trying to see the head of the firm. He was busy—busy. I couldn't get at him. When night came I went home disgusted.

"As my eyes rested on the telephone in my office next morning, I said to myself: 'Wonder if you couldn't get me into that office---get my voice where I can't go myself?'

"It could and did. Within a half hour from the time I put in the call, I was awarded the contract.

The announcement of a long-distance call usually will secure a hearing. Many busy men prefer to transact business by telephone. It enables them to concentrate, to escape the emphasis of personalities---to make quick decisions.

THE BRIBE TAKERS

How a Clique of Corrupt City Fathers Was Brought to Book

The connection of the Burns detective agency with the exposures of bribers and bribe-takers in various towns throughout the country has been so well exploited that it is unnecessary for me to say anything about it here. I am going to tell the actual story of how the ring of choice crooks, in the council and out, who had for years looted the city of Springvale finally were run to earth, sent to prison, or otherwise rendered innocuous, and the political life of the city purged for a time, at least.

Springvale is not the real name of the town. The case is too recent, and there are too many raw threads of it still hanging about, to permit the use of the actual name. But shrewd readers, who have kept track of bribery stories in the newspapers in the last year, may be able to guess which of our cities it is that I am telling about. It is a typical case of the exposure of municipal corruption by outside detectives, and has been duplicated in a half dozen instances in other cities to my own knowledge.

Springvale had for years been what a magazine writer once called "corrupted and content." It was a busy manufacturing town. It was prosperous. That is, there usually was plenty of work to be had for the working people, plenty of business for the merchants, and plenty of money to be handled by the local banks. Most of this prosperity was due to the presence of the factories in the town. These factories were in the hands of a clique of men who placed money above all things. They would go to any length to make more money—and one of the easiest ways for them to make it was to violate the law, usually in the form of ignoring city ordinances.

Thus, there were violations of the child labor law, violations of street ordinances, water ordinances, building ordinances—in fact, violations of most of the articles in the municipal code applying to the regulation of factories were to be found in these establishments.

Naturally these violations could not be committed and continued, year after year, without being disturbed, without the connivance of the local authorities. The mayor, the councilman, the chief of police, the building commissioners, in fact, all the active heads of the city government, must have winked at the lawlessness of the factory owners, or the lawlessness would have been stopped.

Naturally, these heads of the local government, being human, and most of them politicians, did not agree to wink so accommodatingly solely for the good of their health. They did it for what there was in it. Thus, the factories became a fertile source of corruption of the city government of Springvale. When a factory needed the stub end of a street in its business, an ordinance would go through the council without any trouble—because the ways had been well greased by the factory's owner. If a factory wanted to tap a city water main and use city water without having it metered, it did it, because the water department was fixed. If a street car line felt that it needed a residence street in its business, that street it got in spite of the protests of property owners. The city hall machinery ran smoothly for the benefit of these factory barons because they controlled the oil that made the machinery go.

The whole town, naturally, in time came to take its moral tone from this influence. The banks were in on the deal. The bank that contributed most to the prosperity of the politicians was the one that got the deposits of city money. Several big merchants fell in line. Special privilege had the town by the throat; and while the town was prosperous in money matters it was poverty-stricken in good citizenship.

A few sterling citizens began to get tired of this state of affairs. They were men who believed that a city should be something besides a mere machine for the manufacturing of money. They believed that a city government should think first of the welfare of its citizens, and of the future of children growing up within its walls. They placed civic spirit above dollars, and to them was due the cleaning up of Springvale.

One of them was a judge on the local bench who had waged uncompromising war against the special interests and corruption. He was the only judge in town who was not the big interests' bound servant. Then there were two lawyers who had resisted the temptations of big fees offered them to turn crooked, one banker, one minister, two or three merchants, two or three others of various occupations, and one old retired capitalist. This man was the backbone and the foundation of the crusade. When this group of public-spirited men had determined on their course he quietly deposited $100,000 cash of his own money to be used in furthering the campaign.

It was the action of the city council in passing an ordinance that deprived the city of a square that had been set aside for improvement into a little park that brought on the war. The council calmly gave this tract to a railroad company for use as a switching yard. The steal was so raw that the mayor, who hitherto had been on the fence, vetoed the ordinance. The council laughed and passed the ordinance over his veto. Obviously there was only one answer to this: The railroad company had come across with enough money to make the council defy all public opinion. They had been bribed.

It was then that the decent and prominent citizens of the town got together and resolved to clean up the town.

"What is the best way to go about it?" asked one of them.

"Get after the council," said the old judge, grimly. "Prove them guilty of bribery. Send them to prison. Break them up. Throw the fear of God so hard into the city government of this town that it will be years before a city official dares to think of taking a bribe."

"That is right," agreed the retired capitalist. "We must scare this town so it will not forget."

The first process of concocting this scare was the sending of Cluffer and Dawson of the Burns Detective Agency to take up a temporary residence at the Imperial hotel—the leading hotel—in Springvale. Cluffer was a merry-looking little Englishman who could make friends with anybody in the world at ten minutes' notice. Dawson was a young, fine-appearing fellow who looked the part of a high class salesman, or a high class gambler, depending on your point of view. They merely registered at the Imperial, and commenced to spend money judiciously in the bars around the city hall. It was not long before they began to attract attention.

As in every city, the liquor emporiums near the city hall were the meeting places for a certain brand of politicians—the brand that Cluffer and Dawson were anxious to meet. Naturally they did not display any of this anxiety. After two or three days of being good fellows around town they began to make the acquaintance of the politicians who were steady customers of the places where the detectives were spending their time and money. At first the politicians were shy about making acquaintances. Later they began to warm up, and after a week of careful work the detectives found themselves part of the little ring that made these bar rooms their headquarters and whose occupations lay in the city hall. There were two councilmen with whom they became especially friendly, Corcoran and Stein, who were the leaders of the city hall clique. When they had established themselves on firm ground with these two, Cluffer and Dawson broached their alleged reason for being in Springvale.

"We represent the American Wood Block company," they said, "and we want to try to sell some blocks in Springvale. We sell the best blocks in the world."

Here they brought out some excellent samples of wooden paving blocks and began to expiate on their merits.

"Not only that, but we can sell these at prices far below those charged for the ordinary blocks," continued Cluffer. "We are so anxious to put our blocks into Springvale streets that we will make the city a price at which it can save all kinds of money on its paving bills. I'll bet you we can save the city $50,000 a year and give it better paving material than it ever had before."

"Well, what of it?" said Stein.

"Well," continued Dawson, "we thought if we could interest you gentlemen and could show you where we could save the city all this money, we might convince you that it would be in the interests of the city to introduce wood paving here."

"Yes," said Stein, who was the spokesman for the councilmen. "What of it?"

"Why," said Dawson, "you gentlemen, in order to help the city save money, ought to introduce an ordinance calling for wood paving on some streets. Then, after we had shown how much we could save the city, we might hope to get some bigger contracts."

Corcoran and Stein laughed as one man.

"Gee, but you're green!" laughed Stein. "Is that really what you got us up here to tell us?"

"Why, certainly," said Cluffer, all innocence. "We're salesmen for the wooden block company——"

"And you've got a couple of wooden blocks yourself," roared Stein. "If that's all you know about selling stuff to cities I don't see you holding your jobs much longer."

"Why?"

"Because that ain't the way it's done," said Stein. "Anyhow, not in Springvale. You got to have a different system than that, Johnnie, to do business here. Save the city money! What the devil do you suppose we care about the city? To hell with the city! If that's all you know about getting city contracts, take your little blocks and go. You can bet you'll never get a contract here, if that's all you know about the game."

Cluffer and Dawson, having found out what they were sent for—that the councilmen of Springvale were reaching openly for graft with greedy hands—and having implanted the germ of wood block paving in the minds of the two leaders, quietly packed their grips, paid their bills at the Imperial, and flitted out of the case.

Then I came into the game. Now, there really was an American Wood Block company, and the president of it was an old man named Steger. He was interested in running down grafters, and for the purposes of this job he loaned me his name and identity.

A few days after Cluffer and Dawson had retired from Springvale Alderman Stein got a letter from the president of the block company. It read:

"My Dear Alderman:

"I am afraid that my two salesmen who saw you in regard to furnishing wooden blocks for paving in your city knew little about how such things are managed. Now you and I, my dear Alderman, are men of experience and we know how such things are done. I hope to have the pleasure of seeing you at noon at the Imperial hotel in your city. It is long since I have taken part in any selling campaign, but in a matter like this, Alderman, I feel it is better and safer that I, and I alone, cover the ground.

"I suggest that you destroy this letter. I have always found it advisable to save as few papers as possible. I am, very truly yours,

"HERMAN V. STEGER,
"President American Wood Block Co."

When Stein got that letter he saw at once that it was from a man of his own heart. The tone of it showed the writer to be "right" according to Stein's peculiar point of view. The cautious advice to destroy the letter was a winner. It showed that "Steger" had been through the mill and was too wise a bird to overlook any bets. Stein sat down and wrote a brief note to Steger, advising him that he looked forward to the latter's appearance at the Imperial hotel with much pleasure.

I came into Springvale at night and registered at the Imperial as Herman V. Steger. I stayed close to my room the next morning. It seemed, indeed, that Stein was awaiting my arrival with much pleasure, for at noon a telephone message from him informed me that, having seen my name on the register, he waited impatiently to welcome me to Springvale.

"Come up, Mr. Stein," I said, "I have been expecting you."

Stein and Corcoran came up together. I had taken the best suite of rooms in the hotel. I had attired myself in a manner as expensive as was consistent with fairly good taste. I wanted to give the impression of plenty of ready money.

Stein and Corcoran greeted me cordially, though quietly.

"Don't be afraid to speak up, gentlemen," I said, laughing. "I have reserved both rooms adjoining my suite as a precaution."

We all laughed together at this sally. I ordered up champagne and cigars.

"Well, gentlemen," I said, "I am here to sell Springvale some cedar blocks. And I won't be so foolish as to talk about how much money I can save the city."

We had another laugh over this. We understood one another right away.

"The whole town ought to have wooden block paving," said Corcoran. "I know it. It's got to have it."

Again we laughed. We were getting along famously.

"Show me a good hand in this matter, gentlemen," said I, "and I'll show you a better one."

"We'll show you something tonight," said Stein. "It's a council meeting night. Just watch tomorrow morning's papers for the proceedings and you'll see how we do things in Springvale."

Next morning I saw that Stein had introduced and the council had passed an ordinance calling for the paving of two blocks of an important street with wood blocks.

"Well," said he, when he called upon me soon after breakfast, "how do you like that for action? That's just a sample we showed you. Now all you got to do is to pay the price and we come across with the whole delivery of goods."

"How large is that delivery?" I asked.

"Why, we'll pave the whole damn city with blocks and specify your brand," said he, "if you'll do the right thing."

"What do you call the right thing?" I asked.

"Well," he said, "some of these aldermen are cheap skates and some are what you call wise guys. Some can be reached for a ten-case note and some want as high as five hundred. There's 18 of 'em to be delivered, and I guess $5,000 would just about be right for what you want."

"Five thousand is what I had thought would be right," I agreed. "But how is the money to be got to the right men?"

"I'm the money wagon," said Stein. "I handle all such deals for the boys."

Then without any solicitation on my part he began to assure me of his reliability by relating in detail how he had carried money from briber to bribe-takers in half a dozen cases. He had a wonderful memory. He gave dates, places, figures and names with an exactness that was marvelous. He told how So-and-so had given him such and such a sum in such and such a place, how he had split it up in certain amounts and given so much to that alderman and so much to that one, and how such and such an ordinance had been shoved through the council as a consideration. He had been so accustomed to dealing in graft that he looked upon it as a pure business transaction. He even referred to entries in a note book to substantiate some of his statements.

When he was through I said, "You say you want to see the money in your hands before the ordinance goes through. Now, I don't mind having my money up, but I want to see the goods delivered before I let go of it. Now, you go out and get your men one by one. Come back and give me your word that you've got them, and how much they cost you, and you can have the $5,000. I don't care how much you make out of it; I don't care if it only costs you a thousand to get your men. I want to hear you tell me that you've got 'em before the money becomes yours."

"All right," said he. "I can get my men in one day."

He did, too. That night he was back with a list of his men. So much for this man, so much for that—he had them all there and the amounts required to buy their votes for the shameful measure he was putting through. This measure called for nothing more or less than paving about half of the streets of Springvale, except the boulevards, with wooden blocks. And my company was to have the contract of furnishing them. It was raw, rotten robbery; but Springvale was used to just that sort of thing.

I paid over the $5,000 in cash and Stein made good on his promise. Next council meeting the ordinance went through with a rush. Stein called on me the morning after.

"Well, are you satisfied with the way things are done here?" he said.

"Perfectly, Stein, perfectly," I replied heartily. "Things could not have been done any better to suit me. But, Stein, I wonder if they have been done to suit you?"

"Why?" he said. Then, as if instantly scenting a rat, "Why? What in hell do you mean?"

"Suppose," said I, "that I should tell you that every word that you and I have spoken in this room has been overheard by a committee of prominent citizens in this town and several stenographers. What would you say?"

He looked me up and down and his usually red face began to go white.

"Ain't you in it as deep as I am?" he demanded. "What license you got to talk that way?"

"Oh, I'm just a detective sent down here to get the goods on you, Stein," I said. "Look here."

I went to one of the walls of the rooms, and raising my fist shot it through the wall-paper where the wall had been cut out to make listening from the next room easy. I went to another room and did the same.

"I reserved those adjoining rooms, Stein," said I, "to give these men a chance to listen to you and me."

With that I threw open a door and in came the group of public-spirited men who had set out to clean up Springvale.

"I have often longed for the opportunity to sentence you and your clique to the penitentiary, Stein," said the judge. "Now it seems that I am going to have that opportunity."

And he did. Before we had got through with that crowd fifteen of them were in state's prison, two of them were in jail, one committed suicide, two fled the country, and one died of heart failure when he heard his sentence. It was a terrible toll of punishment, but it was justified.

Stein turned state's evidence and helped us bare bribe cases for five years back. He had been in all of them himself, but he was punished for only one. He got two years. He and I got to be fairly good friends before his trial fell due, and it was partly my intercession, and explaining the great service he had done us in unravelling the whole mess, that kept him from finding a harder fate.

Springvale is fairly clean now, politically. The politicians are too scared to be crooked—for the time being.

WOMEN OUTCASTS BARRED

Not Allowed in Old Quarters or Chicago Residential Section

Chicago, Oct. 8.—Protests against the advance of the undesirable women of the "levee district" on the residence neighborhoods of the city were lodged with the police at nearly every outlying station. The situation placed the police department in a dilemma as well as the women in question.

The police were given instructions by Chief McWeeny to prevent the routed vice army from entering the residence districts, and the state attorney had the chief's co-operation in keeping the places closed once they had been raided. This condition placed the "undesirables" in the position of being driven one way by the state and another by the city.

Many of the women have already left the city and under present conditions it is believed many more will follow this plan.

CRUSH REBEL FORCE

American Marines Are Now Guarding Nicaraguan Towns

Managua, Nic., Oct. 8.—American marines have completely crushed the organized Nicaraguan revolt with a loss of four dead and sixteen wounded. The final step in the campaign was the capture of the town of Leon.

Two hundred marines are also stationed at Chichigalpa, where a rebel mob attacked the marines and were repulsed with a loss of thirteen killed and more than a score wounded. Five Americans were wounded in this clash but none will die.

The bravery shown by the United States marines in their short but decisive campaign has never been surpassed.

CHAPTER XVII.

In Which Keziah Decides to Fight.

The news was flying from house to house along the main road. Breakfasts were interrupted as some neighbor rushed in to tell the story which another neighbor had brought to him or her. Mr. Ellery was very sick and it was feared he had the smallpox. Grace Van Horne was with him, had taken him back to the shanty, and insisted upon staying there until the doctor came.

At the Daniels's house the servant girl rushed into the dining room to serve the toast and the story at one swoop. Captain Elkanah's dignity deserted him for an instant and his egg spoon jingled to the floor. Annabel's face turned a dull red. Her eyes flashed sparks.

"Pa!" she cried, "I—I—if you don't do something now I'll never—"

Her father shook his head warningly. "Debby," he said to the maid, "you needn't wait."

Debby departed reluctantly. After the kitchen door had closed, Captain Elkanah said: "My dear, we mustn't be too hasty in this matter. Remember, Mr. Ellery is very sick. As for—for the Van Horne girl, we haven't heard the whole truth yet. She may not be there at all, or it may be just an accident—"

"Accident! Pa, you make me boil Accident! Accidents like that don't happen. If you let her stay there, or if— Oh, to think of it! And we were calling him a hero and—and everything! Hero! he stayed there just so she might—"

"Hush! hush, child!"

"I shan't hush. Pa, are you going to let him disgrace himself with her?"

"No, no. Probably there ain't any idea of his marrying her. If there is—"

"If there is you put him out of the church and out of town. And as for her— O-oh! And we've been having him here at dinner and—and I have— Oh, I shall die! I wish I was dead!"

Then followed hysterics and agony, greedily listened to by Debby, whose ear was at the crack of the door. Captain Elkanah soothed and pleaded and tried to pacify. It ended by his promising to investigate and, if necessary, take steps "immejitly."

Lavinia Pepper sprung the mine on her brother. Kyan was horrified. He had grown to be one of Ellery's most devoted worshipers.

One of the very first to hear of the minister's illness was Keziah Coffin. Mrs. Parker told her and Keziah started for the beach before the tale of Grace's part in the night's happenings reached the village. She did not wait for a conveyance, hardly waited to throw a shawl over her shoulders, but began to cover the three miles on foot She had walked nearly two-thirds of the distance when Captain Zeb Mayo overtook her and gave her a seat in his chaise.

They said little during the drive, the shock and anxiety forbidding conversation. At the ropes was the same group, larger now, and Dr. Parker's horse was hitched to one of the posts

"You can't go in, Mrs. Coffin," said Thoph Black. "The doctor give us his orders not to let nobody get by. I guess nobody wants to, but all the same—"

Keziah paid not the slightest attention to Mr. Black. She stooped beneath his arm, under the rope and was on her way to the shanty before they realized her intention. The living room was empty, but at the sound of her step some one came from the room adjoining. That some one was Grace

Dr. Parker appeared, holding up a hand for silence.

"Hush!" he cried. "He's quiet now and I think he will sleep. Don't talk here. Go outside, if you must talk—and I suppose you must."

Grace led the way. Fortunately, the door was on the side not visible from the spot where Captain Zeb and the rest were standing. Keziah, bewildered and amazed at the girl's presence, followed dumbly.

"Now, auntie," whispered Grace turning to her, "you want to know how he is, of course. Well, I think he is better. The doctor thinks so, too. But why did you come here?"

"Why did I come? Why, because my place was here. I belonged here For the love of mercy's sakes what are you doin' here? With him? And the smallpox!"

"Hush. I can't help it. I don't care I don't care for anything any more I'm glad I came. I'm glad I was the one to find him and help him. No matter what happens—to me—I'm glad. I never was so glad before. I love him, Aunt Keziah. I can say it to you, for you know it—you must know it. I love him and he needed me and I came. He was calling my name when I found him. He might have died there, alone in the wet and cold, and I saved him. Think what that means to—"

"He's asleep," he said. "And he's better, much better. And I'll tell you something else, if you won't make too much noise about it—he hasn't got the smallpox. He is pretty close to brain fever, though, but I guess he'll dodge that this time, with care. On the whole, Keziah, I'm glad you came. This young lady," with a movement of the head toward Grace, "has done her part. She really saved his life, if I'm not mistaken. Now, I think she can go away and leave him to you and me. I'll pretty nearly guarantee to have him up and out of this—this pesthole in a fortnight."

Here was joyful tidings, the better for being so unexpected. Keziah leaned against the boards and drew a long breath. Grace said nothing, but, after a moment, she went into the house.

"That's a good thing, too," commented Parker, watching her as she went. "I wanted to talk with you, Keziah Coffin, and right away. Now, then, there's something up, something that I don't know about, and I rather guess you do. Young women—even when they're her kind and that's as good a kind as there is—don't risk smallpox for any young man they pick up casually."

"She Must Marry Him, Or He'll Die."

Keziah considered. "All right, doctor," she said, when she reached a decision, "all right; I'll tell you the whole thing."

She went on to tell all she knew of her parson's love story.

Dr. Parker listened.

"Hum!" he said thoughtfully, "I see. What made her change her mind so suddenly? You say, or you gather from what Mr. Ellery told you, that she had all but agreed to marry him. She cares for him, that's sure. Then, all at once, she throws him over and accepts Nat. Of course her uncle's sudden seizure was a shock and he wanted Nat to have her, but she isn't the kind of girl to be easily swayed. But never mind that, that doesn't count now. Let's look at things as they are this minute. She's here and folks know it. As they do know it they'll begin to talk, and the more they talk the farther from the truth they'll get—most of 'em. Nat, poor chap, is dead, so her promise to him is canceled. Ellery will get well if he isn't troubled. If she leaves him he'll go to pieces again, so she mustn't leave. And she can't stay without an explanation. I say let's give the explanation; let's come right out with the announcement that they're engaged."

"But she's a Come-Outer and—there's the church."

"Well, I know it. But he never was so popular as he is now. And she isn't by any means a steady-going Come-Outer. Why, Zeke Bassett and the rest have been finding fault with her and calling her a backslider. That'll help. Then you trust me to whoop up her heroism and the fact that without her he would have died. We can do it, Keziah. Come on! I've tackled a good many jobs, but matchmaking isn't one of 'em. Here goes to tackle that."

Keziah was delighted; here was work after her own heart. But she still hesitated.

"Doctor," she said, "you've forgot one thing, that's Gracie herself. Would she marry him now, knowing it may mean the loss of his ministry and all, and more than she would at first? I don't believe it."

"That's your part, Keziah. You've got to show her she must marry him or he'll die; see?"

Keziah's hesitation was at an end. Her face lit up.

"I say good!" she cried. "And now I want to give you a piece of advice, your course for the first leg, as you might say: you see Cap'n Zebedee Mayo."

"Hurraph! Cap'n Zeb is the first man I mean to see."

CASNOW &

GOFF MASTER OF HIS COURT

Will Not Tolerate Dilatory Tactics n Becker Trial

GIVES WARNING TO COUNSEL

McIntyre Subsides When Told He is In Danger of Arrest—But One Juror Agreed Upon at Opening Day of Policeman's Trial—Many Talesmen Had Formed Opinions

New York, Oct. 7.—The net result of the first day of the trial of Lieutenant Charles Becker for the murder of Herman Rosenthal was the selection of one juror.

He is Harold B. Skinner, manager of the branch office of the New York Edison company. Skinner becomes foreman of the jury.

Fourteen talesmen were examined in the two sessions of the opening day, and after five hours passing with but one juryman in the box, Justice Goff notified District Attorney Whitman and Becker's chief counsel, John W. McIntyre, that if the jury is not completed by 5 p. m. today, he will order night sessions.

Justice Goff said very plainly that he will not tolerate methods of jury selection which have been, he said, a scandal in the past. Presiding with a firm hand, alert in detecting stratagems of counsel distasteful to him and emphatic in repressing unnecessary argument and time wasting tactics, the justice was at all times the master of his court. Bearding him early in the proceedings, McIntyre subsided speedily upon being told that removal and arrest was imminent.

When the day's work was over at 6 p. m., it was plain that the difficulty of getting a jury satisfactory to Becker himself would require night sessions. Incessantly watchful, keen in sensing the antagonism of talesmen, Becker rejected more than one man who appeared to be satisfactory to his counsel. Impassive and concentrated, the accused policeman was a figure to be marked.

incedefiedaJfifi 5,er.mfhfiifi93v

The cause of slow progress was the statement of every talesman questioned that from reading the newspapers he had formed a strong opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the defendant. Nearly all believed that their own opinion could not be changed by the evidence; but there was that in their manner and in their tone which made Becker and his counsel wary of them, even though the justice in many instances held that they should not be disqualified because of an opinion formed previous to the hearing of the testimony and overruled McIntyre's challenges for bias. So hat counsel for defence were compelled to use four of their thirty peremptory challenges.

The district attorney challenged peremptorily three times. Some talesmen were rejected for perfectly obvious causes.

FUNERAL OF ZELIG

Rival Gangs of East Side Declare Truce During the Ceremony

New York, Oct. 8.—"Big Jack" Zelig, he gunman, was buried with all the pomp the east side could give. Rival gangs declared a truce to attend his funeral. His body was borne to the grave through streets lined three and four deep with onlookers, with a train numbering thousands as an escort.

The police were fearful that rival gangs would settle their differences at the funeral and had a guard near the body of the gunman ever since he was shot and killed Saturday night. Twenty patrolman and thirty detectives kept the crowd in the streets moving.

A squadron of mounted police met the funeral train in Brooklyn and accompanied it, to preserve order, to the cemetery.

IMPORTANT REDUCTION

In Rates for Savings Bank Insurance Promised

The State Actuary of Savings Bank Life Insurance announces a reduction in the rates of the straight life and 20 payment life policies for $500. to take effect November 1st.

This reduction was made only after consultation with leading New York actuaries and it was unanimously agreed that the reduction could and should be made. The change is too be retroactive. All premiums after November 1st, not only on new policies but also on policies already issued, will be on the basis of the reduced rates.

The amount of the reduction varies at different ages, but on a straight life policy for $500 at the age 50 the reduction amounts to $188 on the 20 payment life policy for $500 at the same age the reduction amounts to $.96.

The premiums on the 20-year endowment policies issued by the Savings Banks are already much lower than those of other companies and this reduction on the straight life and 20-payment life policies also makes these policies considerably lower. These rates prove that Savings Bank Life Insurance is the least expensive insurance obtainable in Massachusetts.

PERSISTENT VIOLATOR

Of Game Laws Brought to Justice After Year's Pursuit

A desperate violator of the game laws of Massachusetts has just been brought to justice by agents of the American Game Protective and Propagation association. At the request of the Massachusetts authorities, D. C. Speenburgh of the association, has been at work on the case of Chauncy A. Burdick of North Adams, for nearly a year and has succeeded in getting evidence which resulted in convictions on 19 accounts for violations of the game and excise laws. A prison sentence of three months and fines amounting to $290 were imposed.

The Association stands ready to send its experts to the aid of game officials in any part of the United States, whether to assist in legal work or in securing evidence in baffling cases. It has been found in many instances that a man from outside is successful where the local warden fails on account of being too well known. Through its special agents the Association is accomplishing much in this line.

MORAL WELFARE UPPERMOST

In Efforts of Dr. Crafts Along Lines Laid Out

This is to be a busy day for Dr. Wilbur Crafts of Washington, who arrived in town this morning from New London, Conn., where he has held a very succesful and largely attended series of meetings.

This morning he addressed the Ministerial association on the subject "National Perils and Hopes." His grasp of the subject and his happy manner of expression and ready wit immediately won his audience. Dr. Crafts spoke on moral conditions in the country and told of the fight which is being made against great odds to make our country better.

This evening at 6.15 there is to be a supper and conference at the Y. M. C. A., at which Dr. Crafts will tell of his methods of "Safeguarding adolescent boys." About 30 men representing the schools, churches, Sunday schools, the court, the City Council, the local industries, and other agencies which influence boys in the city will attend.

At the evening meeting at 8 o'clock, Dr. Crafts will given an address on "That Boy and Girl of Yours," in Bethany church. The doors will be opened at 7.30.

McDEVITT ON THE WAR PATH

Democratic Candidate Carrying on Aggressive Campaign

Ex-Councilman John J. McDevitt of this city, democratic candidate for Senator from the first Norfolk district, spoke to 200 voters at a rally Monday evening at Canton. Other speakers included Edward Gilmore, democratic candidate for Congress from the 14th district, and Dr. John P. Ratigan of Hyde Park, democratic candidate for Councillor.

He also pledged himself as being in favor of a bill to compel railways to have their cars equipped with lifting jacks and related a number of instances where many serious accidents could have been averted had lifting jacks been available.

Tonight candidate McDevitt will visit East Milton where an open air rally will be held at the corner of Willard and Adams streets. The other speakers will be Edward Gilmore, Dr. John P. Ratigan Hyde Park, John J. Gallagher, candidate for the House from the Milton district.

EDITOR CHAPPEL AS A LECTURER

Rare Treat for Ladies' Society of the Memorial Church

Besides being a lecturer and editor of the National Magazine, Mr. Chappel is well known as an author. His work entitled "Heart Throbs" is sufficient to cause all who are familiar with the book to wish to see and hear its author.

Mr. Chappel's family has a summer residence at Squantum and he is deeply interested in the welfare of this section of Quincy.

His lecture can not help being interesting and valuable to all the society members and they are desirous of sharing this privilege with all their friends who will come and help give the lecturer a hearty welcome.

The Elmendorf lectures will be earlier this season than usual that Mr. Elmendorf may go to India in December. The Boston courses open this week on Friday evening, the other on Saturday afternoon at Symphony hall. The five subjects are: The heart of the Rockies, The Grand Canyon, the great Southwest, the Pacific coast and Yellowstone park. For the first lecture, Colorado Springs will be chosen as a central starting point for many short journeys to places of great interest, such as Monument Park, The Garden of the Gods, Manitou, Pike's Peak, Cheyenne Canyon, and the new and wonderful automobile trip over the Crystal Park road. Then a most interesting railway journey over the mountains to Cripple Creek—the famous gold camp of Colorado; through the Royal Gorge of the Arkansas to the Black Canyon; thence over the Alpine Pass to Silverton and Ouray, winding back through various canyons to Colorado Springs.

DISCUSSED BY 100.000 FANS

Boston--New York World's Series Stirs All Gotham

OPENING GAME COMES TODAY

Will Probably Be Witnessed by Nearly Forty Thousand People—Prevailing Odds 10 to 8 and 10 to 7 In Favor of Red Sox—Wood and Mathewson as Opposing Pitchers

New York, Oct. 8.—New York has gone baseball mad and 12,000 persons stood at the ticket booths at the Polo grounds yesterday when the sale of reserved seats for the world's championship series between the Giants and the Red Sox was opened.

Many of the ticket seekers had been in line all night, as the fans had begun to gather as early as 10 o'clock Sunday night. Among those in line were a number of out-of-town people.

Buzzing like bees about every hotel entrance, scurrying hither and thither in the different lobbies, and ever giving evidence of the tremendous wave of baseball enthusiasm that has swept over the city of the Great White Way, 100,000 fans are hungrily discussing the situation.

The lineup for today is as follows:

Boston

Harry Hooper .....right field
Steve Yerkes .....second base
Tris Speaker .....centre field
Duffy Lewis .....left field
Larry Gardner .....third base
Jack Stahl .....first base
Heinie Wagner .....shortstop
Forrest Cady .....catcher

New York

Josh Devore .....left field
Larry Doyle .....second base
Fred Snodgrass .....centre field
John Murray .....right field
Fred Merkle .....first base
Charles Herzog .....third base
John Meyers .....catcher
Arthur Fletcher .....shortstop
Christy Mathewson .....pitcher

Umpires, aNtional league—Klem and Rigler.

Umpires, National league—Klem and O'Laughlin.

Time of game—2 p. m.

Favorites—Boston, 10 to 8.

Expected attendance—38,000.

Twenty-eight members of the Red Sox team and 200 loyal fans from Boston arrived here this morning.

JOHN J. McGRAW

Scrappy Manager of the Giants

Although there is but little betting the Red Sox rule favorites to win the series. Prevailing odds are 10 to 8 and 10 to 7. It is believed that the opposing pitchers in the first game will be Mathewson for New York and Wood for the Red Sox.

Indian summer weather for the world's series—the best baseball days in the history of the championship clashes between the leading teams in the two big leagues—this is the good news the weather man has for the thousands of fans in New York and Boston who are on tip toe for the call of "play ball" this afternoon at the Polo grounds.

With the balmy weather of the past two days lasting through the week "Smoky Joe" Wood, Collins, Tesreau, Mathewson and Marquard will be able to hurl the ball across the plate in top notch form. Fans agree that the pitchers would gain many percent in effectiveness if they did not have to contend with the winds and chills of the October days that have marked previous contests, or with the wet weather that interrupted the Athletics-Giants' session last year.

The infielders will also be able to play a far snappier game in Indian summer weather. Their throwing arms will be freer from kinks. The fans, too, will share in the weather man's boon. No bundling up as if they were to see a football game will be needed. The sun seats will be nice and cozy and no chilling draughts will sweep the grandstand.

The whole complexion of the historic series will be changed by the great weather prospects. A more exciting series viewed in greater comfort is assured.

Jake Stahl and his champion Red Sox went direct from the train this morning to Bretton hall, Broadway and Eighty-Sixth street, where they rested preparaory to the conflict with the Giants at the Polo grounds.

The members of the national commission arrived last night and all the magnates of the two leagues are now upon hand. Every road leading into New York is operating specials and every vein of the city throbs with the fever of the great national game.

The Red Sox got into the Grand Central depot promptly at 6 o'clock, where they were welcomed by a mildly enthusiastic mob. There was no demonstration such as a New York team would have been accorded, as New York fans regard the Sox with considerable apprehension and a big section of the Giants' supporters fear the worst in view of what Stahl's men have done to the Athletics.

CHILD RESEMBLED HER OWN OFFSPRING

Boston Woman Is Held on Charge of Kidnapping

Boston, Oct. 8.—Mrs. Mary Tacy, a pretty woman, aged 21, accused of taking 3-year-old Louis Finkel because the little fellow bore a wonderful resemblance to a child of her own from whom she had been separated, was arraigned before Judge Bolster on the charge of kidnapping. She was held in $300 for the grand jury.

Mrs. Tacy peaded not guilty. She was not represented by counsel, and during the whole time she was on trial on the grave charge, she spoke only twice.

Mrs. Tacy had spent all her savings in buying clothing and toys for the child since she took him last Friday, but told the police that she realized she could not support the boy, after she had discovered he was not her own, and that she was about to turn him over to his parents just as she was arrested.

POWERS UNITE FOR PEACE

Great Britain Agrees to Intervention In the Balkans

Paris, Oct. 8.—The European powers have decided to intervene at the Balkan capitals and at Constantinople as soon as it is possible to make arrangements to that effect. Great Britain has signified her acceptance of the French proposals so that all the powers are now in accord.

All the other powers had accepted with some modifications the French premier's plan for intervention, but Great Britain had hesitated in going so far as to assume with the other powers responsibility for securing from Turkey bread reforms in Macedonia.

TRAMPS ABODE FIRE HAZARD

Request for Removal of Old Building Reasonable

A move was made in the right direction by Wollaston citizens when they petitioned to have the Council act and have that old building on Hancock street near the corner of Beale street torn down. The building is now nothing more or less than a fire hazard. It has been set on fire many times but owing to the promptness of the fire department but little o it, has been burned. All of the doors in the building are gone and there is nothing left of the glass in the windows, so that it has now become the abode for any tramp who desires to find a lodging for the night. The building should have been torn down long ago.

AFTER SHORT ILLNESS.

Mrs. Susan L. Amadon died at the Quincy City Hospital Monday after a short illness, aged 54 years. Her body was removed to the home of her daughter Mrs. Charles W. Adams, 34 Fairmount Way. Mrs. Amadon has been a resident of Quincy for a number of years and formerly resided at Wakefield. Burial will be in that city.

DISTRICT COURT.

John Cullen who was defaulted in court Monday for drunkenness came in and was fined $15. He said the reason he did not show up Monday was because his head ached so badly.

Theodore Hayden of Randolph who was defaulted in court a few days ago came into court and paid his fine of $50.

If City Conditions Are to Be Improved According to Mr. Shaw

Council Weak In Men Capable of Directing Large Business

Editor of the Ledger:

For some time past there has been a certain amount of criticism that the series of letters on "What's the Matter with Quincy?" did not suggest any remedy for the conditions which have been laid bare.

Believing that a full realization of these conditions is an essential prerequisite to the development of any adequate remedy, it has been the plan to present the conditions first, and take up the matter of remedies afterward.

There are still a few departments of our city's administration which may be profitably investigated and commented upon presently, but the time seems to be ripe for the suggestion of one remedy, in the prompt application

QUINCY MUSIC HALL

A THEATRE LICENSE and "EXCELLENT" in every single particular, is now issued to Music Hall— "Excellent" for:—

Structural condition,
Facility of escape of audience,
Heating apparatus,
Water supply,
Lighting apparatus,
Condition of fire apparatus,
Condition of sprinklers,
Curtains,
Protection neighborhood hazard,
General condition of appliances and apparatus,
General condition of stage.
Rating as a whole
With regard to safety of audience

There are few—very few Halls in the State that thus have the highest class of License and the highest rating in every particular. Previously the fire exits and facilities for fire prevention were ample for a Hall License, but to obtain our present highest class of License and the highest rating in every particular, the whole main exit was torn down and made absolutely fireproof, large automatic smoke and fire vents were constructed over the stage, all scenery was made fireproof, and in addition to chemical fire extinguishers and fire pails throughout the Hall, automatic sprinklers and fire hose were installed on the stage. Further, the previous generous exit facilities were very greatly increased so that there are now ten (10) doors opening from the Hall, and six (6) separate exits: two (2) of 8 feet each, one (1) of 7 1-2 feet, two (2) of 5 feet each, and one (1) of 3 1-2 feet, A TOTAL OF 37 FEET OF EXIT. All exits are lighted continuously by both gas and electricity. There is an asbestos curtain, by which the stage can be instantly cut off from the Hall proper.

The Location is in the heart of the city. The street cars with double tracks pass the door.

The Floor is of selected maple laid with the greatest care, and is kept in perfect condition, being covered with canvas when not used for dancing.

The Ventilation—a most important consideration—is such as to keep the air pure with even a crowded Hall. A large fan has recently been installed.

The Hall is Lighted by electricity, brilliantly and pleasantly, and with a switchboard arranged so that all desired effects can be obtained in the Hall proper or on the stage. Gas is used as an auxiliary light.

The Heating is direct—indirect, ample and giving the best results.

The Stage has been designed with care, and is furnished with a particularly generous supply of attractive and appropriate scenery.

For Advertising, the Music Hall Billboards are valuable.

To Darken the Hall, there are special window fittings so that at noonday the Hall can be made as dark as at midnight.

As a whole, Quincy Music Hall has been carefully planned to meet the requirements of those who wish an absolutely safe and large and really first class Hall.

MORAL WELFARE OF THE YOUTH

Schools Fall Short of Developing a Right Character

IN YOUNG MEN OF THE DAY

The large audience which gathered at the Bethany church, Tuesday evening to hear Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, Ph. D., of Washington, speak upon that prolific subject, "That Boy," was not disappointed in the least measure. In fact they were delighted at the manner in which the subject was treated and it afforded them new light upon the subject of dealing with the boy problem.

Dr. Crafts put in a very busy day while in Quincy. In the morning he addressed the Ministers Association. In the evening at 6.15 oclock he attended a supper and conference of leading citizens included at the Y. M. C. A., the party including Judge Avery, the probation officer, ministers school teachers and others. This proved a highly pleasing gathering. The supper was served by a committee of ladies from the Y. M. C. A. Woman's Auxiliary, Mrs. A. H. Gilson, Mrs. William F. Cummings, Mrs. A. F. Bromley and Mrs. E. I. Beale.

The meeting at the Bethany church of course proved the big attraction and the church was filled to its capacity. J. A. Sedgwick, presided.

Rev. Dr. Crafts spoke in part as follows:

"Do you know that the death of males in this country every year exceed those of females by more than a hundred thousand? And do you know that in childhood more females die than males, and that the tables turn at the age when young men commonly begin to drink and debauch themselves? And do you know that while we have cut down by twenty-five per cent the total deaths of persons, that Americans above forty years of age are dying faster than ever before—most of this excess being due to the break down of the great vital organs in men—the kidneys, liver, heart, lungs and brain? This physical break down is accompanied by a corresponding moral break down, for it is moral degeneracy in men and nations that brings physical degeneracy as science is now proving more conclusively than ever before.

Males are not only filling more than their share of the graves, but, what is worse, more than their share of the insane wards and prison cells.

To save men from premature death and worse dishonor, and to draw to the churches men who allow their moral natures no help from religion, we must catch these men young, we must save them as boys.

And here we are confronted by the fact that home and church and Sun-

WILLIAMSON QUITS MOOSERS

Will Return to the Ranks of the G. O. Party

Word was received at Republican state committee headquarters Tuesday, that Maj. Charles Williamson, former mayor of Brockton, refuses to abide by the result of the postcard primary in which he was defeated for the Progressive nomination in the 14th congressional district by Col. Henry L. Kincaide of Quincy.

As a result, Williamson will quit the Bull Moose party as far as its state ticket is concerned and will support the regular g. o. p. state ticket nominees and Congressman Harris.

JOHN A. CARLSON PASSED AWAY

Soon after coming to Quincy he began work as a stone mason which occupation he followed. He was prominently identified with the Swedish Baptist church of which he has been a member for twenty years.

He leaves a widow, three daughters and a son. He also leaves three brothers, two of whom reside in this country and two sisters. One of his sisters Miss Christina Carlson has been an African missionary for the past seven years. THE INJURED IMPROVING

Those Caught In Train Accident Still Feel the Shock

HUSSEY DOING WELL

The passengers who were on the West Quincy train which was wrecked in the South Station yard Tuesday morning are doing well this morning and while none received serious injuries all are confined to their beds suffering the effects of a nervous shock.

Richard Hussey of Furnace Brook Parkway was thrown against the seat in front of where he was sitting and removed to his home Tuesday afternoon. He is doing well.

Miss Belle McGilvray of Crescent street is reported improved this morning, but still in bed.

Miss Mary King of California avenue and Miss Alice ONeil of Rogers street are at their respective homes and both are resting comfortably.

Miss Sadie and Miss Mary Chisholm of Bryant avenue, East Milton, are at their homes and both are doing well.

The train that was wrecked left West Quincy at 8.03 and arrived at the station yard at about 8.20. A sudden change of signals which switched the train from track 27 to 28 caused the damage.

On August 3, outside the South Boston yard, the 11.03 was wrecked, and eight people killed and many West Quincy people were injured. A week ago the train leaving at the same hour struck and killed Mrs. Mary E. Gray, a 73 year old resident of East Milton, as she was crossing the track near Pierce and Willard streets.

It was a significant coincidence that Tuesdays crash came on the 34th anniversary of Quincy's first train wreck, which occurred near the Norfolk Downs station. A party of picnicers from the North End, Boston, were returning from Silver Lake, Plymouth, on an express and plowed into a freight which was leaving a spur track.

The fatality list was large and among the notables who met death was "Patsy Regan," the international champion oarsman. On that day he had been defeated by "Mike Davis," after one of the finest sculling exhibitions ever seen in New England. Patsy was confident of victory when he left home on the morning of the race and remarked that he would rather be brought home dead than lose the race. Unfortunately Patsy met his death on his way home.

THE TWO PROPOSITIONS FOR QUINCY DOCK FACILITIES

Faxon and Johnson Lands and What the Owners Will Agree to Accept

One an Outright Sale for $100,000, Other $1500 Yearly Rental

The importance of the dock system question to the people of this city and its future growth and prosperity is apparent to all. What bearing it may have upon the present industry or influence it may bring to bear upon the introduction of new industry, is an unknown quantity at the present time. That can only be determined by the future experience. It is a matter in which haste can very wisely be made slowly.

Either proposition calls for a large expenditure of money. So that the people may have some adequate idea upon the subject, the Ledger publishes here the propositions submitted by Mr. Faxon, and the Johnson Lumber Co., also the recommendation of Commissioner Crane.

JOHNSON LUMBER CO., WHARF PROPERTY.

The principal features are as follows:

This wharf is located on Town River, at the head of navigation, and is the most central distributing point in the city for material received by water It is also the most central receiving point for both rough and hammerd stone from the quarries and stone sheds.

This wharf, having an area of about 153,000 square feet, exclusive of flat lands and dam and a frontage of approximately 900 lineal feet, is not built on meadow or marsh land, but is a solid gravel hill leveled off.

The property is enclosed with a stone wall costing $15,000.00. It also has buildings upon the same worth $10,000.00 ;also two water wheels valued at $1,000.00. The price put upon this property is $100,000.00. Deducting value of stone work, buildings and water wheels, leaves $74,000.00 for 153,000 feet of land (not including flats, dam and water rights of canal), making the cost per foot about 48 cents.

Water rights, by the acquiring of which the lock system in present use could be abolished, thereby opening

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

William Jennings was the man who put the stinging B into Ryan at the Baltimore convention.

The Brockton Progressives lay the defeat of Major Williamson at the door of Matt Hale. What about this cry of no bosses in the party?

Unless some of the candidates get a move on they will not wake up until counted out by the voters on election day.

Judge Goff is living up to the reputation he made years ago. He will not be bluffed and lawyers as well as others must conduct themselves properly in his court.

Everybody, or nearly everybody is base ball crazy. If Boston should lose the championship there will be an increase in the asylum inmates.

As a back fire that claim of the I. W. W. men in Lawrence that they were afraid of their lives proved unavailing. It was a good bluff, but few took any stock in it.

The base ball press agent was right on his job with a reported threat to do "Woodie" to death.

No wonder conditions are such as they are when millions of people are going bug house over base ball instead of giving sober consideration to the more serious problems of life, which are being treated more particularly at this time on the eve of a presidential election.

A Boston man used his fists to remind his wife that she should not go through his pockets and the judge placed the case on file. Another opponent of suffragette and the recall of the judges.

It is a poor commentary of the sincerity of some hypocrites when they are openly displaying religious emblems in places which honestly decent people would shun.

The Financial commission want limestone and the mayor wants granite for the City hall annex. Between the settlement of the private differences between these two bodies how long will the people of Boston suffer?

It is all right for the Greeks to skip across the ocean to fight for the Fatherland, but they cannot expect this country to interfere if they are taken prisoners on the claim of American citizenship.

The New York rival gangs of gunmen declared a truce and attended the funeral of Jack Zelig. Many on both sides were sighing more from relief than grief it is safe to say.

"As far as I know," serves a purpose and a loop hole of escape when cornered but as an argument it is of very little weight. Lawrence will have few regrets if the I. W. W. carry out their threat of leaving the city to its own devices.

Through the forethought of the Y. M. C. A. some people were saved listening to a line of hot air, but the aggrieved one is making an awful screech in the papers.

A decrease in horses is noted all along the line. Have the animals been caught up to meet the high cost of living.

FOOLS RUSH IN, ETC.

A Lynn pastor, with the usual desire of a certain class of this kind has rushed into pulpit utterances, denouncing the men of Essex county as cowards, "in refusing to sacrifice, time, business and pleasure to sit on the Ettor case."

In the peaceful confines of his home, within the protecting walls of the world wide sanctuary, speaking to a congregation, wholly in sympathy with his utterance and protected by the cloth, this man could say things which would not be tolerated by a layman. Many things are said in the pulpit, which are neither backed by reason, or judgment, by men who delight in saying something sensational and rushing into print.

But if this clerical hero was placed in the same position in which those jurors were what would be his conduct?

Does he know that there is not a juryman drawn in any case, worth mentioning, but lawyers for both sides, have men on the trail of each individual juror and their every characteristic is as an open book to the attorney. How does he know by what circumstances these men were surrounded. It is all very well to say that the law will protect one, but the protection coming after a head has been broken or perhaps a life is lost is poor compensation, which is of little benefit to the one injured.

So in this as in many other cases, there is a reckless desire to pour out a flood of language, without any regard to their cause of effect.

PATRONIZE HOME INDUSTRY.

That was a very satisfying report which Commissioner Crane of Water Fronts, Waterways and Navigation submitted to the City Council, but it contained one very evident inconsistency. The development of the water front facilities undoubtedly would be a good thing for the city. Maybe the revenue from the same would warrant the expenditures but it is a large proposition which should require the most consideration.

The development of the water front is another incident in the development of home industry. Home industry so far as the water front is concerned would be of little avail if the local facilities were ignored and accommodation sought elsewhere. And it is on this very important point that Commissioner Crane displays a little inconsistency.

The Quincy dock development would not be accomplished by booming that of Boston or any other place. So in the report of the commissioner, home industry is not encouraged or developed by having the copies of this report printed elsewhere than Quincy.

Mayor Stone had occasion to call the attention of the commissioner to the imprint on the copies of the report which was by no means of any Quincy firm.

It is not any personal feeling that suggests calling attention to this apparently trifling matter. There are several concerns in Quincy which could have produced the report in as creditable a manner as shown. If this had been done we should not have mentioned the subject, but under the circumstances it seems the money could have been spent to better advantage in Quincy than elsewhere.

STAND BY AGREEMENT.

Major Williamson of Brockton, entered into a gentleman's agreement with Col. Kincaide of Quincy, on the outcome of the Progressive party caucuses for congressional nomination and he proposes to hold to his pledge. His friends in Brockton are strong in their denunciation of Matthew Hale of Boston, whom they claim is responsible for the loss of the nomination to the major.

They were stirred up so much over the matter that they eagerly sought the major to enter the field as an independent candidate. This he would not consent to do.

The Progressive party is made up of a great majority of men of the stamp of Major Williamson and Col. Kincaide, who having made an agreement will stick to it through thick or thin. On the other hand there are some in the party, who are just as eager for the exercise of that proud privilege of "bossism" and despotic power, that the platform of zealous operations in favor of the plain people is forgotten.

The claim that bosses are not within the party with the same old methods hardly holds water. The throwing over of those bosses, many of them self appointed, would improve the conditions of the party and give it a better standing. It seems too bad that honest, earnest and sincere men who are in this contest for the real good which they fondly hope they can bring about are handicapped by men who will assume the role of bosses, self created who will smilingly bob up for recognition if the party should win, while the earnest and honest workers are sidetracked.

CAN HANDLE THE BUNCH.

Thomas E. Edison's explanation why he is supporting Mr. Roosevelt, is certainly unique.. Mr. Edison is credited with saying that he supports the Colonel because he "can handle the bunch." "By the bunch, I mean the politicians and that rare collection in the Washington administration."

The rarest bunch in the country today is the bunch of moneyed men, trust magnates, and the like, a development of the recent years, and there was nothing in Mr. Roosevelt's seven years in the White house to show that he had much contol over them. They called at the White house, some of them lunched there, others merely dropped in, but they were all there for a purpose, one way and another. If controlling "the bunch," means the rough shod manner in which the colonel travelled over some gentlemen in Washington, who have never been mixed up in campaign contribution matters of the six figure class, of steam rollering the 1908 convention, and a few other things like that, then of course Mr. Edison is right. The man he supports can control "the bunch," but when it comes to controlling the trusts, lessening the cost of living, and some minor affairs which might be beneficial to the "plain people" it is difficult to figure out the power of control so easily credited to the former president. During his seven years in the White house there were a few happenings that called for control of not only "the bunch," but "bunches," but there was little evidence of this control at any time during that period. At this time he essays to tell of his control of campaign contributions, and how he controlled them, but the control clutch was only put on about the last week of the campaign and then according to the men who received the money it slipped a cog. So much for control which failed to control.

ST. KEVIN COURT INCREASING

Active Plans for Dancing Party and Anniversary

The Atlantic residents will invade Quincy on November 5 to attend the annual dance of St. Kevin Court, M. C. O. F. at Alpha hall. A committee is at work completing the arrangements.

Rev. John P. Cuffe who is chaplain and spiritual director has been devoting considerable time to increasing the membership and Chief Ranger Ted Keohane reports that in less than one year 40 new members have been secured by an energetic membership committee.

The first anniversary of the society will be celebrated on November 26, and state and county officers of the order will probably be in attendance.

The committee in charge of the dance is Richard O. Cole, Mrs. Joseph McClure and Joseph Sullivan.

THE THEOSOPHICAL PATH.

The Theosophical Path, Point Loma, Cal., Katherine Tingley, editor in its current issues, scores a journalistic triumph in its being the only publication in the United States and probably in the whole Western world to publish the latest portrait of the Japanese Emperor,—many leading American journals having stated their inability to obtain such. The October issue is an exceptionally strong number. In the "Vivisector's Claims Understated," Dr. Lydia Ross attacks the question from a distinctly new Theosophical and scientific standpoint. Forcefully and logically the writer shows that many vital factors have been overlooked by both pro and anti vivisectionists alike,—basic questions which must be faced if either is to maintain its position.

"Reincarnation in the Bible," a reprint of one of William Q. Judges's valuable articles; "The Death Penalty"; "A Tribute to John Ruskin"; "In the White Mountains"; a charmingly written sketch: "Health by Movements"; "The Redmen" are all articles of interest. The articles, illustrations and typography combined all bear out what was recently said and published by the editor of the American Freemason, that The THEOSOPHICAL PATH is "one of the most perfect magazines published."

CHILDREN TORTURED

"Fox Bite" Inflicted Upon Thirty Youngsters In New York

New York, Oct. 9.—In forty-eight hours thirty girls and boys had applied at Bellevue hospital for treatment for what they called fox bite, and as a result the police are seeking two young men who apparently have delighted in inflicting an odd torture upon the children.

In each instance the arm of the child had been bared almost to the elbow and while one of the young men held the arm out in a straight position his companion would rub a cap or piece of other cloth up and down the arm vigorously, until there was a hemorrhage through the inflamed skin, or until the skin itself had been rubbed off.

The inflamation caused by the vigerous rubbing has come to be known among the children as fox bite.

TRADITIONS ASSAILED

Vose's Inn Said to Be Scene of Revolutionary Gathering

One of the cherished traditions of the town of Milton, that the famous Suffolk Resolves were drafted in the ancient house in Milton Village long known as "Suffolk Resolves House, has been attacked. It is claimed that the Suffolk County convention, which was attended by the prominent Revolutionary leaders of Boston and vicinity, and at which resolves were drawn up upon which it is asserted the Declaration of Independence was based, did not meet in the so-called "Suffolk Resolves House" at all, but that the meeting place was Vose's Inn, which stood on the present site of the Associates Building, just above the "Suffolk Resolves House" and which was burned in 1861.

Local historians have been investigating the subject for many months, and their efforts were stimulated by the proposition last spring when the town was preparing to celebrate its 250th anniversary that the house be bought as a memorial. A paper has been prepared by Miss Ellen F. Vose and Miss Eleanor P. Martin in which evidence is presented upon which is based the conclusion that the Suffolk County convention held its meeting in the inn of Daniel Vose. The "Suffolk Resolves House," although owned by private parties, has always been kept in a good state of preservation.

A bill has just been passed by both branches of the State Government and signed by the Governor appropriating $25,000.00 for dredging Town River; which means when this work is completed, that vessels for a draft of seventeen (17) feet on ordinary tides and twenty (20) feet on some tides can be docked at this wharf.

An agreement can be made for lease of five (5) years with privilege of five (5) years' renewal with thoroughly responsible parties for enough each year to pay the annual interest on the entire bond issue reserving of this property wharf frontage of 350 feet and a depth of 100 feet for the city's use.

HENRY M. FAXON, PROPERTY.

Quincy, September 30, 1912.

Mr. Frank Fessenden Crane, Commissioner Water Front, Waterways and Navigation, Quincy, Mass.

Dear Sir:—I have duly considered your invitation to submit a proposition to sell or lease the City of Quincy for municipal dock purposes under Chapter 713, Acts of 1911, or amendments or additions, any available wharf or water front properties or properties adjacent thereto I may own within the city limits.

Before complying with your request I must frankly state that I appeared before the Legislative Committee in opposition to the bill allowing the City to incur an indebtedness of $100,000 for the purpose of municipal dock development, and I am still strongly of the opinion that it is most unwise for the city to thus enlarge the scope of its activities. With this explanation of my position I beg to submit the following:

I will lease to the City of Quincy for the term of ten years wharf situated on Town River at the foot of River Street and the adjoining properties owned by me, shown on plan submitted herewith, designated on said plan as "Parcel A, containing 170,451 square feet," with flats pertaining thereto, at a yearly rental of one thousand (1000) dollars, payable in equal quarterly payments, all betterments, assessments and taxes to be paid by the lessee.

I will lease to the City of Quincy for the term of ten years "Parcel B" shown on said plan, containing 81,020 square feet, and "Parcel C" shown on said plan, containing 55,000 square feet more or less, at a yearly rental of five hundred (500) dollars, payable in equal quarterly payments, all betterments, assessments and taxes to be paid by the lessee. The lessee to have the option to purchase Parcel A. or thirty thousand (30,000) dollars at any time during the continuance of said lease, all the terms and provisions thereof on the part of the lessee having been complied with, and to purchase Parcels B and C for fifteen thousand (15,000) dollars at any time during the continuance of said lease, all the terms and provisions thereof on the part of the lessee having been complied with.

The City of Quincy to have the right to cancel either lease upon the expiration of five years from the beginning of its term. Upon the termination of either lease all buildings, wharves, docks and improvements of any kind made during the term of such lease shall become the absolute property of the lessor without obligation to pay for the same. This offer to remain open until March 1st, 1913.

Yours very truly,

Henry M. Faxon.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

I respectfully urge the leasing of this property for ten years. You will note there is no charge made for the beach and flats adjacent to and appertaining to this property. The gravel banks on the land will be ample for all fill used that may be needed. Every foot of the land offered is available for business purposes. The easy access of the electric freight railroad in the rear of the house lots fronting on River street, with ample room for side tracks, without detracting from the beauty of the residential section, should be considered. The width of the river at this point I consider to be of especial advantage for future development, as there is ample room for the largest passenger or freight carrying steamers to dock at this point if properly dredged berths and approaches are provided.

I also recommend the introduction of a bill in the Massachusetts State Legislature, giving the Mayor the power to appoint three dock commissioners, who shall have entire charge of all funds for building and development, and the control of the municipal dock, its rates of wharfage, receipts, control and management of its railway, the leasing of its lands, and all other matters in any way connected with its management; said commissioners to be appointed for not less than five years.

Respectfully submitted,

To His Honor Mayor Eugene R. Stone, and the City Council.

Frank Fessenden Crane,
Commissioner of Water Fronts, Water Ways and Navigation, City of Quincy.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

After four months' vacation members of the Quincy Women's club gathered at the clubhouse on Presidents hill Tuesday afternoon for the opening meeting of the season of 1912-1913. Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard president, presided, her desk being adorned with a large bouquet of nasturtiums.

Following the singing of the club hymn written by Mrs. Irene Chipman Tirrell during the presidency of Mrs. George W. Morton and sung since at the opening and closing meetings, Mrs. Sheppard welcomed the club members most gracefully.

She said:

"This beautiful hymn seems a greeting in itself for us today. It is surely an inspiration, for we know that nothing else but God's love and God's wisdom can solve our biggest problems, keep us at our best and give character and emphasis to all our work.

"We are glad to be together again, at this our first fall meeting. No word from your president at this time can express the pleasure she feels in welcoming you again and in which she looks forward to the coming year's work. Especially do we greet the new members today. We are truly glad to have them with us and hope they will feel very much at home, even at this the first meeting. We know they will be helpful members, having come in with that view in mind, knowing that this club does not exist merely for the pleasure, convenience and amusement of its individual members, these things have been lost sight of in our great love and desire for service. Our club was organized for purposes broad and strong and its members have ever worked as one for its advancement and success.

"Each year our club has met with sorrow and loss, the past year has been no exception, and today we hold in loving remembrance many of our dear members, who one by one have been taken from us. We think of Mrs. Morton today and of her faithful service as president of this club. We remember how her co-operation was always assured in every movement for the betterment of this club and community. Some of us know her as counsellor and friend and in each capacity she was wise and faithful. Again we think of dear Mrs. Wilde, and Mrs. Frances Dalrymple, we miss them from our number and we can rightfully say of each of these dear members that their life work is closed but their deeds will live.

"And now as the new year unfolds your president wishes to thank you again for all your kindness and patience toward her in the year that has passed. May the same spirit of co-operation continue in the year to come not as work, but as a spiritualopportunity—a divine undertaking."

Among the routine business for the afternoon was the reading of reports by the recording secretary, treasurer and corresponding secretary. The corresponding secretary announced the admittance of 27 new members and a waiting list of 135. The new members are:

Mrs. George W. Albee,
Mrs. Hannah Dyer Allen
Mrs. Eugene R. Atwood.

The president announced a presidents' conference to be held Oct. 17 at Greenfield to which club members were invited for the afternoon session Mrs. Edward B. Marsh would go from the Quincy club. The committee on changes in the by-laws hoped to report at the next meeting. Much interest is being taken in the Cafe Chantan to be given Oct. 18 by the executive board of the club for the benefit of the club. As the tables were being taken rapidly members were urged to secure their tickets before it was too late. A fine program of music, dramatic sketches and humorous skits would make up an enjoyable evening. Mrs Frederick H. Bishop having resigned from the chairmanship of the Press committee Mrs. John D. Mackay was elected to fill the vacancy.

Committees reported as follows:

Arts, Mrs. H. H. Kitson, said the Twelfth Night Revels given so successfully last year by her committee would be repeated. The object was to raise funds for the art exhibit to be held at the clubhouse April 21-22-23-24.

For the Reception committee Mrs Walter S. Pinkham chairman said all her committee were adorned with badges so that club members would know them and make them useful. Hoped members would not hurry away after the meeting but stop for a social chat.

SOLUTION OF LABOR PROBLEM

W. H. Sayward Offers a Remedy for Existing Evils

EXPLAINS HIS SYSTEM

At the first meeting of the Wollaston Unitarian club, Tuesday evening, William H. Sayward, secretary of the Master Builders' Association of Boston spoke on "The way out, a solution of the labor problem."

Dinner was served shortly after 6.30 the usuall large membership sitting down, after the blessing by Rev. Carl G. Horst.

At the business meeting an invitation read from the Wollaston Congregational club, to join in a union meeting for civic improvement, brought forth much discussion as to the future policy of the club. In the past it has been purely of a social nature and it was finally voted to table the question and appoint a committee of ten to attend the meeting.

Resolutions were offered on the death of Charles H. Brigham, a former president of the club and Rev. Ellery Channing Butler of First church, a warm friend of the club, both of whom passed away since the last meeting.

William B. Nichols, delegate from the newly formed Men's club of First church spoke briefly.

In opening the meeting, President Louis F. R. Langelier spoke his appreciation in being honored as the club's executive.

The speaker of the evening stated in no uncertain terms that trade unionism as at present conducted does not mean fair play for either workman or employer, but simply trade despotism.

"The real issues of labor disputes" declared Mr. Sayward, "lie not in the matter of hours and wages, which are fairly easy of adjustment, but in several other conditions.

"The employer is constantlly met with a demand that no person be employed unless he carries a union card. The men are not classified and the presentation of the card means in many cases that the employer is compelled to pay wages for insufficient services to any man holding the card. This is a stumbling block and unfair to the community and workman."

Mr. Sayward related the incident of the contractor who, after waiting three weeks in a vain endeavor to get union workmen for the installation of an elevator, employed open shop men. The union forced the owner of the building to compel the contractor to take the elevator out.

"That is what we have the quarrel with," said the speaker. These men were paid the highest wages and there was no question of hours. Unless opposition is made to such affairs as this we cannot be supporting true trade unionism. Jurisdiction of the job is another. In Philadelphia a manual training school was held up for nine months because of a quarrel of two of the unions as to who should lay the stone. In Chicago a similar controversy was brought up between two branches of the steamfitters. Another, is the restriction of output." He instanced the building of a brick wall in a church. In four hours the work of one man had progressed three bricks. The man had taken up and relaid the same bricks to make the job last longer..

"Fixed wages in another issue, confining each man to get so much and no more. Is this the kind of economic building up that men ought to have?

A Russian who came to this country and by application to his work and attendance at night school gained a knowledge of his trade. The man was told by one of the union bosses that he knew too much, but persisted in his advance and was finally discharged through union influence. He was followed from job to job and finally went back to Russia rather than endure it.

"Another issue is the disposition to ruin those who come in the track of the rulers of trade unionism. The incident was related of the Boston school house commissioner who called on Mr. Sayward and tried to compel him to ruin a certain contractor because they were open shop.

When the time came for the re-appointment of school house commissioners, the finance commission asked Mr. Sayward about the man. Mr. Sayward related the story. The next day the school house commissioner was re-appointed.

"The reason trade unionism is at present destructive, is because it is improperly composed. Only the wage earning factor is there. The directing factor is not represented."

The speaker told of the Masters and Craftsman, an organization founded by himself five years ago which represents the right kind of trade unionism. This brings the masters and craftsmen together as factors of the trade.

It was started in a square and open fashion with five employing masons and thirty craftsmen. One of the fundamental principles was the classification of men. Only the first class workmen are in the craftsmen class All others are in the associate class and receive graded wages of 20 per cent. less and downward from those of the craftsmen.

There are now some 26 employers and 2000 craftsmen and associate members. There is no room for agitator or walking delegate. Only the workman is recognized.

One meeting is held each year at which all questions are settled. The craftsmen only are allowed to vote regarding wages and the conduct of the work is left to the masters.

There is a rendezvous for the men with a commissioner in charge. This acts as a clearing house and an employment agency for the men. The two factors serve each other and are brothers together in the trade.

The speaker believed that some such movement as this was the only solution of the present industrial tangle.

A broadside of questions was let loose at Mr. Sayward when he concluded and much profitable discussion was engaged in.

MISS BOSTWICK IN A NEW PLAY

Squantum Girl Will Appear at Hollis Street Theatre

The many friends of Miss Phyllis Bostwick will be pleased to know she is to appear at the Hollis street theatre in "Coming home to roost," Oct. 14. Miss Bostwick spends her summers with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Perley Bostwick of Brunswick street and is a very popular girl. She is a graduate of the Roxbury High school and has been on the stage for the past eight years.

Last season she played the leading part in "Seven Days" and has appeared in Boston in "As ye sow," "At Yale," "Quincy Adams Sawyer" and "The Futurity winner." Her success on the stage is due chiefly to her clever acting but her pleasing personality and cheerful disposition must have aided her greatly in her rapid climb to her present position on the stage.

"Coming home to roost" is a new play but its success is certain as Edgar Selvoyar the author wrote "The Country Boy" which had such a long run in Boston last winter.

MORAL WELFARE OF YOUTH

day school and public school are all coming far short of their duty in the most important work assigned to them, to develop a right character in the young.

The latest figures from the United States Bureau of Education show that the "school population" of our country, that is, the number between five and eighteen years of age, is twenty-five millions, and that five millions of these are not in public or private schools. Here comes in the tragedy of child labor, which is killing body and soul, and the equally serious tragedy of truancy. Of those who enter public schools only seven in a hundred complete the course, and only two in a hundred get a college diploma. The instability which this record proves both in parents and in children is itself a sign of moral weakness, and the meagre education of the majority leaves thousands open to the perils of a mind not sufficiently developed for high and pure enjoyments. The public school teachers, in a majority of places, I find as I travel about, are not teaching the required temperance lessons effectually, and so are missing their best opportunity to save boys from what Andrew Carnegie says is the greatest menace to their success.

"So far as moral training of boys is concerned, the best work now done is that of the boy Secretaries of the Young Men's Christian Association, mostly new to the work as yet, with much to learn, but diligently studying real boys and the many excellent new books about boys. The Y. M. C. A. makes real progress in saving boys through men and older boys. The International Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. Work for Boys, Mr. C. C. Robinson, finds the best teachers for boys of 12 to 14 are older boys from 16 to 19, since that is the altruistic period when boys will get the best self culture by working for others.

"The first thing to do is to bring to bear twentieth century motives."

"We must appeal to the inteligent self-love of youth. We must prove to boys and young men that vice is the foe of health and efficiency; that it keeps a man from getting a good job and makes him liable to loose it if he gets it; that the vicious will lag in athletics, in scholarship, in business success, in public esteem; that the young man who drinks moderately at twenty will cut out of his life the thirteene best years as insurance tests of fifty years prove, that every one who sins against purity is on the straight road to the near hell of the "black plague." Show boys and young men that bad morals are bad manners, bad hygiene, success-killers, joy-killers, man-killers.

"Col. Higgison, asked to describe for a symposium the bravest deed he saw in the Civil War, told of a banquet of military officers who mingled with their wine drinking a round of foul songs and stories, in which successful seductions of confiding girls were sung or told as proudly as if it were but the shooting of a deer. Last of all they called on a young lieutenant, who replied quietly, but it was a knightly thrust that sent them all away silent and ashamed; I can not tell a story or even sing a song, but I will give you a toast to be drunk in water, "Our Mothers."

NEW MEMBERS FOR THE ELKS

One Candidate Had Hard Time Hanging to Goat Horns

A regular meeting of Quincy lodge of Elks was held Tuesday evening in Greenleaf hall. Three well known citizens were elected to membership and one rode the Elks goat about the hall, hanging onto his antlers for dear life. Refreshments were served after the business session at the club house. One of the interesting events of the evening was the reading of a circular letter from the Grand Exalted Ruler, Thomas B. Mills of Superior, Wis., in which he outlined his plans for the coming year. Several amendments to the constitution were also acted upon at this meeting.

BRIEFS

Coroner's Report on Death of Man Who Died After a Scuffle

Pawtucket, Oct. 9.—The report of Coroner Vance on the death of Owen Rice, which occurred after a scuffle, states that "no person is responsible for the death of Rice, but that the same was the result of misfortune."

It was alleged that pneumonia developed as a result of the encounter with a young man and shortly after caused the death of Rice.

PEACE MOVE FORESTALLED

Montenegro Makes Declaration of War Against Turkey

FIGHTING HAS ALREADY BEGUN

Situation of Christians and Demand For Autonomous Government Main Causes of Crisis In Balkans—About a Million Men Face to Face In Conflict Which Promises to Be Severe

London, Oct. 9.—Montenegro has declared war on Turkey and thus forestalled the action of the powers in favor of peace. The ambassadors at Constantinople and the ministers at the capitals of Bulgaria, Servia, Greece and Montenegro had been instructed to make representations on behalf of their governments yesterday morning and a despatch from Belgrade confirms that their program has been carried out there.

It is now likely that the other Balkan states will follow the lead of Montenegro and throw their armies into Turkey to fight on behalf of those of their kinsmen and fellow Christians who, they declare, have suffered so much from Turkish oppression.

The Servian parliament has voted war credits and pledged itself to support the government in the cause against Turkey. Bulgaria has done likewise.

The situation of the Christians in Albania and Macedonia and the demand of the Balkan states that those provinces should be granted autonomous government are the main causes of the crisis. It was in an effort to force a settlement of these questions that Bulgaria, Servia, Greece and Montenegro, united for the first time, ordered the mobilization of their armies.

This led the Ottoman government to call up some hundreds of thousands of its reserves and these it is believed have been concentrating rapidly at strategic points along the frontier. At the same time the Balkan armies have been gathering on the other side and it is calculated that something near a million men are face to face.

Exactly how the situation stands in Turkey is not known, as telegrams from that country are subject to a strict censorship and great delay, but such despatches as are permitted to come through indicate that Turkey is eager for war.

The latest news from Constantinople ing out the Vanderbilt cup race course, itioning all the horses. The military authorities, too, had placed troops on board a large number of Greek vessels which had been seized in Turkish waters and it is understood that these are to be used for the transport of troops.

Heavy fighting is said to be already in progress between the Montenegrins and the Turkish troops along the frontier. A brigade of nine battalions of Turkish infantry proceeding from Scutari to Tusi on the Montenegro frontier was attacked by Malissori tribesmen. The battle is still proceeding.

Should a general state of war be declared it is not likely that any important engagement can be expected under a week, and perhaps another week will be required for the Bulgarian and Turkish armies to come into contact in the region of Adrianople, where the first clash of arms on a large scale is considered most probable.

LAWYERS ARE INACTIVE

Rumor That Government Intends to Drop the Ettor Case

Salem, Mass., Oct. 9.—Although every one of the five attorneys for the defendants was busy about the Essex county superior court building here yesterday where Joseph Ettor, Arturo Giovannitti and Caruso will be tried, no motion was made to admit the defendants to bail.

The inactivity of both the government and the lawyers for the defense for the past two days has given credence to the rumor that the government intends dropping the case. District Attorney Atwill and others of the prosecution have denied this, however.

MR. SHAW'S LETTER

of which some progress in the right direction may be hoped for.

Since the publication of the letter of Sept. 28th in which certain conditions in the City Council were criticised, considerable attention has been directed to this branch of our city government in the local press.

This is a healthy and encouraging sign that the people are beginning to awaken to the necessity of making their opinions felt in the approaching caucuses and elections, and encourages a suggestion just at this time, which if acted upon directly, will, I believe, be the instrument of considerable improvement in the City Council of 1913.

As the citizens become more thoroughly alive to the actual conditions in Quincy, one hears a good deal of discussion as to whether it might not be wise to try a commission form of government, or at least a somewhat modified form of our present city charter all of which it is proposed to discuss more at length a little later. But the point for us to consider just now is that, whatever the citizens of Quincy eventually decide is the proper remedy to apply to our constitutional weaknesses, the dose cannot be administered before 1914, because the State Legislature must first be appealed to for authority to act: and then, in all probability the Legislature will insist upon a referendum, however well endorsed the petition, and any change proposed would have to be submitted to the people at the polls. As the Legislative authority cannot be obtained before late in the coming winter, or the spring of 1913, this referendum will necessarily be postponed until later in 1913; so that any immediate relief we may hope to bring to pass must be worked out under the condition of government as we find them at present.

I do not mean that we should abate one jot or tittle of our earnest endeavor to find some adequate remedy for these constitutional weaknesses. On the contrary, we should act immediately upon these matters if we are to expect any results by 1914; but, in the meantime, we should not lose sight of the necessity of doing everything possible to improve conditions in 1914.

That we are facing another high tax rate next year nobody with any knowledge of conditions will deny; and unless we elect a Mayor and City Council who will give time and intelligence to the public business, who will hold Quincy's honor and integrity high above the lust for office,—who will turn a deaf ear to the mutterings and whinings of designing politicians and of self-seeking hangers-on;—and who will not only promise, but will make good their promise to give Quincy a strictly economical, business administration; then we shall not have gained a step on the growing deficit, and will have added another year's accumulation of debt and mismanagement to the already overburdened tax payer.

The City Council is notoriously weak in the kind of men you and I would employ to direct the management of a $35,000,000 corporation. Many of its members never had the responsibility of spending more than the contents of their weekly pay envelope, and are no better fitted by training or experience to pass upon intricate questions of municipal finance than the average grammar school pupil.

Conditions like these are the inevitable result of an apathetic public interest which dozes idly along, allowing its candidates for important public offices to be dictated by designing political tricksters, or by incompetent self-seekers who rely entirely upon being known as "good fellows" to further their unwarranted political aspirations.

Just so long as the people are willing to sit idly by and permit these self-chosen leaders to run the affairs of our city; so long will our public offices be largely filled by incompetents and undesirables; and so long will our kicks and complaints against exhorbitant tax rates and other equally burdensome conditions be about as effectual as the ticking of the clock.

If we expect to materialize any of our fond hopes for better conditions next year, every thoughtful citizen must be brought to a full realization that upon his own personal interest and activity depends largely the chances of sending to the next City Council representatives of ability and experience in affairs which will insure intelligent action in the management of Quincy's finances during the critical period of reconstruction which we all hope is at hand.

If a few of the thoughtful, public spirited citizens in each ward would meet together and discuss city affairs, talk over their representatives in the Council and see that they measure up to the proper standard of ability a long step in the right direction will have been taken.

If the candidates in the field are found not to measure up to this standard, such a gathering could do much toward influencing public opinion in the right direction by picking out from among their neighbors men of experience, judgment and ability to send to the Council next year, and then putting it up to the men so chosen as a duty they owe their city to give generously of their time and intelligence for the public welfare.

Very few men when approached in this spirit by their respected neighbors will be found to shirk such a duty. But of the right kind of men very few indeed would take the initiative in such a matter. There are always plenty of the less desirable to fill up the ballot and canvass their friends for support, and these constitute one of the main causes of the present unfortunate condition of affairs.

There are in the present City Council at least a dozen men who never should have been elected to the office, and who should not be returned next year. It should not be a difficult matter for the citizens of the various wards to pick out the men above referred to, and substitute the right kind of men in their places in the coming election.

Suppose we try letting the office seek the man for a change, and see how this plan works for a while. To carry out this suggestion it will take a little of your time of an evening now and then; but once get into the habit of these occasional neighborhood gatherings, and you will be surprised how much real pleasure and profit will come from talking over public matters in a broad, unselfish, public-spirited way. Such discussions of the affairs of city government are always interesting and instructive by reason of the different opinions and view points presented by different minds, and great benefit to the whole city is sure to follow such an intelligent interest on the part of the citizens.

One of the greatest obstacles to municipal progress is the unfortunate habit into which we Americans have fallen off considering the city government a sort of machine which only needs to be cranked up once a year and then left to run by itself.

The best form of city charter or commission government ever devised will soon begin to rust and squeak in its bearings under such careless inattention. The closer the engineer attends the delicate mechanism of his engine, oiling here, tightening a bolt there, the more smoothly and precisely the engine performs its work.

The city government, being far more intricate, needs constant and untiring atention from the people it pretends to govern and protect, in order that its very purpose may not be perverted by unscrupulous or incompetent public officials.

The right kind of public servants welcome such an interest on the part of the public. It is only the other sort who flinch at the search-light of publicity.

The message to every citizen of Quincy today is: Take an interest in your city's affairs: Meet together and discuss the candidates for office; convince the men of conspicuous success and ability in your community that they owe Quincy a public duty; be sure that the best men obtainable are in the field, and then convince your friends and acquaintances that Quincy needs the very best it can get in its present situation.

And begin taking this active interest NOW. The caucuses are only a month away.

Another letter Friday.

RAN TOO FAST ON CROSS-OVER

Cause of Train Wreck at Westport, Say Witnesses

GOING FIFTY MILES AN HOUR

Fifteen and Thirty Miles the Maximum For Safety, According to Testimony at Federal Investigation—Accident Due to Violation of Orders, Says New Haven Road Official

New York, Oct. 9.—Fifty miles an hour while making a cross-over from one track to another was the speed travelled by the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad train which was wrecked at Westport, Conn., last Thursday, according to testimony brought out at a federal inquiry begun here into the cause of the disaster.

No train can safely take a cross-over at such speed, witnesses testified. Thirty mies an hour is the maximum rate at which a train should run at such a time, one witness declared, while others placed the customary speed at fifteen miles maximum.

E. H. McHenry, a vice president of the New Haven railroad, testified that no train could make a cross-over at fifty miles an hour and that the accident was due to a violation of orders.

The hearing was before Interstate Commerce Commissioner McChord, with whom sat Richard T. Higgins, chairman of he public utilities commission of Connecticut, and E. C. Elwell, chief engineer of the Connecticut commisssion. Philip J. Doherty examined witnesses for the government and Edward G. Buckland, a vice president of the New Haven railroad, was counsel for the company.

Michael Coyle, telegraph operator in charge of the signals and switches at Westport, testified in his opinion the train was going at fifty miles an hour. No train could cross at faster than thirty miles, he said.

Bartely Gerdon, a traction boss, said the train was coming at fifty-five or sixty miles when he saw it. Several tower operators testified as government witnesses that they had never seen a train take a cross-over at more than fifteen miles an hour.

Charles D. Moore, an engineer, expressed the opinion that the wreck may have been caused by children throwing stones into the cab from an overhead bridge, injuring Clark, the engineer, killed in the wreck. Moore exhibited two scars which he said had been received in this manner.

Henry Horn, another vice president of the New Haven railroad, testified that short cross-overs had not been lengthened because, he said, "if a man goes over a route at sixty miles when he should go at fifteen he would do it anywhere, and it would be of no avail to lengthen the cross-overs."

"Then you see no hope for improvement?"

"None," said the witness. "There will have to be profounder respect for orders. If a man won't obey orders he won't."

The investigation is unfirished.

CAMPAIGN COST $265,000

Large Sum Spent For Renomination of President Taft

Washington, Oct. 9.—The sum of $265,080 collected and spent in the campaign for President Taft's renomination through his Washington headquarters was partially accounted for Tuesday by Representative McKinley of Illinois, the president's campaign managerin testimony before the senate investigating committee.

McKinley said the "Taft family," comprising Charles P. Taft, Henry W. Taft and Horace Taft, brothers of the president, gave $150,000. The campaign, he declared, had cost five times what was anticipated.

"When we started out we expected to spend about $50,000," he told the committee.

GRAPE JUICE BEVERAGES.

THE use of unfermented grape juice is the basis of several cures. The juice is said to be excellent in some forms of stomach and intestinal troubles and for those who need a tonic or are suffering from anaemia.

A number of ways of preparing the grape juice are given here. It may be put up with or without sugar. Select sound, ripe Concord grapes. Remove the stems, rejecting all grapes that are soft. Wash a peck and put into a preserving kettle with three quarts of cold water. When soft enough strain the juice, but do not press the pulp through. Add two-thirds of a cup of sugar for each quart and bring to a boil, skimming carefully. Sterilize the bottles, fill with juice and cork tightly Keep in a cool, dark place.

Unsweetened Juice.

If you desire to make grape juice without sugar stem the fruit and lay it in cold water. Lift out with a skimmer and put into a kettle. Bring slowly to the boiling point and cook until the skins break. Pour into a bag made of coarse new cotton cloth and hang to drain overnight. Next morning bring to a boil again and have jars hot and sterilized. Fill to overflowing and seal immediately. This juice should have one-third cold water added for drinking.

Fancy Drinks.

Nectar of Grape Juice.—Take one pint of grape juice, two lemons, one orange, about one cupful of sugar and a pint of ice water. Serve cold. Garnish with slices of orange and lemon.

Grape Juice Punch.—Boil together one pound of sugar and half a pint of water until a thread may be drawn from it. Take from the fire and when cool add the juice of six lemons and a quart of grape juice. Stand it aside overnight. Serve with plain or soda water.

A Spiced Draught.

Grape Juice Mulled.—Grate the rind of an orange and soak it for a quarter of an hour in the juice of a lemon. Add a half pint of water and a teaspoonful of sugar. Put these in a saucepan, add a quart bottle of unfermented grape juice, four whole cloves and a pinch of powdered mace. Bring it slowly to the boiling point and simmer ten minutes.

Make a sirup by boiling together a cup of sugar and two tablespoonfuls of water. Do not stir, but let it cook till it will thread. Pour this gradually on the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs, add the grape juice at boiling point, dust lightly with grated nutmeg and serve at once.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Mrs. Keziah Coffin, supposed widow, is arranging to move from Trumet to Boston, following the death of her brother, for whom she had kept house. Grace Van Horne, ward of Capt. Eben Hammond, leader of the "Come-outer" religious sect, offers to assist her financially if she will remain. She declines. Kyan Pepper, widower, offers marriage, and is indignantly refused.

CHAPTER II—Capt. Elkanah Daniels, leader of the Regular church, offers Keziah a place as housekeeper for the new minister, and she decides to remain in Trumet.

CHAPTER III—Keziah takes charge of Rev. John Ellery, the new minister, and gives him advice as to his conduct toward members of the parish. Ellery causes a sensation by attending a "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER IV—Ellery's presence is bitterly resented by Eben Hammond, leader of the meeting. Grace apologizes for her guardian and Ellery escorts her home in the rain. Capt. Nat Hammond, Eben's son, becomes a hero by bringing the packet into port safely through fog and storm. Ellery finds Keziah writing a letter to some one, inclosing money in response to a demand. She is curiously startled when informed of the arrival of Nat.

CHAPTER V—Nat calls on Keziah, and it develops that they have been lovers since youth. Daniels remonstrates with Ellery for attending "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER VI—Ellery is caught by the tide and is rescued by Nat. They become friends.

CHAPTER VII—Ellery meets Grace while walking in the fields Sunday, and learns that she walks there every Sunday.

CHAPTER VIII—The clergyman takes dinner Sundays with the Daniels. Annabel, the captain's daughter, exerts herself to make an impression on him. She notices with vexation his desire to get away every Sunday at a certain time. She watches him through a spy glass.

CHAPTER IX—Nat again importunes Keziah to marry him. He says he has had a quarrel with his father, who wants him to marry Grace.

CHAPTER X—Ellery asks Grace to marry him. She confesses that she loves him, but says she fears to displease her guardian, who has been very kind to her, and asks time to think about it. Elkanah Daniels tells Eben about the meetings between Ellery and Grace. Eben declares he will make Grace choose between him and the preacher. Grace finds him in a faint, following the excitement of Elkanah's visit.

CHAPTER XI—Just before he dies Eben exacts a promise from Nat and Grace that they will marry.

CHAPTER XII—Keziah breaks the news to Ellery and later he receives a note from Grace saying she is to marry Nat, and asking him not to try to see her again. Keziah tells the story of her own marriage with a man who turned out to be a good-for-nothing, and who was reported to have been lost at sea, and of her love for Nat, whom she cannot marry because the husband is alive. Ellery sees in the story a lesson in devotion to duty and decides to remain and attend to his duties.

CHAPTER XIII—Captain Nat sails for Manila to be gone two years. He says he and Grace have decided not to marry until he returns.

CHAPTER XIV—Nat is overdue, and it is feared that he has been lost at sea. Keziah gets a letter from her husband saying he is coming back. Grace goes on a visit to relatives of the Hammonds.

CHAPTER XV—A vessel flying distress signals is discovered off the coast. Ellery goes with party to board the vessel. A man is found suffering from smallpox, the rest of the crew having deserted.

CHAPTER XVI—He is taken to an abandoned shack on shore and Ellery helps nurse him. Before he dies it is discovered that he is Keziah's husband. Ellery, left alone in quarantine, is found wandering in a delirious condition by Grace. She takes him back to the shanty and sends for help.

Captain Zeb listened with his mouth and eyes and ears open. Mrs. Mayo was with him when the doctor called, and she, too, listened.

"Well!" exclaimed the captain, when the plea for support was ended. "Well, by the flukes of Jonah's whale! Talk about surprises. Old lady, what do you say?"

"I say go ahead, Zebedee. Go ahead! If Mr. Ellery wanted to marry Jezebel's sister, and I knew he really wanted to, I'd—I do believe I'd help him get her. And Grace Van Horne is a good girl. Go ahead."

"Say doc, there'll be a lively row, and I kind o' like it," said Captain Zeb.

There was, and it was lively enough to suit even Captain Zeb. Dr. Parker, on his calls that day, was assailed with a multitude of questions concerning Grace's presence at the shanty. He answered them cheerfully, dilating upon the girl's bravery, her good sense, and the fact that she had saved Mr. Ellery's life. Then he confided, as a strict secret, the fact that the two were engaged. Before his hearers had recovered from the shock of this explosion, he was justifying the engagement. Why shouldn't they marry if they wanted to? It was a free country. The girl wasn't a Come-Outer any longer, and, besides—and this carried weight in a good many households—what a black eye the marriage would be for that no-account crowd at the chapel.

Captain Zebedee, having shipped with the insurgents, worked for them from sunrise to sunset and after. Zeb was something of a politician and knew whom to "get at." He sought his fellows on the parish committee and labored with them. Mrs. Mayo and the doctor's wife championed the cause at sewing circle. They were lively, those sewing meetings, and the fur flew. Didama Rogers and Lavinia Lumber were everywhere and ready to agree with whichever side seemed likely to win.

It was by no means a one-sided struggle. Captain Elkanah, spurred on by the furious Annabel, marshaled his forces and proclaimed that Ellery, having disgraced the Regular Society, should no longer occupy its pulpit. He hinted concerning a good-sized contribution toward a parish house, something the society needed. If Ellery was discharged, the contribution would probably be made, not otherwise. And this was a point worth considering.

Daniels also wrote to his influential friends of the National Regular Society. But Captain Zebedee had forestalled him there and both letters were laid on the table to await further developments. As for the Come-Outers, they were wild with rage and Grace was formally read out of their communion.

Meantime Keziah, installed as head nurse at the shanty, was having her troubles. The minister was getting better, slowly but surely getting better. The danger of brain fever was at an end, but he was very weak and must not be excited, so the doctor said.

He had expressed a wish to talk with his housekeeper. "I've got something to tell you, Aunt Keziah," he said weakly. "Some news for you and—and——"

"Cat's foot!" snapped Keziah briskly, "don't start in tellin' me news now. I've got my hands full as 'tis. News'll keep and you won't, if you talk another minute."

She could manage him; it was with Grace that she had her struggle. First, and bluntly, she told the girl that her leaving was useless. The secret was out; it had been made public. Every one knew she was in love with John and he with her. Their engagement was considered an established certainty. Grace was greatly agitated and very indignant.

"Who dared say so?" she demanded. "Who dared say we were engaged? It's not true. It's a wicked lie and—Who is responsible, Aunt Keziah?"

"Well, I suppose likely I am, much as anybody, deary."

"You? You, Aunt Keziah?"

"Yup; me. You are in love with him; at any rate, you said so. And you're here with him, ain't you? If you two ain't engaged you ought to be." She argued and pleaded and coaxed, and, at last, when she began to think she had prevailed, Grace brought forward another objection. She had given her word to her uncle. How could she break that promise to a dying man? She would feel like a traitor.

"Traitor to who?" demanded the housekeeper, losing patience. "Not to poor Nat, for he's gone. And don't you suppose that he and Eben understand things better now, where they are? Do you suppose that Nat wouldn't want you to be happy? I know he would, for I knew him."

It was still unsettled when the long talk was over, but Grace agreed not to leave the minister at present. She would stay where she was until he was himself again, at least. Keziah was satisfied with the preliminary skirmish. She felt confident of winning the victory, and in the prospect of happiness for others, she was almost happy herself. Yet each time the mail was brought to the shanty she dreaded to look at it, and the sight of a stranger made her shake with fear.

The parish committee was to meet. Captain Elkanah had announced his intention of moving that John Ellery be expelled from the Regular church. There was to be no compromise, no asking for a resignation; he must be discharged, thrown out in disgrace. The county papers were full of the squabble, but they merely reported the news and did not take sides. The fight was too even for that.

One afternoon a few days before the date set for the meeting Elkanah and two or three of his henchmen were on the piazza of the Daniels home, discussing the situation. They were blue and downcast. Annabel was in the sitting room, shedding tears of humiliation and jealous rage on the haircloth sofa.

Some one was talking excitedly on the sidewalk beyond the lilac bushes at the border of the Daniels property. Voices answered. Didama Rogers darted out of her yard and past the house in the direction of the sounds. Salters rose and walked down to the gate. Emulous Sparrow, the fish peddler, was seated in his cart, which was surrounded by men and women, neighbors of the Danielses. There was a perfect storm and questionings and ejaculations. Salters opened the gate and joined the group. A moment later he came running back, up the walk toward the piazza.

"Cap'n," he shouted. "Cap'n Elkanah, here's news! What do you think? A telegram's just come from Nat Hammond. He's safe and sound in New York, and he'll be here day after tomorrow."

They could not believe it and rushed out to hear more. Emulous, glowing with importance, affirmed that it was so. He had seen the telegram at the store. It was for Grace Van Horne and they were just going to send a boy over to the shanty with it.

Captain Elkanah seized Salters by the arm and led him out of the group. The old man's face was alight with savage joy and his voice shook with exultation.

"I'll tell you one thing it means," he whispered. "It means the end of Ellery, so far as his marrying her is concerned. She gave her word to Hammond and she'll keep it. She's no liar, whatever else she is. He may be minister of the Regular church, though I'll never set under him, but he'll never marry her, now."

WOMEN'S CLUBS

erature class at the homes of members with Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney leader. Plans were well under way for a Hallowe'en party at Alpha hall Friday evening Nov. 1 to raise funds to complete the amount needed to buy a reflectoscope for the public library.

Mrs. John G. Worster of the Music committee hoped members would put by a dollar now, ready for the May musicales.

Mrs. Edward B. Marsh for the program committee said club members had received their year books which showed the work of her committee.

Mrs. Albert N. Murray gave a good report of the Visiting Nurse work as follows:

"It is with pleasure I give you the report of our Visiting Nurses for the summer months. Miss McEwan with her assistant have broadened and increased the work. Not only in the service rendered the suffering have they proved their ability, but they have helped many of the less fortunate of our city to better and more self-respecting ways of living. Every day in the week two nurses have cared for one or more sick people in every section of Quincy. Some of the patients have been able to pay a little for their care, a large number have been free. The total number of patients nursed have been 218. The number of visits made 1236, and an average of 13 physicians have called the nurses each month.

"By the will of the late Mrs. Lydia L. Morton one thousand dollars was given to this work. Those who are interested are deeply grateful for this, and it is hoped that it will be substantially added to. Last year we started a subscription fund for the support of the work. We believe that the general contribution of a dollar is a plan that appeals to all, and gives our work wide publicity without being a burden to the few. This plan proved satisfactory as we were enabled to keep up with the growth of the work.

"The committee is soliciting funds for another year. We find more people familiar with the work, and words of encouragement accompany most of the contributions. This leads us to hope that with the addition of another nurse in November the people of Quincy will be in such close touch with our work, that the problem of its support will be more a matter of collection than soliciting. Our linen closet is receiving generous support each month but as there is a daily call upon these resources we urge all present to remember this feature of the work.

Mrs. G. B. Bates of the Woman's Exchange announced food sales on club afternoons and rules regulating the same, also a candy sale to raise funds for the work. This completed the committee reports.

Mrs. Albert E. Avery who was to have reported the meeting of the State Federation at Templeton last June was unable to be present on account of illness in the family.

Two club members attended the biennial of the National Federation in California last June, Mrs. Edmund S. Wade and Mrs. John G. Worster. A letter was read from Mrs. Wade regretting that she had been called to Chicago and could not be with the club at its opening meeting, to give a report of the doings of the biennial. Mrs. Worster gave a fine word picture of the trip and meetings; starting from Boston, the places visited, the helpful meetings, outings, receptions, the grand scenery en route and the homeward journey. We wish space permitted us to reprint it in full for the perusal of members who could not be at the club Tuesday.

Following Mrs. Worster's interesting report a reception was given the new members by the club officers. In the receiving line were Mrs. E. W. Sheppard president; Mrs. Wilson Marsh, first vice president; Mrs. Walter S. Pinkham, second vice president; Mrs. George L. Badger, recording secretary; Mrs. Percy H. Holman, corresponding secetary; Mrs. Herbert W. Pinkham treasurer and Mrs. Thomas Fenno auditor. Mrs. Charles R. Safford, Mrs. Alfred P. Thompson, Mrs. William H. Whitney and Miss Margaret L. Thomas of the Reception committee ushered and there was music by Mrs. Merchant and Mrs. Thomas, piano and violin of Weymouth.

Mrs. Herbert S. Barker of the Hospitality committee served tea and cake the pourers being Mrs. Frank W. Crane and Mrs. Charles M. Bryant.

Club dates for the month are: Oct. 15 class in parliamentary law at 10.30 A. M. at clubhouse; Oct. 18 Cafe Chantant at Alpha hall, Oct. 22 club meeting at the clubhouse.

GENERALS TO LEAVE THE COUNTRY

More Americans Killed In Fight With Nicaraguans

San Juan del Sur, Nic., Oct. 9.—The American forces lost four marines and three bluejackets killed in the attack on Leon and Chinandaga, which were occupied by the rebels. Fifty of the rebels were killed and many wounded. The others have been disarmed.

The American force now in the vicinity of Leon and Chinandaga now numbers 1200 and has the situation under control.

Evidently influenced by the capture of Masaya, the leaders of the Liberals at Leon asked for safe conduct to leave the country, agreeing to surrender to the city.

This was satisfactory to President Diaz and Admiral Southerland and permission to leave, with the proviso that they should not return, was granted General Irias and a dozen other generals who have been making Leon their headquarters.

D'ALBA TRIAL BEGUN

Charged With Attempted Assassination of King of Italy

Rome, Oct. 9.—Antonio D'Alba, who attempted to assassinate King Victor Emmanuel on March 14, was brought to trial here. The palace of justice was surrounded by troops as a precaution against a popular attempt on the prisoner's life.

D'Alba's attempt on the king occurred as their majesties were on their way to attend a memorial mass for the present ruler's father, Ki Humbert, who was assassinated Brescia in 1900.

D'Alba fired three revolver shots at the king. Major Langa, commanding the royal cavalry escort, spurred his horse directly beween the would-be assassin and received a bullet in h head. D'Alba has thrice attempt suicide since his imprisonment.

BROKEN WIRE CLOSED STREET

Fine Electrical Display as Traffic Was Held Up

An electrical display frightened the Copeland street residents Tuesday evening and the spluttering and kicking of a broken trolley wire kept the neighborhood in a state of excitement.

The wire snapped about 7 o'clock and from that hour to ten o'clock Copeland street, between Furnace Brook Parkway and Cross street a distance of about 500 feet was closed to traffic. The wire dropped after an East Milton car trolley had forced it from an insulator.

The police of Quincy and the officers on duty on the boulevard acted as a guard along the street and their quick action in warning people probably avoided unpleasant circumstances, if not fatal results to some people.

The wire was repaired about 10 o'clock by the imergency crew of the street railroad.

LIVELY BLAZE IN GERMANTOWN

B. F. Hodgkinson's House Scene Considerable Damage

FIREMEN HANDICAPPED

The alarm from Box 15 at 12.59 this noon was for a brisk fire in the house of Benjamin F. Hodgkinson on Bicknell street, Germantown. When discovered the roof was burning briskly and an alarm was immediately turned in. The central station aparatus led by the auto chemical arrived in good season but the firemen found themselves badly handicapped by lack of water. The chemical stream was used to good effect but was not sufficient to cope with the fire.

While the firemen were trying to get a line of hose from the nearest hydrant which was some distance away the fire was making good headway and although a bucket brigade was formed it was of but little use. Once the water was brought to bear on the building however the firemen were not long in getting the upper hands of the blaze, and at 2 o'clock when the Ledger went to press the fire was reported as being under control. The roof of the house is badly burned but it is impossible at this time to get an estimate of the damage.

RED SOX DRAW FIRST BLOOD

Tesreau, Conquerer of Grizzlies, Driven From the Box

WOOD IS RIGHT ON THE JOB

Tide Is Turned After It Appears to Be Setting In Against Boston Outfit, Which Gives Fine Display of Pluck and Gameness

New York, Oct. 9.—"Smoky" Joe Wood again has joined the list of Giant killers, and once more the Red Sox, heroes of their own league, winners of scores of strenuous up-hill battles, have proved their worth as gamesters and their ability to come from behind in a pinch.

On the historic Polo grounds the American league champions struck a telling blow to the hopes of McGraw and the National league contingent when they fell upon Jeff Tesreau, drove him from the rubber and turned the tide that had appeared to be setting in against them.

It was the same old tale of Red Sox pluck and gameness. It was a confirmation of the adage that Stahl's men are never beaten till the last man is out, and the Boston outfit never knows when to quit.

For weeks the mighty Tesreau, groomed especially for the occasion, had been held up as the bugbear to Boston hopes, had been touted as the pitcher upon whom McGraw would rely in the crisis to stop the dauntless Boston batsmen.

"The bearcat of the Ozarks," was the title New York's hero worshippers had conferred upon this newcomer to the big league ranks. He had strangled grizzlies with his bare hands. He was expected to stop the Boston Red Sox and thereby humble the pride of Boston and the American league.

Yesterday, however, the "pride of the Ozarks" met a foe that was mightier than the grizzlies of his own region.

FORMAL DEDICATION OF NEW NURSES' HOME FOR HOSPITAL.

Description of the Fine Structure the Gift of Henry Munroe Faxon

Perfect in Its Construction and Appointments

HENRY M. FAXON,
Who Presented the Nurses' Home.

The new Nurses' Home, presented to Quincy Hospital by Henry Munroe Faxon, Esq., was formally dedicated to the worthy purpose for which it was erected, at three o'clock this afternoon, in the presence of a large gathering of people, including trustees of the hospital, members of the City Council, City officials, prominent citizens, and members of the Hospital Aid association.

Following the formal dedicatory exercises, the new home was thrown open for the inspection of those present as was also the new surgical ward, and both institutions were heartily approved by all.

The Home is a model one in every respect and compares favorably with any other Nurses' home in this locality.

The new surgical ward is the latest ward in this departure which tells the story complete of its magnificent utility.

The exercises opened with a prayer by Rev. Adelbert Lathrop Hudson, pastor of the First Unitarian church. President Fred B. Rice of the corporation delivered a short address of welcome.

After the inspection, luncheon was served, all the arrangements, this, and other details of the important event having been carried out under the direction of Mr. Faxon.

HENRY M. FAXON, SPEECH.

In presenting the Home to the Trustees, Mr. Faxon said:

Mr. President and Friends:

"The patience, courage and self sacrifice that chooses the alleviation of suffering for its life work, has always strongly appealed to me. There can be no more helpful lives than those of good doctors or good nurses, who every day, and every hour of the day, stand ready to give themselves in service for others. Those of us who have had illness in our homes realize how near both come in the great crises of our lives. It is fitting therefore, that my appreciation of the value of our hospital to this community, should find its expression in this building, which is to be used forever as a home for nurses. In the work of its planning and construction, I gratefully acknowledge the sympathetic interest and co-operation of those who have labored with me. They have given of their best, and have inter-

Lock Your Husband in the Kitchen For One Day

Make him cook the meals---wash the dishes --- polish up the stove --- take out the ashes (if coal)---clean out the refrigerator---empty the drip pan---scour the kettles and pans---shine up the tinware and silver---put out the garbage can---bring up the coal---scrub the floor---wash the windows.

——but what's the use? He would break out somehow and rush down to KINCAIDE'S ANNEX and get all the latest labor-saving helps he could—not for himself, but for his wife, because he would see kitchen work is a drudgery with poor equipment, and a pleasure when the proper tools are provided.

This is written with the earnest hope that husbands will take the hint—and also take advantage of this Housewares Sale, to provide every last thing that is needed in the kitchen.

To over 9,000 homes hereabouts we sent the circular of our 10 days sale which ends Friday night at 10. (We close Columbus Day.) Despite heavy selling most lots are still intact. So opportunity makes this last loud knock at your door. OPEN—AND COME AND SHARE THE SAVINGS.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The Capt. Kid club has opened a campaign and that is no kidding matter by the hold ups they have made.

Lucky for the Republicans and Democrats they held their conventions in the summer rather than about this time, or their bombast would have been wasted on the desert air, as the papers would not have had any room for the blasts.

That McVeagh story from a muck raker looks very much like some one trying to get into the lime light. So far as its value goes it is like trying to establish relationship by a cat running across a neighbors back yard.

Roosevelt forced the Taftites to spend five times as much as they reckoned for the nomination.

The financiers must be looking for bigger dividends.

They could stop this war or any war at their will, but they are not very dove like in this instance.

The Boston Herald says the sick man of Europe is taking his medicine. We thought he had been retired some years ago. He is now gloating over the inability of his successor to avert castastrophes which he so skillfully avoided by playing the European powers for years. As a dodger the former Sultan was a wonder, even if he gained the title of "The sick man of Europe."

It might be interesting for the citizens of Boston, when the mayor is on the job, and what he has accomplished for the city? Speechifying and keeping in the lime light, and tripping from one end of the country to the other appear to be his long suite.

Let us settle down and ask ourselves seriously does Quincy interests really demand at this time large docking facilities at enormous outlay and is there anything in the future which bids fair to warrant such a move?

Chicago with her usual progressives would swallow up all the water of the great lakes for her own advancement, but there are a few other western ports who have called a halt.

That first inning Wednesday was going some for a starter.

If Roosevelt becomes editor of a New York daily paper what will be his policies? Judging from present day conditions the counting room will have a word or two to say about that.

The English doctors refused the $1.08 per year to look after the health of insured persons under the insurance act. While a few raises of the ante have been made the doctors still insist on doubling the bet.

EVENLY MATCHED.

After all the "ifs" and "ands" of base ball in the present series have been picked apart and set aside for all they are worth, the judgment of McGraw, manager of the New Yorks, has to be accepted upon the relative merits of the 1911 Athletics and the 1912 Boston Americans. Not a single writer, supposedly experts in judging teams have offered an opinion that anywhere near touches his summing up based upon the two performances to date. Without any side stepping or dodging he positively asserted that the Athletics of 1911 had a shade the better of the argument from all angles.

In the light of the result of the two games played, McGraws opinion has some weight.

At any rate, where the Athletics won in a canter after the first loss in New York, the Bostons were unable to take the second game from the Gotham nine on their own turf. This means that the teams are pretty evenly matched. Any one on either side who had an idea that their respectvie teams were invincible has got to revise that opinion.

That the remaining games will be played to the limit must be conceded and some fast base ball will be witnessed and that an element of luck will play an important part in the final round up, is likewise evident.

PENSIONS FOR LABORERS.

Quincy with other cities of the Commonwealth will be called upon to pass upon Chapter 503, of the Acts of 1912, an act relative to pensioning laborers in the employ of cities and towns. The bill passed the legislature and became defaultively operative, having "the force of law," as prescribed by the Constitution, as the Governor failed to return it with a veto, in the five days allowed by law.

The vote shall be taken at the state election, but not less than two weeks nor more than four weeks, before the election the city clerk shall mail to each of the registered voters, a copy of this act, with the statement that it is to be placed on the ballot.

The act provides that the employee entitled to a pension shall be in the employ of the city and town for 25 years, or after 15 years service, becoming mentally or physically incapacitated by reason of injury while engaged in the performance of duty shall be entitled to an annual pension equal to one half the average annual compensation paid him.

It is noticeable that no reference is made to female employees. This is a subject in which every voter should take a deep interest, and vote according to the dictates of his conscience. One thing is certain that the laborer is as fully entitled to consideration in this direction as the more highly paid state officials, who have recently profitted by the law covering their case, and not only retired on a pension, but immediately engaged in some other profitable pursuit.

The laborer who earns a small pittance, has no great opportunity to lay by for a rainy day with the present high cost of living and is more liable to injury than the fellow sitting in a comfortable office should be given first consideration on this pension problem, but the contrary has been the rule rather than the exception. The laborer, more numerous than the more highly favored class of employee is really the last one for whom legal relief is offered in case of disability from one cause or another. And it is only natural that the cause of this delay in really recognizing the wants of the laboring class is wondered at. The answer is simple. The laborer does not have a political pull. The voters of Quincy will have to pass upon this important matter. When voting upon they should exercise judgment and give due consideration that is involved.

SAVES ONE HANDLING

The new Boston Elevated express and freight terminal which has been planned for some time is now under construction and well on its way toward completion. The opening of this terminal will mark another era in the extension and improvement of the electric express and freight service which has made such rapid strides throughout this section in the past few years.

It is now expected that the new terminal building will be ready for the opening of the new service, October 21. For the present it will be used by the Bay State Street Railway Co. and the Boston & Worcester Street Railway Co., although later it is expected that other roads operating in the vicinity of Boston will inaugurate the service with this as a central terminal.

The new terminal is located at the corner of Harrison Ave., and Randolph Street in Boston which is a point particularly well situated for the service in Boston and the territory covered by the Bay State lines. It is convenient to the large retail and wholesale shippers of Boston and easy of access to a large territory.

While since last September it has been possible to ship between this section and Boston by the Electric Express, the freight service has been limited to Neponset bridge, and it has been necessary to use motor trucks between Neponset and the India Wharf headquarters. The Bay State will now be able to run its cars direct to and from the new terminal which will mean a vastly speedier and more reliable service doing away with at least one handling, providing a first class freight service to larger shippers who will have the advantage of the speed and frequency of the express service at freight rates.

MEMORIES OF OTHER LANDS

Interesting Information Picked Up by Mrs. Hingston

A reminescent address, entitled "Memorable Days in Other Lands" by Mrs. William E. Hingston, kept a large number of the parishioners of St. Chrysostoms church in good humor Tuesday evening. Mrs. Hingston related personal experiences she had while touring Europe a number of years ago.

While not entirely descriptive, Mrs. Hingston pointed out the beauties of many spots of interest to the people of the eastern continent, and anecdotes of characters who lived at the different places evoked much laughter.

She also told of the historical connections of French villiages and how the peasants of Brittany and Flanders today tell of the traditions that have been handed down from early times. A brief mention was made of Joan of Arc, the patron saint of the French republic who was recently canonized because of her virtues.

In Spain she told of an odd incident while examining the palace of Granada and later on spoke of her dread of Italian banditti who were said to have infested northern Italy.

While in Rome she visited the Sistine Chapel and told how she gazed with wondering eyes on the work of Michael Angelo who painted a picture of the Madonna on the vaulted roof of the chapel and said that it was so exquisite that she, as well as others, spent hours looking at the work of art, which was reflected from a hand-glass she held in a horizontal position.

Mrs. Hingston created a mild excitement in telling of the perils of travelling across the briny sea and entertainingly told of the reception a tourist is given in other lands. Impressed with the officiousness of the customs officers of some countries she said she could not help comparing the courtesy extended by examiners of other places.

The talk was divided into two parts and during the intermission, Miss Helen Croucher gave a piano solo which received much applause. Mrs. W. H. Spooner was applauded for a solo and Miss Lazall and Miss Croucher rendered a splendid duet.

MRS. KING THE HOSTESS

At Delightful Gathering of Bethany Ladies' Circle

The Bethany Ladies' circle and friends held a very delightful meeting at the residence of Mrs. Theophilus King, Adams street, Wednesday afternoon. About 75 were present, the president, Mrs. Everett Crane presiding.

Reports of the secretary and treasurer were read and approved after which the election of officers took place resulting in the old board being unanimously reelected as follows:

President—Mrs. Everett Crane.

Vice president—Mrs. George Macfarlane.

Secretary—Mrs. Charles Sampson.

Treasurer—Mrs. C. W. Guy.

Advisory board—Mrs. Theophilus King, Mrs. William E. Alden, Mrs. J. F. Welch, Mrs. W. G. Shaw, Mrs. George Macfarlane, Mrs. Victor E. Miller, and Mrs. Everett Crane.

Rev. Benjamin A. Willmont, pastor, made a few remarks and suggestions in regard to church work.

Madame Beale Morey, who was present as a special guest received warm and cordial greetings from her old and close friends. Miss Eva Steeves and Mrs. Anna J. Titus sang a group of songs accompanied by Madame Morey as follows: "Venetian Boat Song," by Tosti; "Spring" by Abt "Irish Folk Song" by Needham, and "Indian Love Song" by Findon which were pleasingly rendered and greatly enjoyed meriting the appreciative applause accorded them.

Mrs. King who is always a delightful hostess, served refreshments, assisted by her daughter Mrs. Walter E. Burke, her granddaughter Miss Vera Burke and her grandson Roydon Burke.

ALL SOULS' MEN'S CLUB.

The first meeting of the Men's Club of All Souls' church, Braintree, for the season of 1912-13 was held in the parish hall, Wednesday evening, with a large and enthusiastic attendance of members who seemed, one and all heartily glad to meet after the summers' vacation. Supper was served at 6.30 o'clock and consisted of roast beef, potatoes, both baked and boiled delicious gravy, lima beans, cabbage salad, coffee, rolls and lastly apple tapioca and cream which was a triumph of the culinary art.

After the tables were cleared cigars were lighted and president Alva Morrison welcomed the gentlemen to the opening meeting of the club's sixth season. Mr. Morrison spoke in his easy and graceful way and introduced as the first speaker Robert A. Woods of South End House Boston, whose talk was "From the immigrant to the citizen."

Mr. Woods' words were most convincing as he told of the dangers to the country which might arise if people disregarded the immigrant problem. He spoke of the necessity of instructing the new comers in the usages and customs of the country and of the absolute need of every citizen to acquaint himself with present day conditions in regard to immigration. Mr. Woods spoke of the attitude of the labor organizations towards the immigrant and considered their methods though sometimes rough to be of educational value in teaching the aliens to be men and demand their rights among men.

He thinks the actions of some of the great corporations to be unjust and tyrannical, and tending to degrade rather than uplift the wage earners. The speaker concluded with a plea for the human element in government and the practical application of the golden rule.

The second speaker was Frank P. Chisholm of Tuskeegee Institute, Alabama. Mr. Chisholm has worked his way up the social ladder from a newsboy on the streets of Savannah, Georgia to the position of one of Booker T. Washington's most trusted and talented men at Tuskeegee and is a living example of the fine type of that institution's graduates. He told how from small beginnings, Tuskeegee has grown to be an educational power and has lifted the black race in the south from its penniless, aimless, shiftless and hopeless condition into a position of far reaching power and usefulness.

He told of the life at the institute, its practical curriculum which embraces not domestic science but just "plain cooking," and not theoretical agriculture but "farming."

He told of the 3500 acres of land, the 900 acre farm where they raise "everything but a disturbance" and the great work of the school in all departments. Mr. Chisholm told of the ten million negroes in the United States and how education is moulding them into capable, intelligent and useful citizens. He spoke of several Southern towns peopled and officered entirely by negroes and quoted some telling statistics concerning the black man's advancement in this country.

He related conditions in several Southern states where the negro is not allowed to vote and where the schools for his children are inadequate or totally lacking. He concluded most forcibly by reminding his hearers that man either drags down or uplifts his fellow man and that just so long as the negro is denied his rights, just so long will his white brother be hampered in the great race of life. In common with the previous speaker, Mr. Chisholm was accorded close attention and frequent applause.

A short business meeting was held at which matters of importance were discussed after which came adjournment at 9.45 o'clock after a very auspicious inauguration of the new season. The members are looking forward to the coming meetings which promise to be fully up to the high standard of recent years.

ENTERTAINMENT AND SUPPER

Ladies of Quincy Point Church Fine Hostesses

The first social and supper given by the Ladies Aid Society of the Quincy Point church took place in the vestry, Wednesday evening. There was a large number present. Following the supper there was an entertainment given by members of the society.

The entertainment was opened with a Piano Solo by Miss Helen Lincoln, followed by a motion song, "The little shaking Quakers," with Winsor Harlow, as Hezekiah and the sister Quakers being Roxanna Shenkelberger, Doris Peterson, Elsie Carter, Jennie Nugent, Ruth Knight, Gladys McKenzie and Lillian Hendrey. The young people took their parts, well and brought forth much laughter from the audience.

A comedietta: "Young Dr. Devine," certainly was a hit. The young girls of Hill side Seminary, hearing that a young doctor in the villiage where an epidemic of smallpox reigned was coming to vaccinate them, planned to entertain the doctor, and not let him go from Hillside, wholehearted.

The Principal of the school ushered Dr. Devine into the presence of the girls, but catching sight of the doctor nearly all were overcome, the doctor being a female. After diagnozing each case and prescribing the several remedies, the girls were sent off to bed.

The doctor left saying she could not vaccinate the pupils in their present conditions. By the conversation after the doctor left the room, it was evident the girls never suspected the doctor had labelled them with fearful diseases, because they became very lively school girls.

The parts were well taken by, Isabelle Foster, as Rebecca; Mrs. Bertha Wight, as Elizabeth; very talkative, May Oliver, as Marie; very poetical, Mrs. Alice McNeil, as Rose; not very talkative, Helen Lincoln as Grace, very sentimental; Helen Sherburne as Laura; and Edith Stone as Maud, both gigglers.

Mrs. Nellie Foster, as Madam, principal of the school was very dignified, and Dr. Frances Devine, Frances, dealt with an ease as the girls found out looking at her card a second time, was Elizabeth Scouler.

The supper committee included Mrs. H. E. Bouney, Mrs. Joseph Fitton, Mrs. E. H. Bushnell, Mrs. L. F. Chubbuck, Mrs. E. J. Austin, Mrs. J. Peterson, Mrs. C. A. Brent, Mrs. Walter Hayden and Mrs. T. B. Pollard. Mrs. Bertha Wight had charge of the ice cream which was sold during the evening.

CELEBRATED WOODEN WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fitts celebrated their wooden wedding at their home on Hunt avenue, Braintree, Wednesday evening. They were former Quincy residents and many Quincy people were in attendance. Among those present were:—Dr. and Mrs. Frank Crawford, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Abele, Mr. and Mrs. Walter McKenzie, George Pinkham, Mrs. Frank Ryder, Mr. and Mrs. William Hodges, Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Hewiston, Roscoe and Miss Ella Horton, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Currier, George Luce and Miss Emma Spaulding.

THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

High School — Public Schools
Woodward Institute — Parochial School

EVENING SCHOOL.

The evening schools of the city opened Monday evening in the buildings previously advertised with a marked general increase in attendance at every building and with an interest that is highly encouraging to those who have to do with the management. The Adams school which is the most cosmopolitan of all the schools, usually enrolling more than 20 nationalities, had a first night enrollment of 108 which is 25 per cent greater than at the opening last year. At the Willard school where the attendance is almost exclusively Finnish, 114 persons were present an unusually large number of them being women. This was also a large gain over 1911. The first night's enrollment at the Lincoln school where an evening class is being held for the first time was only 18, but the school will be continued with the expectation that the numbers will gradually increase as knowledge of the schools sessions becomes more generally diffused among the people living in the district. When the doors opened at the High school the large number that were ready kept the superintendent busy until 9 o'clock, attending to the regulations and straightening out courses.

The commercial course had a registration of 57 and will as in past years be divided into two sections. While this course is generally termed the commercial course, as a matter of fact, the greater part of its enrollment devotes time only to arithmetic, spelling, penmanship and letter writing, not more than that usually being sufficiently advanced to study bookkeeping.

As most of the instruction is individual this course furnishes the best opportunities for the young man or woman whose education has been neglected to get thorough instruction in the essentials. The general course in freehand and mechanical drawing was chosen by 29 and this class has been divided into two sections each meeting two evenings a week.

The Industrial courses were advertised widely and until Monday night the school department had no idea what response there would be. The results of the registration have proved a great surprise both to the superintendent and the evening school committee.

The course in blue print reading and drawing for machinists enrolled 28 the first night with several more to come and will be given in two sections, two evenings per week.

The course in sheet metal design and development enrolled 20 and will be given on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. The course in joiner and drawing and blue print reading enrolled 13 with several more to come and the evenings for this course will be the same.

The license course for fire men and third class engineers enrolled 13, the class for plumbers and helpers, on the drawing and theory of their craft, enrolled the same number. This latter course will be in charge of Joseph Driscoll of Boston, who is connected with the firm of R. D. Kimball, the well known heating engineers. Mr. Driscoll is an expert on the layout of plans and in the problems of ventilation, circulation etc., and the course he gives should prove a most valuable one. The class in sewing and dressmaking had an attendance of over 30 and will probably be given in two sections. The class in cooking has 15 names.

The course advertised in monument design and in drawing for capenters were the only ones at the High school that did not fill, there being but eight registering in each class. The course in cooking at the Willard school had only nine names. These last three courses are the only ones of the full list announced by the committee which will not be offered.

The men who registered for the course in monument design will be taken care of however in conjunction with course in drawing for granite cutters.

At the Lincoln school which has the surprising enrollment of 24. Mr. Waterhouse of Boston will take charge of the class at the Lincoln school and if the attendance is as large as seems probable will be furnished with an assistant. These figures given above will be increased considerably each night for two or three weeks and give promise of a very busy fall term. Especially do they bear out the claim of the school committee that there is strong and growing demand for Industrial education. Practically every industrial shop and establishment in the city is represented in the enrollment.

Tuesday noon from 12.45 to 1 a meeting was held at the Boston Gear Works at which the superintendent of schools was present by invitation of Frank Burgess to explain the evening instructive courses the school system now offers. Mr. Barbour's remarks were supplemented by a ringing talk from Mr. Burgess to his men on the value of technical education to the workman.

Arthur Ray of the high school was also present to explain some of the drawing plates on gearing that was done in the evening classes.

WILLARD SCHOOL.

Mrs. E. L. Cook, member of the school committee, Bridgewater, Mass., and Miss M. B. Snow, a teacher of English in the Bridgewater High school, were visitors at the school Thursday of last week. They came for the purpose of observing the work of the pre-vocational classes.

Frank E. Poland, a grammar master in Malden, Mass., spent Thursday forenoon at the school.

The room partitioned off in the attic, by the boys of the pre-vocational class, for a sewing and cooking room has been equipped with a gas range and a sink and is fast taking on the appearance of an up-to-date kitchen.

The printing outfit, a Chandler & Price Gordon Press, with sufficient type and furnishings to do the printing for the school, has arrived and the boys are busily engaged in setting it up and getting it ready for use.

The school banking began last Monday, many taking advantage of the opportunity. The depositors should bear in mind, however, that these accounts are to be permanent as far as possible and are not to be withdrawn when a pupil leaves school, but continued with the Savings Bank after graduation. If a pupil does not intend to let his money remain in the bank after he leaves school, the bank will not bother with the account. The purpose for which this saving system was started was to teach thrift, the pupil acquiring the habit of saving, thus laying aside something "for a rainy day" or to help pay his way through high school or college.

A Clean-Up-Club has been formed by the pupils of grade eight with the following officers: President, Francis O'Brien, Vice-President, Julia Reardon; Secretary Cecilia Devine; Treasurer, John Minihan. This club was organized for the purpose of keeping the school yard free from apple cores and waste paper, but it is the intention of the officers to extend its usefulness to the cleaning up of refuse in our streets and vacant lots, to the removing of spoiled fruit breeding flies in the gutters, to the taking care of an unsightly bunch of rubbish piled up against a fence half covered and hidden by the grass, and even to sanitary conditions in their own back yards, and to neatness and cleanliness in their own personal appearance. In fact they plan to make the club educational along this line, believing that a clean, well ordered place advertises itself far and wide, and the wholesome place becomes the prosperous one.

WOLLASTON SCHOOL.

The regular monthly meeting of the Association will be held in the Assembly Hall of the school on Monday evening, at 8 o'clock.

Ernest L. Collins, head master of the Quincy High school, will speak on "Some Problems of the High School." Soloist—Mrs. H. Y. Follett. Accompanist—Miss Katherine Follett. A large attendance is desired.

Percy Ela and Gerald Berry have been elected captain and manager of the Soccer foot-ball team.

MASS. FIELD SCHOOL.

Miss Ruth Taylor, master's assistant, was given a surprise party by the pupils of Grade VIII on Tuesday evening.

Reginald Bradshaw and Richard Howe have been elected captain and manager of the school soccer foot-ball team. The team defeated Wollaston on Tuesday afternoon score 3-0.

ATHERTON HOUGH SCHOOL.

The soccer team has been organized with James LeCaine as manager, and Henry O'Brien as captain. A practice game was played with the Coddington team last Monday afternoon, after playing three fifteen-minutes periods, a nothing to nothing score was the result.

The Atherton Hough team plays a practice game with the Washington team at 4.15 this afternoon.

FORMAL DEDICATION

woven in this structure a wealth of good will to the hospital and to those young women who are to dwell herein.

"I hope it will be indeed, a home, where, in the hours of rest and recreation, new strength and inspiration may be gained to brighten the duties of each day.

"And now, Mr. President, it gives me great pleasure to present this building with its furnishings, to the City Hospital of Quincy, and to hand you this key, the symbol of ownership."

DESCRIPTION OF THE HOME.

The building faces southwest toward the main entrance to the Hospital grounds a little to the left and across the driveway from the main entrance. It is 53 by 33 feet, of Georgian style of architecture, three stories in height and is constructed of red tapestry brick with limestone trimming. The basement is of Quincy sap-faced granite. The front steps are of cut granite and from the top step to the front door is red brick pavement. The front entrance is embellished with massive, fluted Doric columns and an arched window over the entrance gives a very pretty effect.

The front door opens into a vestibule which leads to a main hall running through to the rear of the building. At this latter end of the building is constructed a piazza of concrete from which a beautiful view may be had of Boston harbor and Quincy Bay. This piazza is surrounded by a cement parapet. On the first floor is a large living room and a reception room which lead from the main hall and are on the right hand side. These two big rooms are connected by wide, sliding doors. Leading from the main hall to the left are four bed rooms, two containing double beds and two single beds. Connected with these rooms is a large bath room.

On the second floor near the head of the stairway is the head nurse's room. Besides this room there are three bed rooms, each with two beds in them and four rooms with single beds. A large bath room is also connected with these sleeping rooms. The third floor contains three rooms with two beds each and a room with one bed. Another bath room is located on this floor. In the basement and class, lecture and store rooms. There is no heating plant in the basement the team being furnished from the central power plant of the hospital. All of the floors are connected by a continuous, broad stairway which is lighted on each landing by large windows.

In the living room on the first floor is a large fire place with a mantle reaching to the ceiling. On either side of the fireplace are broad seats in the inglenooks. The finish of the rooms and hallways is of dark cypress and the floors and stairways are of oak. The bed rooms are finished in hard pine in the natural color and the floors in the bath rooms and the vestibule are of monolithic composition with dadoes in plaster. The bath rooms are finished in white enamel. The doors connecting the rooms are of one panel and are constructed of curly birch. Everything in the vetilating and plumbing line is of the latest and most approved design and the lighting is by electricity. The pitched roof is of green varigated slate laid in old English style with especially carved cornices.

The home was designed as a place of comfort and recreation as well as a place to sleep and for the first time in the history of the hospital, after an existence of 22 years, all of the nurses will be able to live under the same roof. Heretofore it has been necessary to provide accommodations for some of the nurses in families living outside of the hospital grounds. The building was designed by Albert H. Wright who was given full authority by Mr. Faxon to provide a building that would be a place of rest and comfort, regardless of the expense incurred. All of the work was done by day labor and most of it under Mr. Faxon's supervision. The building is regarded as a model of its kind and is certainly a handsome addition to the splendid new equipment lately acquired by the hospital.

The building was designed and the construction supervised by A. H. Wright, Architect, of Quincy. It was built by the day and no expense was spared to make it a most complete and substantial structure.

KING NICHOLAS

First Balkan Ruler to Declare War on Turkey

GREECE WILL FALL IN LINE

To Join Other Balkan States In Break With Turkey

MONTENEGRO STARTS BATTLE

London, Oct. 10.—Bulgaria and Servia, according to report, have followed the example of Montenegro and broken off diplomatic relations with Turkey. If this be true Greece is likely soon to do the same thing, and the tinderbox of Europe will be aflame, with a million armed men to add fuel to the fire.

Already it is officially admitted that Montenegrin troops are across the frontier fighting with the Turkish army, and the despatches say that the Bulgarians also are over the border, moving south.

If Bulgaria does the obvious, Adrianople, thirty miles from her frontier, will be her first objective in an effort to cut it off from Solonica. It is a strong position, however, and will be difficult to take.

After Adrianople the main defense of the Turks is the famous lines of Chatalja, about twenty-five miles west of Constntinople, which extend from the sea of Marmora to the Black sea and cannot be turned, or it may be that part of the Bulgarian army will mask Adrianople, refusing battle until compelled, while the larger part will strike from Phillipopolis toward Djuna and Seres.

A part of the Greek army may concentrate in Thessaly and simultaneously make for Elassona, the headquarters of Turkish troops in Turkish Thessaly, while the Greek fleet bombards Salonica, and the single line of railway by which Turkey feeds her Macedonian troops is cut.

The Macedonian army will then be left to its own resources in an unfriendly country. The Turkish troops at Salonica and Elassona would then have to fight the Greeks on the west and south and the Bulgars on the north and east. No re-enforcements can reach them if the preliminary move of cutting the railway is accomplished, till the Andrianople army corps, which alone can be re-enforced from Constantinople and Asia Minor, has decisively defeated the main Bulgarian army.

Everything turns upon this, and probably the only great pitched battle of the war will be fought somewhere to the north or northwest of Adrianople. Turkey's utter inability to defend Epirus against Greece in 1897 was the principal weakness of Turkey's position at that time as it is now.

The whole population from the Gulf of Arta up to Janina is pro-Greek, and with Greek gunboats keeping the Turkish fortress of Prevesa busy, it should not need a very large army, according to the experts, to occupy Turkish Epirus, or at least up to Janina.

Europe was prepared for an appeal to arms by Servia and Bulgaria by the replies of their governments that the reforms promised by the powers in Macedonia were vague and that no guarantee was given that they would be carried out. It is generally recognized that the intervention of the European ambassadors at the porte cannot now have any effect.

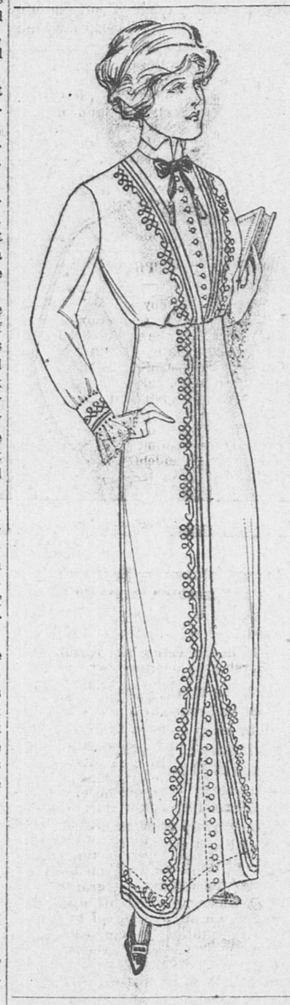
AMERICAN DESIGNS VS. FRENCH FASHIONS

Lace, Rhinestones and Fur Combine to Form Garniture of Stylish Gowns

USE OF CONTRASTING MATERIALS

Interest in the world of fashion has centered during the past month in the fall openings of the big dry goods and dressmaking establishments. Costumes directly imported from Paris have stood side by side with adaptations of the same ideas from our own designers, giving point to the much-discussed theme of American styles for American women. Undoubtedly, the rank and file of the women of this land do prefer a modified form of the extreme modes which originate in the ateliers of the French costumers, for exact reproductions of the ultra models are rarely seen here in any assemblage of representative women. At the same time, as things are now arranged, we must seek the basis of our designs in France, or in some place where fashions are a subject of historical study and where designing is ranked as a serious art. When artists on this side of the Atlantic feel the importance of this branch of their profession to the extent that it is now regarded abroad, we shall have our own styles. In the meantime we welcome the suggestions that come to us from the other shores, and use just as many of them as suits our own needs.



The extremely contracted skirts, for instance, those twenty-two-inch affairs that have to be left open to the knees, in the back, or at the sides if the wearer would step at all, we look at and smile upon, and then devise for ourselves a more modest version of the narrow silhouette. In figure One we have a costume which illustrates this point. The lines of the skirt follow the curves of the form closely enough to give it its full value of grace, yet with its two yards of width at the lower edge the movements of the wearer are in no wise impeded. Insert section, front closing, vest and high collar are all recent sytle features worthy of consideration. So, too, is the attractive braiding design with which the costume is embellished.

Braided and beaded trimmings make handsome gowns even of simple materials, but when developed in jewels they are the groundwork of the most exquisite costumes. Gorgeous indeed are the dresses aglitter with the rhinstone embroidery now so high in popular favor. The limpid glow of the rhinestone redeems it from the commonness of most of these near-jewels, and the handsomest and most expensive fabrics are considered none to good for its companionship. With tulle, chiffon or lace they are featured on evening gowns of brocade and satin. In some cases, streamers of bejeweled galloon are mingled with chiffon in a loose drapery caught, in pannier fashion, near the hem of the skirt. Often the draperies are the gauziest of webs embroidered with rhinestones—a fragile weapon for the fray of fashion, is it not? but an effectual one while it lasts.

From Dan to Beersheba in the realm of the modiste is no uncommon journey, and so this winter our most fashionable garniture will be a combination of lace, rhinestones and fur. A touch of fur should be seen on every dress if we would appear to comply with the rigid cannons of style. On our coats, on the hats to be worn with them, on broadcloth gowns, of course—to that much we are accustomed. But when we see shoulder-straps of beaver, skunk or sable holding up the filmiest of decollete blouses we have an entirely new sensation. We need time to accustom ourselves to the idea that a band of fur can be an appropriate border for a bead-embroidered chiffon tunic, or that a tulle pannier has any right to be gathered into a fur fastening, but the decree has gone forth, and slow as we may be to realize it, the effect is really charming.

Many of us may prefer white fur on gowns of light material, and, to be candid, this does meet the requirement of the very best taste. But real ermine costs a pretty penny, and an affinity for soil distinguishes all the white varieties. For once, therefore, fashion consults expediency and sets the seal of approval on dark fur for gowns both dark and light.

Another thing we observed at the fall openings is the extreme height of the collars this fall. Low collars have had their day, and unless a gown is outspokenly collarless, the neckband must be carried well up under the chin and to the hair line at the back of the neck. Both of our illustrations show this feature.

Figure two gives us a good example of the accepted collar. Attached to the chemisette of allover lace, it is a decidedly smart touch to an otherwise quite simple gown. Black satin charmeuse was the serviceable material chosen for this useful frock, with white moire silk for the shawl collar. A prevalent fancy for the pleated skirt is gratified in this unusually good model, a desirable slenderness being maintained in spite of the pleats. Any unpleasant fulness at the hips, which might prove an objection should be pleats be carried the entire length of the skirt, is entirely obviated by the smooth upper section. The pleats themselves are carefuly taped underneath just above the knees and again about six inches from the lower edge of the skirt to prevent an unseemly flare. We can thus "eat our cake and have it, too," by retaining the requisite slenderness while indulging our foundness for a full-pleated skirt.

A clever use of contrasting materials is another distinguishing characteristic of this season's modes. Few gowns are shown which have not either as a trimming feature, or as part of the construction of the gown itself, some fabric wholy different in kind or in color from that chosen to express the main idea. For instance, a serge dress will have inset sections of satin; broadcloth and velvet is a favorite combination, while zibeline contrasts its shining smoothness with the curly surface of boucle cloth or wool ratine. The more pronounced the contrast the more acceptable the combination.—New York, Oct. 1, 1912.

Talesmen In Becker Case Say They Have Already Formed Opinions

New York, Oct. 10.—It was impossible yesterday to find the twelfth juror for the trial of Lieutenant Becker. It seemed to Justice Goff that talesmen were deliberately disqualifying themselves.

Man after man, doggedly or glibly, insisted that he had such set convictions that he did not believe he could give Becker a fair trial.

There was no ring of sincerity to the justice's ear in this monotony of voluntary disqualification. The very tones of the unwilling talesmen were dull and flat.

Keziah Coffin

Author of "Cy Whittaker's Place," "Cap'n Eri," Etc.

By Joseph C. Lincoln

Illustrations by Ellsworth Young

(Copyright, 1908, by D. Appleton & Company)

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Mrs. Keziah Coffin, supposed widow, is arranging to move from Trumet to Boston, following the death of her brother, for whom she had kept house. Grace Van Horne, ward of Capt. Eben Hammond, leader of the "Come-outer" religious sect, offers to assist her financially if she will remain. She declines. Kyan Pepper, widower, offers marriage, and is indignantly refused.

CHAPTER II—Capt. Elkanah Daniels, leader of the Regular church, offers Keziah a place as housekeeper for the new minister, and she decides to remain in Trumet.

CHAPTER III—Keziah takes charge of Rev. John Ellery, the new minister, and gives him advice as to his conduct toward members of the parish. Ellery causes a sensation by attending a "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER IV—Ellery's presence is bitterly resented by Eben Hammond, leader of the meeting. Grace apologizes for her guardian and Ellery escorts her home in the rain. Capt. Nat Hammond, Eben's son, becomes a hero by bringing the packet into port safely through fog and storm. Ellery finds Keziah writing a letter to some one, inclosing money in response to a demand. She is curiously startled when informed of the arrival of Nat.

CHAPTER V—Nat calls on Keziah, and it develops that they have been lovers since youth. Daniels remonstrates with Ellery for attending "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER VI—Ellery is caught by the tide and is rescued by Nat. They become friends.

CHAPTER VII—Ellery meets Grace while walking in the fields Sunday, and learns that she walks there every Sunday.

CHAPTER VIII—The clergyman takes dinner Sundays with the Daniels. Annabel, the captain's daughter, exerts herself to make an impression on him. She notices with vexation his desire to get away every Sunday at a certain time. She watches him through a spy glass.

CHAPTER IX—Nat again importunes Keziah to marry him. He says he has had a quarrel with his father, who wants him to marry Grace.

CHAPTER X—Ellery asks Grace to marry him. She confesses that she loves him, but says she fears to displease her guardian, who has been very kind to her, and asks time to think about it. Elkanah Daniels tells Eben about the meetings between Ellery and Grace. Eben declares he will make Grace choose between him and the preacher. Grace finds him in a faint, following the excitement of Elkanah's visit.

CHAPTER XI—Just before he dies Eben exacts a promise from Nat and Grace that they will marry.

CHAPTER XII—Keziah breaks the news to Ellery and later he receives a note from Grace saying she is to marry Nat, and asking him not to try to see her again. Keziah tells the story of her own marriage with a man who turned out to be a good-for-nothing, and who was reported to have been lost at sea, and of her love for Nat, whom she cannot marry because the husband is alive. Ellery sees in the story a lesson in devotion to duty and decides to remain and attend to his duties.

CHAPTER XIII—Captain Nat sails for Manila to be gone two years. He says he and Grace have decided not to marry until he returns.

CHAPTER XIV—Nat is overdue, and it is feared that he has been lost at sea. Keziah gets a letter from her husband saying he is coming back. Grace goes on a visit to relatives of the Hammonds.

CHAPTER XV—A vessel flying distress signals is discovered off the coast. Ellery goes with party to board the vessel. A man is found suffering from smallpox, the rest of the crew having deserted.

CHAPTER XVI—He is taken to an abandoned shack on shore and Ellery helps nurse him. Before he dies it is discovered that he is Keziah's husband. Ellery, left alone in quarantine, is found wandering in a delirious condition by Grace. She takes him back to the shanty and sends for help.

CHAPTER XVIII.

In Which a Reception Is Called Off.

Far out on the Pacific coast there are two small islands, perhaps a hundred miles distant from one another. The first of these is uninhabited. On the other is a little colony of English-speaking people, half-breed descendants of native women and the survivors of a crew from a British vessel cast away there in the latter part of the eighteenth century.

On the first of these islands, the smaller one, the Sea Mist had been wrecked. Driven out of her course by a typhoon, she staggered through day after day and night after night of terrific wind and storm until, at last, there was promise of fair weather. Captain Nat, nearly worn out from anxiety, care, and the loss of sleep, had gone to his stateroom and the first mate was in charge. It was three o'clock, the wind still blowing and the darkness pitchy, when the forward lookout shrieked a warning, "Breakers under the lee!" Almost the next instant the ship was on a coral reef, full of water, and the seas breaking over her from stem to stern.

Morning came and showed a little patch of land, with palm trees and tropical vegetation waving in the gusts and green in the sunshine. Captain Nat ordered the boats to be lowered. Much as he hated the thought, he saw that the Sea Mist had made her last voyage and must be abandoned. He went to the cabin, collected papers and charts and prepared to leave. The ship's money, over ten thousand dollars in gold belonging to the owner and to be used in trade and speculation among the East Indies, he took with him. Then the difficult and dangerous passage through the opening in the reef was begun.

Only the captain's boat reached the shore. The mate's was caught by a huge breaker, dashed against the reef and sunk. Captain Nat, his second mate and five of his men were all that was left of the Sea Mist's company. And on that island they remained for nearly two weeks. Provisions they had brought ashore with them. Water they found by digging. Nat hid the gold at night, burying it on the beach below high-water mark.

Then, having made sure of his location by consulting the chart, he determined to attempt a voyage to the second island, where he knew the English colony to be. Provisions were getting short, and to remain longer where they were was to risk starvation and all its horrors. So, in the longboat, which was provided with a sail, they started. Charts and papers and the gold the skipper took with them. None of the crew knew of the existence of the money; it was a secret which the captain kept to himself.

A hundred miles they sailed in the longboat and, at last, the second island was sighted. They landed and found, to their consternation and surprise, that it, too, was uninhabited. The former residents had grown tired of their isolation and, a trading vessel having touched there, had seized the opportunity to depart for Tahiti. Their houses were empty, their cattle, sheep, goats, and fowl roamed wild in the woods, and the fruit was rotting on the trees. In its way the little island was an Eveless Eden flowing with milk and honey; but to Captain Nat, a conscientious skipper with responsibilities to his owners, it was a prison from which he determined to escape. Then, as if to make escape impossible, a sudden gale came up and the longboat was smashed by the surf.

"I guess that settles it," ruefully observed the second mate, another Cape Codder, from Hyannis. "Cal'late we'll stay here for a spell now, hey, Cap'n."

"For a spell, yes," replied Nat. "We'll stay here until we get another craft to set sail in, and no longer."

"Another craft? Another one? Where in time you goin' to get her?"

"Build her," said Captain Nat cheerfully. Then, pointing to the row of empty houses and the little deserted church, he added, "There's timber and nails—yes, and cloth, such as 'tis. If I can't build a boat out of them I'll agree to eat the whole settlement."

He did not have to eat it, for the boat was built. It took them six months to build her, and she was a curious-looking vessel when done, but, as the skipper said, "She may not be a clipper, but she'll sail anywhere, if you give her time enough." He had been the guiding spirit of the whole enterprise, planning it, laying the keel, burning buildings to obtain nails and iron, hewing trees for the largest beams, showing them how to spin ropes from cocoanut fiber, improvising sails from the longboat's canvas pieced out with blankets and odd bits of cloth from the abandoned houses. Even a strip of carpet from the church floor went into the making of those sails.

At last she was done, but Nat was not satisfied.

"I never commanded a ship where I couldn't h'ist Yankee colors," he said, "and, by the everlastin'! I won't now. We've got to have a flag."

So, from an old pair of blue overall, a white cotton shirt, and the red hangings on the church pulpit, he made a flag and hoisted it to the truck of his queer command. They provisioned her, gave her a liberal supply of fresh water, and, one morning, she passed through the opening of the lagoon out to the deep blue of the Pacific. And, hidden in her captain's stateroom under the head of his bunk, was the ten thousand dollars gold. For Nat had sworn to himself, by "the everlasting" and other oaths, to deliver that money to his New York owners safe and, necessary expenses deducted of course, untouched.

For seven weeks the crazy nondescript slopped across the ocean. Fair winds helped her and, at last, she entered the harbor of Nukahiva, over twelve hundred miles away. And there—"Hammond's luck," the sailors called it—was a United States man-of-war lying at anchor, the first American vessel to touch at that little French settlement for five years. The boat they built was abandoned and the survivors of the Sea Mist were taken on board the man-of-war and carried to Tahiti.

From Tahiti Captain Nat took passage on a French bark for Honolulu. Here, after a month's wait, he found opportunity to leave for New York on an American ship, the Stars and Stripes. And finally, after being away from home for two years, he walked into the office of his New York owners, deposited their gold on a table, and cheerfully observed, "Well, here I am."

But Trumet did not hear the yarn immediately. All that it heard and all that it knew was contained in Captain Nat's brief telegram. "Arrived today. Will be home Thursday." That was all, but it was enough, for in that dispatch was explosive sufficient to blow to atoms the doctor's plans and Keziah's, the great scheme which was to bring happiness to John Ellery and Grace Van Horne.

WEDNESDAY A CORKER

A crowd of several hundred base ball fans, who did not attend the great game Wednesday between the Red Sox and Giants gathered in front of the Ledger office and feasted their eyes on the bulletins that were posted immediately after each inning. Some of the younger fans made their appearance on the scene at 2 o'clock and did not get far away until nearly 5 o'clock when a bulletin announced that with the score 6 to 6 the game had been called on account of darkness. There were some groans at this announcement as it was hoped the game might be played to a finish.

It was a thorough Red Sox crowd that watched these bulletins, as was evident by the cheers that followed each announcement of every score the Red Sox made. When the first half of the tenth innings was posted showing that the Giants had made a run and that the score was 6 to 5 in favor of the visitors there was not much enthusiasm and the crowd anxiously waited result of the last half of the innings. This came in a few minutes and when the figure 1 was placed in the square showing that the Red Sox had tied the score again, the crowd went wild and cheer after cheer rent the air.

Then there was an anxious wait to get the result of the eleventh inning. Everybody realized that a mighty battle was being fought and none could tell the outcome. Then came the announcement that the game had been called and the disgusted crowd soon took its departure.

The second game tie will be played off at Boston today, which of course will reverse the order of the series as at first arranged, bringing the third game in New York, Friday, and the fourth game in Boston, Saturday, unless more ties develop further changes

John Callahan, 55 Prospect street, Brockton, Mass., says: "I am pleased to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills, as I have been greatly benefited by them. I was annoyed by lame and aching back and my kidneys did not act regularly. I finally used Doan's Kidney Pills and they gave me entire relief. I am glad to confirm the statement given by a member of my family in 1908 in their praise."

AMENDMENTS SWAMPED

Heavy Sea of Votes Rolled Over Proposed Changes

TO YACHT CLUB BY-LAWS

A largely attended special meeting of the Quincy Yacht club was held on Wednesday evening at Protection hall, on petition of 14 members of the club. The object of the meeting was the consideration of changes in the by-laws.

There were three amendments proposed the first of which was a proposition to change the date of the annual meeting of the club from the first Thursday in February to the first Thursday in September of each year, the proposed amendment to become operative after the annual meeting in February 1913.

The second amendment provided that members be allowed to vote by proxy or otherwise than by personal attendance at the meeting.

The third position which was the least importance provided that the Executive Committee should consist of twelve members outside the Commodore, vice comodore, rear commodore, secretary and treasurer, instead of nine members as at present.

To many the proposed amendments looked like an entering wedge to make the club a winter as well as a summer club which meant that the club house would be open all the year, although it would be but little used during the winter months outside of residents on Houghs Neck.

These proposed amendments resulted in the attendance of ninety member, and the result was that those who favored the proposed amendments were swamped when the votes were counted for all they could muster on either proposition was 20 votes.

WILLIAMSON A BULL MOOSER

But Declares He Cannot Support Candidate Kincaide

STATEMENT BY LATTER

Major Charles Williamson declared Wednesday that he could not support Col. Kincaide of this city, the Bull Moose congressional candidate in the 14th district because of what happened in the contest. He does not say what happened however.

Col. Kincaide this morning stated that heh ad a great deal of respect for Major Williamson and regretted very much that he misunderstood the terms of the agreement drawn up between Matthew Hale, Major Williamson and Col. Kincaide, the substance of which was offered by Major Wiliamson.

Brockton enrolment cards were not received at the party headquarters until 4.30 October 1, when the agreement called for them on or before 12 o'clock The terms called for signed enrolment cards and many of the Brockton enrolments were typewritten.

Before 12 o'clock, September 30, the enrolment cards of the Quincy Progressives were at the state headquarters. Col. Kincaide conceded until 12 o'clock October 1 for other cities and towns because of the distance from Boston. Despite that concession Major Williamson's enrolments were late, and therefore could not be accepted.

CANDIDATES MUST UNBOSOM

Themselves to the Voters of Squantum on Policies

ASSESSORS CRITICISED

Candidates for nomination in the City Council at the coming primaries will be invited to express their views on city government at a special meeting of the Squantum Improvement association in two weeks the date to be left to the executive committee.

Mayor Stone will be requested to hold a public hearing in regard to the protest of Squantum citizens against the increase in valuations of property this year and that the Quincy Board of assessors be requested to attend the meeting. The association sent a letter to the assessors and received the reply that "it will be impossible for the assessors to attend any public hearings." The persuasive powers of Mayor Stone, is depended upon to make the assessors change their mind and hear what the Squantum citizens have to say.

Each political candidate will be given five minutes in which to express his views upon what should be done in the Quincy City Government to improve conditions in the city and especially to find out the candidates attitude in regard to Squantum. This section now has 80 registered voters and the various speakers at the meeting stated that these 80 votes would be cast irrespective of party affiliations for the men who seem most competent to take up the affairs of Quincy City government in a way to cut down the tax levy and secure more economical conduct of city affairs.

James H. Hagan said: "Now is the time to find out how these candidates for office are going to act in regard to City government. We should look them over before the nomination and again after the nomination and before election. The greatest improvement association in the country take an active part in politics; if not directly, indirectly. They size up the men and give the voters a clear idea of the men who are ambitious to run city affairs.

James H. Loghan believed that political lines shouild not enter into a "political night" but that every candidate irrespective of party should be allowed to have his say. William N. Kenyon and Edward Eagar voiced the same sentiment. It was unanimously voted to eliminate party lines in the invitation to candidates to address the Squantum citizens and voters. A luncheon will be served.

One speaker said that the Quincy assessors should be taught that they are the servants of the tax payers and not the masters. Squantum restlents were warned to pay their taxes under protest until it could be shown that in dozens of cases the valuation of property had been jumped from $500 to $1500 where not a single improvement had been made in the property or in the community and this was on top of an increase of $2.50 in the tax rate.

William N. Kenyon, chairman of the street railway committee, reported that the matter of a curve in the tracks on Hancock street so that cars could be run to Squantum without people riding backwards was still "in the air."" It was voted that the street railway committee wait upon Mr. Hammon and try to have this matter remedied. The matter of a trade express to Squantum was also discussed and it was voted that a committee look up the matter of rates and to report at the next meeting.

LINIMENT AND AMBULANCE

Will Both Play Prominent Part In Coming Ball Battle

WITH BIG CORPS OF DOCTORS

If the memories of the fans is not faulty they will recall the names of most of the boys who will play with the Old Timers against the South Quincys at the Old Colony grounds Columbus Day morning.

Glancing over the lineup one sees the name of Jimmy Logan, one of the fastest left fielders that has ever appeared in the game in Massachusetts. Jimmy lived in Quincy and has spent considerable time here the past summer.

Eddie Spiller, the niftiest short stop that ever covered the place for West Quincy has been secured to cover that territory. Terry McGovern formerly of West Quincy, later of Brockton and now manager of the Lynn New England team will don the protector and Maroney, of the Chicago Cubs who used to burn them over at lightening speed will no doubt be in the box.

Eddie Forbes, another product of the west side and later with the Lowell's has promised to be on hand and just to see Eddie snap to second is worth the price of admission. Jim Birnie who covered the first sack for South Quincy is coming back to his own and says he will swing his big black hat for a homer just as sure as Stan Bates or Win Duffy pitches against him.

All the other are worthy of particular mention but whats the use you can't say all you should or could. The game is called for 10 A. M.

The lineup is as follows:

1913 CLASS BROKE HOODOO

Led the High School Boys in the Inter Class Meet

1916 GIRLS QUITE KIPPY

An interclass meet of the Quincy High school took place on the third field, Merrymount Park, Wednesday afternoon before a large crowd of students and a small assembly of others interested in the work.

The class of 1913 netted high score with 42 points; 1915 was second with 14 points; 1916 and the post graduates tied for third place with six points apiece and 1914 was last with four points.

Fred Kingsbury '13 was the star individual performer making three firsts and one second place, with a score of 18. Hunt '15 was second with 12 points.

H. Safford, '13 won the 220 yard dash by a close margin, being pressed from the start by Hunt. He crossed the wire in 26 4-5 seconds and broke the existing high school record. Kingsbury had a walk away in the 440 yard dash.

Walter Berg '16 while competing in the running high jump tore the ligament in his right knee and was taken to his home. He will probably recover in two weeks.

During the meet it was announced that it was the unanimous opinion of the girls of 1916 that they could defeat the girls of the other classes in an athletic meet. No member of the other classes accepted the challenge.

Kenneth Briggs, 16 made 16 feet in the running broad jump and it looks as though he would be a valuable man to the high school. Briggs was the star performer at the junior Y. M. C. A. state meet last fall.

The summary:

100-Yard Dash—Won by Kingsbury, '13; Bedwell, '16, second, Hunt, '15 third. Time, 11 1-5s.

DEAD HYDRANT WAS COSTLY

HODGKINSON LOSS $500

Chief Litchfield stated this morning that the fire at the house of B. F. Hodgkinson at Germantown, Wednesday was probably caused by rats and matches and that the loss will be in the neighborhood of $500. When the fire was discovered the fire department at Sailors Snug Harbor ran out its hose reel and attached it to the hydrant directly opposite the burning house. The line of hose was carried to the roof of the building and an attempt made to turn on the water. No water came however and when Chief Litchfield arrived they were still trying to get water from the dead hydrant This made it necessary to run a line of hose from near the Finley residence some distance away. In the mean time the fire had made considerable headway.

Examination of the dead hydrant after the fire showed that the trouble was due to a broken stem. While it can not be told for certain just what caused the stem to break, until the hydrant is taken apart, it is thought the trouble to have been caused by trying to open the hydrant by turning the valve the wrong way and so much pressure was brought to bear on it that the stem was twisted off. It was quite evident that the volunteer firemen who ran the first line of hose in their excitment did not observe the direction in which the arrow pointed on the hydrant but turned it the wrong way.

The alarm from box 24, at 5.42 on Wednesday afternoon was for a fire in a small building in the quarries off Whitwell street, formerly used by Jack Galvin as a powder house. The fire was evidently of incendiary origin but did little damage.

The horses were gotten up after some difficulty none the worse for their slide.

LARGEST GUARANTEED CIRCULATION IN THE CITY

Vol. 27 No. 239 QUINCY, MASS., FRIDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 11, 1912 PRICE TWO CENTS

CITY PAYING $50,000 A YEAR IN THE SEWER DEPARTMENT

Mr. Shaw Says Assessments Are Lower Than Other Cities and Quotes Figures

$50,000 In the Hole and In a Pretty Complete Tangle

Editor of the Ledger:

Resuming our investigation of the question "What's the matter with Quincy?" let us glance for a moment at conditions in the sewer department and see whether any part of the answer to our query may be found here.

About 15 years ago Quincy began the construction of a sewer system, and since that time, and up to December 31, 1911, there had been issued bonds to the amount of $814,000 to provide money to carry on the construction work.

Most of the earlier loans, and some of the later ones were issued to cover a period of 40 years, thus establishing an interest account of no small proportions. At the present time the interest account amounts to about $23,000 a year, while the bonds maturing each year amount to $27,000 making a total charge of $50,000 a year for debt and interest alone.

The records at the City Hall covering the earlier years of this department are so incomplete that it is next to impossible to furnish an accurate figure for the exact total expense of sewer construction. It has been discovered that in 1900 an appropriation of $15,000 for sewer construction was made from receipts of the department, and also the sum of $1100 for the same purpose from the proceeds of a forfeiture. How many more such instances a careful audit would develop can only be the subject of conjecture.

As nearly as can be definitely ascertained the total expense for sewer construction up to December 31, 1911 amounted to $840,100.

Section 8 of Chapter 279 of the Acts of 1895 provided that the City Council of Quincy might determine the proportion the city should pay of the cost of the sewer system but that the city should pay not less than one-third nor more than one half of the whole cost; and that the remaining cost of the system should be borne by the owners of estates situated within the territory benefited.

Acting under the authority of this section the City Council voted on September 11, 1899 that one-half of the cost should be paid by the city, and that the other half should be borne by the owners of estates benefited, at a fixed uniform rate. The Council fixed the cost of sewer construction at that time to be $1.93 per foot, and upon the basis of these figures they determined the fixed uniform rate of sewer assessment to be 12 cents per running foot frontage on any street or way where a sewer is constructed, and six mills per square foot of drainable area within one hundred feet of the street.

The net amount of the assessments levied upon this basis up to December 31, 1911 was $324,384.82. Comparing this sum with the total cost of $840,100 above stated, it will be readily seen that we have not been assessing one-half of the cost on the estates by nearly $100,000; which means that we have been violating the statute above quoted which provides that the city should not pay more than one-half the cost. An analysis of these figures shows that the city has in fact been paying over 61 per cent of the cost.

The conditions are somewhat interestingly reflected by the fact that while $610,500 of sewer bonds were outstanding Dec. 31, 1911, only $48,928.55 of sewer assessments were outstanding at the same time.

The records in this department were fearfully and wonderfully kept in its early years. The practice has been to appropriate the money for the payment of bonds, interest and expenses from the sewer assessment receipts, and consequently nothing was put into the tax levy for a number of years for that purpose.

In 1906 there was a small sum ($6000) used from the tax levy, but at that time there was a deficit of nearly

COMMUNITY HOUSE WANTED

Wollaston Association Advocates Bungalow Type

NIGHT POLICE DEMANDED

The movement for a "community house" for Wollaston Park was enthusiastically launched at the meeting of the Wollaston Park Improvement association in the Park and Downs vestry, Thursday evening.

President Woodward said the project had the consideration and approval of the board of directors. Many spoke in favor of the idea and upon a show of hands the majority of those present showed an inclination to take stock in the movement.

It is the idea of its backers to have a building containing a hall, ante rooms, kitchen and other necessities.

General sentiment seemed to favor a building of the bungalow type rather than as pretentious a building as a representative body of Wollaston citizens had in mind a year or two ago which was not realized.

The need for a "community house" was voiced by several speakers who mentioned a number of organizations and individuals who were waiting to use a building of the kind.

A committee, Louis S. Cleaves, Russell T. Anthony and William M. Burrell, was appointed by the chair with instructions to look into all phases of the situation and report at the next meeting.

The meeting opened with the secretary's report and the report of Mrs. Antoinette S. Paige, chairman of the trees and shrubbery committee.

A garden contest had been operated by the committee with the following children as winners in the order named: Joseph Barber, Sumner Vibert, Otis Bailey, Lucille Snow, Wendell Boyden, Janetta Shay,

Mrs. Antoinette S. Paige called attention to the undesirable conditions and cars on the Norfolk Downs street car line. Gypsy moth protection and a suggestion for replacing the historic elms on Elm avenue as they disappeared formed a portion of her report.

Joseph Barber reported for the street committee and John L. Hamilton called attention to the improved crossing on Beale street at Greenwood avenue for which the association has been working.

Louis S. Cleaves brought up the matter of local night police conditions and after the testimony of several members it was voted to demand better police protection from the chief of police.

Following the business meeting a social hour was enjoyed during which refreshments were served and a musical program by members of the Park and Downs choir enjoyed.

QUINCY GREEKS RESPOND TO CALL

A. J. Thompson Contributed $250 to War Fund

OTHERS IN PROPORTION

A representative delegation of the Quincy Greeks attended the patriotic meeting at the Boston Arena Thursday night and the great response to an appeal for funds brought a stirring demonstration. A. J. Thompson of this city was among those who attended and contributed $250. to the Greek war fund. The others in the party contributed as generously as their purse would permit.

James Georgiordis and Nick Papanick, both employed by A. J. Thompson have received their call to the colors and are ready to leave on notice from the consuls office.

Great enthusiasm is noticable in this city and when activities commence there will no doubt be a number leave Quincy for the seat of war.

CARS CLASH ON SLIPPERY RAIL

Passengers Shaken Up, But Fortunately No One Injured

There was a narrow escape from a bad accident this morning on the Houghs Neck line due to a slippery rail. The accident happened at the point where the turnout on the line joins the main track in front of the Adams farm on Sea street. The car which left Quincy at 7.10 found an up car waiting at the turnout when it arrived. The brake of the up car did not hold, owing to a slippery rail and the fenders of the car came together. Some of the glass in the downward car was smashed and the passengers got a scare but fortunately no one was injured.

HEART FAILURE CAUSED DEATH

Mrs. Fannie Jacobs aged 30 years, died suddenly at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Cohen, Shoreham street, Squantum. Mrs. Jacobs was in the kitchen when she fell and and when the people in the house investigated the noise caused by the fall they found her against the stove. Both wrists were badly burned. Mrs. Jacobs had been in Boston Thursday and ran for a train and probably strained her heart. Dr. Jones said death was due to heart trouble.

OVER 5500 PATIENTS TREATED AT THE QUINCY CITY HOSPITAL

Service Never Refused Because of Lack of Ability to Meet the Cost

Splendid Record of Model Institution Outlined

Beautiful weather attended the dedication of the Nurses' Home at the Quincy City Hospital Thursday afternoon. After the exercises as outlined in the Ledger an inspection of the new home and all the wards in the hospital including the accident room, was made by nearly all present under escort of the nurses who were off duty.

Miss Alma B. Grant, who has but recently succeeded Miss Blanche M. Thayer after 22 years superintendency received at the office in the administration building.

President Fred B. Rice of the Board of Trustees gave out the following statement:

"Owing to the limited size of the Nurses' Home it was necessary to limit the invitations to the dedicatory exercises. The Trustees have arranged however to throw open the doors of the institution and all its buildings, new and old, to the public some day next week the date to be announced through the columns of the press."

Dr. Frederic Lund of Boston was present and many other doctors of the city attended the exercises. Ex-mayor William T. Shea also attended the opening.

Refreshments were served in the class and lecture room.

In accepting the keys of the home from the donor, Mr. Faxon, Mr. Rice spoke as follows:

"In accepting this beautiful home for nurses as the evidence of your generosity and your great interest in the work the Hospital is doing, I wish to express to you, Mr. Faxon, on behalf of the Trustees of the City Hospital of Quincy our sincere gratitude. We are in a position to realize, as I hope the public does, the immense advance step your gift puts within the grasp of the Hospital and the benefits that will accrue to the community.

It is fitting at so notable an epoch in the existence of this Hospital that we should look back upon the conditions that have existed here since its foundation, in order that we may better appreciate our present advantages and opportunities for service. When the hospital was founded in 1890, it consisted of the wooden Administration Building and Ward, which are across the drive. Few examples of country cottage hospitals existed then, but this one was equipped according to the then best hospital practise and was adequate for the needs of the Quincy of that day—a young city of about 15,000 inhabitants. It had wards for men and women, a few private wards, and accommodations for a few nurses. That it was needed was evidenced by the immediate patronage of the sick of Quincy and the cordial reception it met with from the physicians and the support it then had and has since received from the people of the city. No charity ever undertaken here has served so well to enlist the interest of all our people of whatever creed or race. That the hopes of the founder, the late William B. Rice, that his gift should be of the widest possible good to his fellow citizens, were not in vain is shown by the fact that no Quincy person has ever been refused treat-

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

You can never tell.

Candidate Bird is modest. He asks Walker to withdraw to save the senatorship. We think the senatorship will take care of itself but if Mr. Bird or his friends read the New York Sun, they may have some idea of why he will be delegated to warm his heels at home after the election.

The thoughtful judge who announced the result of the ball game to the jurors was only "foolin" when he said he did not know what it meant.

A straw poll is just about as strong and trustworthy as its name indicates.

The black mountain principality with its 250,000 people has more nerve than judgment in bucking Turkey, unless—well of course unless she is diplomatically assured of underground aid.

The Taft brothers deserve credit. They are willing to back brother Bill to the limit. His presidential ambitions have up to the present time cost them a comfortable fortune.

The newspapers will test the validity of that recently adopted law.

Gov. Wilson, likes the name "kid" ol all that have been applied to him. Now we wonder if he was any way related to that "kid" Wilson of pugilistic fame a few years ago?

If there is a strike of the Boston bartenders during this world's series how are the poor fans to remove the cobwebs from their throat after each day of lunatic yelling?

That Quincy Newspaper men's dance appears to be rather a one sided affair. No one appears to know who is general manager, president, or treasurer.

That English audience, which could not understand a word of French, was described as "going perfectly wild over Bernhardt, they were so delighted with her language, her gestures, her graces and perfect enunciation." That critic must been so nicely illuminated that one cockney remarked "'ow th' 'ell did they know?"

That Eddy trust to the Christian Science church is not void, but a court trustee must assist in distributing it.

It is drawing the lines pretty fine to bar a bank director from holding the office of presidential elector. It might also apply to stockholders.

That crowd of local base ball fans could not cheer up Thursday, as the figures showing a possible New York victory were flashed before them.

Thirty years solitary confinement is the portion handed out to the man who failed to kill the King of Italy. He might just as well be put in an insane asylum at once.

Mrs. Mary Harris, the "Georgia Cyclone," of the W. C. T. U. would pension all old soaks on the ground that he provides much of the revenue on which the country is run.

Another alleged boxing bout in which the easy marks were caught in Boston this week, yet we see in stories that it was a hummer. Wonder why?

That peace stuff is all buncome after all.

THE LAWRENCE DEMONSTRATION

Some people aver that Saturday is approached in Lawrence by the thoughtful with some trepidation. That such a state should exist in the minds of thoughtful or unthoughtful, is only an indication of their timidity or pessimissim. There should be no trepidation in the minds of any citizen of the United States, when a municipality elects to set apart a day to pay a special tribute to the "Stars and Stripes." Rather such a sentiment should be hailed with delight, as giving the lie direct to those who hold that it is only a "textile fabric."

It should be hailed as a good sign of patrotism, that citizens should give such a spontaneous manifestation of their feelings. The only trepidation there should show in anticipation of such an event is on the part of those who would make any effort to make little of the demonstration or endeavor to wedge the flag of any other nation, sect, or cult into the line.

There need be no trepidation, no fear of results, no uneasiness over a public exhibition of loyalty to the flag of which we are all proud and under whose folds the down trodden of other nations have enjoyed such glorious privileges. Such a feeling is not engendered by patriotism but a spirit of toadyism which is not healthful to the advancement or prosperity of a community.

HONORING COLUMBUS.

Massachusetts, and more particularly Boston will take a front rank in the observance of the Columbus day holiday tomorrow and paying tribute to the intrepid explorer.

"Who to Castile and Leon,
A new world gave Colon."

The holiday should be national even continent wide in its scope and magnitude. Columbus should be honored for his achievment. He stands preeminently the greatest figure in the world's history. Great figures have appeared in land and naval warfare. Much has depended upon their failure or success, but they were not traversing a great unknown waste with only a frail plank beneath their feet, and surrounded by a mutinous crew, which threatened their lives.

The crew were on the point of ending his earthly career when the welcome sight of land ended all doubt, justified the great explorers claims, crowned his ambition and gave to him the wreath of peaceful victory and opened to the old world an outlet which it had long been craving and paved the way for a continent even mightier than those which had felt the influencing hand of civilization for ages. So it is on broad plane of glorious achievement that this man should be honored.

Tardiness in this respect should not be laid at the door of narrowness or bigotry. The full measure of credit should be his and America, North and South should join in paying homage to this great man, on the anniversary of his discovery each year.

HE HAD HEARD WITNESSES.

"Could you tell us how far it is to the post office?" we asked of the man standing on the railway platform.

"I have no idea," he replied.

"Well, in what direction is it?"

"I have not formed an opinion."

"Can we walk there or should we take a car?"

"I could not say."

"There is a post office here, is there not?"

"I would not decide that with my present information."

"But every town has a post office, hasn't it?"

"I have not talked with anybody on the subject."

"Is there anyone around here who can tell us?"

"I have not read any of the newspapers."

"But, man, you surely know whether or not there is a post office?"

"I could not give a decisive answer to that."

"But don't you live here?"

"I have never given the matter any thought."

"Where do you live?"

"I have no mental bias in the matter."

"Great guns, man! You know you're alive, don't you?"

I should be guided entirely by the evidence."

Here a listener plucked our sleeve, smilingly: He took us to one side and said:

"You won't get anything out of him if you quiz him all day. That's Pete Hobawot, who's been on so many jury panels it has affected him.—Chicago Post.

—It is reported in Kansas that cows and steers may be seen drawing the plows this fall, as used to be the case back in the '70s. In that year an epidemic killed many of the horses, as in the past summer, and the farmers had to rely on their cattle, which proved very good substitutes.

ment because of inability to pay and that over 5500 patients have been treated here. Excepting the addition of the laundry, our equipment has remained the same up to three years ago.

The Trustees had long felt the pressure for more room and to insure extension along the right lines, about 1909 had plans prepared for the future development of the institution. The first building erected according to these plans was the new ward given by Mr. Rice and dedicated in 1910. As you know, it is connected with the old buildings and has accommodations for eleven patients in the Woman's Ward, and ten patients in the private wards. While this hospital has been very successful in its surgical cases, all the operations until this year have been performed in the one little operating room located in the Administration Building. For a long time our physicians have felt this entirely inadequate to the needs of the Hospital for with as many as five operations at times performed in one day, it has been with the greatest difficulty and hardest kind of work for nurses and physicians that this department has been successfully carried on. Last year the Trustees decided the time had arrived when we must have better quarters. After long discussion of plans, the erection of the new ward to the north-east of the old buildings was begun. It is now finished and occupied. In its arrangements and all its appointments it is believed to be nearly perfect. Though some what larger than we at present require, we felt it wise to build for the future.

"The sick were now well provided for, but what of the nurses—the nurses we have all learned to depend on and without whom the Hospital could not be? Instead of improving, their living quarters have actually gone backward. As their number has increased, they have been crowded more and more. Many have been obliged to live in nearby houses, much to their inconvenience and with a tendency to disorganization of the force. Class work and instruction have been carried on with the greatest difficulty and the home life, which the young woman training for nurses ought to have, has been wholly lacking.

"What a change has come today! At last owing to the generosity of Mr. Faxon, the nurses are properly housed they have a home in its real sense, with all its advantages. Each has her own room where she can have the seclusion and quiet which she must have if she is to be in condition to aid in restoring the sick to health. Social rooms for recreation and receiving friends and a separate class room where lectures can be delivered are provided. Its nearnes to the Administration Building assures a proper oversight of the Home which discipline requires. It is hoped that the advantages of housing and instruction made possible by these new conditions will attract many young women to the nurses calling that otherwise would turn elsewhere. As our course of instruction has been lengthened from two to three years, it is even more necessary that proper home surroundings should be provided for nurses during their course. The appearance of the building and furnishings speak for themselves—a result of the most careful thought of Mr. Faxon and the attention and judgment displayed by him both in this building and the grounds are beyond praise. A fund of about $2000 contributed by many friends for a nurses home has been used in grading and improving the approaches of the hospital. It is a source of satisfaction that we can feel when our needs are greatest, some good friend comes forward to gratify them.

"On behalf of the Trustees, I want to express our gratitude to you, Mr. Faxon, for this noble gift and our belief that nothing you could do for the Hospital could contribute so much to the advantage of the institution in its desire to be of the utmost possible service to the community. In accepting the keys as a symbol of the transfer of this Home to the Trustees of the City Hospital of Quincy, I believe that by your generosity we now have for the first time—22 years after its foundation—a complete hospital. May we and our successors realize our responsibility and so conduct the affairs of the institution that the hopes of its founder and its benefactors may be realized. As our needs grow, may we hope that your generous act may find imitators among our many public spirited citizens."

$40,000 in this department because of this method of appropriating money from receipts when the receipts were insufficient. The city report of 1906 shows that $239,119.75 had been appropriated "from receipts" while the actual receipts had been only $194,751.09, leaving a deficit of $44,368.66 which was reduced to $38,368.66 by the $6000 which came from the tax levy of that year.

And the amusing part of the situation is that this deficit was carried along year by year an an "asset" and is so shown in the reports.

One of the great troubles is that many of the reports do not show anything of any value to the public. Examine the table on page 76 in the Report of 1911. It shows the amount of sewer assessments levied each year and the amount of collections each year, but nobody knows what year's assessments are included in the $48,928.25 still due the city. And the Auditor tells me there are no records which will show whether the 1899 assessments are all paid or not, and this could only be ascertained by making a complete audit of the whole assessment and collection records since 1899.

Inasmuch as sewer assessments remain a lien upon real estate until paid, it would be interesting to know how many land titles in Quincy are clouded by reason of these slipshod methods at City Hall.

The Auditor gives it as his opinion that this department is at least $50,000 "in the hole." Without a doubt this deficit is largely due to the errors and incompetency of previous administrations. But, these facts having been known for some time, what has has the present administration done to help matters?

After some investigation by a few of the more competent and hard working members of this year's Council, an order was introduced to make a slight increase in the sewer assessments to see if the situation could not be relieved a little. This order passed the Council June 24, 1912. It was returned July 6, 1912 without the approval of the Mayor, and the only statement accompanying its return was to the effect that the Mayor withheld his approval believing "the subject matter of this order should receive further consideration before the adoption of such an order." It is still "on the table" pending a further report by the City Engineer.

The increase in assessments contemplated by this order was very small, only 2 mills per square foot over and above the old rate, and this was fixed according to figures made by the Commissioner of Public Works. Personally it does not appear to me that this increase is large enough; still, even this slight increase called forth the veto of the Mayor without further comment than that he believed it should receive "further consideration."

Perhaps the Mayor thought the increase too small, but if this is so he didn't say so when he returned the order.

Let us take a typical lot of land and compare the sewer assessments levied in Quincy with those of some of our surrounding municipalities. Assume a lot 100 feet square, all above the grade of the sewer: Then

*Newton's sewer assessment $114.
Milton's sewer assessment $100.
Brookline's sewer assessment would be $150.
Quincy's sewer assessment would be $72.

*—Newton assesses to the depth of 180 feet.

The Brookline officials say they do not assess quite one-half of the cost on the average. The Milton officials admit that they do not get one-half by their method.

Neither are the Newton officials satisfied that they get as much as they should from the property owners. Yet, all of these municipalities receive considerably more than Quincy from the land owners, and Brookline receives more than twice as much.

Quincy's figures were made up over 12 years ago, and under entirely different labor conditions and material costs, and it is fair to assume that no such a small estimate could ever be arrived at again.

The very apparent deficit of $100,000 in assessments tells the story pretty clearly, and indicates the pressing necessity of a revision of the old figures immediately.

The next Mayor of Quincy will have little time to waste in the attendance of social functions if he is really desirous of straightening out some of these expensive tangles into which incompentency and carelessness have allowed our city to drift, and a Mayor who is really anxious to give Quincy an economical, business administration, must be prepared to give a very large portion of his time and attention to Quincy's needs.

Another letter Wednesday.

HESITANCY IN BALKAN STATES

Bulgaria, Greece and Servia Have Not Declared War

PERHAPS SPARRING FOR TIME

Even Greater Clamor For War While Diplomats Are Striving For Peace—Reports of Fighting on Frontiers Exaggerated—Prince of Montenegro Fires First Shot In Conflict

London, Oct. 11.—Bulgaria, Servia and Greece have not yet followed the example of Montenegro in declaring war on Turkey. It is now reported that greater pressure is being brought to bear by the powers in the Balkan capitals, but widespread uncertainty exists as to whether the cabinets of the three states concerned are really considering the representations made to them or whether as is thought they are delaying the negotiations in order to gain time in which to complete the mobilization of their armies.

On this account small notice will be taken by European foreign offices of the pacific pronouncements made at Sofia and Athens. While the delay is giving the ambassadors and foreign ministers more time to make their influence felt in the right quarters it is only rousing the people of the countries directly interested to an even greater clamor for war. This too is spreading to Austria, where it is argued the people are not likely to sit quietly while war is being waged in the Sanjak of Novipazar.

Count Leopold Von Berchthold, the Austro-Hungarian foreign minister, referred to the matter when receiving the Hungarian delegation yesterday. He said: "Although Austria is not pursuing a policy of conquest, yet she has important interests in the Balkans, which she is prepared to guard at all hazards."

From despatches from Constantinople, it would appear that the reports of fighting on the Bulgarian and Servian frontiers are only exaggerated accounts of frontier incidents, which are constantly occurring.

The king of Greece has returned to Athens and some definite move can now be expected on the part of Greece.

It is suggested the Montenegrin advance on Berana, near the frontier, may indicate the intention of that country to effect a junction with the Servian army coming from the north. No further details of actual fighting have been received.

The Russian government has issued a denial of the reported mobilization of her army. Russia declares that all the reservists called up for a test have already been disbanded. It is understood that Germany will protect Turkish subjects in the Balkan states should war ensue.

Roumania has given Bulgaria explicit assurances of her neutrality couched in the most friendly language. The Turkish government made great, but unsuccessful efforts in September to secure the co-operation of Roumania.

Prince Fires First Shot

Podgoritza, Montenegro, Oct. 11.—The Montenegrins have captured Detchitch mountain. The Turkish commander and officers, with many soldiers, have surrendered.

For thirty hours the battle between the Montenegrin forces, under direct command of King Nicholas, and Turkish troops strongly entrenched in the hills, has been in progress.

The first shot was fired by Prince Peter against the Turkish position on Mt. Planinitza. Within a few hours the Turks evacuated that district.

LOYAL AND FAITHFUL

Finn Residents Have Confidence in Constitution and Courts

OBEDIENT TO THE LAW

The majority of the Finnish people in this city, object to the recent announcement that they were, "quiet, awaiting the outcome of the trial at Salem."

At a meeting of the Finnish Temperance Society and members of the two Finnish churches of the city, in the Temperance hall, Thursday evening, the gathering unanimously expressed its loyalty to the American flag, faithfulness to the institutions of the country, respect of the constitution and obedience to the laws of the land.

They also declared in no uncertain tones their feelings with regard to the trial at Salem and expressed confidence in the courts of this state to give every one a fair trial.

At the close of their session a committee waited upon Rev. John E. Lillback and requested that he express those views to the general public of Quincy through the Quincy Daily Ledger.

They want it distinctly understood that the great majority of the Finnish people of this city, are not in sympathy with or affiliated in any way with any anarchistic movement. It is something which they do not advocate or approve of and point with pride to the fact that but 11 Finns were in the Red flag parade in Quincy.

GARDNER CLUB INDOOR MEET

She leaves besides her husband, three children, two sons, William and Andrew and one daughter, Mary.

GENEROUS IN BAIT SUPPLY

But a Partiality to One Kind Led to Trouble

Matthew Cummings of Weymouth came to Quincy Thursday to fish for smelts. He carried two kinds of bait with him, one for the smelts and the other for himself. Unfortunately he took too much of his own bait and after floundering about in his boat off the Quincy yacht club house he went overboard. He was hauled up and taken to the yacht club house where after having his clothing dried out was sent to the police station where he sobered off. This morning in court he was fined $3 the costs in the case and was given time in which to pay it.

PRACTICAL AMERICAN MODES.

Smart Models and Stylish Outlines That Suit American Wearers—Hats and Footwear.

There is much talk just now of American Fashions but the best dressed women here have always insisted on modifications of French styles to suit their own needs and figures. The difference is that the crowd has waked up to the absurdity of many of the extreme modes worn by people with more money than sense.

STREET DRESSES.

Suits are by no means out of style and never will be but street dresses are first favorites, and of course the top coats that everyone must own who elects to wear the coat dress, are here in an endless array of attractive and practical models, made up in all sorts of materials wool velours, double faced cloths, silk and mohair, plushes, corduroys and velvets as well as serges of all width weaves. Models are not as wide in front as they were last year, and are almost all rounded off in front, and about an eighth shorter than the dress skirt, but for those who prefer there are plenty of coats that completely cover the dress and are in effect a complete street costume, and these are first choice for the woman whose coat must be worn for many occasions, over frocks too light to appear on the street. High Robespierre collars and vests of the same period in velvet or plush, or wool embroidery make a coat of plain material stylish and dressy enough to wear for almost any occasion yet do not detract from its practical value for warmth and as a protection to the dress.

HATS.

Paris says very small hats, but here in New York we wear any size hat that suits us, and almost any shape. Plush is the popular material for hats and dress trimmings but soft crowns of velvet in puffs or Tom O'Shanter styles are quite as well worn. Scant trimmings are the rule though some of these represent anything but scant expenditure—but one can get pretty, made feathers and wings for very reasonable figures.

THE SILHOUETTE.

No one who wants to look up-to-date can afford to neglect the study of the outline or silhouette. This varies each season somewhat. The new styles in corsets have just been launched from an authoritative American manufacturer here who keeps in constant touch with foreign fashion designs, modifying them to suit the requirements of American women. The Redfern and other Warner corsets, are all carefully built to give the correct lines to any figure, without sacrificing comfort, and are sold everywhere with a guarantee that they will not tear, break or rust, which is most satisfactory to the woman who must count her expenditure carefully, as most of us need to do in these times of soaring prices.

WAIST LINES.

Waist lines remain high and large, which is good news to women inclined to embonpoint since the straight silhouette is most complimentary to overwide hips, while the new sash draperies and tunics soften all the too insistant outlines that have recently been so tiresomely evident. Sleeves are very long except for bridge and dinner frocks, and ruffles finish them, at the wrist and more often than not run up the back seam to the elbow. Necks are usually fashioned so that high or low gamps can be worn at will. The mannish silk shirt is still the favorite with girls, and younger women. This is varied with extra Robespierre collars, jabots, and contrasting neck ties.

FOOTWEAR.

Shoes are no small item when narrow skirts keep the foot constantly in view. Cloth uppers and spats are modish, the latter only practical for a slim well built foot.

BEFORE HE RAN FOR OFFICE.

Before he ran for office he
Was happy and contented, too;
He swore he'd not an enemy,
At least not one whose name he knew.
He walked the streets with head up high
And spoke to very one he met,
And he was proud, I can't deny,
That he had nothing to regret.

It pleased him, too, to think that none
Despised or hated him, and he Began to think that he was one
Assured of popularity.
He liked to meet his fellow men
And feel that they were friendly to him,
He boasted time and time again
That nobody was out to do him.

But since he ran for office he
Is sadly changed and much distressed,
Because his popularity
Has undergone the final test.
He's come to see that smiles and cheers
The public's feelings don't denote,
And that the way a man appears
Is not the way he's apt to vote.

It's not the loss of office that
Is grieving him so much today,
It isn't that he's fallen flat
That grieves him, but I heard him say,
It is that somewhere in the town
Some twenty thousand, more or less,
That he thought friends had turned him down,
And who they were he cannot guess.

UNDER GREAT PROVOCATION

Wife May Lie to Husband, is Ruling of Kansas City Court

Kansas City, Oct. 11.—If provocation is great and circumstances tend to moral justification, a wife may lie to her husband, according to a decision by the Kansas City court of appeals, in the case of Mrs. Carrie Dimmitt of Monroe, Mo., suing her husband, James J. Dimmitt, a merchant, for the custody of their child.

Mrs. Dimmitt several months ago fell heir to $125,000 left by an uncle who died in Italy. She did not tell her husband. The money was to be held in trust by another kinsman during his life. An insurance comany learned of the bequest and offered to lend Mrs. Dimmitt $25,000 on her chances of outliving the kinsman.

Mrs. Dimmitt collected the $25,000 after undergoing a physical examination by a physician. Dimmitt, not knowing the reason and not believing his wife's ill-health plea, was angry. The quarrel led to divorce. The court awarded the child to the mother.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

WAITER POINTS OUT GUNMEN

Krause Swears He Saw Them Shoot Rosenthal

ACCURANCY OF HIS MEMORY

Demonstrated When He Lays His Hand on Accused Men In Court—Sullivan Bent Over Gambler's Body and Laughed at Murderers—Counsel For Defense Tries to Trap Witness

New York, Oct. 11.—The trial of Lieutenant Charles Becker was distinguished late yesterday afternoon by Louis Krause's identification at the bar of court of Gyp the Blood Horowitz, Lefty Louie Rosenberg and Whitey Lewis (Frank Muller) as three of the four men who shot Herman Rosenthal dead in the doorway of the Metropole. Dago Frank Cirofici he was not sure about, but he pointed to Jack Sullivan as the man who bent over Rosenthal's body and who then turned, with a laugh, to the murderers.

The identifications were made under the most dramatic circumstances. Krause, who is a waiter, and whose name has been spelled in previous court records as Krese, had just testified emphatically, and with every appearance of sincerity, that despite the threats of roughs gathered in Forty-third street, he had stayed and had seen the murder and had seen Bridgie Webber running toward Broadway.

Justice Goff directed that the four gunmen and Jack Sullivan, linked with Becker, as accused murderers, be brought from the Tombs. They entered laughing or sneeering, according to their manner. Krause left the witness chair and when called upon to point out Whitey Lewis unhesitatingly and rapidly touched that gangster on the shoulder. Lewis laughed in his face.

He laid his hand on Lefty Louie Rosenberg and kept it there a moment unperturbed by Rosenberg's black glances.

He pointed squarely at Horowitz, who showed his teeth in a smile in which there was no merriment.

And then he turned to Jack Sullivan, who fairly shrank away from him.

For two hours John F. McIntyre did his best to wreck Krause's testimony, but failed utterly. McIntyre attacked the witness with all of the weapons of an able and experienced cross-examiner. He cooed at him. His voice rose to a roar. His questions came like the fire of a gatling, but he was unable to trap or confuse the witness.

In his curious, close-clipped English, the Hungarian replied readily and positively and involved himself in no important contradictions. It was not necessary for the district attorney of Assistant District Attorney Moss to protect him from objections.

Justice Goff himself finally stopped the lawyer's grilling fire of questions.

"I do not think it is conducive to the interests of justice further to examine the witness," declared the justice. "I will permit no further questions, and discharge the witness."

The two bullets which killed Rosenthal were produced in court by the coroner's physician, together with a fragment of Rosenthal's jaw bone, driven by one of the bullets into the gambler's brain.

That the state would be allowed wide scope in introducing evidence into the trial bearing upon graft in the police department was indicated when Justice Goff overruled an objection to references by the district attorney in his address to the jury of the alleged gambling house partnership between Becker and Rosenthal, made by the defense.

"It is perfectly evident that the state's case depends upon circumstantial evidence," remarked Goff, "and the field for proving conspiracy must be wide. I will allow all evidence tending to show a motive for the crime."

TWIN FREAK DEAD

Millie and Christine Were Separate Individuals With One Body

Wilmington, N. C., Oct. 11.—Millie and Christine, said to be the greatest "twin freak" of human anatomy, possessing apparently two separate and distinct beings with one body, died at the old homestead in Columbus county, this state, where "they" were born in slavery. They were exploited in many countries, a puzzle to scientists and anatomists. They died within a few hours of one another, aged 60 years.

Millie and Christine were united at the lower part of the vertebra with muscular construction. Their constant movement trained the muscles so that they could stretch them to either side and kiss each other. If you touched one on the lower extremities the other could feel it, but was unable to tell where. Or if one moved a leg the other knew it, but could not tell which one.

BIG AIRSHIP BLOWS UP

Military Dirigible and Hall In Which It Was Stationed Demolished

Berlin, Oct. 11.—Germany's aerial fleet suffered a severe loss by the total wrecking by explosion of one of its immense dirigible balloons and of the hall in which it was stationed at Reinickendorf, a suburb of Berlin.

The dirigible, which was of the semi-rigid type, with internal air balloonets to preserve its shape, was being refilled with hydrogen gas by soldiers of the flying corps.

The gas, which is highly inflammable, was being passed into the envelope from metal cylinders when the friction of the gas itself on the filling tube caused fire to break out. A violent explosion ensued.

None of the crew was inured.

ARCHBOLD ADMITS THE AUTHORSHIP

Examined as to Letters Written to Senators

Washington, Oct. 11.—John D. Archbold, president of the Standard Oil company, testified to the Clapp committee that a receipt the late Cornelius N. Bliss given him for the company's contribution to the Roosevelt campaign fund of 1901 had been destroyed just before the death of H. H. Rogers. "It was not a thing of pleasure to look at," said Archbold.

Archbold's examination related to the "Archbold letters" between himself and former Senators Foraker, Quay and Hanna, and former Representatives Grosvenor and Sibley. Certificates of deposit sent to Foraker, he said, were for payment of legal services to the Standard Oil company in Ohio.

Some of the letters said to have been written to him by the men named Archbold could not remember having received, but was not prepared to say he had not. Of his own letters, his most frequent answer was "I have no doubt I wrote it." Archbold did not deny the authorship of any.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE IN BOSTON AND VICINITY

PLYMOUTH THEATRE.

After a triumphant run of over a year at Wallack's Theatre, New York, George Arliss in "Disraeli" will appear for an indefinite run at the Plymouth Theatre, Boston, beginning Oct. 14. It is seldom that a play has so great and varied appeal as has "Disraeli." The point that makes the production of positive and lasting importance, no doubt, is Arliss' wonderful acting of the title-role, which, in the language of the New York World, is of such excellence that "not since the curtain was drawn on the careers of Henry Irving and Richard Mansfield has a New York audience witnessed a performance that could approach it." The original Disraeli, one of the greatest of all English statesmen, has been dead only about thirty years, so that it is a rather daring thing to attempt to visualize him at a time when the man himself is more or less vividly remembered by many living persons. But the real Disraeli was a man of many eccentricities, a brilliant talker and a lover of dramatic effects, thus making the appeal of a play founded upon his character irresistible to the actor. "Disraeli" was written by Louis N. Parker, the same man whose charming comedy "Pomander Walk" was the success of last season. "Disraeli" has the same charm that made "Pomander Walk" so popular, and at the same time has a stronger plot. It deals with the great statesman's successful endeavor to gain control of the Suez Canal for England, a work in which he meets with the secret opposition of diplomatic spies. The intrigue that arises is absorbing, and at times quite exciting. Incidental to this political plot is a delightful love story, while the glimpse of Disraeli's home-life has an appeal all its own.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

"Such a little Queen," which will be next week's offering at the Castle Square theatre under the management of John Craig, is a bright and merry fantastic comedy. Its action takes place in New York, and its heroine is the dainty Queen of Hersegovina, who has fled from her throne and her home, and is dwelling in a humble flat situated in one of the apartment houses up Harlem way. Her betrothed, the King of Bosnia is also exiled, and the plot tells an extremely romantic tale of what happens to them, and of how they finally emerge happy and contented from all their troubles. The little queen rises bravely to her task, and throughout the course of the play are many humorous incidents.

There is no problem in "Such a Little Queen." It is merely a play, and it therefore should satisfy a multitude of theatre-goers. At the Castle Square the title role will be played by Mary Young, and Wilson Melrose will be seen as the royal hero. The other characters will draw upon the complete resources of Mr. Craig's company.

The first Sunday Concert of the season at the Castle Square will be given next Sunday evening.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

Harris & Selwyn will present for a limited engagement, at the Hollis Street Theatre for 2 weeks, starting October 14 "Coming Home to Roost," a new play of American life by Edgar Selwyn, author of "The Country Boy." The play is built along comedy lines, and deals with Martin Boldt a multi-millionaire, who has, with all his fortune and success, found one thing lacking to make his life a contented one. His wife, who in the beginning of their married life had been a helpmate in all that the word implies, has, by reason of her husband's rapid progress, been left to her own resources, and denied the active participation in his affairs to which she had become accustomed. In consequence, she becomes inactive, thereby developing neuresthania. The husband seeks out the best specialists in the hope of finding a cure for her, but without avail. Finally in desperation, he asks the counsel of a physician, an old family friend from their home town up in the country. The physician, in the course of conversation with Mrs. Boldt, immediately discovers the cause of her illness as too much wealth. "If you love your wife" he says to Boldt, "you will find the only way to cure her is by giving her a great shock. Work and worry is what she needs. She has been leading an inactive life. She must have something to do, and what she has to do must have some connection with your affairs. You must lose your fortune and begin all over again." How the millionaire loses his fortune; how his wife enters into an active interest in her husband's affairs, and helps him to regain it, which secures for her the physical and mental benefit desired by him—furnish the many novel situations with which the play abounds.

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

More than one world's championship was decided in Boston during the past week, for Henry W. Savage won the undisputed lead in the field of light operatic production by his sensational success, "Little Boy Blue" at the Majestic Theatre last Monday night. This is the piece which ran six months at the Lyric Theatre, New York last season. Mr. Savage presented it in Boston with much elaboration and with the original New York cast. There was also an orchestra of grand opera proportions with soloists picked from the best organizations which he has been using for his English grand opera companies. The limited run of the operetta at the Majestic Theatre promises to equal any of the engagements of Mr. Savage's sensational success, "The Merry Widow," in Boston.

The story is one of the most romantic ever written for a musical play. It surrounds the famous portrait of "Boy Blue" done by the renowned painter, Gainsborough. The scenes takes one from the Bal Tabarin in Paris to the old castle of the Gobberdeens in Scotland. The locales afford Mr. Savage plenty of opportunity for the exercise of the facilities of the treasure trove in his New York, studio and as a consequence the scenery and general production of "Little Boy Blue" is one of the most elaborate he has ever made.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

Jessie Busley, one of the cleverest and best known comediennes on the legitimate stage, will make her vaudeville debut at B. F. Keith's Theatre next week in a department store comedy entitled, "Miss 318." Miss Busley has the role of "Lizzette Mooney," a girl behind the bargain counter in a big department store, and the scene of the sketch is laid in the big store on a bargain day. All the various characters encountered in one of these establishments are introduced, and the laughter is incessant from the rise to the fall of the curtain. Miss Busley will be surrounded by a splendid bill, many of the acts being new to Boston. Bert Levy, the celebrated cartoonist of the New York "Morning Telegraph" returns after a long absence, and among the newcomers are Andy Kelly, the lad from the Emerald Isle, with a wealth of new and funny stories; McDevitt, Kelly and Lucy in an eccentric comedy skit entitled "The Piano Movers;" Coombs and Aldwell, two new singing comedians; the Tom Davis Trio in "Motoring in Midair"; the Five Musical Lassies in a spectacular scenic novelty, introducing many catchy musical specialties; Boyle and Brazil, two dandy dancers; and Montambo and Wells, in acrobatic funnisities.

ALASKA—SIBERIA PICTURES.

Enthusiastic audiences have greeted each presentation of the Carnegie Museum Alaska-Siberia motion pictures at Jordan hall, Boston—the most notable pictures ever taken of animal and bird life in the Far North. Teachers and educators have pronounced them of great educational value, being an important lesson in natural history and holding the undivided attention of all children who view them. The spectator is taken to the Arctic ocean, stopping on the way to see wonderful waterfalls and glaciers and penetrating into the interior to the habitat of the moose, caribou and mountain sheep. Stops are also made at the Eskimo villages and scenes in their daily life are given. They are also shown in pursuit of big game in their frail skin canoes and over the dangerous ice floes. Two hundred miles north of North Cape Siberia was reached by the expedition and here, surrounded by the grinding ice pack, broken only by the towering bergs the polar bear was pursued. It was here that the most thrilling views were taken of the hunting of dangerous big game and the pictures are almost indescribable. The polar bears, sea-lions and walrus are seen within a few feet of the camera at times. One herd of walrus numbered eight hundred and some of the great animals weighed 7000 pounds. There are also many marvelous views of bird life and wonderful Arctic scenery. Matinees are given Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30 and evening performances are at eight.

DECLINES TO ORDER RELEASE OF ETTOR

Court's Ruling Applies Also to Giovannitti and Caruso

Salem, Mass., Oct. 11.—Judge Joseph F. Quinn of the superior court declined to order the release on bail of Joseph J. Ettor, Arturo Giovannitti and Joseph Caruso, whose trial on charges of being responsible for the alleged murder of Anna Lopezzi, a Lawrence mill worker, is pending in his court. In his finding Quinn said:

"Assuming this court has autthority to entertain the within motion, as to which I have grave doubts, I find that the defendant is not entitled as of right to be admitted to bail and there is no such cause as moves the court in the exercise of its discretion to release the defendant on bail. The motion is therefore denied."

A similar decision was made in the case of each of the three defendants.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Mrs. Keziah Coffin, supposed widow, is arranging to move from Trumet to Boston, following the death of her brother, for whom she had kept house. Grace Van Horne, ward of Capt. Eben Hammond, leader of the "Come-outer" religious sect, offers to assist her financially if she will remain. She declines. Kyan Pepper, widower, offers marriage, and is indignantly refused.

CHAPTER II—Capt. Elkanah Daniels, leader of the Regular church, offers Keziah a place as housekeeper for the new minister, and she decides to remain in Trumet.

CHAPTER III—Keziah takes charge of Rev. John Ellery, the new minister, and gives him advice as to his conduct toward members of the parish. Ellery causes a sensation by attending a "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER IV—Ellery's presence is bitterly resented by Eben Hammond, leader of the meeting. Grace apologizes for her guardian and Ellery escorts her home in the rain. Capt. Nat Hammond, Eben's son, becomes a hero by bringing the packet into port safely through fog and storm. Ellery finds Keziah writing a letter to some one, inclosing money in response to a demand. She is curiously startled when informed of the arrival of Nat.

CHAPTER V—Nat calls on Keziah, and it develops that they have been lovers since youth. Daniels remonstrates with Ellery for attending "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER VI—Ellery is caught by the tide and is rescued by Nat. They become friends.

CHAPTER VII—Ellery meets Grace while walking in the fields Sunday, and learns that she walks there every Sunday.

CHAPTER VIII—The clergyman takes dinner Sundays with the Daniels. Annabel, the captain's daughter, exerts herself to make an impression on him. She notices with vexation his desire to get away every Sunday at a certain time. She watches him through a spy glass.

CHAPTER IX—Nat again importunes Keziah to marry him. He says he has had a quarrel with his father, who wants him to marry Grace.

CHAPTER X—Ellery asks Grace to marry him. She confesses that she loves him, but says she fears to displease her guardian, who has been very kind to her, and asks time to think about it. Elkanah Daniels tells Eben about the meetings between Ellery and Grace. Eben declares he will make Grace choose between him and the preacher. Grace finds him in a faint, following the excitement of Elkanah's visit.

CHAPTER XI—Just before he dies Eben exacts a promise from Nat and Grace that they will marry.

CHAPTER XII—Keziah breaks the news to Ellery and later he receives a note from Grace saying she is to marry Nat and asking him not to try to see her again. Keziah tells the story of her own marriage with a man who turned out to be a good-for-nothing, and who was reported to have been lost at sea, and of her love for Nat, whom she cannot marry because the husband is alive. Ellery sees in the story a lesson in devotion to duty and decides to remain and attend to his duties.

CHAPTER XIII—Captain Nat sails for Manila to be gone two years. He says he and Grace have decided not to marry until he returns.

CHAPTER XIV—Nat is overdue, and it is feared that he has been lost at sea. Keziah gets a letter from her husband saying he is coming back. Grace goes on a visit to relatives of the Hammonds.

CHAPTER XV—A vessel flying distress signals is discovered off the coast. Ellery goes with party to board the vessel. A man is found suffering from smallpox, the rest of the crew having deserted.

CHAPTER XVI—He is taken to an abandoned shack on shore and Ellery helps nurse him. Before he dies it is discovered that he is Keziah's husband. Ellery, left alone in quarantine, is found wandering in a delirious condition by Grace. She takes him back to the shanty and sends for help.

Dr. Parker heard it, while on his way to Mrs. Prince's, and, neglecting that old lady for the once, he turned his horse and drove as fast as possible to the shanty on the beach. Fast as he drove, Captain Zebedee Mayo got there ahead of him. Captain Zeb was hitching his white and ancient steed to the post as the doctor hove in sight.

"By mighty!" the captain exclaimed, with a sigh of relief, "I'm glad enough you've come, doctor. I hated to go in there alone. You've heard, of course."

"Say, ain't it wonderful! I'm tickled all up one side and sorry all down t'other. Nat's a true-blue feller, and I'm glad enough that he ain't shark bait; but what about the minister and her? She's promised to Nat, you know. Are you goin' to tell Mr Ellery?"

"Certainly not. And I hope he hasn't been told. He's getting well fast now, but he mustn't be worried, or back he'll go again. We must see Mrs. Coffin. Keziah is our main hold. That woman has got more sense than all the rest of us put together."

But it was Grace, not Keziah, who opened the shanty door in answer to their knock. She was pale and greeted them calmly, but it was evident that her calmness was the result of sheer will power.

"Won't you come in, doctor?" she asked. "Good afternoon, Captain Mayo."

Dr. Parker entered the building, but Captain Zeb remained outside, stammering that he cal'lated he'd better stay where he could keep an eye on his horse. This was such a transparent excuse that it would have been funny at any other time. No one smiled now, however.

"Is—is Mrs. Coffin—er—Keziah aboard?" the captain asked.

"No, she isn't. She went to the parsonage a few hours ago. Mr. Ellis brought the mail and there was a letter in it for her. She said it was important and that she must go home to see about some things. She'll be back pretty soon, I suppose."

Parker found his patient sleeping soundly and had not disturbed him. Returning to the living room he spoke to Grace.

"Humph!" he grunted, watching her from under his brows, "everything seems to be all right in there. He mustn't be told anything that will upset him. He's getting well fast and I want it to continue."

"Yes, I understand."

"Hum! Er—have you heard— Has anyone been here?"

"Yes. I have heard. The telegram came and I answered it."

"You did? Well, it's a miracle and we're all thankful, of course. Did you—er—er——"

"Doctor, I must go home. I mustn't stay here any longer. You know why not. I must be at home when he comes. You must get some one to take my place. Aunt Keziah will stay, of course, and perhaps Mrs. Higgins would come."

"But stay through tomorrow, at any rate. Nat won't get here until Thursday, and I may be able to find another nurse by that time. And what I shall say to him," motioning toward the other room, "I don't know."

"Must you say anything? Just say that I have been called away for a few days on—on some business. Don't tell him. Don't tell him the truth, doctor, now. He is too weak and I am afraid——"

She stopped and turned away. The doctor watched her pityingly. He would have liked to say much more, but he could not, under the circumstances. He stammered a good-by and, with a question concerning Mrs Coffin's whereabouts, went out to join Captain Zeb.

"Well?" queried the latter anxiously. "How is it? What's up? What's the next tack?"

"We'll go to the parsonage," was the gloomy answer. "If anybody can see a glimmer in this cussed muddle Keziah Coffin can."

Keziah was on her knees in her room, beside a trunk, the same trunk she had been packing the day of the minister's arrival in Trumet. She was working frantically, sorting garments from a pile, rejecting some and keeping others. She heard voices on the walk below and went down to admit the callers.

"What's the matter, Keziah?" asked Dr. Parker sharply, after a look at her face. "You look as if you'd been through the war. Humph! I suppose you've heard the news?"

Keziah brushed back the hair from her forehead. "Yes," she answered slowly. "I've heard it."

"Well, it's great news, and if it wasn't for—if things weren't as they are, I'd be crowing hallelujahs this minute. Trumet has got a good man safe and sound again, and the Lord knows it needs all of that kind it can get."

"Yes."

"Yes. But there's the other matter I've been to see Grace. She didn't say so, but it was easy enough to see; the man she promised to marry and thought was dead, is alive. She's a girl of her word—she promised him and she promised her dying uncle—and she'll marry him. And then what will become of John Ellery? He'll go downhill so fast that a ship's anchor wouldn't hold him. If he doesn't die I'll have to send him away somewhere, and the Regular church will lose the minister we've fought so hard for."

"Yes," concurred Zebedee, "and them blasted Danielses'll run the shebang and the rest of us'll have to sing small, I tell you."

"So we've come to you, Keziah," went on the doctor. "Do you see any salvation?"

"Yes, I do."

"You do? Where?"

"In Nat Hammond. If he knows Grace doesn't want to marry him, do you suppose he'll hold her to her promise? But"—she hesitated—"doctor, you leave this to me. So far as John and Grace are concerned you needn't worry. I'll take it on myself to see that they have each other, as the Almighty meant 'em to. Leave it to me. Just leave it to me. I know I can do it."

Captain Elkanah Daniels and his friend were feeling better and they were busy. Trumet had a new hero now. On Wednesday the Boston papers printed excerpts from Captain Hammond's story, and these brief preliminary accounts aroused the admiration of every citizen. It was proposed to give him a reception. Elkanah was the moving spirit in the preparations Captain Nat, so they learned by telegraphing, would arrive on the noon train Thursday. His was not to be a prosaic progress by stage all the way from Sandwich. A special carriage, drawn by the Daniels' span and escorted by other vehicles, was to meet the coach at Bayport and bring him to Trumet in triumphant procession All this was to be a surprise, of course.

Wednesday afternoon the Daniels following was cheered by the tidings that Grace Van Horne had left the beach and was at her old home, the Hammond tavern. And Mrs. Poundberry reported her busy as a bee "gettin' things ready."

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Hungarian Art Critic Boycotts Mrs. "Jack" Gardner—Praises Many Museum Masterpieces Which are Better known in Europe than in New England—Bears are Added to Birds in Boston's Brand New Zoological Garden—Franklin Park is now Mecca for "Kiddies" and Older Kids—Opera School Opening and Grand Operatic Performances About to Begin for Enlivenment of Hub's Great Music Colony.

German speaking tourists in America are advised of the richness of the artistic treasures of New York and Boston in a little book which a Hungarian art critic, M. H. Bernath, has written and of which the Boston Public Library has acquired a copy. That the Hub has many buildings, pictures and statues worth seeing, Europe will learn from Herr Bernath's volume, the sixtieth in a series of "Beruehmte Kunststaetten," or "World Art Cities" which a Leipzig publishing house is issuing as guide books for travelers; yet, saddest of possible omissions, Europe will learn nothing about Boston's really unique fine arts institution, the Isabella Stuart Gardner Museum in the Fenway, Ltd. Why Mrs. "Jack" should thus have been boycotted is mysterious, for Herr Bernath has been in Boston at least twice and, being a distinguished foreigner, he could doubtless have experienced Mrs. Gardner's very ready hospitality, even supposing that his visits did not coincide with those rare and red letter days when this regularly incorporated "public" museum is open to 200 sightseers at two dollars per head. To say not a word of Fenway Court, with its picturesque galleries and hallways, its Lippis, Botticellis and Rembrandts is surely ungallant not to say uncritical, and many Bostonians will resent such a slight to their leading patroness of art and music. The book nevertheless, may have some value in still further acquainting Europeans with New England treasures of which most New England people are densely ignorant.

Eleven great bears for five cents' carfare compose Boston's present most popuar moving picture show. Out at Franklin Park Mayor Fitzgerald's new zoological garden has witnessed the opening of a second important unit. Besides the biggest bird cage in the world New England people may now visit what are said to be the handsomest bear dens ever created by the hand of man. The homes of the Boston bears were built only after detailed study of plans of housing these interesting creatures in many cities. The bear pit at Berne, Switzerland, which thousands of tourists stop off to see, is a very famous and well managed affair; but it is said to be small in comparison with this Bostonese series of cages that house the animals popular with boys and girls and with children of a larger growth. The cage for the polar bears will not be ready until next spring, since the cool stone grotto planned for them is still incomplete, but during the autumn and winter they are to be shown in one of the other cages. There are also three amiable black bears, a savage silver tipped grizzly from Yellowstone Park and two exceptionally fine Russion brown bears. This very real attraction will add to the crowds that since the opening of a first section of the zoo have thronged Franklin Park, necessitating new plans on the Elevated Company's part for handling the tarffic that has arisen. People from every part of New England are now noted as inquiring of guards in the subway stations how to get to the zoological garden— an evidence that the kind of exhibits which have popularized the Bronx district in New York cannot fail to interest folks in Yankeedom. The bears and the birds represent a beginning which will evidently eliminate Franklin Park's reputation for being merely a neighborhood golf field.

"Made in New England," the token evident in many shop windows during the visit of the International Chambers of Commerce, also has its application to operatic talent since Boston has come upon the world's grand operatic map. One of the subsidiary effects of having permanent opera in a city is to furnish facilities for study which did not exist heretofore. A list of late engagements of pupils of the dramatic department of the New England Conservatory of Music shows just what is happening at the country's leading centre of musical education. Talented young people are graduating directly into grand opera and light opera companies, without the European debut that was once absolutely necessary. Of instances of "making good" in opera after training at the Conservatory, Bostonians have noted the cases of Jeska Swartz and Edith Barnes of the Boston Opera Company; Marie Gjirtsen, Berlin opera company; Lida Wellmier, Opera Comique, Paris; Gertrude Coughlan, Aborn opera company and very many others in light opera and theatrical stock companies. Such successes are adding to the Hub's reputation as a great training school of musicians, and correspondence from the South and West is showing great interest in the school of grand opera which is conducted under the joint auspices of the New England Conservatory and the Boston Opera Company—a professional school which is notable in the United States since it follows the principles governing the management of the world's leading opera houses. This is the second season, beginning October 14, during which this training school with its subjects fascinating to young Americans of musical talent, has been carried on under the able instruction of Arnaldo Conti, conductor at the Opera House, and Ramon Blanchart, the distinguished baritone who has gained great popularity with New England audiences.

BUSINESS CLEANED UP

Finance Committee will Hardly Report Street Orders

AT THIS LATE DAY

There will be no meeting of the City Council next Monday evening. All of the committees, with the exception of the Finance committee have practically cleared the calendar of business referred to them, so that now about all of the important orders are before the Finance Committee. Many of these orders call for street improvements and it is an open question how much the Finance committee will let get by, this year considering the lateness of the season.

PARADISE FOR BOWLERS

Bowlers, with their ladies are invited to attend the grand opening of the Coliseum Alleys, Irving place, Columbus Day. An entire equipment of 10 alleys have been installed and 10 billiard tables have also been added. Refreshments will be served during the day. The establishment is the last word to date and opens at 10 o'clock.

TEMPORARY LOAN BIDS.

Bids were received Thursday by City Treasurer Tilden for the $150,000 temporary loan refunding issue. Seven bids were received and considering the tightness of the money market the bids were considered good. Several cities recently have been unable to sell their bonds above par, nor even at par. The several bids were as follows, the bid being awarded to Lee, Higginson & Co.

Lee, Higginson & Co.	$100.35
N. W. Harris	100.146
Blodgett & Co.	100.111
Curtis & Sawyer	100.111
Adams & Co.	100.103
R. L. Day & Co.	100.079
Blake Bros.	105.05

According to these figures the city will receive a premium of $525 on the loan.

MUST HUSTLE.

The first 25 boys who sign up before 11.30 Saturday at the Y. M. C. A. building with Alden Blanchard will be entitled to take in the Harvard-Williams football game at the Stadium Saturday afternoon. Candidates must be members of the student employed boys and junior gymnasium classes.

The party will leave the Quincy station on the 12.19 train in charge of Louis F. LaRose.

MUCH DISCUSSION.

The Ward Six Patriot association held a well attended business meeting at the home of James A. Smith, 20 Clark street, Thursday evening. Several subjects for the benefit of the community were discussed, but no definite action taken.

CANCELLED GAME.

The Hilton A. C. of Norwood, who claim to be one of the fastest football teams in the state have cancelled their Saturday game with the Quincy A. A. at the last minute.

—Statistics of New York's foreign-born residents include the significant figures that of the 486,980 natives of southern and eastern Europe 23.7 per cent have been naturalized, while of the 323,195 natives of northwest Europe the showing is 60.3 per cent. The Italians make the poorest showing—16.7 per cent—due, doubtless, to the custom of immigration for temparary residence only. They are great people for returning home at frequent intervals.—Brockton Enterprise.

HIS AUDIENCE HIS SUBJECT

Joe Mitchell Chapple, gave a very interesting lecture Thursday afternoon to the Ladies' Benevolent society of Memorial church and their friends. He said he wished to take his subject from his audience which he did. The surroundings and conditions at once brought him back to his youthful days, to social gatherings at the church at home, and to the memory and the influence of his mother who had always impressed upon him the importance of knowing and associating with distinguished people.

PROGRESSIVE RALLY.

Col. Henry L. Kincaide addressed a large rally of Progressives at Bridgewater Thursday evening. He said practically all of the Williamson supporters will support him and Mrs. D. Brown, the leader of the suffrage movement in Brockton openly pledged her support.

OPTIMISTIC ATMOSPHERE

The Quincy Republican headquarters, room 4, in the Johnson building, City Square, were formally opened for the campaign Thursday evening, by an enthusiastic gathering of members and party candidates.

President Langelier stated that he was a good loser and was doing all he possibly could to land his friend Wolcott in the senate. Representatives Walter E. Piper and W. J. Leslie were pleased to see the enthusiasm displayed and the optimistic feeling manifested

The latter planned to have a rally Saturday night. Dr. Everett M. Bowker of Brookline, candidate for county commissioner. Councilman Edward J. Sandberg, Charles H. Badger, Ex-representative Frank L. Badger, Albert L. Whitman, Dr. Albert H. Gibson, a former councilman and Councilman John R. Richards, also spoke.

Charles W. Miller of Abbott & Miller, of Quincy is sued for $20,000 by Albert C. Kral, who says that on July 2 last, while he was a passenger on a car of the Boston Elevated Railway Company, at the corner of Dorchester avenue and Savin Hill avenue, Dorchester, he was injured as a result of an auto truck owned and operated by the defendant colliding with the car.

CITY METHODS CRITICISED

The first fall meeting of the West Quincy Improvement association was held Thursday evening in St. Jean's hall and was largely attended. It was voted that the railroad commissioners be appealed to in the matter of a five cent fare between West Quincy and Milton Lower Mills for the many employed at the latter place. As it is now two fares are required each way. The association wants a five cent fare for one trip in the morning and one trip at night.

The matter has been taken up by the street railway officials but refused. There was a general criticism of present municipal methods by Joseph Walker, Walter H. Ripley, Robert J. Teasdale, Peter T. Fallon, John Evans and Dr. John H. Ash.

SOX PUZZLED BY MARQUARD

Get but One Run Off Big Twirler For Giants

LATTER CAPTURE THE GAME

Free Batting and Phenomenal Stops the Feature of Third Battle, Which Ends With Score of Three to One—Bostons Capture Their Lone Run In Great Rally In Ninth

Boston, Oct. 11.—The Giants came into their own in the third battle of the great world series for the baseball title, and gave the Red Sox champions an artistic beating by the score of 2 to 1.

Not once until the final session did the Stahl boys have a real chance against McGraw's great twirler, big Rube Marquard, and while Buck O'Brien pitched a remarkable game until the final inning, when Bedient went in, the Sox could not connect with the ball.

The Red Sox made a great rally in the ninth and for a time it looked like an extra inning game, but the Giants held fast and by tight playing held the Speed Boys to a lone tally.

While the runs were few, there was no lack of sensations; for batting was free and there were several more or less phenomenal stops. Speaker got his bat against the ball several times, but not effectively. Marquard's good pitching was recognized by the crowd and he was often applauded.

New York drew first blood by scoring one in the second inning. In the fifth Bedient began to warm up for Boston, as O'Brien was becoming nervous over New York's free hitting.

This fifth inning was the most sensational of the day and when Doyle was purposely passed and the bases filled, the excitement was intense; it was increased when Snodgrass stood at the plate with three balls and two strikes called. But he flied to Lewis and Boston breathed again. In Boston's half of the fifth Murray made a dazzling one-hand catch of Wagner's fly after first misjudging it.

Everybody got up in the "lucky seventh" and cheered for several minutes. The Giants went out in order, and the first two Red Sox followed; but Boston found reason to cheer when Stahl hit a twin in the left field bleachers; but Wagner, next up, flied out, and the "lucky seventh" failed to luck.

Speaker's Ankle Wrenched

New York, Oct. 11.—Tris Speaker, the star of the Red Sox, is not likely to appear in the game at the Polo grounds today, and perhaps not in another world's series contest this year. His ankle, which he turned Wednesday, was wrenched again yesterday. After boarding the train for New York the ankle began to swell rapidly, and by the time the team reached New York Tris could hardly walk. A doctor was called as soon as the team reached the hotel and worked upon Speaker, hoping to put him in condition to play, but he is fearful that he must order the slugger to keep out of uniform today. If Speaker does not play, Henriksen will take his place in centre.

The Giants also arrived late last night, exultant over beating the Red Sox on their own grounds.

Fully Explained.

"What is Boston coffee?" asked the customer at the lunch counter.

"It's the kind you put the cream in first," answered the waiter girl.

"But why is it called Boston coffee?"

"Because the cream is put in first."

"Yes, I know. But when a man orders Boston coffee why do you put the cream in first? That's the question."

"Because he orders Boston coffee. Anything else you wish to know, sir?"

SENIER HELD FOR BURGLARY

Nothing Incriminating Found on His Person

LOOKING UP HIS RECORD

The small variety store of George E. Sprague on the corner of Washington and River streets was burglarized about 1 o'clock this morning and half a hour later John E. Senier aged 33 years of Sargents lane was arrested in City Square by Officer Phillips charged with the offence. About 1.30 this morning officer Dhooge, standing near Petersons store saw Senior come around the corner from River street into Washington street and start toward City Square. The officer held up the man and searched him but finding nothing incriminating let him go. The officer then visited the rear of Sprague's store and found a window open. Going to the residence of Chief Burrell on the opposite corner Police headquarters was notified and the patrol wagon was sent to City Square to head the fellow off. On the way down Officers Phillips and Forde were picked up and when near the corner of Washington and Coddington streets the fellow was seen and placed under arrest. He was arraigned in court this morning and his case continued until Wednesday in order that the police might look up his record.

BOWLER'S PARADISE.

A large number of bowlers tried out the new Coliseum alleys Columbus Day and there was also a busy session of pool and billiard players held over the new tables. Refreshments were served all day. There are 10 alleys, six pool and two billiard tables in the building and the equipment is up to date. The new Fore River bowling league, composed of teams from the different departments open the league season Tuesday evening.

—The football season may be said to be well started; they've killed a player, maimed another and put countless others on the hospital list. But in spite of the casualties, there's a subtle attraction about the game which makes one hesitate to condemn the sport, but rather to law much of the damage to conditions of the individuals, which laid them liable to loss of life or injury.' At the same time, one must confess that it is far from a mollycoddle game. — Barre, Vt., Times.

Clever Amateurs in Thrilling War Time Comedy

DANCING FOLLOWED

"A Virginia Heroine," a comedy in three acts, was presented to a large audience at Music Hall, Friday evening by the members of the English Ivy Lodge, No. 116, Order of the Daughters of St. George. Following the piece there was dancing until three o'clock.

The first act opened with the sitting room scene at Greylawn, the home of Mrs. Dare. The house and garden of Granny Royal, an Old Woman living on the edge of the Woods, was the setting of the second act and the last act scene was similar to that of the first act.

The time was during the Civil War, and stirring scenes of the result of the war on Virginia crowded the play. Of course there was the usual love scene and music was by the Granite City quartet.

The cast of characters was as follows:

Mrs. Dare, Mistress of Greylawn, Mrs. George Davey
Margaret Leighton, Sister of Mrs. Dare, Miss Jennie Beer
Virginia Leighton, Her Niece in love with Phillip Lee, Miss Bertha Wallace
Betty Dare, Mrs. Dare's Daughter, Miss Bessie Beer
Bess Allen, Virginia's Friend Miss Ethel Jones
Nell Cary, Virginia's Friend Miss Emily Moyle
Granny Royal, An Old Woman living on the edge of the Woods, Mrs. Henry Furnald
Topsy, A Self Constituted Necessity Miss Maud Johnston
Ruth Lee, A Southern Girl in Sympathy with the North, Miss Edna Chapple
Nora, Hostile to Naygurs, Miss Etta Williams
Martha Lane, The Village Gossip Mrs. Thomas Johnston

The quartet members were William Warmington, Fred Warmington, John Pierce and George Davy.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH CELEBRATES 25th ANNIVERSARY

Pastor Matheson Preached a Sermon on Service Which Meant So Much

Work Is the Slogan of Every Successful Man and Church

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the dedication of the First Presbyterian church was observed Sunday with appropriate services and large audiences.

At the morning service the pastor, Rev. James A. Matheson preached on prosperity, 2d Chronicles 31:21. "He did it with all his heart, and prospered." He said in part:

"Men making money in business, those climbing high in political life, others highly esteemed by their fellows, these are considered by the world as the successful ones. Prosperity however is not so much in the abundance of possessions as in the attitude we assume. It was Diogenes who remarked while passing through the markets, 'How many things there are Diogenes does not need. Socrates said: 'The richest man is he who is satisfied with the least.' True prosperity consists in attitude more than possession. Work is a necessary quality for prosperity. There is a trinity of unity in work. The work of the hand that brings prosperity to self and others, that of the head thinking clearly, and that of the heart, acting rightly and with the desire to further the best interests of all. It is inspiring to look into the face and grasp the hand of such men.

"It has been said that four or five years of the life of the average man is spent in doing not much of anything. Horace Mann wrote, 'Lost yesterday, somewhere between sunrise and sunset two golden hours, each set with sixty diamond minutes. No rewards is offered, for they are gone forever."

"The man just above the average is improving every moment and embracing every opportunity. Thus Elihu Burritt learned 18 languages in his spare time. Macauly read Greek when on a journey. Work is the slogan of every successful man and church. Thus we think of Rev. Eben Muse and Rev. John Ramsay, the pioneers of faithful hard work of hand, head and heart. They had the vision of what we possess today.

"When we speak of work we think mainly of self. Of service we refer to others. Yet true work is service. The greatest men of history counted themselves servants. Washington served to give us freedom; Lincoln, to free a race of slaves; while our Master served to teach mankind one of the greatest lessons of life.

"Service ever ready for action is desirable. The man with the happy face and cheerful manner yet ready to lend and give all his strength when the Master issues his work orders is sought for today. The successful service is that on which others depends. Lord Wolseley in the campaign of Egypt was led by one Ranson who guided the army by the stars. Ranson was among the first to fall, anl these were his last words: "I led them straight sir.'

"Thank God for those who led us straight during youth and manhood, and for Him who led us straight to Calvary. We are glad today for our equipment for service. A building of beauty and comfort; well organized but not over-organized, with finances well arranged anl ably managed; a bright future and great opportunities at our door. We are to emphasize God and prosperity. They go together more than man and prosperity. When we read on our coins 'In God we trust,' it is an acknowledgment of our dependence on Him.

"The nations depending on God are the successful ones. God has blessed us as a nation with an abundance of charity an sympathy. Japan in these an other virtues, has not even touched the hem of the Master's garment. The prosperity of the great church today is found in the fact that God is in its foundation, and occupies the largest place in the hearts of His followers. Without Him we as a church must fail, but if it is God and us we will succeed. We can look at the spots on the sun or we may walk by the light of it. There is no room today for "isms," but a need to walk by the light of the son of righteousness and assist others.

"It is better to weave in the web of life
A bright and golden filling,
And do God's will with a loving heart
And hands that are swift and willing,
Than to snap the delicate slender threads
Of our curious lives asunder,
And then blame heaven for the tangled ends,
Or sit to grieve and wonder."

"The heart and prosperity, Queen Elizabeth said to a reluctant envoy 'If you will take care of my business, I will se to it yours does not suffer.' The Master said that he who gave up for him would receive manifold blessings. Men must enter heartily into his service. Strong hearts are needed today for supreme moments. The offering of Isaac was a supreme mom-

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The matter will be determined, today, or the period of temporary aberration of mind will be prolonged.

"When I try to write down the steps by which I became a Progressive, I am inclined to trace them first to the gradual discovery that philanthropic effort everywhere is merging into civic effort"—Jane Adams. Poor thing what a disappointment when she emerges from the trance. Very few have deluded themselves into the belief that this "Bull Moose" movement is by any stretch of the imagination a charity bazaar or a philanthropic outburst except in so far as it philanthropically tends to foster certain fond ambitions of certain plain people.

That Bedient boy shared the honors in Boston with Columbus, Saturday.

The customary routine of high finance has been somewhat upset by the manner in which that Chinese loan was accomplished.

Harvard students have started a movement to do away with "beer" at social gatherings. No doubt the Cambridge people would appreciate it if they took a step towards unloading before taking the last car to the University city Saturday nights.

Lawrence has redeemed itself. Now let us not hear anything more from croakers or weaklings anent the lack of judgment in a patriotic people paying a tribute to the flag which every one should honor.

The Montenegrins have landed on the Turks with a jump. How long will they be able to go to the bat and swat the Turks. Pray pardon the slip for the moment we forgot that it is war not base ball.

E. Gurley Flynn is reported to have broken down under the strain of I. W. W. work. Out of evil there sometimes crops some good.

Roosevelt has scored Wilson's trust record. Very good. It is quite true that Mr. Wilson did not dine or confer with Harriman, Morgan, Archbold or others of that ilk and there is no evidence that he received campaign contributions from The Steel, Harvester or other trusts. He did not have anything to do with Bill Flinns but he wiped Smith and Dix off the political map and forced Murphy's hand in New York. So it can be truthfully said Mr. Wilson has no trust record to speak off, but then it must be remembered that he did serve the nation seven years in the presidential seat.

Ex-Governor Draper has announced his candidacy for the senate. It may be interesting to know what the voters have to say on the subject.

The Chinese displayed their versatility by capturing first prize in the Boston Columbus Day parade.

It was a brighter day for Columbus when he struck San Salvador than the weather clerk handed out for this section on the 420th anniversary of that event.

Mathewson says bad fielding defeated the Giants. It did not reequire an expert to tell the public that, but as it is a part of base ball it had to count in the final summing up.

The players have got all of the plunder that is coming to them even if the contest should go the limit.

INSULT TO BAY STATE INTELLIGENCE.

Mr. Charles S. Bird, "Bull Moose" candidate for governor, is offering a gratuitous affront to the intelligence of the majority of voters of Massachusetts, Democrats as well as Republicans, when he denounces Senator Crane as in the same class with Barnes, Penrose and that parallel chorus of barnyard politicians and alleged statesmen. But it is only in keeping with the prediction offered by some of the knowing ones in the state that with Bird on the wing he would soon soar to heights from which the party strategic board would find difficulty in landing him on terra firma or be able to extricate him from the meshes which he would wind around himself.

When Senator Crane was first mentioned for Senator, while the Democrats with faithful desire to uphold their party principles and traditions and maintain the organization, offered a candidate to oppose him, it was not in that whole hearted manner which had characterized their opposition to other Republican candidtes for Senator, because it was certain that the rank and file of the voters, irrespective of party favored the candidacy of Crane. In his term of service at the National capital there has been nothing which could be pointed to as reflecting upon the integrity or high mindedness of the junior senator from this state, and it is a matter of unimpeachable record, that Massachusetts senators have stood in the front rank for years, models from which it would have been well for the country if senators from other states had been fashioned.

When Senator Crane elected to retire from office, Democrats of the highest standing were as outspoken in their regret of his attitude as his most devoted adherents in the Republican ranks.

If there is anything shady in Senator Crane's record, which has failed of appearance in the moving picture show of the senate to come above the surface, and it is known to Mr. Bird he will be confering a lasting benefit upon his fellow citizens if he will reveal it so that the people may judge if their once proud idol is made of the common ordinary clay.

Mere phrasing, to put him in a class of certain kind, without any logical grounds is not good taste and even poorer argument. It is like the last, sad, hopeless flounderings of a candidate who has not a leg to stand upon and reaches out blindly for an excuse for his political aspirations.

As a potential element in a campaign it is a sorry effort. Mr. Crane is not, and never was considered an orator. His abilities however in certain directions were appreciated. To hook to him characteristics of which even his most bitter political opponents in former days never even whispered at this stage of the game, will hardly produce anything detrimental to Mr. Crane. Mr. Bird, is probably an orator, but no one ever heard of his stage career in that role up to present writing. If he has had political convictions, they have not been set forth so strongly that they have been carried along in the mind of many people.

As compared with Mr. Walker, it can be said for the latter that he has had convictions, has been big and strong enough to express them and has never attempted to hedge when it came to giving his views on important public matters, no matter whom he differed with.

ANOTHER TRACT FOR THE DOCKS

Correspondent Points Out Good Site at Quincy Neck

Editors of Daily Ledger:

Another favorable location which should receive attention when the committee is examining sites for a Public Dock is a tract of land of about 188,000 square feet at the foot of Howard avenue, Quincy Neck, bordering on Weymouth Fore River and Hayward's creek. This has a water frontage of 900 feet. Property is owned by Marcus E. Wight. It adjoins the land of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., where 18 feet of water is secured at low tide and the land in question could have the same, by easy dredging through soft mud.

No old walls there to tear down and rebuild. All straight new work. Railroad runs within a few feet of that land and trolley freight would have but a short connection to build.

Public dock located there would take all heavy teaming in connection with the same, off from the main streets of Quincy, which are so expensive to keep in repair, even with ordinary traffic and put the same on Quincy avenue, which would be an advantage.

A POPULAR HOSPITAL.

Not popular, perhaps, in the sense that people will go there to spend their vacations rather than to some favorite beach or mountain hotel, but popular in the sense that the Hospital shall have the friendly interest and hearty support of everybody in the city. So popular that if any of us are in need of hospital treatment we shall not think of going anywhere but to the Quincy Hospital, and that every Quincy doctor will take his patients to our own Hospital as a matter of course if he can get them in there.

A new regime is just beginning at the Hospital, the nature and significance of which will be left to the people themselves to discover in good time. But it may be said that from now on it is intended that an atmosphere of kindness, politeness and patient consideration shall pervade the Hospital in its treatment of every person having anything to do with it, whether he be patient, doctor, visitor, tradesman or anybody else.

Of course the Hospital must have rules, and strict rules, too. A mob of visitors cannot be allowed to invade the buildings at all hours; else no proper work could be done, and the patients would never get well; and so with all the other rules. But rules may be enforced so harshly and offensively as to irritate and anger everybody, or with such kindness and polite consideration that it will be a pleasure to obey them.

A careless visitor who calls unwittingly at the wrong door or the wrong hour to inquire about a patient is not to have his head snapped off instantly for his mistake, but is to be told kindly the right way.

A needless rebuff to a caller, even a humble one, may have a far-reaching effect; for it rankles in the mind, is passed from month to mouth, and possibly poisons a whole neighborhood in its feelings toward the Hospital. And there shall be no exaggerated and effusive attention for supposedly influential persons, and sharp, curt words, or perhaps complete neglect, for humbler visitors.

The Trustees and Governing Boards realize that they come with bad grace before the public in an appeal for financial support if the salaried officials of the Hospital are allowed to treat any class of its patron with discourtesy; and if there has been any just cause of complaint on that score in the past, the public are assured there will be no more of it in the future.

The Haven of Refuge on the hill is to become more and more, and in every sense, "Our Hospital."

MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION

Sends Forth An Appeal For Observance of Sabbath

TO NON-CHURCH GOERS

The Quincy Ministers Association met in the Y. M. C. A. rooms Tuesday morning and unanimously passed the following resolution.

"A frank appeal to non-church going people.

"We the members of the ministerial association of Quincy, while frankly recognizing the existence of honest differences of opinion on the question of the proper observance of Sunday, and without intending to discuss such differences herein or to arouse any spirit of controversy hereby, make this appeal in the interest of the common welfare of the city, and particularly for the sake of the influence upon the moral development of the young and immature. It is quite evident to any thoughtful observer of present tendencies that there is in this and other communities an increasing decline of reverence for those religious influences which in the past have contributed so largely to building up social ideals and individual character. The effect of this decline is not as yet fully apparent here, for the reason that the moral standards of the community are still safe guarded, to a considerable extent, by our inheritance from past generations of church going people, whose religious influence has been crystallized and handed down in the form of wholesome views of conduct, which have helped to mould public opinion. But we believe that unless this tendency can be checked it will not be long before the logical results will appear in forms of social demoralization, which will be especially unfortunate in their influence upon the young.

"We therefore appeal to the people of Quincy who do not at present take any part in the religious activities of any of the churches to co-operate with us and with each other in this matter by giving up at least a portion of each Sunday to some definite act of observance of the day as a day of worship and of moral instruction.

"In making this request we are purposely omitting all considerations which might lead to division of opinion or sentiment and present this appeal to you as good citizens to forego some portion of what seem to you legitimate pleasures, for the sake of the permanent good of the community in which you live, believing that the obvious need of some reform in this direction will commend our action to your good judgment and generous impulses.

"At the same time we wish to suggest to those who read this article that while much of the social and philanthropic work formerly done by the churches is now done and probably better done, by agencies which include the whole community, there is nevertheless, no substitute which can take the place of the church as the inspiring source of moral influence, nor any way whereby the individual citizen can better serve the community than by helping to make the work of the churches more effective."

UPRISING OF JAILBIRDS

Several Guards and Convicts Perhaps Killed In State Prison

Rawlins, Wyo., Oct. 14.—A battle raged early last night in the state penitentiary. Locked inside the walls with hundreds of mutinous prisoners, a few guards fought desperately to restore order and prevent a wholesale jail delivery.

Camped outside the walls was a force of citizens, heavily armed, ready to drive back the convicts if they murdered the remaining guards and made a rush through the gates. Shouts and occasional shots told of desperate fighting within the walls, and it was rumored that several guards and convicts were killed.

Another battle was in progress at the same time in the hills south of Rawlins between a posse of citizens and escaped prisoners.

Two men were killed in the streets of Rawlins, one was desperately wounded and two convicts were recaptured, following the escape of prisoners yesterday afternoon. The town is in panic.

The outbreak yesterday was the second within twenty-four hours. About 3 p. m. Saturday, twenty prisoners escaped. Nine were recaptured before 8 o'clock.

TO RESUME TRIAL TO-DAY

Three Hundred and Fifty Men Summoned as Ettor Talesmen

Salem, Mass., Oct. 14.—Three hundred and fifty Essex county voters eligible for jury duty have been summoned to report to Judge Quinn in the superior court today when the trial of Joseph J. Ettor, Arturo Giovannitti and Joseph Caruso, defendants in the Lopizzo murder trial, will be resumed.

Four jurors qualified from a previous venire of 350 talesmen, examined a fortnight ago, but better results are expected today, as both sides have made heavy inroads into the sixty-six peremptory challenges to which they were orginally entitled.

After these become exhausted talesmen passed by Quinn may only be challenged for cause satisfactory to the court.

WOMEN IN MINORITY IN UNITED STATES

Females Outnumb r Men, However, In Five States

Washington, Oct. 14.—According to the sex classification report of the department of commerce and labor, abstracted from the census of 1910, and exclusive of Alaska, there are 2,692,288 more men in the country than there are women, an increase of 1.6 males to every female during the last 10 years.

Women, however, still cling to their prestige of numbers in Boston, there being 11,179 more females than males, the classification showing 340,882 females and 329,703 males.

Again, in Massachusetts, females predominate by 55,920 in numbers, the classification being 1,711,168 females and 1,655,248 males. The census reports show 272,296 females to 270,314 males in Rhode Island, a preponderance of 1912 females. Only in three other states, however, do females predominate. They are Maryland, North Carolina and South Carolina.

BANK ROBBER CAUGHT

Run to Earth by Man From Whom He Stole Horse to Escape

Perue, Okla., Oct. 14.—After robbing a bank single-handed here, a bandit was captured by a lone pursuer. The robber entered the bank when no patrons were present, held up the cashier with a pistol and took $2000, all the money in sight.

He ran to a barn nearby, stole a horse and rode away. The owner of the horse, H. C. Burke, armed with a shotgun, took up the chase, caught the robber, disarmed him and brought him to jail. All the money was recovered.

Her Compliment.

Sam Jones, the evangelist, was leading a revival meeting in Huntsville, Tex., a number of years ago, and at the close of one of the services an old negro woman pushed her way up through the crowd to the edge of the pulpit platform. AUTOMOBILE LIGHTS.

While some injustice may result to the normal automobilist from the misdeeds of the abnormal driver, there is, nevertheless, one particular in which even the normal driver is constantly transgressing. This is in the matter of the illumination of the rear number plate. One who watches passing automobiles at night is struck by the number of machines which possess inadequate rear lights. This may be due either to wilful disregard, mere carelessness, or actual ignorance of the law. The law explicitly states that "number plates shall be kept clean and the numbers legible, and during the period when the vehicle is required to display lights the rear register number shall be illuminated so as to be plainly visible at a distance of 60 feet."

The wisdom and necessity of such a requirement are plain. The automobile traffic at night is enormous, the danger of accident great, and the ease with which an offending driver can escape undetected, unless his number plate is plaintly illuminated, obvious, and yet large numbers of automobilists are constantly violating the law for one of the three reasons above stated.

An accasional inspection of the rear light, and to the brief perusal of the law requiring effective illumination with results visible at 60 feet.

Sunday School—The Sunday school is well organized with a good staff of officers and teachers. The attendance while encouraging should be larger. There are too many pupils absent each Sunday. Parents can do much to raise the standard of the school by seeing that their children come regularly and promptly, and that the lesson is learned at home. A new curriculum issued by the Diocesan Board of Education has been adopted as an improved course of instruction. At the close of the year's session graduation certificates will be issued to pupils who have completed the course. Following is the list of the officers and teachers: Superintendent, Mr. Arthur Newton; Secretary, Mr. Henry Boutilier; Treasurer, Mr. Robert Kinf; Assistant Treasurer, Mr. Ralph Prout. Primary Department: Miss Gertrude Jones, Miss Elizabeth Torrey, Miss Alice Findlay, Junior Department: Miss Emily Moyle, Miss Mae Veale, Miss Cora Barnicoat, Miss Elizabeth Curtis. Mr. Wellington Owen, Mr. Russell Westland, Mr. Frank Wrigley, Mr. Ellis Young, Mr. Everett Prout. Senior Department; Miss Ruth Gardner, Miss Elizabeth Pattee, Miss Florence Osborne, Mrs. Pattee, Mrs. Armstrong, Mr. E. J. Townsend, Mr. T. W. Attridge. Teachers Training Class: Miss Edith Fox. This is a class to train teachers for the Sunday School. The instruction is of unusual interest and helpfulness as evidenced by the enthusiasm of the class. It is open to any young woman, whether intending to be a teacher or not.

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL.

Donald Lowry, at the present time one of the most talked of men in California, General Manager of the San Francisco Bulletin, an untiring worker for the welfare of convicts, lived for years the life of a social outcast. At the age of 30, while serving a term in prison, he determined to throw off the bondage of sin under which his life had been spent, and to become the captain of his own soul,—Master of his own Fate.

Rev. Mr. Sneath's sermon against the creed of Fatalism, aptly illustrated by this story of Donald Lowry, was built on the text, "Ye will not come unto me, that ye might have life," John 5-14. He urged the futility of that reasoning which leads a man to say—"I cannot help myself—I was born so." Environment ancestry, circumstance, have no control over the destiny of a man's soul, if he has the desire and the will to overcome, and faith in the promises of the One who said: "He that cometh unto me, I will in no wise cast out." The Prodigal Son, instead of accepting degradation and poverty as his fate, said, "I will arise and go to my father, and make amends, and get a fresh start."

Man is made in the image of God. He may choose his course, God will help him to it.

The service was fittingly closed by the congregational singing of the spirited hymn, "The Son of God goes forth to war."

The music at the morning service included the beautiful anthem by Schnecker, "The King of Love my Shepard is" by the choir, and Gounods "Love Divine" a duett by Miss Hardy and Mr. Spooner, both splendidly given.

A men's bible class in the Sunday school was organized under the leadership of Dr. Sneath, and met for the first time. The attendance and spirit shown were most encouraging, and a very interesting future is expected for this movement. Dr. Sneath also led the Christian Endeavor meeting at 6 o'clock in the vestry choosing for his subject "You can do better," and thoroughly convinced his hearers that they could.

This evening at the First Presbyterian church, Quincy, the East Norfolk Union Christian Endeavor Rally will be held at eight o'clock. There will be addresses by several pastors in the union including Dr. Sneath.

Notice was given of the first monthly meeting of the Wollaston Parent-Teacher Association, in the Wollaston school at eight o'clock this evening. Address by Ernest L. Collins, Principal of Quincy High school. Music by Mrs. H. Y. Follet and Miss Follett. Also of the meeting of the W. C. T. U. on Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. Geo. E. Thomas, 28 Newton street, Wollaston.

The regular Friday evening prayer meeting in the vestry at 7.45 will be conducted by Dr. Sneath. Subject "The Church as a Harvester."

The pastor will be glad to confer with any persons who are thinking of uniting with the church on Sunday, November 3. Those who desire to unite by letter should write for same at once.

The Congregational Men's club will hold the first of its monthly meetings on Tuesday October 22. President William A. Mann announces amongst other speakers Dr. F. W. Hamilton, President Tufts College, L. K. Rourke, Commissioner Public Works, Boston, Edward H. Frye who delighted the members at Ladies' Night last April and other equally prominent. This club still enrolls 90 per cent of its last year membership, and members and applications for the coming year number over one hundred men. Any one wishing further information apply to William A. Mann, 82 Freeman street, Wollaston. The suppers are fine!

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN CHURCH.

The minister, Rev. Carl G. Horst, who is giving a series of sermons on "Corner Stones of our Republic" preached Sunday to an intensely interested congregation upon "Our Public Schools." He said: "Our public schools must always be of first importance, for a republic in which all the power is placed in the hands of the people is never to be entrusted to any but intelligent citizens. In order to have intelligent citizens every child must be given an opportunity to get an education. To this end the state provides public schools and taxes all citizens for their support. From the humblest district school in the sparsely settled country to the fully graded and equipped High school in the metropolis they are sending out into active life patriotic and liberty-loving citizens. On their recitation benches sit side by side the sons and daughters of the rich and the poor, of the laborer and the professional man of the native born American and the newly arrived immigrant. Race distinction and creed distinctions are obliterated. Whether from the avenue or the alley they all learn that indispensable lesson of democracy to estimate others upon their real merit. The public school as no other institution helps the diverse elements of our population to become homogenneous. It is the training school for American citizenship. It belongs to all the people. If parents desire however to send their children to a private or parochical school, they are at liberty so to do But they have no right to ask that their parochial schools receive support from the public school fund. Public money should be used for public uses and public uses alone. We believe in the absolute separation of church and state in this country. Such separation is not yet secured in England or on the continent. Thank God that our fathers decided long ago that there shall be no connection between church and state; that our public schools shall be entirely free from sectarian control; that not one cent of public money raised by taxation and paid in by the rich and poor, high and low, believer and unbeliever, Jew and Gentile, Catholic and Protestant, shall be used for sectarian schools or institutions. These matters must be considered by all true Americans as definitely settled—they are not open questions any more than is the right of secession. Let the work of our fathers stand. Let us guard it with zealous care and watchfully protect it from partisan bias and religious bigotry. So help us God. Amen."

A large number of the members and friends of the Y. P. R. U. attended Sunday evening a neighborhood meeting in the First Church of Quincy and heard the former master of our local High school, Mr. James D. Howlett, give an interesting address.

The first meeting of the Wollaston Parents' and Teachers' Association will be held in the Wollaston school this evening at 8 o'clock.

At 12.30 luncheon will be served. The afternoon session opens at 2 o'clock with an address by the Rev. Joel H. Metcalf, Ph. D. of Winchester, whose subject will be "The Religious Poetry of Edward Rowland Sill.". A full attendance is requested.

The Unitarian Church-Helpers will meet with Mrs. Oscar L. Baker, 47 Taylor street, Thursday, Oct. 17, at 2 o'clock.

The Sunday school lecture at 25 Beacon street, Boston, Saturday morning, at 9.30 o'clock by Prof. Edwin D. Starbuck deals with "Some laws of Child Development." The lecture will be followed by a round-table conference on the "Organization of the Sunday school." All these lectures are free.

The first meeting of men for the free discussion of vital questions pertaining to the welfare of the City of Quincy will be held in the church auditorium next Sunday, at 12 o'clock. Irving L. The Rector asks these boys to meet him on this Sunday at the opening of Sunday School.

Tickets for the Parish Fair and Supper to be held October 31, by the Woman's Guild are now in circulation.The supper will be in the Parish Rooms and the Fair at the Rectory. There are to be no 25 cent supper tickets as erroneously stated in the last Calendar, but supper tickets at 35 cents will admit also to the Fair. Admission to the fair for all not attending the supper is 10 cents.

Parker, Secretary; Mr. G. E. Rundlett, Treasurer; Messrs. Hamilton, Curran and Walter, additional members of the executive committee.

Mrs. Gurney has given the proceeds of a Barn Dance held recently at her barn to the Parish House Fund. The amount, $5.00, is gratefully acknowledged.

South Shore Branch:—The South Shore Branch of the Sunday School Union will hold its autumn meeting at the Church of Our Saviour, Middleboro, on Tuesday, October 15, beginning at 4.00 o'clock. As a part of the programme, Miss Maud Briggs will read a paper on the "Motive of the Teacher," St. Chrysostom's School is always well represented at these meetings; it is hoped that in spite of the distance to Middleboro some of our teachers will be able to attend this meeting.

Junior Auxiliary: This useful group of little parish helpers will be under the direction this year of Mrs. Parlee assisted by Mrs. Rundlett. While it is a matter of regret that Miss Amy Rhodes cannot any longer continue her good work with the Society still it is very fortunate that exceptionally well qualified successors have come forward to take her place. The officers for the present year are,— President, Dorothy Parker; Vice President, Anne McTear; Secretary, Grace Purdom; Treasurer, Marion Orr.

☞Don't fail to read the Wednesday and Saturday Ledger and see what Irving L. Shaw has to say on City matters. His series of letters on, "What's the matter with Quincy?" is attracting wide spread attention and much favorable comment. tf

FLYNN HELD UP BY HIGHWAYMEN

Four Men Handled Him Roughly and Took His Valuables

WATCH FOUND IN GRASS

Timothy Flynn was held up and roughly handled by four men Sunday morning as he was returning to his home on Valley street. The holdup occurred at Greenleaf and Valley streets, in a shady and unfrequented spot.

A silver watch which was taken was found in the grass by Mr. Flynn this morning. Trunk keys and pocket book are still missing however.

Mr. Flynn said that he was badly treated and that it was a good thing he didn't lose his clothes since they made an effort to take his belt and tie. He was so badly frightened that he could give no description of his hostler at the Penniman stable and left there shortly after midnight.

TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY

ent for Abraham. David had his in sparing king Saul. Peter's came in his confession of Christ. Jesus Christ's came when he went to Calvary. Our supreme moment is today, in realizing our responsibility and grasping our opportunity. There is a heart of courage for true success. The Artist West told Nelson he could not paint another 'Death of Wolfe' be cause there were no more subjects. Nelson's reply was I hope I may die in my next battle.' In a short time West painted the 'Death of Nelson.' A courageous heart made it possible. There is no heart of service like his of whom Lanier wrote:

"Into the woods my Master went
Clean forspent, forspent.
Into the woods my Master came
Forspent with love and shame.
But the olives were not blind to Him,
The little gray hares were kind to Him,
The thorn tree had a mind to Him,
When into the woods He came.

Out of the woods my Master went
And he was well content,
Out of the woods my Master came
Content with death and shame.
When Death and Shame would woo Him last,
From under the tree they slew Him last,
When out of the woods He came."

The C. E. service was large and helpful. Mr. Carl Hayward and the pastor were the speakers. The Misses Margaret Michael and Minnie Miller and Messrs Wendall Clark and Everett Clark sang. Miss Ruth Kemp had charge of the meeting assisted by the president Wendall Clark.

Rev. James Todd, D. D. of the Fourth Presbyterian church of Boston preached at 7 o'clock. His theme, "The Church of the Living God" was ably presented. The spiritual meaning of the church, the individual's relation to it; the obligations to be met, and the privileges to be enjoyed, were emphasized by the speaker.

The choir under the direction of Mrs. James Marr rendered most excellent music thus adding to the beauty and joy of a day of good things.

On Wednesday evening the banquet will be held in the lecture room.

POWERS' NOTE IS REJECTED

War In Balkans Becomes Matter of Only Few Days

THE DEMANDS UPON TURKEY

Of Such Character to Render Porte Unable to Accept—Montenegrins Capture Imported Strategic Point, but May Have Difficult Task In Capturing Scutari—Greeks Arming

London, Oct. 14.—War in the Balkans is now only a matter of a few days.

The replies of the Balkan states to the powers' note, virtually rejecting intervention, will be delivered at the various capitals today and at the same time notes practically in the shape of an ultimatum will be sent to Turkey demanding autonomy for the Macedonian provinces.

According to a reliable despatch from Rome, the Balkan coalition will make a demand which it will be impossible for the porte to accept, namely, that the reforms be executed under the control of the European powers and the Balkan states, and, as a pledge, that the porte assent to the immediate demobilization of the Turkish forces.

It is understood the porte will be given until Tuesday to reply; therefore, there is every probability that general hostilities will be opened before the week is ended.

A Sofia despatch reports that the movement of the Bulgarian army has already begun. The Montenegrins, continuing their advance, have captured Byelopolye, an important strategic point to the northwest of Berana, after desperate fighting.

They are now on their way to Sienitza, thirty miles to the northwest of Byelopolye and close to the Servian frontier, against which they will direct an attack. It is in this direction the Montenegrins expect to join hands with the Servian army when it advances from the north.

According to a Constantinople despatch to The Standard, Essad Pasha arrived at Scutari yesterday with reinforcements, raising the garrison from 12,000 to 20,000 men. If this news is true, the Montenegrins will have a difficult task in capturing Scutari.

Already 125,000 men are under arms, with Greeks arriving daily from abroad. A large contingent has already reached here from America. With the recruits it is estimated that 170,000 soldiers can be placed in the field.

As a result of the reorganization of the past few years the whole army has been clothed, equipped and armed with modern rifles.

KILLED IN THEIR CAB

Engineer and Fireman Crushed to Death In Collision

Boston, Oct. 14.—Engineer Sydney A. Bradley and Fireman Daniel W. Cameron were crushed to death on their shifting locomotive in yard 2, Boston and Maine railroad, when a train of seven freight cars struck the tender and rammed it forward with great force, shattering the cab to pieces.

The locomotive brakes had been set, which caused the machine to serve as a bumper, and the force of the collision lifted the tender nearly ten feet in the air and hurled it on the cab.

The collision broke off valves and pipes and steam burned the engineer and fireman so badly that they could hardly be recognized.

ROSE TELLS STORY TO JURY

Police Lieutenant Wanted Gambler Put "Where He Would Never Worry Anybody Else"—"Bald Jack" Engineered Crime and Paid Gunmen $1000 For Their Work

New York, Oct. 14.—Long hours of cross-examination by supperless lawyers before a supperless court and jury failed to make "Bald Jack" Rose vary his story of the part he played and the part he says police Lieutenant Becker played in the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler.

"Becker told me," he said, "that he wanted Rosenthal murdered, shot, croaked, or dynamited. At his bidding, I got the gunmen to kill Rosenthan. I hid after the murder. I saw Becker that morning and later talked with him over the telephone. I paid the gunmen $1000 for Becker, and told them he said not to worry, but to lay low.

"I gave myself up and became a state's witness because Becker deserted me like a dirty dog, and was getting ready to throw me to the wolves."

Becker, cool and stoical, leaned on the table at which he sat, his chin in his hand, his elbow on the table, during the long cross-examination.

"Bald Jack" Rose, thick-lipped, wide-eared and without a hair on his glistening head, was unruffled by the ordeal. Once he faltered when Becker's lawyer hurled question after question at him, each ending "and when you said that you lied, didn't you?"

Once he leaned forward, buried his face in his hands and tottered on the stand. He seemed about to faint and the court quickly ordered a pause in the proceedings and windows were lowered to revive him. Within a few minutes he was refreshed and the cross-examination was continued.

Rose admitted, time after time, that he had lied, had perjured himself, had been a gambler and had been engaged twenty years in illegitimate business. He admitted that he was testifying to save his own life, but said he was telling the truth now. He said he had concluded to become state's witness only when the electric chair stared him in the face and added that he was not ashamed of his determination.

Without emotion, in a slow, deliberate drawl, he said he had deliberately planned, at Becker's behest, to "put Rosenthal where he would never worry anybody else." He knew, he added, that it was a terrible deed to plan.

"Where was you conscience?" thundered Becker's lawyer.

"I never consult my conscience," he replied slowly and evenly, without a tremor or a break in his voice.

"Have you got a conscience?" demanded the lawyer.

"I don't know," he said, measuring his words and facing the lawyer squarely. "I never saw it."

"Do you now intend to lead a respectable life?"

"Yes, but not in this community. I value my life too much and I wouldn't be a free man here."

With words tumbling over each other in their haste, Rose declared that he had been a "true friend" to Sam Schepps and Harry Vallon and had interceded for them with the district attorney.

Throughout, Rose declared that he had no motive of his own for killing Rosenthal, but had acted solely at Becker's direction. Time and again Mr. McIntyre, Becker's lawyer, quoted alleged conversations between Rose and men of the underworld, apparently in an attempt to prove that Rose himself desired the gambler's death.

"No such conversations ever occurred" was his stock reply to these questions.

"But you were Becker's graft collector—so you say?"

"I was."

BATTLE WITH BURGLAR

Brothers Badly Injured During Struggle In the Dark

Boston, Oct. 14.—After a desperate struggle in the dark rooms and hallway of his home, 65 Copeland street, last night, Herman Stahl, finally assisted by his brother and neighbors, overpowered an armed burglar, but only after the two Stahls were badly injured.

The fight with the burglar extended from the parlor of the house through the front hall and out onto the piazza. Along the course of the struggle furniture was overturned and everything splashed with the blood of the wounded men.

The burglar gave the name of John Ashley, and his age as 40. Besides a big automatic revolver he had a bunch of skeleton keys, a flash lamp and two knives. The gun was loaded. A telephone call brought the police.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

MOCK POULTRY.

WHEN poultry is high other meats may be prepared to imitate the various fowls.

Veal is used for preparing mock pigeons, mock goose and mock duck. Mock duck is sometimes made with calf's heart instead of with beefsteak, as in the instance given here.

Excellent Counterfeits.

Mock Pigeon.—Take the bone from two fillets of veal. Flatten them and spread with a forcemeat made with seasoned bread crumbs. Roll these up and bind into oblongs with strings. Bake for two hours in a covered dripping pan with two cupfuls of water. When done season the gravy with pepper, salt and tomato ketchup. Thicken with browned flour. Pour part of the gravy over the meat and serve the rest in a gravy boat.

Mock Goose.—Take the bones from a good sized piece of breast of veal. Trim it and lay it on a board. Cover it thickly with a sage and onion dressing, roll tightly and bind with tape to keep it in shape. It may then be baked in a good oven. A good deal of basting will be necessary. Send it to the table very hot, with a good brown gravy and apple sauce in a separate tureen. The time for cooking the goose will depend on its size.

Fowl With a Difference.

Mock Chicken.—Cut a piece of veal into pieces and place in an enameled saucepan with a tablespoonful of butter. Let it cook until seared on every side. Then add enough water to almost cover. Simmer till nearly done and add dumplings made as follows:

Sift one heaping cup of flour with a heaping teaspoonful of baking powder and a pinch of salt. Add just enough water to make a stiff batter. Drop from the spoon, cover tightly and let boil fifteen minutes. Thicken the gravy after removing dumplings and serve.

Mock Duck.—Round steak is required for this. To make the stuffing for the imitation duck proceed as follows: Take one-half loaf of bread, soaked and minced fine; one onion cut fine, a sprinkle of sage and thyme, salt and pepper and one-half teaspoonful of baking powder and a piece of butter. Mix well and spread on round steak, roll and tie; put in pan and bake with one-half cupful of water and several bits of butter. Place the potatoes in a pan around the duck. Baste well when baking.

CATTLEMAN KIDNAPPED

Mexican Rebels Take Wealthy American From a Train

El Paso, Tex., Oct. 14.—Rebels late last evening held up a passenger train 150 miles south of this point, on the border, rifled the mail and express car and kidnapped John T. Cameron, a wealthy stock broker of El Paso. The train was allowed to proceed south.

Cameron was on his way to purchase cattle to be imported into the United States. A Mexican passenger also was held by the rebels, who molested no others, according to the report.

Aside from the destruction of many trestles on the Mexican Northwestern railroad, a train of twenty-four cars of choice lumber, destined for the United States, was burned. The loss of the lumber train is estimated at more than $50,000.

Federal troops continue to offer no protection to the railway, remaining in the larger towns, say passengers arriving here.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Sales, $74,400.00
Tolls, $13.50

"I had a cargo of grain to sell and started to call on customers in western Maine and New Hampshire. Being unable to make suitable railroad connections, I decided to telephone some of my customers. This experiment proved so satisfactory that I continued selling by telephone.

"In two days I had made 38 toll calls from Portland. Result: sale of 126 cars of grain worth $74,400.00. The toll charges amounted to $13.50."

This is a bona-fide statement.

Have you looked at the telephone on your desk and ruminated: "I wonder if you couldn't help me in my business?"

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Mrs. Keziah Coffin, supposed widow, is arranging to move from Trumet to Boston, following the death of her brother, for whom she had kept house. Grace Van Horne, ward of Capt. Eben Hammond, leader of the "Come-outer" religious sect, offers to assist her financially if she will remain. She declines. Kyan Pepper, widower, offers marriage, and is indignantly refused.

CHAPTER II—Capt. Elkanah Daniels, leader of the Regular church, offers Keziah a place as housekeeper for the new minister, and she decides to remain in Trumet.

CHAPTER III—Keziah takes charge of Rev. John Ellery, the new minister, and gives him advice as to his conduct toward members of the parish. Ellery causes a sensation by attending a "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER IV—Ellery's presence is bitterly resented by Eben Hammond, leader of the meeting. Grace apologizes for her guardian and Ellery escorts her home in the rain. Capt. Nat Hammond, Eben's son, becomes a hero by bringing the packet into port safely through fog and storm. Ellery finds Keziah writing a letter to some one, inclosing money in response to a demand. She is curiously startled when informed of the arrival of Nat.

CHAPTER V—Nat calls on Keziah, and it develops that they have been lovers since youth. Daniels remonstrates with Ellery for attending "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER VI—Ellery is caught by the tide and is rescued by Nat. They become friends.

CHAPTER VII—Ellery meets Grace while walking in the fields Sunday, and learns that she walks there every Sunday.

CHAPTER VIII—The clergyman takes dinner Sundays with the Daniels. Annabel, the captain's daughter, exerts herself to make an impression on him. She notices with vexation his desire to get away every Sunday at a certain time. She watches him through a spy glass.

CHAPTER IX—Nat again importunes Keziah to marry him. He says he has had a quarrel with his father, who wants him to marry Grace.

CHAPTER X—Ellery asks Grace to marry him. She confesses that she loves him, but says she fears to displease her guardian, who has been very kind to her, and asks time to think about it. Elkanah Daniels tells Eben about the meetings between Ellery and Grace. Eben declares he will make Grace choose between him and the preacher. Grace finds him in a faint, following the excitement of Elkanah's visit.

CHAPTER XI—Just before he dies Eben exacts a promise from Nat and Grace that they will marry.

CHAPTER XII—Keziah breaks the news to Ellery and later he receives a note from Grace saying she is to marry Nat, and asking him not to try to see her again. Keziah tells the story of her own marriage with a man who turned out to be a good-for-nothing, and who was reported to have been lost at sea, and of her love for Nat, whom she cannot marry because the husband is alive. Ellery sees in the story a lesson in devotion to duty and decides to remain and attend to his duties.

CHAPTER XIII—Captain Nat sails for Manila, to be gone two years. He says he and Grace have decided not to marry until he returns.

CHAPTER XIV—Nat is overdue, and it is feared that he has been lost at sea. Keziah gets a letter from her husband saying he is coming back. Grace goes on a visit to relatives of the Hammonds.

CHAPTER XV—A vessel flying distress signals is discovered off the coast. Ellery goes with party to board the vessel. A man is found suffering from smallpox, the rest of the crew having deserted.

CHAPTER XVI—He is taken to an abandoned shack on shore and Ellery helps nurse him. Before he dies it is discovered that he is Keziah's husband. Ellery, left alone in quarantine, is found wandering in a delirious condition by Grace. She takes him back to the shanty and sends for help.

Thursday was a perfect day, and the reception committee was on hand and waiting in front of the Bayport post office. The special carriage, the span brushed and curried until their coats glistened in the sunshine, was drawn up beside the platform. The horses had little flags fastened to their bridles, and there were other and larger flags on each side of the dashboard. Captain Daniels, imposing in his Sunday raiment, high-collared coat, stock, silk hat and gold-headed cane, sat stiffly erect on the seat in the rear. The other carriages were alongside, among them Captain Zebedee Mayo's ancient chaise, the white horse sound asleep between the shafts. Captain Zeb had not been invited to join the escort, but had joined it without an invitation. Kyan Pepper was there also, not yet fully recovered from the surprise which Lavinia's gracious permission had given him.

"Here she comes!" shouted Ezra Simmons, the postmaster. "Right on time, too."

Sure enough! A cloud of dust in the distance, rising on the spring wind, and the rattle of rapidly turning wheels. The reception committee prepared for action. Captain Elkanah descended from the cariage and moved in stately dignity to the front of the post office platform.

The stage, its four horses at a trot, swung up to the platform.

"Hurrah!" shouted the committee, its uninvited guests and the accompanying crowd of Bayport men and boys which had gathered to assist in the welcome. "Hurrah!"

A passenger or two peered from the coach window. The stage driver ironically touched his cap.

"Thank ye," he said. "Thank ye very much."

Captain Elkanah frowned his disapproval.

"We are cheering Cap'n Nathaniel Hammond of Trumet," he explained haughtily. "We are here to meet him and escort him home. Where is he? Where's Cap'n Hammond?"

"Well, now, I'll tell ye; I don't know where he is."

"You don't? Isn't he with you?"

"No, he ain't. And he didn't come

"Doctor, You Leave This to Me."

on the train, nuther. He was on it The conductor told me he see him and set along with him between stations as fur as Cohasset narrows. But after that he never see hide nor hair of him. Oh, that's so! Here's the mail bag, Ezry."

Captain Zeb stepped beside the stage and put one foot on the wheel.

"Say, That," he whispered, "is that all you know? Where did he go to?"

"Well," the driver's voice dropped lower. "Well," he whispered, "I did hear this much. A chap I know was on the train and he said he see Cap'n Nat get off the cars at the Cohasset Narrows depot and there was a woman with him."

"A woman? A woman? What woman?"

"Blessed if I knew! And he didn't nuther. So long! Git dap!"

The reception committee and its escort drove slowly back to Trumet The Daniels following was disgusted and disappointed.

Trumet spent that evening wondering what had become of Nat Hammond. Captain Zeb Mayo wondered most of all. Yet his wonderment was accompanied by vague suspicions of the truth. And, at eleven o'clock when the village was in bed, a horse and buggy moved down the Turn-off and stopped before the Hammond gate. A man alighted from the buggy and walked briskly up to the side door. There he knocked and then whistled shrilly.

A window overhead was opened.

"Who is it?" asked a feminine voice.

"Don't be frightened, Gracie," replied the man at the door. "It's me—Nat. I've come home again."

CHAPTER XIX.

In Which the Minister Receives a Letter.

John Ellery was uneasy. Physically he was very much better, so much better that he was permitted to sit up a while each day. But mentally he was disturbed and excited, exactly the condition which the doctor said he must not be in. Keziah and Grace had gone away and left him, and he could not understand why.

Mrs. Higgins, Ike's mother, was at the shanty and she did her best to soothe and quiet him. She was a kind soul and capable, in her way, but she could not answer his questions satisfactorily.

He rose from the chair and started toward the living room. He would not be put off again. He would be answered. His hand was on the latch of the door when that door was opened. Dr. Parker came in.

The doctor was smiling broadly. His ruddy face was actually beaming. He held out his hand, seized the minister's, and shook it.

"Good morning, Mr. Ellery," he said. "It's a glorious day. Yes, sir, a bully day. Hey? isn't it?"

Ellery's answer was a question.

"Doctor," he said, "why have Mrs. Coffin and—and Miss Van Horne gone? Has anything happened? I know something has, and you must tell me what. Don't try to put me off or give me evasive answers. I want to know why they have gone."

Parker looked at him keenly. "Humph!" he grunted. "I'll have to get into Mrs. Higgins's wig. You sit still. No, I'm not going to tell you anything. You sit where you are and maybe the news'll come to you. If you move it won't. Going to obey orders? Good! I'll see you by and by, Mr. Ellery."

He walked out of the room. It seemed to Ellery that he sat in that chair for ten thousand years before the door again opened. And then——

"Grace!" he cried. "O Grace! you—you've come back."

She was blushing red, her face was radiant with quiet happiness, but her eyes were moist. She crossed the room, bent over and kissed him on the forehead.

"Yes, John," she said; "I've come back. Yes, dear, I've come back to—to you."

Outside the shanty, on the side farthest from the light and its group of buildings, the doctor and Captain Nat Hammond were talking with Mrs. Higgins. The latter was wildly excited and bubbling with joy.

"It's splendid!" she exclaimed. "It's almost too fine to believe. Now we'll keep our minister, won't we?"

Mrs. Higgins turned to Captain Nat. "It's kind of hard for you, Nat," she added. "But it's awful noble and self-sacrificin' and everybody'll say so. Of course there wouldn't be much satisfaction in havin' a wife you knew cared more for another man. But still it's awful noble of you to give her up."

The captain looked at the doctor and laughed quietly.

"Don't let my nobility weigh on your mind, Mrs. Higgins," he said. "I'd made up my mind to do this very thing afore ever I got back to Trumet. That is, if Gracie was willin'. And when I found she was not only willin' but joyful, I—well, I decided to offer up the sacrifice right off."

"You did? You did? Why, how you talk! I never heard of such a thing in my born days."

"Oh, well, I— What is it, Grace?"

She was standing in the doorway and beckoning to him. Her cheeks were crimson, the breeze was tossing her hair about her forehead, and she made a picture that even the practical, unromantic doctor appreciated.

The captain went to meet her.

"What is it?" he asked.

"Nat," she whispered, "will you come in? He wants to see you."

To the credit of the multitudes in the parade and on the streets and sidewalks there was not an unseemly, an undignified, or an unlawful act during the parade, or before the parade, or during the entire day.

QUINCY HIGH OUTCLASSED

Medford Walloped Them to the Tune of 56 to 0

SOME DISGRUNTLED

Quincy High was completely outclassed Columbus Day and were beaten 56 to 0 by Medford High at Medford.

The Quincy men showed a lack of spirit and some didn't know the signals.

Some of the players stated Sunday that they would not continue playing their head off when others on the team didn't care whether the whistle ever blew. They were sore in mind and body.

The railroads are to take the initfative. They will drain the meadows and lease them to truck farmers.—Taunton Herald.

FELL FROM ROOF TO HIS DEATH

John F. McKenna Slipped From Roof of Building

FRACTURING HIS SKULL

The body of John F. McKenna who died as a result of a fall from the roof of a house on Walnut street Saturday was taken to the home of his sister, Mrs. Thomas Donovan, Sumner terrace, Sunday afternoon. Mr. McKenna was helping a friend shingle his house, missed his footing, fell and struck squarely on his head on reaching the ground 20 feet below.

The accident occured early Saturday afternoon. He was taken to the Quincy City Hospital in the police ambulance where he died from a fractured skull. While at the hospital he recovered consciousness and was able to recognize Rev. Fr. James F. McNiff of the Sacred Heart church, Atlantic.

Mr. McKenna was unmarried and boarded at 79 West Squantum street. He was an iron moulder by trade and worked at the Fore River yard. He was a member of the Fire Department for many years.

GOOD TIME AT WEST QUINCY

Ave Maria, K. of C. Entertained Ladies

Columbus day was fittingly observed by Ave Maria Council, Knights of Columbus of West Quincy by a dancing party at St. Mary's hall, from 8 to 12 o'clock. The party was very largely attended and was most enjoyable in every way. The floor was in charge of Grand Knight Charles J. McGilvray, Lee Garrity, Councilman, John J. Mahoney, James Geory, Thomas Shortle and Edward Monahan. Light refreshments were served during a brief intermission.

LEARNING TO GRAFT.

(Apologies to Kipling.)

I've taken my graft where I've found it
(I've grafted a bit in my time,
And critics all said I was subtle—
I fancied my methods were prime.)
But yester-week, summering idly,
By Erie's wild turbulent hem,
I mixed with the genus called "natives"
And I learned about grafting from them.

My landlady, she was a winner,
My chamber looked out on a shed,
The mattress she stuffed with some corncobs,
And this she declared was a "bed."
She gorged me with prunes and bread pudding,
For this she got under my fur.
By taxing me forty-six fifty,
And I learned about grafting from her.

The "farm hand" who took my valises
He soaked me an extra four bits;
The "girl" and the "chore boy" and "bus man"
Were there with the open faced mitts;
As I said at the start I have grafted
By ways that were smooth, but—ahem!
Believe me, I've only been piking—
I learned about grafting from them.
—Buffalo News.

Sydney Smith's Sharp Tongue.

Sydney Smith was at a party one evening when, seeing Mrs. Grote, wife of the historian, enter, wearing a rose colored turban, he suddenly exclaimed, "I now know the meaning of the word grotesque!" He professed his cordial liking for both her and her husband, saying: "I like them. I like him, he is so ladylike, and I like her, she's such a perfect gentleman."

THREE PROFITABLE STORIES.

How the Shrewd Peasant Saved His Cow's Skin—The Lamb Does a Favor For the Fox and Goat—The Wise King and the Steep Hill.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.]

ONE day the peasant found his cow dead in the field, and his lamentations soon brought the lion, the bear, the wolf, the hyena and the jackal around him to offer consolation. Each one of them had observed that it was too, too bad, and that he stood ready to render any assistance in his power, when the peasant ceased his wailing and remarked:

"Although my cow is dead and the loss is great, I must bestir me to save her hide. By selling that I can somewhat reduce my loss."

The various animals licked their chops and agreed with him, and he looked around and continued:

"I shall have to go to my hut for my knife, and meanwhile which of you shall I leave in charge of the carcass?"

The lion at once called attention to his well known record of honesty and good faith, and he was followed by all the others in turn, and when the last had spoken the peasant said:

"Since you are all so honest it would be invidious to select a single one over the others. I will therefore leave the whole lot of you in charge."

This he did, and upon his return found things as he had left them. Every beast cried out its faithfulness and demanded its recognition, but as the peasant flourished his knife and made ready for work he said:

"Had there been one of you the carcass would have been eaten and the hide rendered worthless before my return. It was in watching each other that you were compelled to be honest, and therefore none deserves reward."

Moral.—The peasant might have let them quarrel over the tail and the horns, but it's a sure thing that the man who is watched most closely is the most honest.

Locating Himself.

The telephone girl in a certain New York hotel answered a queer call over the house exchange the other morning about 11 o'clock. When she "plugged in" a man's voice said: "Hello! Is this the So-and-so hotel?"

"No," replied the girl, who was slightly surprised. "This is Such-and-such hotel."

"Oh, all right!" said the man. "Just woke up and didn't know where I was."—New York Telephone Review.

Bedient, a Youngster, Pitches Red Sox to Victory

NEW HERO OF WORLD'S SERIES

Starts Off Wild, but Pulls Himself Together After First Two Innings—Mathewson Up to Standard After Opponents Tally Two In Third Inning—How Game Was Won

Boston, Oct. 14.—In a contest between Christy Mathewson, the veteran, and a stripling serving his novitiate in a world's series contest and with but one years' experience in a major league, the Goliath of the National league sustained defeat at the hands of the Red Sox David. And into the limelight where world's series heroes dwell, where the baseball chroniclers are preparing a niche for the achievements of Joe Wood, Hugh Bedient forged his way.

Bedient, rushed into the fray as an experiment, slowed down the Giant attack to a three-hit speed, baffled them at every turn and but for the low left-field fence that gave Merkle a two bagger and a neat boot by Larry Gardner, would have strung a line of goose eggs across against the McGraw record.

It was by all odds the finest game of the great series, New York giving its boxman grand support, while Bedient forced his opponents to give the simplest kind of fielding chances to the men behind him. No fewer than fifteen flies were pulled out of the air, Bedient's speed and change of pace being baffling to the extreme.

Boston's five hits were sent like rifle shots over the field, all in the first three innings. Then the old classic settled down to a fine line of boxwork.

Mathewson was never in a hole, and he disposed of the next seventeen men in succession, no Boston man being clever enough to work his way to first after Speaker had found the bag in the third on Doyle's miscue.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON

The Red Sox fully appreciated that "Matty" had his large assortment of shoots, waves and curves working to perfection, and it was up to them to hold their lead.

Bedient started off very wild, passing the first man up in the first two innings. Each time, however, he pulled himself together in masterly style, in the first being helped out by a double play and in the second by forcing easy flies with a man worked to second.

How Game Was Won

The winning of the game was simplicity itself. Hooper, the first man up in the third, waited for the proper ball and then, surprisingly enough, slanted it off along the third base line and up into the far corner back of the third base stands. Yerkes followed almost instantly with the second triple, a hard smash into left centre. Then Speaker hit through Doyle, and Yerkes scored and Speaker rushed into an out at second base in a wild effort to increase the worth of his bang. To hold such an advantage Yerkes and Speaker each turned in great fielding plays, but for the most part Bedient did not call heavily upon his support, and there were few hair raising plays.

The scant margin kept the crowd on edge, as it has been, for that matter, since the first game, and when the Giants grabbed their run in the seventh the excitement rose to the fever pitch and to raucous pandemonium. No hotter fight ever graced a diamond. It was not so bitter, perhaps, as some of the looser contests, but it only lacked this bitterness because there were few runners on the cushions, and, therefore, little chance for personal contact.

It was a wonderful crowd that saw Bedient and Hooper and Yerkes come through with the stuff that heroes are made of. More than 34,000 crammed the park. Lowering skies and thick mist could not keep them away. The holiday gave them the opportunity to be on deck early, and long before the practice of the clubs had started the bleachers were crushed and the standing room behind the short fence was beginning to fill up.

On today's battle the hopes of McGraw rest. Defeat today for the Giants means that the war correspondents will pack up their grips tonight, while the world's championship fight of 1912 will pass into history.

PLAY IN NEW YORK TO-DAY

Even Giant Partisans Admit Red Sox Have Decided Advantage

New York, Oct. 14.—With the count three to one, the Giants are "in the hole." The most enthusiastic New York partisan admits today that the Red Sox have decidedly the better prospects of winning the world's baseball championship for 1912.

Some of the weakkneed "fans" have already given up hope and are now ready to concede the superiority of the American league players in the most sensational and most bitterly contested fight for world honors that baseball has ever known.

It is not so with the Giants, however. Every individual connected with the club is grimly determined to fight until the last man is out in the ninth inning of the contest which will decide the championship.

Of course, today's game at the Polo grounds may decide it all. Provided the Red Sox win, there is no more to be said.

The Giants rested in this city Sunday from the effects of a desperate week of battling with their rivals, in which they won but one out of five games, tying another in an eleven inning struggle and losing three by the closest of margins.

The Red Sox came to New York late yesterday afternoon, so as to get the benefit of a night's rest in preparation for the contest today.

All records for attendance and for the amount to be distributed among the players, clubs and the national commission have been eclipsed so far. The sum of $336,483 has been received from a total of 171,687 persons who have seen the five games already played.

Of this amount the players will divide $147,571.70. As the players share only in the receipts of the first four games played, all the remaining admission money will go to the club owners and the national commission.

The Moon's Offspring.

Looking out of the window one evening, little Marie saw the bright full moon in the eastern sky and apparently only a few inches from it the beautiful Jupiter, shining almost as brightly as the moon itself. Marie gazed intently at the spectacle for a moment and then, turning to her mother, exclaimed:

"Oh, mother, look! The moon has laid an egg!"—New York Press.

GAME ENDED IN A SCRAP

Visitor Slugged the Referee and and the Battle Was On

A free for all fight finished the football game between the Cunningham gym and the Chelsea Y. M. C. A., at East Milton, Columbus day afternoon. The fight started when one of the visiting players slugged the referee, who was a Milton man. The mixup was general on the part of the players. The management of the Chelsea team stated afterward that he regretted the scrap and a game will probably be arranged in the near future.

LARGEST GUARANTEED CIRCULATION IN THE CITY

Vol. 27 No. 241 QUINCY, MASS., TUESDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 15, 1912 PRICE TWO CENTS

PROBLEMS WHICH THE HIGH SCHOOL IS DAILY MEETING

Tendency of the Present Day Is to Do Little Work and Get By In Some Way

Boys Cannot Be Censured When Men Set An Example

At the first monthly meeting of the season held by the Wollaston Parents' Teachers' Association in the school hall, Monday evening, Ernest L. Collins, headmaster of the Quincy High School discussed "Some problems of the High School."

Eugene H. Sprague, the new president, presided and vocal solos by Mrs. Herbert Y. Follett accompanied by her daughter Miss Katherine Follett were enjoyed.

The matter of servering connection with the national organization was brought up and after discussion it was voted to continue as a member. It was decided to keep the meeting date of years past.

Mrs. William E. Rowe and Mrs. A. N. Barstow were appointed delegates to the Congress of Mothers at Greenfield. Attention was called to the concert to be held in the school October 29th the proceeds to purchase a piano for the lower grades.

"The custom of the present day" said Headmaster Collins, "seems to be to criticise the High School in all directions. I want to show you some of the problems many of which the high school is meeting.

"The greatest problem is to put the scholar to work and keep him at work. The tendency of the present day is to do as little work as possible. To 'just get by.' To find easy courses. I suspect it is the same thing as we find in the world—a desire to get something for nothing.

"The stock questions are 'Am I passing?' How close am I passing?' Not 'can I do better?' 'Am I improving?' One reason for this is the system of credits, the pupil needing a certain number to get through.

"Another reason is the desire on the parents part that the pupil have an easy time. They look back on the hard childhood of their own and do not want their child to have a similar one.

"Parents also discourage work in the pupils by allowing them too much social activity. While the social side bothers the girls the athletic side bothers the boys."

Mr. Collins related incidents showing the hold the present world's series had upon the male population. "When business men who ought to know better," he said, go perfectly wild over the Giants and Red Sox can we blame the boy for getting a litle crazy over sports?

"As a result their studies and lessons go to the winds and heavy pressure is needed to bring them back to earth. I am a believer in sports but I regret they have such a hold on Americans that they crowd everything else out of consideration when at their highest point.

"Sports have their unhealthy side in the tendency to develop a few excellent athletes to whom the rest bow themselves, worship and support. This complicates sports and makes it harder to get work from the pupil.

"Another problem is the desire of the pupil to get into life too early. With this in view he is seeking short cuts and easy ways just to get into a vocation. It is not that the schools are not providing the proper courses that so many leave school young but because a job offers.

"Disorder in the High schol is another problem. Not actual misbehavior but an increasing lack of respect and courtesy. There are several causes for this.

"One rests with the parents who grow careless in demanding respect for authority. There is sometimes a desire to show off before the boy and he is an apt pupil. This leads to insolence and insubordination. Men are careless, the mothers are sometimes careless and this is brought out of the home by the children.

"Another cause is the way in which the present probation laws are operated. The present system interferes seriously with good order and authority. The boy is let off so many times he feels that after all authority doesn't amount to very much.

"Another and serious reason is that boys and girls sometimes go beyond their father and mother in education and training. When this point is reached it is the tendency of the father and mother to say 'you know more of the world than I, perhaps you'd better choose for yourself.' This leads to disorder and lack of respect of authority.

"It is a stock charge that the schools are fitting mostly for college. As a matter of fact of the 850 pupils in the High schol 200 are engaged in college, technical and normal school courses while the other 650 are in business and vocational studies.

"It is not a question of running to the extreme in college work. We are running to the extreme in vocational training and unless we call a halt we will swing over almost entirely to the shop.

"In vocational training we are providing only for the working hours and not for the leisure time that is rapidly increasing.

"A serious problem is the increasing prevalence in boys toward the use of tobacco. With few exceptions the boys who misbehave and the boys who do not do good work are tobacco users.

"These are not all cigarettes either. Tobacco in any form was not made for boys. It may not have been made for men but it surely was not made for boys. It is impossible for boys who use tobacco to conduct themselves and use their brains in the proper way.

"While high schools may be faulty in some ways they are not failures by any means. They are graduating a larger number of capable students than ever and in every instance the teachers are faithful to the last degree and doing the right as they see it."

ENDEAVORERS' CONFERENCE

East Norfolk Association In Session In Quincy

ATLANTIC GOT BANNER

Bi-monthly conference of the East Norfolk Christian Endeavorers was held at the First Presbyterian church, Monday evening, with a large attendance. Many Quincy ministers attended and gave short talks. Regular business was disposed of at an early hour.

The banner for the best attendance was awarded to the Atlantic Memorial Congregational church society.

Rev. J. A. Matheson opened the meeting with prayer, following which there was a duet by Mrs. Thomas Gammon and Everett Clark. The topic of the evening was "The society for Christ, the church and our opportunity." Charles Roach of Wollaston presided.

Rev. I. W. Sneath of the Wollaston Congregational, Rev. A. M. Thompson of the United Presbyterian and Rev. J. Lillback of the Finnish Congregational church responded to "The society for Christ."

"The church" was responded to by Rev. J. A. Mitchell of Braintree and Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott of the Bethany Congregational church.

Rev. J. H. Woodsum of East Milton and Rev. T. W. Davison of the Atlantic Memorial closed the session by responding to "Our Opportunity."

Announcement was made of the two meetings which are to follow; the Cabinet meeting on November 11 in the Wollaston Congregational church and the annual Union social which is to be held in Bethany church on December 9.

The music at the service Monday evening was in charge of the entertaining society.

Four young ladies of the Endeavor society served as ushers.

The church was beautifully decorated in red and white, the Christian Endeavor colors and in front of the pulpit was a large C. E.

In the contest for the banner this season the presence of the pastor is to be reckoned with and the society with its pastor present, will have a decided advantage. Monday evening, the Atlantic Memorial society with 92.5 per cent of its membership present was given 102.5 percent because its pastor was present.

ADVANCE SALE LOOKS GOOD

Popularity of the Y. M. C. A. Lyceum Course Assured

The advance sale for the Lyceum course which the Y. M. C. A., is planning to conduct this season has far exceeded the expectations of the committee. This is particularly true in view of the fact it has been so long a time since Quincy has had such a course.

Those who have subscribed for tickets will have the opportunity on Wednesday evening, Oct. 23 at 7.30 o'clock at the Y. M. C. A. to select their seats for the season.

Within a few days a thorough canvass will be made of the city to sell tickets enough to ensure the success of the undertaking.

Everyone who is in any way familiar with the quality of the attractions offered realizes what a lot of enjoyment, instruction and satisfaction is wrapped up in the course.

It has been stated before, but the statement will bear repetition, that the course is conducted in no way as a money making affair. The association realizes it is hear to help the entire community in every way possible. The course is being attempted, therefore with the idea of elevating the tastes of the public.

The driver John West was immediately placed under arrest by officer Davis and brought back to court, where he was fined $10 for reckless driving.

HARRIS RECORD JOLTED SOME

He Voted Against the Injunction and Jury Bills

WHICH PASSED THE HOUSE

A largely attended rally in the interest of the Progressive party candidates was held at North Easton Monday evening, and Col. Henry L. Kincaide of this city was one of the speakers. Col. Kincaide explained how he was chosen the congressional nominee over Major Charles Williamson of Brockton, and also attacked the record of Congressman Robert O. Harris, the present incumbent.

Col. Kincaide roundly scored congressman Harris for his attitude on the bill which was opposed by only 15 members of the House, calling for a notice to all people who were to be affected by an injunction. He also said that Mr. Harris had not voted on the bill which was passed regulating the child labor measure and calling for an investigationn of conditions.

He explained how Congressman Harris dodged voting on the bill which was to eliminate the "phossy" jaw to which matchmakers are susceptible, and also said that he voted against a bill granting the right of trial by jury for contempt of court committed outside the court, and that the bill had passed 233 to 18, with Congressman Harris voting with the small opposition.

He denounced Congressmann Harris for voting against the bill to place sugar on the free list and help the wage earner save over $100,000,000 and then supporting the vetoe by President Taft of the wool schedule which was passed by the House to reduce the import duties of some of the necessities of life.

He emphatically said that Congressman Harris had not voted on the bill calling for a money trust investigation. A bill passed earlier in the session did not give the board of investigation sufficient power to go into all phases of the question and the present congressman evidently did not see the necessity of voting or was swayed by the rule of the machine and dodged the issue.

HELLO GIRLS IN THE DANCE

The Hello Girls of the Quincy telephone exchange will hold their second annual dance at Alpha Hall, December 2. All of the operators are making an effort to make the second as successful as the first annual.

A feature of the dance will be the latest "Hello" song, composed by a "Hello" girl, with plenty of "Hellos" in the words, and the "Hello" bells around the hall will help "Hello" the chorus.

Miss Helen Cronin, is the president and Miss Edith Barry, the vice president. The other officers are Miss Rita Kennedy, secretary; Miss Yvonne Bouchard, treasurer. Music will be by Hamiltons orchestra.

GOOD CHANCE FOR YOUNG MEN

Theoretical Naval Architecture to Be Taught

COURSE AT Y. M. C. A.

For the first time in this city, the Association Evening Trade School for Employed Men which is conducted by the Quincy Y. M. C. A. is offering a course in theoretical naval architecture, with the especial intention of giving the vast number of employed men at the Fore River plant the opportunity of studying the elements of shipbuilding.

Colin Bartlett, Associate I. N. A. of the English Royal Naval College, Greenwich, London, has been secured to instruct the students. The course will consist of 40 lessons at the building on Tuesday and Friday evenings.

The course is very comprehensive and embodies the explanation of the calculations which are generally necessary. They include those for areas, volumes, weights, displacements, centres of buoyancy and gravity, metacentric heights, moments of inertia, strength of butts and connections, statical and dynamical stability, strains experienced by ships; launching calculations, curves of lead, shearing force and bending moment.

The course will also contain an elementary treatment of the resistance of ships and of the general problems that confront a ship designer.

The subjects can be readily adapted by men who have only an ordinary education and who have not been able to pursue a college course along similar lines. The training will enable a man to better his condition and acquaint him with the fundamental principles of naval architecture, thereby increasing his value to his employer and making it possible to secure remunerative positions that demand responsibility.

DOCK PARSON TIED THE KNOT

Rashleigh was Waiting on the Pier for His English Bride

After coming to America from England and being fortunate enought to make it possible to marry his sweetheart, John Rashleigh of 288 Centre street met Miss Emily Frances Curtis Kitto after the S. S. Laconia docked at East Boston Thursday and both were married by James A. Burns, the "Parson" of the dock.

The ceremony was performed with the hustle and bustle scenes attending the arrival of all large ships. The bride left her homeland October 4 and when she left the ship John Rashleigh was awaiting her. Their future home will be on Trafford stret where they will welcome their friends.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

If the coal prices are to drop again to normal in a few weeks, what was the occasion for raising the price in Boston?

Gen. Miles, a life long Republican is credited with saying that Taft could not be elected and the only way to escape from a "Dictator or Despotism" was to vote for Wilson. Strange as it may seem a good many thinking people incline to that doctrine.

All seems quiet again on the Merrimac about Lawrence.

It is a shattered dove of peace that is flying over the Balkans, with tears in its eyes and both claws doubled up.

Judge Goff of New York is retaining his reputation and at the same time raising the standard of respect for judges and courts all over the country.

What's the matter with the High school football team? It is to be hoped there is no disgruntlement thus early in the season.

Quincy's aspirants for thespian honors have commenced to tread the boards.

Election day only three weeks away. The election periods with torchlight parades, broken heads and the like are things of the past.

Lowell plans to tax the companies $5 for every telegraph pole set up in the streets. As the companies decline to settle the courts will have rather a nice question to settle.

Mr. Shaw will be on deck again, tomorrow. Thus far he has escaped the usual attention accorded men in the limelight, that of receiving threatening letters.

It seems about time for that Kissle machine to be streaming through City Square.

Oscar Hammerstein clings to Grand Opera with marvelous persistency despite the fact that it has been a losing game for him.

A new $20 counterfeit has been discovered. Newspaper men as a whole however are not overrunning their role to see if they have been bit. Small chance of such a calamity to them.

Speaking of worshiping the golden calf, have you tried to buy any veal cutlets lately?

Philadelphia is to try getting its policemen from the country towns. London adopted the plan long ago and it has worked well.

Some ultimate consumers perceiving that beef on the hoof is all a hundred, are planning to let it remain on the hoof and see if that will help any.

Still they come. An actress has come out and declared women's feet are deformed. Any shoe dealer could have furnished more accurate and first evidence on that subject.

The lure of the Orient was on that crew of the British steamer who wanted to visit China town. But they were denied the privilege.

Chicago has taken a forward movement. All rag time and crazy dances are to be barred in the dance halls.

A mule at a Roxbury fire kicked himself to freedom and aided a horse in the same direction. One can never again say that there is not some virtue in the "kick of a mule."

Roosevelt has a sore throat. Pepper applications for certain tongues have been in use for ages.

Governor Foss has taken the stump and there will be more "old boys," than one can shake a stick at this week.

Harvard students are to taboo evening duds and silk stockings in the spirit of economy.

Mrs. Nick Longworth is credited with being economical. The poor woman had 1500 pairs of gloves cleaned at 5 per. Any one would give a bargain day on that number.

THOSE THREATS.

Counsel and others in any way mixed up in the big cases which have claimed the attention of the country the past few months have been annoyed to a great extent by threatening letters, foretelling all sorts of dire vengeance in case of success or failure according to the views of the writer.

Undoubtedly the postal authorities have taken up some of these matters and are investigating them with a view of bringing the guilty parties to justice.

This is a mean and most contemptible manner of trying to intimidate people and try to prevent them from doing their duty.

No matter how guilty the public sentiment may incline to the belief regarding a criminal, the offender is presumed to be innocent until he is proven guilty and a fair and honest trial should be accorded all offenders, otherwise no protection would be afforded innocent men who might be unfortunate enough to be apprehended owing to a combination of circumstances.

Attorneys employed by those defendants are only pursuing their vocation. It is their duty to labor for the interests of their client and in performing this duty, they should not be handicapped by the crazy threats of irresponsibles or the more pronounced and deep rooted threats of those who firmly believe in what they write and propose to carry out their plans, however murderous in case the trial does not go to their liking. The hailing into court of a few of this class with the attendant punishment they so richly deserve would tend to check ambition in this direction.

THE CROWD FAIR.

Much as the base ball enthusiasts of Boston must have been worked up during the present trying world's series, it must be said to their credit that they have been eminently fair in their treatment of visiting spectators and visiting players.

This is as it should be. While partisanship is all right along fair and honorable lines, the role of host should never be forgotten. Boston has long been booked as a base ball city and its reputation for fairness has gone broadcast. In the present trying situation the fans have not fallen below the high standard set. They have been quick to respond with generous applause when the New York players have made good plays.

They recognized the true worth of Mathewson, the veteran but unlucky pitcher when he came to the bat. The crowd have not been unfair. In New York fans were just as ready to show their appreciation of Wood.

This good feeling can only help to make the greatest sport in the world better.

Nothing can be gained by unreasonable manifestation towards players on one side or the other.

Appreciation of good work by members of either team, can only aid in keeping the game at its present high place in the hearts of the American people.

PRAISED BY PASTOR.

Rev. Herbert S. Johnson of the Warren avenue Baptist church, took "Smokey" Joe Wood, the Red Sox pitcher for the subject of his Sunday discourse. He pointed out that the young man by his clean living set an example for the youth of this country. The preacher said Wood was a hero and better known than Mayor Fitzgerald, which is going some for the mayor has been in the lime light for some time, jumping from one end of the country to the other in jig time while the citizens of Boston are paying him a salary as chief executive. "He is doing more good than many ministers," (meaning Wood, not the mayor,) said the pastor. "He is cheering up thousands of working men. I am pleased that 40,000 men can get their eye, on Wood and others of the team."

Probably a great many more than 40,000 can get their eyes on the ball players at this time, but not quite that number can see them in action unless they have the wherewithal. And if any one says that the working man can afford, from $1 to $3 to see a base ball game he is wandering in the land of fiction.

Undoubtedly Joe Wood by his example has stood the test. His clean life is an example well worth following because it makes of success. But if as the minister claims Wood is keeping men from the insane asylum to which they would otherwise be

CUSHING CALLS TURN ON BIRD

Note of Fear for G. O. P. Sounded In His Letter

OF DEMOCRATIC LEGISLATURE

A frank admission that Bull Moose activities are likely to result in the election of a Democratic Legislature was contained in a letter sent by Speaker Cushing to Charles S. Bird, Progressive nominee for Governor.

In the leter, Cushing asked Bird to use his influence to secure the withdrawal of Progressive legislative candidates in those districts where an able Republican of known integrity is in the field.

Cushing wrote in part:

"I have read with interest your suggestion to Joseph Walker that he should withdraw in order to avoid the danger of turning the state over to Mayor Fitzgerald and his machine and your statement that if you were in his place you would do it. This statement of yours has led me to wonder whether you were familiar with the situation. Unless you withdraw I do not well see how, if the Legislature goes Democratic, you and the other leaders of the third party can avoid the responsibility of having turned the state Legislature bodily over to the Boston Democracy."

driven by nervous prostration from their work, there is a screw loose somewhere. There is more chance for many men to land in an insane asylum or be laid up because of nerves from following the world's base ball series. As to the Hero end, that seems somewhat overdrawn. The players and clubs are not posing as heroes, they are looking at those gate receipts.

DISCHARGED CURED.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

Perhaps some people may wonder why it is that we are called upon every year to help pay the running expenses of the Hospital, when there is a fairly large appropriation by the City for the purpose, and an endowment fund bringing in something, and a goodly number of paying patients.

As bearing on this question, an incident was related in a recent stirring hospital campaign in a city some hundreds of miles from Quincy.

A German machinist had hurt his eyes so badly that he was likely to lose his sight. He was alone in a strange land, trying to earn money enough to bring his wife and children over here from across the water. When they brought him to a doctor, all that he said was to murmur feebly "Ich habe nicht Gelt"—pathetic little words, which were, perhaps, an echo of the hard conditions that he and his fathers had known in a land where there was little health or hope for the sick man without money.

After assuring the sufferer in the welcome accents of his own language that he need not worry about money, the doctor made a short examination and ordered the patient to the Hospital. Once within the hospitable walls there came in quick succession the bath, the clean linen and the soft bed, and presently the examination of a well-known specialist, who soon announced that the eyes could doubtless be saved by proper treatment and careful nursing. It need not be said that those requisites were not wanting, and in due time the man was back at his bench again working for wife and children.

Now in the Hospital Report which the public see, the simple and modest statement of such a case would be "Discharged Cured." Words that do not move you especially until you know the story behind them—the generous kindness of the doctor, the splendid resources of a great Hospital, the indispensable services of a famous specialist, all given freely to save that poor man's eyes!

In the noble altruism of our times it is coming to be agreed more and more that the sick and wounded bodies of the poor must be cared for the same as those of the rich, pay or no pay: which means that the Hospital must have the unstinted support of every citizen in order to do its appointed work.

Remember how much it may mean when you read "Discharged Cured."

OUR NEIGHBORS OVER THE RIVER

Will Extend a Hospitable Greeting to Quincyites

Planning to make good along the lines of well established hospitality so characteristic of the people living in the Neponset Valley, the Neponset Brotherhood has invited a large number of guests to attend their fellowship gathering Wednesday evening, at which meeting the general topic, "Our Neighbor, the City of Quincy," will be discussed.

A notice advertising all of the program has been sent out on which the seal of the City of Quincy and the Adams Houses are conspicuously placed. Neponset claims friendship with her neighbor on the southerly side of the river because Quincy at one time was a part of their own Boston, and Squantum up to a shore time ago was known as Dorchester Farms.

A fine tribute is paid to historic Quincy on the poster which states that Quincy is a family name precious to every lover of American liberty, the birthplace of two Presidents, the home of John Hancock who signed the Declaration of Independance, the repository of granite with a golden value, the seat of learning and the centre of industrial life.

The following guests will be present: His Monor, Eugene R. Stone, Hon. John L. Miller of the School Board; Chief A. L. Litchfield, Chief Frank E. Burrell; President Charles C. Hearn and Secretary, John O. Hall of the Board of Trade. Representatives from all other industries will also attend.

The meeting is called for 7.45 in the Trinity Vestry, 51 Walnut street, Boston, Neponset district. Oliver S. Hayward is the president of the Brotherhood and Harry C. Dixon, chairman of Public affairs.

☞ Don't fail to read the Wednesday and Saturday Ledger and see what Irving L. Shaw has to say on City matters. His series of letters on, "What's the matter with Quincy?" is attracting wide spread attention and much favorable comment. tf

AMATEUR LEGISLATORS

Will Try Their Hand At Solving Problems of State

The election of officers of the Department of the General Court which has recently been organized by members of the Y. M. C. A. will be held Wednesday evening. The object of the court is the development of public speaking. The body will conduct its meeting along the lines of the House of Representatives rules and will discuss generally whatever is presented in the line of regular business. The membership of the court is limited.

FORWARD AND ONWARD.

The articles appearing each day in the Ledger about the Quincy Hospital are written and sent in for publication to help create an interest in the campaign next week to raise funds for the Hospital. While in sympathy with the movement and ready to assist in every way by opening our columns to the committee we do not stand sponsor for, or endorse some of the expressions used by the writer. We believe in fair play and think the way to forward any movement is to look ahead to what it is hoped to accomplished rather than backward. No good end is ever served by publicity to fancied or real grievances that are past and beyond repair. Let us have an optimistic, forward look and all work together for our Hospital.

☞The Ledger is to start a campaign this fall to double its circulation, and hopes to end the year with at least 10,000 daily circulation. Men or women of good standing can find pleasant employment at good pay soliciting subscriptions by applying at the Ledger Office.

WITH BULLET IN HIS BREAST

Roosevelt Delivers a Speech In Milwaukee Auditorium

SHOT BY A NEW YORK CRANK

Would-Be Assassin Thought to Be Mentally Unbalanced—Is Prevented From Firing Second Shot by One of the Colonel's Secretaries—Ex-President's Life Probably Saved by Bullet Striking Manuscript, Which Retarded Its Force—Jokes With Surgeons While on Operating Table

Milwaukee, Oct. 15.—Theodore Roosevelt was shot and slightly wounded last night as he was leaving the Gilpatrick hotel for the auditorium to make a speech. The wound was superficial and the colonel went on to the hall and began his speech after he had seen his assailant arrested and taken to the police station.

Henry F. Cochems seized the man, who refused to give his name, and held him until policemen came up. A mob surged around the prisoner, who apparently is mentally upset on the subject of Roosevelt's running for another term as president. The man admitted firing the shot, declaring that "any man looking for a third term ought to be shot."

In notes found in the man's pockets at the police station were statements that the man had been visited in a dream by the spirit of William McKinley, who had said, indicating Roosevelt, "This is my murderer; avenge my death."

Also in his pocket was a copy of Roosevelt's itinerary, written on a sheet of note paper taken from the Bismarck hotel and cafe, Nashville, Tenn.

The would-be assassin is 5 feet, 5 inches in height, weighs 170 pounds, light complexion, bald and fairly well dressed.

Manuscript Saves Life

Colonel Roosevelt's life probably was saved by a manuscript of the speech which he delivered last night. The bullet struck the manuscript, which retarded its force as it passed through into the flesh.

His assailant was prevented from firing a second shot by Albert A. Martin, one of Roosevelt's two secretaries. Roosevelt had just stepped into an automobile, when the would-be assassin pushed his way through the crowd in the street and fired. Martin, who was standing in the car with the colonel, leaped on to the man's shoulders and bore him to the ground.

Captain Girard of Milwaukee, who was on the front seat, jumped almost at the same time, and in an instant the man was overpowered and disarmed.

Cry of "Lynch Him"

A wild cry of "lynch him" went up. Roosevelt spoke to the people and told them to spare the man, who then was taken into the hotel and held there until he was removed to the police station.

In spite of the entreaties of physicians, Roosevelt insisted on delivering his address.

"I will make this speech or die, one or the other," he said.

Henry F. Cochems, one of the Wisconsin Progressive leaders, told the great crowd which had assembled in the auditorium that Roosevelt had been shot and asked the people to be calm.

The crowd was thrown almost into a panic by the announcement, but Roosevelt calmed the people by rising and assuring them that he was not badly hurt. Then he began his address. Several times he seemed to be growing weak, and members of his party rose to help him. He motioned them to sit down.

Injury Not Serious

It is believed Roosevelt's injury is not serious. The colonel felt no pain at the time the shot was fired and was not aware that he was shot until he was on the way to the auditorium. His attention was then called to a hole in his overcoat, and he found that his shirt was soaked with blood. He insisted he was not hurt badly. A superficial examination of the wound was made when he reached the auditorium and three physicians agreed that he was in no immediate danger.

Despite the protests of his physicians the colonel strode out of the dressing room and onto the stage. A large crowd packed into the building cheered loudly.

Goes on With Speech

"I'm going to ask you to be very quiet," said Roosevelt, "and please excuse me from making you a very long speech. I'll do the best I can but you see there is a bullet in my body. But it's nothing. I'm not hurt badly."

A sigh of relief went up from the crowd and then an outburst of tumultuous cheering. Thoroughly reassured by the colonel's action that he was in no serious danger, the people settled back into their seats to hear his speech.

Colonel Roosevelt began to speak in a firm voice, somewhat lower than its usual tone, and except that his characteristic gestures were less emphatic than usual there was nothing about the man to indicate his condition.

The colonel continued his speech evidently with increasing effort, but he succeeded in making himself heard, and talked for more than an hour. Then he was rushed to his automobile and flashed through the streets to the emergency hospital.

The operating room had been placed in readiness to receive Roosevelt, and six surgeons were awaiting his arrival.

Colonel Roosevelt was undressed and placed upon the operating table, although he insisted that he was not badly hurt and that the doctors were taking it too seriously.

Colonel Is Cheerful

An examination of the wound showed that it had been made by a bullet of large size. It entered the fleshy part of the right breast, half way between the collar bone and lower rib. The physicians found that they know no more after their examination than before as to the location of the bullet, and it was decided to send for an X-ray machine to determine to what depth the missile had penetrated. While he was waiting for the X-ray machine, Roosevelt sat up on the operating table and talked politics and joked with the physicians.

In the meantime, hidden away in an inner room in the police station, Roosevelt's assailant was being submitted to a rigid examination. He refused stubbornly to give an account himself, and would say nothing except, "I will tell you tomorrow."

After a long siege, however, the police forced from him the statement that was John Schrank of New York.

Clippings found in the man's pockets showed that he had studied Roosevelt's itinerary carefully, with the evident intention of selecting the places at which he might accomplish what he had in mind.

WEBBER AND FALLON BACK ROSE'S STORY

Murder Plot Corroboraled In Every Detail

New York, Oct. 15.—"Bald Jack" Rose's story of how Police Lieutenant Becker plotted the murder of Herman Rosenthal was corroborated on the witness stand by "Bridgie" Webber and Harry Vallon, self-confessed accomplices in the crime.

"Bridgie" Webber swore Becker had told him that on the night of the murder he would have killed Rosenthal himself had he seen Rosenthal.

Becker had told him, "Bridgie" said, that he had slowed down his automobile while passing the Hotel Cadillac on Broadway in case Rosenthal might be loitering there.

"If I had seen him I would have backed him up against the wall and shot him," Becker said, according to Webber.

Rose's testimony that Becker had demanded that Rosenthal be "croaked"; that he had given the gunmen assurances of protection and that he had said that he would have liked to "cut Rosenthal's tongue out and hang it up as a warning to future squealers," was corroborated by Webber almost word for word and Vallon supported him like an echo.

Both witnesses told their stories coolly and could not be shaken on cross-examination.

WOLLASTON M. E. CHURCH.

All the services at the Methodist church Sunday were well attended and full of interest. Rev. Wesley Wiggin the pastor, occupied the pulpit and preached on Christianity's Challenge to the World taking for his text "Believe for the very work's sake." He said in part:—"This is Christ's challenge to his age. It will stand the test of all ages. Jesus appeals to facts. The workman is judged by the work done.

"Considered from every standpoint possible; measured by the highest standard of merit and real worth; compared with all other religions of the past and present christianity outreaches them all in breadth of influence, in power to bring things to pass and to meet the needs of a human soul.

"Our Master was wise in His challenge. He knew men. He knew the different types of mind, the false teachers, the prejudices, the unbelief, the many systems of religion, therefore He says if ye cannot believe my words, believe for the very works sake.

"Suppose the christian faith should fail; suppose the Bible should be banished from our homes and from the land; suppose the christian religion should be given up what would be the result. It would be a dark day in history. Divine worship would cease, christian homes would be no more, and a mighty voice for good would be silenced.

"If the christian faith be false where shall we go, to whom shall we look for comfort and leadership? Shall we look to Mohammedism, or Buddhism, Mormanism, Socialism or Spiritualism, or Agnesticism, which ignores God, repudiates the Bible and denies the soul?

"But suppose christianity should succeed. Suppose the Bible should become the ethical standard of the world, suppose the golden rule should become the rule of action for all business activities and conduct for life.

"Christianity is moulding public opinion, shaping human life, directing human agencies. It transforms life and does for man what man cannot do for himself."

THE GOVERNOR'S COUP

How a Righteous Bill Was Forced Through the Legislature

The investigation of the means and ways employed in the election of a certain United States senator, with its muddle of exposures, plots and counterplots, has enabled the newspaper reading public to get an occasional glimpse of the parts that private detectives occasionally are asked to play in the politics of this country. There is a certain type of politician who is a good patron of a certain type of detective agency.

"Go out and get something on this guy," says the unscrupulous politician to the unscrupulous detective, handing him the name of a political opponent.

Then the unscrupulous detective, of which, unfortunately, there are so many in this country, proceeds in the most unscrupulous manner to "get something on" the man who is to be harmed. This is happening every day in this country. The Burns agency never took any such business, or, for that matter, any sort of business which was not entirely square and above-board. But we have been called into service in several political fights, and there is no more exciting detective work than when two groups of politicians begin to fight one another with the help of "investigators."

A young governor in a certain state which cannot be named had come into office on a reform ticket. The governor I will call Braden. The state of which he was the chief executive is one in which the manufacturing interests predominate, and up to the time of Braden's election these interests had controlled the statehouse and what went on there as completely as if it had been an annex to their business, which is just about what it was. Sometimes the state had a Republican governor, sometimes a Democrat; but it didn't make any difference. He was the manufacturers' governor before he had gone far in his term of office, and the same was true of the state legislature.

The state house here was situated at the top of a hill, from which a street car ran down to the business district of the town. At the foot of the hill, directly down from the main entrance of the statehouse, was a little old hotel. The top floor of this hotel was reserved year in and year out for the lobbyists of the interests. The state fancied that its affairs were administered from the noble structure on top of the hill; but everybody in politics or big business knew that the real capitol was down in the top floor of the old hotel at the foot of the hill. There probably had been millions of dollars paid out to crooked legislators in that old building. Certainly there had been more bills passed down there than on the floor of the house.

Naturally a state with its affairs administered in this fashion did not care much for the welfare of the common people. The factory laws of the state, for instance, were about the most backward in the country. They were all made and passed solely for the benefit of the manufacturers, which, of course, made them inimical to the interests of the workers. A manufacturer in this state could work a man, woman or child of any age under any conditions and for any number of hours; he was not liable for what happened to them in his shop. Wages consequently were low and conditions were bad for all the working people in the factories. They were getting the worst of it in every way, shape and manner; and so they woke up and made a fight and elected Braden governor.

Braden was a remarkable man. He was the son of parents who had ground out their lives in one of the big mills of the state. He had begun his own active existence as a boy in one of those same mills, beginning to work at eleven years of age. The mills didn't kill him, however. He was made of tough stuff, and at eighteen he was working his way through college and playing quarter-back on the football team. He came out of college and went into a little law office up the state. He was a brilliant lawyer and attracted the attention of the interests. They sent for him and made him one of their counsel. He put in five years at it, then he resigned to fight the same interests that he had worked for.

He settled down in one of the big mill towns and opened a small law office and let it be known that he would take any workingman's case, no matter what it was or how small the chance was of getting a fee. He admitted that he expected to come near starving at this game, and he did; but he made more friends than any other man in the state. He began to be the people's leader. He was forty-two when the people suddenly discovered that they wanted him for their governor, and into the statehouse he went, the sworn enemy of the interests that had run the state for years.

He carried into office with him enough reform legislators to give the interests a fright. Two of these representatives were Murray and Schoenlein, who were looked upon as the governor's first lieutenants in the fight for reform.

One of Braden's first acts brought on the inevitable fight between himself and the lobbyists. He introduced through one of his reform legislators a factory inspection bill, and before the lobbyists had fairly got their machinery of delay and suppression in working order the bill swept through both houses and was passed by a big margin. Next was announced the preparation of a child labor bill, and by that time the fight was one.

The lobbyists got their machinery going then. They opened their check books and went into action. They knew how the game was worked. Presently the reform legislators began to look less like reformers. One by one they began to admit that there might be some sense in the contention of the manufacturers that the passage of such a bill might deal the state an irreparable injury. One by one they began to hesitate. The first thing Braden knew he found himself face to face with a proposition like this: He had to get that child labor bill passed or admit that he had lost his legislature—and it didn't look as if he could do it.

That was the situation when the Burns agency was called in on the job. Braden numbered among his friends an old, retired politician who had read the signs with an experienced eye. Braden insisted on making his fight by calling on the people for support; but this old fox slyly slipped off to New York, and when he returned to the capitol I was on the same train with him, though in a different car.

"Braden will fight above decks," said he, "but we'll be down among the crew and get at the heart of the mutiny."

I went to the old hotel where the lobbyists had their headquarters and registered from a small town up the state.

"What's the latest thing about that fool child labor bill?" I asked the clerk casually as I signed the register. "Does that rube up at the top of the hill think he can put it over, or have we got him sewed up?"

The clerk grinned a little but said: "I don't know a thing about it, sir," and gave me a little wink.

"Good enough," I said, laughing. "I guess we've fixed his clock this time, all right."

I looked over the ground for three or four days, then I went to Braden's old friend and said:

"Is there a reform newspaper in any town in the state that you can get control of?"

"Why?" he asked.

"If there is, buy it," I said. "Buy it, and let me appear as the new owner, who is hanging around that hotel down there waiting for the interests to hand him his bit of coin before he begins his fight on the governor."

He sat and thought for a long time.

"Me boy," he said, at last, "that's a big idea you've got in your head, I do believe. Yes, there is a paper we can get control of. It will take $20,000, but I'm game if you can show me how the thing is going to work out."

"Well," I said, "I've got to get in with that bunch and get in right or there will be nothing doing. They're too wise and too old at the game to let any secrets slip except in their own bunch. I could stay there a year and be no wiser than I am now, unless I got in right. By playing the part of a crooked newspaper owner, willing to sell his soul for money, I'll be one of their own kind."

The paper in question was a small daily in a nearby town. It was in bad financial condition, and Braden's old friend soon raised the money for its purchase. I got a down and out newspaper man from New York to come out and take charge of it, and the day the ownership changed hands we came out with a front page editorial announcing a change of policy. Where before the paper had sought only to harm business—in a Pickwickian sense—and so to harm all classes, it was now going to help business all it could. We did not say so in so many words, but we hinted that we were not at all in favor of Governor Braden's "drastic and unreasonable onslaughts on the great interests that have made the prosperity of the state possible." My newspaper man was a peach; he could write as if he really meant anything he said.

I got some new cards printed as publisher of the "Cronkton Daily News," and continued to live at the hotel in the capitol city. I had boys from the paper coming in to see me, had letters and packages addressed to me under my newly assumed title delivered at the hotel, and soon my identity was well established among the coterie that made the hotel its home.

One morning we published a clever, veiled attack on Governor Braden. That afternoon a big, genial looking man stopped me in the hotel lobby and said: "Mr. Cornell, I've never had the pleasure of meeting you. I'm Goldfarber, attorney for the Union Milling company. I want to congratulate you on that masterly editorial on the governor this morning."

"Have you seen what the governor's own papers say about it, Mr. Goldfarber?" I asked, and I showed him a reform paper that I had just bought, which bore the headlines:

"Cronkton News in the Hands of the Grafters—Formerly Respectable Paper Sells Out to the Interests."

We laughed heartily over the story and adjourned to the bar. I told Goldfarber that I had bought the Cronkton News because I thought it a good business proposition—if it was run right. There was plenty of advertising to be had if its editorial policy was right. I proposed to keep it right. I hoped Mr. Goldfarber would remember me if he happened to speak to the advertising manager of the Union Milling company.

He certainly did. Next day there came by telegraph an order for a full page ad to be run daily for a month, and a check in full payment for the same came in the first mail.

To show its gratitude the Cronkton News ran a laudatory article about the Union Milling company and about the men who were at its head. My editor made the company look like the foundation upon which the welfare of the state rested and its owners like unselfish benefactors of the human race.

This was kept up until five large companies were running big ads in the News and until we had written them up favorably. I was on friendly terms with the five lobbyists who represented these concerns. They were the men who really had been running the state, and obviously they were the ones who were behind the defection of Governor Braden's one-time reform legislature. If I could learn what they knew about the change of heart that had come over the representatives after the labor bill had been introduced, I would have finished my case.

One day Goldfarber came to my room and said: "Suppose you send a man up to interview Murray and Schoenlein, those celebrated reform friends of the governor. They might have something interesting to say."

I took the hint and wired my editor to get on the job himself. Murray and Schoenlein up to now had been steadily standing by the governor, pledging themselves to fight for his reforms to the last ditch. But the interviews they gave to my editor were made of different stuff. They had been voting and talking against the best interests of the state. They would stop doing this. The governor was a headstrong fool, who persisted in trying to ruin the state in order to further his own ambitions.

"The bunch has got to them," said my man, reporting to me. "I could see it in their eyes. They've been taken care of by your friends the lobbyists."

We printed the interview and editorially lauded Murray and Schoenlein for being courageous enough to do their duty by the state in spite of the lash of a political boss like the governor.

Next day Goldfarber came to me with an editorial which he had written and which he wanted me to run.

"The Cronkton News will run anything," I said; "but for editorials its rates are very high.

"How high?" he asked.

"Twenty thousand dollars a year," I said.

"I'll raise it before noon," said he.

In that way I got the money back that had been paid for the Cronkton News.

I had decided that Murray and Schoenlein would be easier to "get" than any of the lobbyists. They were a pair of ignorant fellows who until their election as reform representatives had worked as mechanics for a living. I knew that they were now enjoying a prosperity that would soon turn their heads. I decided to help the turning.

The two legislators were staying at the smartest hotel in the city. Presently there were two stylish young women staying at the hotel who flattered the pair we were after by seeking an introduction. The women were in the pay of Braden's foxy old friend. It didn't take long to make the inexperienced Murray and Schoenlein fancy that they were a pair of kings. They began to buy wine in the palm room of the hotel, bought a motor car each, and generally began to play the parts of a couple of fools caught by the attractions of a couple of clever, smart-looking women.

It doesn't take long for that kind of a pace to bring out the braggart in a man, especially if there is a good-looking woman to brag to. Within two weeks our women had heard all about how Murray and Schoenlein had been reached. They had been given $5,000 each by Goldfarber in his room in the little hotel where the lobbyists hung out.

"And there's lots more where that came from," boasted Murray.

One evening one of the women said: "There's a friend of ours stopping at this hotel who is interested in a bill for a dam across a river up the state. He said he would like to meet some representatives who would listen to reason. He's a millionaire."

Murray and Schoenlein said they wouldn't mind meeting the friend if it could be done in secret. It was. A meeting was arranged in a room at a hotel, and they met Dawson, of the Burns agency, acting the part of a millionaire. Dawson had his bill already drawn and showed it to them at once. It purported to be a bold-faced steal of a river to make power for a mill about to be established.

"I'll ante $1,000 apiece to you fellows," said Dawson, "if you'll introduce the bill. I'll pay anything you need to get it passed. And when she's through I'll give you each $2,500."

"Give us the thousand now," said Murray.

Dawson paid it out. Schoenlein took the bill and stowed it away in an inner pocket.

"It'll go through sure," he said; "we've got this legislature by the horns."

Governor Braden, four of his friends and myself heard and saw all that went on from peep-holes in the next room. The money that Dawson handed them had been marked and viewed by all of us that morning.

Murray and Schoenlein left the hotel and went down a side street. They hadn't gone far before they were seized, gagged, dumped into a closed motor car and whirled up to the residence of Governor Braden's old friend. There Governor Braden, his four friends and myself searched them and found and identified carefully the money and bill that Dawson had given them in the hotel. The gags were then removed from their mouths, and in the locked library we went to work on them.

Braden said: "I want to get that child labor bill passed, and I've been forced to take means like this to do it. You're going to help me pass it in order to save yourselves from exposure. I don't want to hurt you. You've been a couple of d——n fools, but I think I can save you and make useful citizens of you. If I can't, I can put you in the penitentiary, where you won't do any harm for some time. Now, you are going to give me the dope on how the legislature has been bribed by the lobbyists, first, and after that you are going to vote and work for that labor bill as if nothing untoward had happened. Either that or you are going to the pen. Take your choice."

We worked over them all that night. When we were through we had a detailed and signed confession of how they had been bribed, how other legislators had been bribed, and who had done the work.

"So far so good," said Braden. "Now we want the fellows who did the bribing. You say Goldfarber passed you the money. All right, you go and call Goldfarber to a room in the hotel down there and tell him you need $500 apiece at once. We will pick out the room for you."

They did this. They engaged a room and sent for Goldfarber. He came in, smiling, and they told him what they wanted.

"If we don't get it we'll forget you paid us anything to fight that labor bill," said Murray, obeying Braden's instructions.

"Tut, tut, boys," said Goldfarber. "What's a thousand dollars between friends?"

He was handing over the money when the two photographers we had stationed behind openings cut in the walls of the room shot off their flashes.

Goldfarber ran like a thief. Next day Braden sent a note to him telling him that if opposition to the child labor bill were continued those two photographs would be published. He sent him prints of the photos, too. Goldfarber took a look at them, and packed up and left the capital—forever.

The threatened opposition to the labor bill did not materialize. Various legislators were notified that they were released from their obligations to the interests and were at liberty to vote as they pleased. They voted with Braden and the bill went through.

A few days after its passage the Cronkton News quietly went out of business. A lot of people wondered why; it had seemed to be doing so well of late. Murray and Schoenlein resigned from the house soon after the labor bill was passed. They said that politics was too strenuous for them.

NIGHT CLASSES WELL ATTENDED

Record Number of Pupils Take Advantage of Evening Courses

The attendance at the evening schools has surpassed all previous records. The Adams school has only four rooms available and each room has more men and women enrolled than can be accommodated.

The Willard school has five rooms in use, with an attendance of between 130 and 140. The Lincoln school enrollment increased over 20 and the attendance will probably be more than doubled because of the foreign population. One notable feature is the Syrian enrollment.

The Industrial classes have increased in some courses and no more students can be accepted. Some were turned away owing to lack of facilities. In all cases late applicants names will be placed on the waiting list. In case of absence two or more consecutive nights, without good excuse, the places will be filled from the waiting list.

No more can be taken in the engineers, joiners, the sheet metal or machinists courses. One place is open in the shop mathematics course and two in the plumbing course. The plumbing course is attractive and a capable instructor is in charge.

The commercial and general drawing courses have a larger attendance than ever.

The course for granite cutters held its first session Friday evening in the Lincoln building and Louis Whitehouse of Boston had charge, and as 30 have registered probably no more can be accepted.

Thursday evening the superintendent of schools received a request from 15 young men employed in the mold loft at the Fore River plant asking that a course adapted to their work be arranged. No decision was reached on the matter.

No cooking courses will be given at the High and Willard schools. Arrangements for the sewing course were completed Friday evening.

Sales, $74,400.00
Tolls, $13.50

"I had a cargo of grain to sell and started to call on customers in western Maine and New Hampshire. Being unable to make suitable railroad connections, I decided to telephone some of my customers. This experiment proved so satisfactory that I continued selling by telephone.

"In two days I had made 38 toll calls from Portland. Result: sale of 126 cars of grain worth $74,400.00. The toll charges amounted to $13.50."

This is a bona-fide statement.

Have you looked at the telephone on your desk and ruminated: "I wonder if you couldn't help me in my business?"

John Ellery was still seated in the chair by the window, but he no longer looked like an invalid. There was no worry or care in his countenance now, merely a wondrous joy and serene happiness.

He held out his hands and the captain shook them heartily.

"Mr. Ellery," he said, "as they used to say at the circus, 'Here we are again.' And you and I have been doing all kinds of circus acrobatics since we shook last, hey? I'm glad you're pretty nigh out of the sick bay—and the doctor says you are."

"Captain," began Ellery. Hammond interrupted him.

"Hold on!" he said. "Belay right there. If you and I are to cruise in the same family—and that's what I hear is likely to happen—I cal'late we'll heave overboard the cap'ns and Misters. My name's 'Nathaniel'—'Nat' for short."

"All right. And mine is 'John.' Captain—Nat, I mean—how can I ever thank you?"

"Thank me? What do you want to thank me for? I only handed over somethin' that wasn't mine in the first place and belonged to you all along. I didn't know it, that was the only trouble."

"But your promise to your father. I feel——"

"You needn't. I'm doin' the right thing and I know it. And don't pity me, neither. I made up my mind not to marry Grace—unless, of course, she was set on it—months ago. I'm tickled to death to know she's goin' to have as good a man as you are. She'll tell you so. Grace! Hello! she's gone."

"Yes. I told her I wanted to talk with you alone, for a few minutes. Nat, Grace tells me that Aunt Keziah was the one who——"

"She was. She met me at the Cohasset Narrows depot. I was settin' in the car, lookin' out of the window at the sand and sniffin' the Cape air, somebody tapped me on the shoulder. I looked up and 'twas her. I was surprised enough to see her, I tell you. Way up there at the Narrows! I couldn't have said a word, anyway, and she never gave me a chance. 'Nat,' she says, 'don't talk now. Come with me, quick afore the train starts. I've come here on purpose to meet you. I must talk with you; it's important. You can go to Trumet on the next train, tonight. But now I must talk with you. I must. Won't you please come, Nat?'

"Well, I went. The engine bell was beginnin' to ring and we had to move lively, I tell you. I swung her off the step just as the car begun to move. So into the waitin' room we went and come to anchor on the settee. And then, John, we had our talk. Seems she left Trumet Wednesday afternoon. Got the livery stable man to drive her as fur as Bayport, hired another team there and come on to Sandwich. Stayed overnight there and took the mornin' train which got to Cohasset Narrows just ahead of the one I was comin' on. She'd been so fraid of be in' late, she said. She must see me afore I got to Trumet.

"Well, she saw me and told me the whole yarn about you and Grace. She tried to break it to me gently, so I wouldn't feel too bad. She knew it would be a shock to me, she said. It was a shock, in a way, but as for feelin' bad, I didn't. I think the world of Grace. I'd do anything she wanted me to do; but most the way down on the train—yes, and long afore that—I'd been dreadin' my comin' home on one account. I dreaded tellin' her that, unless she was real set on it, she'd better not marry me."

"Nat, I want to tell you something. Something that only one other person knows. Grace doesn't know it yet. Neither does Aunt Keziah—the whole of it. And if she knew I told you even a part I'm afraid she would, as she would say, 'skin me alive.' But I owe her—and you—more than I could repay if I lived a thousand years. So I'm going to tell and take the consequences."

"Nat, when—that morning after your father died and after you and Grace had agreed to—to——"

"To do somethin' neither of us wanted to do? Yes, I know. Go ahead."

"That morning Aunt Keziah came home to the parsonage and broke the news to me. She did it as only she could do such a thing, kindly and pityingly and I made a fool of myself, I expect; refused to believe her, behaved disgracefully, and at last, when I had to believe it, threatened to run away and leave my work and Trumet forever, like a coward. She made me stay."

"Did, hey?"

"Yes. She showed me it was my duty to face the music. When I whimpered about my troubles she told me her own story. Then I learned what trouble was and what pluck was, too. She told me about her marriage and—excuse me for speaking of what isn't my business; yet it is mine, in a way—she told me about you."

Captain Hammond did not answer. His good-natured face clouded and he shifted in his chair.

"She told me of you, Nat, all about you—and herself. And she told me something else, which explains why she felt she must send you away, why she thought your marriage to Grace would be a good thing."

"I know. She told you that that darn scamp Anse Coffin was alive."

The minister started violently. He gasped in surprise.

"You knew it? You knew it?" he stammered.

"I know it now. Have known it for over a year. My findin' it out was one of the special Providences that's been helpin' along this last voyage of mine. My second mate was a Hyannis man, name of Cahoon. One day, on that pesky island, when we was eatin' dinner together, he says to me, 'Cap'n,' he says, 'you're from Trumet, ain't you?' I owned up. 'Know anybody named Coffin there?' says he. I owned up to that, too. 'Well,' he says, 'I met her husband last trip I was in the Glory of the Wave.' I stared at him. 'Met his ghost, you mean,' I says. 'He's been dead for years, and a good thing, too. Fell overboard and, not bein' used to water, it killed him.'

"But he wouldn't have it so. 'I used to know Anse Coffin in New Bedford,' he says. 'Knew him well's I know you. And when we was in port at Havre I dropped in at a gin mill down by the water front and he come up and touched be on the arm. I thought same as you, that he was dead, but he wa'n't. He was three sheets in the wind and a reg'lar dock rat to look at, but' twas him sure enough. We had a long talk. He said he was comin' back to Trumet some day. Had a wife there, he said. I told him, sarcastic, that she'd be glad to see him. He laughed and said maybe not, but that she knew he was alive and sent him money when he was hard up. Wanted me to promise not to tell any Cape folks that I'd seen him, and I ain't till now.'

"Well, you can imagine how I felt when Cahoon spun me that yarn. First I wouldn't b'lieve it and then I did. It explained things, just as you say, John. I could see now why Keziah gave me my walkin' papers. I could see how she'd been sacrificin' her life for that scum."

"Did you tell her—Aunt Keziah—when you met her at the Narrows?"

"No. But I shall tell her when I see her again. She shan't spoil her life—a woman like that! by the Lord! what a woman!—for any such crazy notion. I swore it when I heard the story and I've sworn it every day since. That's what settled my mind about Grace. Keziah Coffin belongs to me. She always has belonged to me, even though my own pig-headedness lost her in the old days."

He was pacing the floor now, his face set like granite. Ellery rose, his own face beaming. Here was his chance. At last he could pay to this man and Keziah a part of the debt he owed.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

QUINCY COUNCIL LADIES' NIGHT

Proved a Most Enjoyable Affair for All Participating

New Colonial hall and Hancock hall, Quincy's two newest halls were opened to the public for the first time Friday evening by Quincy Council Knights of Columbus for the annual ladies' night. Many expressions of pleasure were made by the ladies when their eyes first centered upon the new hall. It is about the size of the old Colonial hall. The interior finish is white and the hall looks very cosy and attractive. Numerous fire escapes are provided complying with the law in every way. At the easterly end of the hall is a small stage, on either side are ample dressing rooms. Hancock hall is some smaller and is for small parties or banquets.

On Friday evening Colonial hall looked particularly attractive with its exquisitely gowned ladies, and the efficient committee in charge, headed by Past Grand Knight John J. Cunniff, who saw to it that nothing was left undone to add to the pleasure of the evening.

There was no set program for the evening. In Hancock hall there was a whist tournament in which those who did not care for dancing participated. The prizes for the best scores were awarded to John Barron, Mrs. John A. McGowen, Mrs. Michael E. Cook, Mrs. Michael T. Sullivan and James F. Parker.

Dancing was started in Colonial hall during the first part of the evening and between the numbers there was a pleasing entertainment to which the following contributed.

The Misses McDonnell of Norfolk Downs, Miss Amy Fallon of Quincy, Joseph Morrissette of West Quincy and William J. Troy of Boston.

The dancing was in charge of Grand Knight Edward E. Barrett, Past Grand Knight John J. Cunniff, Past Grand Knight Lawrence W. Lyons, Dennis S. Sweeney, William Lynch, Frank Mullen and George W. Murray. Music for the dancing was furnished by Cuff's orchestra.

At 10 o'clock during a brief intermission refreshments were served in Hancock hall.

Among the guests present were Rev. John J. Casey and Rev. Patrick Sharkey of St. John's church and Grand Knight Thomas White of Weymouth council.

COST $208,193 TO NOMINATE WILSON

McCombs Gives List of Contributors to Campaign

Washington, Oct. 15.—The Clapp committee yesterday had every appearance of a Democratic national pow-wow. Democratic chieftains met to tell how much it cost to battle for the presidential nomination at Baltimore.

Chairman McCombs of the Democratic national committee, who was Wilson's pre-convention manager, was here to divulge his expenditures. He presented a detailed list of contributions to Governor Wilson's pre-convention battle. McCombs said he knew nothing of 1904 or 1908 contributions.

"I began the campaign about June 1, 1911," said McCombs. "It commenced in my office and for a month or so I bore all expenses out of my own pocket. I underwrote the campaign to the extent of $10,000 myself."

While his prepared statement totalled only $193,565, McCombs said the total expenditures for the campaign had amounted to $208,193. He said that represented all the money expended and that no other funds had been collected and disbursed to his knowledge.

TIRRELL LED IN SINGLES

Moran to the Fore in the Total Score

IN BOWLING LEAGUE

It looked like a big night last night at the new Coliseum alleys when a large crowd of Fore Riverites invaded the building to root for the teams which were rolling. It was the first meet of the recently formed Fore River Bowling League and it was one grand success. Six teams were in the running and there was intense excitment at all times.

Tirrell of the machinists rolled the high string of the evening and set a record of 130 for the alleys. Lawrence Moran, who is elegible to roll with the married men made the second best string, reaching 108 after making 85 and 96. It was unusual to loose a match with two such high strings but the team mates of these holy rollers were lost in the shuffle.

The D Department defeated the Machine Gallery by 6 pins: the Y. Departmenet beat the Pattermakers by 68 pins and the government Draftsmen defeated the Engine Draftsmen by 130 pins.

WHOLE SERIES WERE ISSUED

In the Matrimonial Game by City Clerk Crane, Monday

The dove of peace is still hovering over the office of City Clerk Emery L. Crane who issued seven marriage intentions to blushing sweethearts Monday

Since Mr. Crane was appointed City Clerk there has been a notable increase in marriages in Quincy. Not that Mr. Crane is a match maker, but he issues the certificates with the solemnity of a parson.

According to himself it is his desire to assist young people who want to be married, and he feels that the general invitation to meet him at his office which he sent broadcast last spring is being accepted by cooing couples.

The records of marriage which are returned to the office average one a day and in some cases Mr. Crane performed the ceremony.

ONWARD RUSH GETS SETBACK

Red Sox Lose In Sixth Game of World's Series

O'BRIEN DRIVEN FROM THE BOX

Man Selected to Cinch Title For Boston Team Touched Up For Five Runs In First Inning—Collins Holds Giants Safely During Rest of Game—Fine Work by Marquard

New York, Oct. 15.—By rugged, consistent hitting in the first inning New York stopped Boston's onward rush to the world's championship. The score was 5 to 2. New York made all its runs in the first inning, when O'Brien was driven to cover, and Boston came back with its two in the second. The series now stands: Boston, won 3, lost 2; New York, won 2, lost 3; one game tied.

The game was replete with brilliant fielding, the headliner being Snodgrass with his marvelous catch of Wagner's long drive in the fourth. The New York centre fielder took the ball with his back to the diamond, cutting off a sure three-bagger and a possible home run. Devore also made a splendid catch in the first and Wagner made one of his famous one-hand stops back of second, preventing a run. Murray took two long drives in perfect form. In fact, the outfielding at all times was decidedly high class, Hooper turning in two fine assists.

All the New York scores in the first were made after two men were out, six hits, a balk by O'Brien, and a double steal doing the business. Engle, batting for O'Brien, hit for two bases and was responsible for both of the Red Sox runs.

Collins, who succeeded O'Brien after the first inning, pitched great ball, holding the Giants to five hits. Marquard was on the mark all time, growing stronger as the game progressed. Boston made seven hits to New York's eleven, but the Giants' drives included two baggers and a triple.

The Game by Innings

First inning—Hooper singled, beating Doyle's throw, but was caught napping by Marquard. Yerkes flied to Snodgrass. Speaker walked, and at once stole second. Lewis flied to Devore.

O'Brien made a balk, and Doyle scored, Murray taking second. Murray scored on Merkle's double. Herzog doubled and Merkle scored. Meyers got an infield hit, Herzog going to third. On a double steal Herzog scored, Meyers going to third on Yerkes bad throw. Meyers scored on a hit by Fletcher, who was caught off first.

Second—Gardner hit to Marquard, who fumbled. Stahl singled, Gardner holding up at second. Wagner struck out. Cady fouled to Meyers. Engle hit for two bases, scoring Gardner and Stahl, Devore playing the ball poorly. Hooper fouled to Meyers.

Bookkeeper For McNamara Identifies Alleged Dynamite Checks

Indianapolis, Oct. 15.—Checks by which, the government charges, the executive board of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers allowed J. J. McNamara $1000 a month to buy explosives were identified by Mrs. A. J. Hull of Omaha, at the "dynamite conspiracy" trial.

Mrs. Hull, who was a bookkeeper for McNamara at the ironworkers' headquarters in Indianapolis, when explosions about the country were frequent, testified the checks were signed by Frank M. Ryan, president, and by McNamara, as secretary-treasurer. All these checks, she said, were marked "emergency fund."

CANNOT AVERT. THE CONFLICT

General War In the Balkans Becomes a Certainty

SERVIA INVADED BY TURKEY

Latter Seized Greek Ships With Knowledge That It Meant War—Preparations For Serious Clash Being Actively Advanced—How Various States Are Lining Up

London, Oct. 15.—It would seem that the last hope of preventing a general war in the Balkans is shattered. Both Turkey and the Balkan league of states have spurned the weak attempt of the powers to intervene. Greece has sent an ultimatum to Turkey demanding the release of the Greek ships seized. Turkey took these vessels with the knowledge that it was a hostile act and meant war.

Turkey has also invaded Servia and the latter can no longer hold back even if so inclined. Montenegro continues to force the fighting in the Sanjak of Novipasar on the north and Scutari on the south.

From the best available information the military situation in the theatre of war is somewhat as follows: It seems likely that the Seventh Nizam division at Kirk Kilise, the Tenth at Adrianople, and the Ninth at Baba Eski, with strong detachments of the new rifle battalions and the cavalry are holding the many roads and tracks which traverse the frontier eastward of the Rhodope mountains. Behind the screen thus formed the First, Second, Third and Fourth Turkish army corps are probably assembling, and will be completed by reservists as rapidly as the situation permits.

The need to hold the Gallipoli peninsula and Dedeagatch, as well as the Bosporus and the capital, may result in the four army corps named not being as yet complete, but there are two divisions of Redifs of the first category at Constantinople, and these should soon be available to replace the active troops.

The divisions of second-category Redifs are probably mobilizing at Baba Eski, Adrianople, Gumuldjina, Kirdjali, and Bulair, and the above troops will probably bear the brunt of the first operations in Thrace.

If time is allowed to Turkey to complete her preparations, she might conceivably mass the twelve divisions of the four corps named, amounting to 132 battalions, and seventeen divisions of Redifs of 153 battalions, for a campaign in Thrace.

Macedonia is also full of Turkish troops—the Fifth, Sixth and Seventh army corps of the new organization, with headquarters at Salonica, Monastir and Uskab respectively, while three independent divisions at Kotchana, Yanina, and Scutari practically add the value of another corps.

The Twenty-fourth division at Scutari and the Eighteenth at Dibra are trying to hold the frontier against Montenegro, while the Seventh corps, with its three divisions at Uskub, Mitrovitza, and Djakova, act as the covering force against a Servian invasion.

Against Greece the Twenty-third division at Yanina is isolated and exposed, but can be reinforced from Monastir or Salonica. All told, there stand in Macedonia fifteen Nizam divisions, four Redif divisions of the first category and thirteen of the second.

The Bulgarians probably will make their chief effort east of the Rhodope mountains, but a secondary attack will be made southward from Sofia in combination with a Servian advance from Nish upon Uskub, an operation in which Montenegro may take her part if she does not limit herself to getting hold of territory which she covets.

The movements open to Greece depend to a large extent upon Italian plans at this moment. If Italy means to join actively in the war of the allies, at all events with her navy, many combinations are open to Greece, but in view of her last war with Turkey her first endeavor will probably be to re-establish her military reputation by some striking success under the crown prince against the Turks in the Yanina and Monastir districts.

REV. ADELBERT L. HUDSON
First President First Parish Club.

The head table was on the platform, with six long tables extending at right angles from it, down the length of the hall, the entire room being tastefully decorated with autumn foliage, while a large American flag held the position of honor in the front.

The dinner, which was excellent in every particular, was cooked and prepared entirely upon the premises and served hot as the men sat down at the tables. All present expressed their hearty satisfaction with the results and their appreciation of the work of the committee in charge, particularly of the chairman, William B. Nichols who has been untiring in his attention to details of preparation.

Before introducing the speakers of the evening, the president of the club, Rev. Adelbert Lathrop Hudson spoke briefly of the two chief purposes of the club as stated in its constitution to promote good fellowship and to consider questions of general interest. He emphasized the value of such clubs to the community along both lines. CONTRACTOR THREW UP JOB

CITIZENS PROTESTED

A large delegation of South Quincy citizens held a conference with Mayor Stone Tuesday evening in relation to the proposed new school building in Ward Three, the appropriation for which was passed last July, as well as to settle in regard to numerous rumors that had been circulated about the building.

Bids for the building were opened August 1. There were six bids received at that time the lowest being Joe Locetelli of Boston. His bid was $62,725. With the bid there was deposited the usual certified check for $500. As the bid was sufficiently low it was decided to award the contract to Locetelli. The latter however secured another large job about that time and immediately signified his desire to draw out of the Quincy contract.

In order to do this he would naturally have to forfeit his check.

The Mayor informed the committee that under the law it was necesary to wait a certain length of time before final action could be taken in regard to the Locetelli bid and that this was the reason that the building had been held up. He however said hat probably by next week the contract would be awarded to the next lowest bidder or that new bids would be advertised for.

The next lowest bider was Cunningham & Sons the contractors who built the new Wollaston building which is practicaly a duplicate of the proposed new South Quincy building. Cunningham & Sons bid was $65,385.

Balance Reported To Keep the Gang Busy to End of the Year

The Plan Failed Owing to Argument of Committeemen

Editor of the Ledger:—With the month of October half gone, the city primaries a short four weeks away, and several important matters still untouched, it seems wise to postpone further investigation for a while and take up some suggestions for improvement in the form and methods of our city government.

But before taking up these suggestions,—which it is planned to do in Saturday's letter, it seems desirable to call in review some of the various matters which have been criticised in foregoing letters in order that we may have at least a partial statement of the conditions before us in condensed form as preliminary considerations to hints for reconstruction.

In the letters of September 7 and September 11 certain conditions in the Assessor's Department were discussed which seem to indicate pretty clearly that the members of this Board have laid themselves open to the charge of incompetence and favoritism in the matter of valuations and assessments.

Attention was called to the fact that large amounts of property had been illegally assessed to the city, which resulted in unfair advantage to certain citizens and amounted to the city's financing the troubles of these individuals to the detriment of the rest of the taxpayers. The actual cash deficit to the city in this little matter amounts to upwards of $10,800, besides the possible loss of a considerable sum in interest, and the probable expense of straightening out the tangle.

It was further shown that in certain localities the Assessors had undervalued property in the face of definite information of which they could not possibly have been ignorant.

In every instance where the city has purchased property recently, we have paid from two to three times as much as the property was assessed, and little if any attention was paid to this indication of value in the subsequent assessment of property in the immediate vicinity.

The unclean hand of political influence seems clearly discernable in many of these matters, and they may be the subject of further comment later.

One of the best things the City Council has done this year was the passage of the order introduced by Councilman Murray to publish the tax list in detail. It is hoped that this measure will do much to eliminate the favoritism which certain property owners have hitherto enjoyed; but the situation can scarcely be thoroughly cleared until membership in this board ceases to be used as capital for the payment of political debts, and men of recognized ability, judgment and integrity are found who will give more time and conscientious effort to the equalization of assessments.

In the letter of September 14, the condition of the city's indebtedness, and the matter of temporary loans was given some attention. In spite of last year's campaign promises of economy and retrenchment our city debt will show a far too healthy growth by the end of the year. Quincy occupies the ignominious position of paying a larger percentage of its entire revenue for debt and interest than any other city in the state; the nearest rival for this disgrace being ten per cent better off than Quincy. Is it not about time we got busy, Mr. Voter?

The entirely unbusinesslike, if not illegal method of raising money to pay off our temporary loans was also pointed out. It is this long continued practice which has necessitated the appeal to the Legislature this year for authority to legally refund $150,000 of the deficit caused by this practice and spread the burden over ten years. It is worthy of note that this salutary measure did not originate with the Executive, where such measures are usually looked for, but was the work of a special committee appointed by President Hobbs of the Council upon an order introduced early in the year by Councilman Cunningham.

It was this unbusinesslike practice of creating new debts to pay old ones without legislative authority and contrary to the accepted interpretation of the law, which is largely responsible for our present financial embarrassment. The practice sprang up several years ago and has been continued through at least five years of the administration of the present City Solicitor, through whose interpretation of the law this practice has flourished, until at least the day of reckoning has arrived and the innocent tax payers must "stand and deliver."

This matter alone bears silent and accusing testimony of the depth or shallowness of this official's real interest in the welfare of Quincy. Beginning this investigation, as I did, with an open and unbiased mind, I have gradually been led to question the motives of certain of our public officials whose acts I have found to be constantly open to criticism.

When an official threatens a libel suit in the event of the publication of one of my letters before he can possibly have known the contents of the letter, it seems to me that he lays himself open to criticism.

In the letter of September 18 some entertaining information upon methods employed in the Street Department was given. The excessive proportion of the labor item was exhibited by figures showing this and other items of cost on various streets. It was shown how accounts were juggled by charging large items of coal, etc., against certain streets. As a typical example, take Belmont Street (Page 164 City Report 1911.)

Appropriation		$3295.90
Pay Rolls	$3136.00
Supplies (hardware, tools etc.)	75.48
Cement	22.97
Coal	61.40
Total	$3295.90

What did they do with over ten tons of coal on this job? They wore out tools and hardware enough, but what did they use to mend the street with?

This is only one instance;—Read through the city report of 1911

SPECIAL TRAIN FOR PARTY

The steamship Frieda, built by the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., for the Union Sulphur Co., of New York will be launched at the Fore River yards, Saturday, October 26, at 11 o'clock. The vessel is named for Mrs. Henry T. Whiton, a daughter of Herman Frasch, President of the company and she will be christened by Mrs. Whiton.

The launching is expected to equal in elaborateness the launch of the steamer Herman Frasch which took place December 11, 1909, and will be witnessed by a special party of the Sulphur Co. who will come from New York on a special train which will be run over the company's private track to the Fore River yards landing the party within a few feet of the launching stand.

ORGAN PIPES TO BE SOLD

To Raise Fund For Instrument at Park and Downs Church

"Guest day was observed by the Women's Guild of the Park and Downs Congregational church at its meeting Tuesday afternoon in the vestry. Over fifty guests in addition to the regular attendance to hear Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney deliver a lecture on "The Art of Story Telling."

A social hour followed at which tea and chocolate were served, Mrs. Celia McKay and Mrs. Fred Robinson being the pourers. They were assisted by Mrs. Herbert Wiley, Mrs. Frank Knowlton, Mrs. Charles L. Gilliatt and Miss Louise Steffens.

The members are hard at work on plans for raising $1500 toward an organ for the church and a special meeting will be held in a few days to perfect plans for the same. A donation of $1500 from Andrew Carnelge is promised if a like amount is raised by the Guild before March 1st.

One of the schemes for raising money will be the selling of pipes of the organ. The Guild is an aggressive organization and in the past year has raised about one thousand dollars for church work. They expect to be able to accomplish this new task. Mrs. Charles F. Bryant is the president of the Guild.

RESPONSIBILITY OF EDUCATING CHILDREN RESTS WITH CHURCH

It Has Been Poorly Done In the Past, But History Cuts Large Figure

Said Rev. Mr. Gookin at Sunday School Union

The annual fall meeting of the South Shore Branch of the Sunday School Union was held Tuesday afternoon and evening, at The Church of Our Saviour, Middleboro. There was a large attendance considering the great distance, around 70 delegates being present.

The Branch consists of the following parishes, Braintree, Bridgewater, Brockton, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Middleboro, Plymouth Quincy, Whitman and Wollaston. The greater part of these parishes were represented.

The meeting opened with a hymn followed by prayer which was heartly enjoyed by all. Next in order was a business meeting which was presided over by Rev. Mr. Hyde, the vice president in the absence of the president Rev. Mr. H. K. Barstow, who was ill.

The secretary's report was read and accepted. Invitations to hold the spring meeting in Whitman and the fall meeting in Quincy were accepted.

A hymn was sung, followed by an address by Rev. Warner F. Gookin ,of the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, on "The Church and Religious Instruction. This address was very brilliant and also very inspiring. He said in part:

"The need of Religious Education is great. It includes many familiar points. We must first get down to principles. We need it because of the weakness of Chistianity, the failure in bringing people to church. We can be religious without knowing the old and new testament. We must correct ignorance and weakness. Go back to the olden religions, the Jews for instance centuries ago. A boy was taken at the age of 8 or 10 by his father or a Rabbi and he was compelled to learn the testament in the Hebrew language.

"Shall we give up Sunday school and take it up in the public schools where it can be done well? The Romanists say our children are not getting what religions instruction they need in your schools so we will put them in our Parochial schools. We will not take a penny out of our treasury to teach religion in the public schools,

"The responsibility of educating our children must be done by the churches. We must not let it get into the hands of men employed by the state.

"History is a magnificent thing. It 's God dealing with mankind. You should teach it right. Bring the boy or girl to an understanding with good Here is an opportunity to give religion a permanence a new life. God has been working with His children in history. He has sent His prophets who have revealed the true God, the God of holiness. We should show our appreciation of God and His wonderful works. Take the Old Testament, it shows how God was working out great problems. How He sent His son and prophets. How He came to His own, found it prepared and unprepared. How He found the people when He started His ministry with works accomplished and unaccomplished.

Rev. Mr. Gilmore gave a short talk on the kindergarten work of his church in Middleboro. Mr. Mills also gave a short address.

Supper was then announced at 6.30. This part of the program was of course enjoyed by all. It was served in the Y. M. C. A. building. After supper the meeting was again resumed. Papers were read by the following delegates

Mrs. C. A. Bill, Braintree—"The Absent Scholar."

Mrs. W. S. Bryant, Cohasset—"The Teacher's Preparation."

Miss Helen Smith, Plymouth—"Personal Interest in Scholars outside School."

Miss Edith Fox, Quincy—"Discipline."

Mr. Ernest Hall, Whitman—"The Importance of System."

Miss A. Maud Briggs, Wollaston—"The Teacher's Motive."

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

It must have seemed like 1911, with the tables turned, to the Giants.

All up for the hospital next week.. Let every one do a little to help along the good cause.

"Joe" the Giant Killer fell a victim to the Giants Tuesday.

Roosevelt should be thankful for the thickness of his coat and likewise his hide.

It was "Tessie" all right, but he had other letters to his name.

The Italians will pay about $100,000,000 for their little diversion in Tripoli, and the wonder is in what manner has humanity benefited by the vast outlay.

City Square was rather a dusty, blustory, uncomfortable place yesterday.

That Seventh inning raised a howl of hope from the fans in front of the Ledger Bulletin board.

All Chinese officials will wear frock coats, patent leather shoes and top hats. The cue has seen its best days.

Mrs. Marquard, mother of the Great Rube, when congratulated upon his great work, while she was making jelly, calmly remarked, "O don't bother me, Rube ain't such a wonder." Which leads to the conclusion that ma is safer and saner than a good many who may claim higher intellectually.

The Lawrence demonstration evidently gave back-bone to the latest batch of jurors drawn for the Ettor trial.

Becker may not take the stand but his silence will be a hard thing for the jury to accept as proof of his innocence.

After today things are expected to become normal again as many people who have been soaring in the clouds will settle down to sane thoughts and saner occupations.

I. W. W. threaten to boycott those who took part in the patriotic parade. No doubt the patriotic citizens will make up the loss.

Murder seems to be a regular occupation in New York. The western Europe bandits have nothing on the Metropolitan gunmen.

It may be all very well to plan cheaper grand opera, but the rank and file would be satisfied with medium prices for medium shows and a cheaper rate for meat.

None of the batters have so far landed on Tom Lawson's sign so his $1000 is pretty safe.

Probably next year the magnates will insist that players tend more to the game and less to writing about it before and after.

The Boston girl who threw vitroil at her lover could not recall the incident, but she loved him just the same even if he was marked for life.

Mr. Roosevelt has been likened to Christopher Columbus. Poor Chris he had to stand a good deal but that is the limit.

The Quincy Republicans will cut loose Monday night.

The seventh and last chapter today.

WORK OF A MANIAC.

The attempted murder of Theodore Roosevelt is another deplorable chapter in the history of the United States. This country has witnessed more assassination of its rulers in the past 50 years, than any other country in the world, not counting the attempts which have been made and failed. Men occupying high places have likewise been made the aim of the assassins knife or revolver and even bombs have figured in the effort to rid the world of some high financiers as witness the case of Russell Sage a few years ago.

And now a poor deluded creature took it upon himself to give Roosevelt his quietus, but fortunately his aim was poor, or the Colonel's coat or skin was too thick for bullet to reach its mark.

Every law abiding citizen rejoices, that Col. Roosevelt escaped the fate which had been planned for him. Howeever much they may differe with him in his politics, views, polices, or anything else which he may claim as attributes, no one would liked to have seen him cut down in the prime of his vigorous and unique manhood by any such means.

His attitude after the shooting was of course theatrical. But you could no more divorce that attribute from the man than you could change the spots on the sun.

However it is a matter of general rejoicing that he escaped. His death at such a time, under such circumstances would have been deplorable. We hope that he may live many more years and perform service for his fellow men which will prove of benefit to mankind.

This attempted crime and many others which have been more successful in their accomplishment within the past few months however leads people to give more concern to the so called harmless crank. There is no such specie. If there is a crank of any kind, a maniac, a person of unsound mind, there is no excuse for their being at large. Authorities should be careful in the consideration of such cases. There is no knowing when the so called harmless crank will break loose, run a muck and commit murder or some other crime.

It is the misfortune of those people that they are irresponsible, but it should be the duty of others to see that they are not permitted to roam at large, a constant menace to society.

Time and again we hear of persons released from insane hospitals, apparently cured, and in a short time the country is shocked by some horrible crime committed by those ticket of leave people.

Only few days ago, an aged father released his son who had been tied up because of his violent outbursts, and the result was that the poor old man fell a victim to his own soft heartedness. The lust of blood was in the heart and brain of that poor demented creature, and rushing to a nearby house he returned with a gun and shot to death the father whose tender feeling had given him his liberty.

Such people should be all the time under suveillance. It is not necessary that they should be treated with cruelty. But they should be kept under restraint, carefully watched and guarded and if this is done much of the heartrending misery that crops out now and then would be averted.

EVERY LITTLE BIT HELPS.

Next week the people of Quincy will be called upon to perform a service, which in a measure is a duty, that is aid the Quincy hospital in meeting its obligations to the extent of $35,000 which will place it on a safe financial basis, without any worry to the trustees as to the future.

The call which is sent out appeals to all the people of the city. It is not confined within the narow limits of class or creed. Therefore it is up to every one to do their share. No matter how small the donation, it will be acceptable. Every one is not financially situated so that they can be lavish in their contribution, but if every one takes hold and does a share, adds their mite to the mite of some one else, which with the larger contributions of those who can afford it, the object sought will be nearer the goal.

The hospital has always been a worthy institution. Its doors are open to every resident of the city. There is no discrimination. Every one who needs the service of the institution is welcome to it, if they can be accommodated.

It thus becomes a really public institution, in which every one in the city is interested. There is no occasion for anyone requiring service going without on account of inability to meet the obligation. No questions are asked as to the financial ability of the patients. Every one receives equally good treatment.

The better the equipment at the hospital, the better the service. The hospital needs $35,000.

The campaign is to be started next Monday and will continue for a week.

The immediate needs for which this money is required are as follows:

New operating ward and equipment	$18,000
Loan for operating expenses	12,400
New boiler	2,400
X-Ray outfit	1,000
Laundry machinery	1,200
	$35,000

There is the story in a nut shell. It is up to the citizens to do the rest.

We believe that the response will be goodly and generous.

The entire amount may not be raised in the one week, but there is hopes that it will be. If it is accomplished in the alloted time, the trustees will be afforded some relief.

Whether it is or not, there is a strong feeling that every citizen of Quincy will do their respective part and swell the fund as much as possible so that every one may feel satisfied and gratified when the campaign ends.

FIRST PARISH CLUB

possible more of cohesion among them in matters which concern the common good.

At the same time he believed that the discussion of public questions before such a body of men could not fail to develop a healthy civic consciousness which would make them ready to back up all honest efforts of our city officials to serve the public interests, while remaining alert and sensitive to any false note which might be felt in proposals which conceal, under a promise of public benefit, some selfish interest or ill considered policy.

He said that he would deplore, as fatal to the club, any attempt to interfere in any way with the political activities of the community. But he ventured to hope that the general moral influence of the club would give strong and hearty support to those deals of good government among us, which are the only safe guard of our institutions.

He then introduced "Governor" John D. Long who spoke in his happiest vein, bringing greetings and best wishes to the new club.

Hon Samuel L. Powers of Boston, was the principal speaker of the evening and gave a most entertaining talk on the achievements and characteristics of men prominent in public life whom he has known in various relations as a member of congress and as a practicing lawyer in our Federal courts, his theme being "Some Men that I have Known."

Rarely has an audience in Quincy enjoyed so rich a treat as the First Parish club presented to the members on its opening night.

The next dinner will be given on the third Tuesday evening in November; and the speaker will be Victor J. Loring, Esq., who was for several years the president of the American Federation of Men's Clubs, and is a most entertaining speaker. His subject, "The Work and the Value of Men's Clubs" will be of especial interest to the members at this time.

MR. SHAW'S LETTER

and compare the items in other cases. One instance was mentioned where a charge of $150 for a steam roller was made and paid a whole MONTH BEFORE ANY WORK WAS BEGUN on the street to which this was charged. It is understood that this item represents a part of the original cost of the roller.

An illuminating incident during the present administration was related, telling how an appropriation of $32,000 was asked for to extend the water system; and how the committee found upon examination of the estimates for work laid out that only $15,000 was actually needed. Upon inquiring the reason for including the extra $17,000 the committee were informed that "It would keep the gang busy till the end of the year."

This carefully planned scheme to use the city's money to further political ambition failed to operate in this instance owing to the acumen of some of the committeemen; but the incident serves to illustrate the danger of intrusting our city government to self-seeking political schemers whose sole ambition seems to be to further their own interests and promote their own reelection, or the reelection of their puppets.

The letter of Sept. 21 dealt with certain conditions in the Tax Collector's Department. It was shown that in spite of the ordinance providing for the collection of all taxes by process of law during the month of January following the assessment, that it was the custom in Quincy to let the delinquents stand for two years before enforcing payment, thus financing the shortcomings of the few at the expense of the citizens who pay promptly. It was pointed out that less than two-thirds of the taxes are collected within the financial year of the assessment, and that about one-eighth of the levy was still outstanding at the end of the second financial year, thus crippling the finances of the city and promoting the practice of illegally refunding the temporary loans above referred to.

An incident was also related showing how the Mayor and City Solicitor attempted to influence the Tax Collector to compromise a tax four years overdue after the delinquent had twice been placed under arrest for failure to pay, and how the Collector was warned not to issue any more warrants for arrest without consulting the City Solicitor, another indication of the depth of this official's interest in our city's welfare.

The relation of this incident called out a denial by the "administration" through the medium of the Tax Collector, but after the facts had been driven home in a subsequent letter, the matter was dropped and now stands as originally claimed,—that the "administration" has been interfering in the collection of taxes in the case of certain individuals.

An incident was also reported where a Mayor, not long ago, sorted out a large bunch of poll taxes and they were passed along to the Collector with the statement that they were personal friends of the Mayor and were not to be pressed for payment. Perhaps this is one of the reasons why Quincy only succeeds in collecting about 75 per cent of its poll taxes, while our neighboring city of Brockton,—also a manufacturing city with a large floating population collects 92 per cent of its assessed poll taxes within a year from their assessment.

In the letter of September 26 an incident showing the malign influence of vulgar POLITICS was related. Allusion was made to certain rumors to the effect that a certain West Quincy lawyer (a democrat) was being very favorably considered for the position of City Clerk, but owing to the reappointment or retention of so many of the "old regime" it was thought unwise to carry out this plan; so the said lawyer, (so went the rumor) was promised a part of the city's law business as a consolation prize.

A bill on file in the Auditor's office as printed in full showing the payment of $400 to one Charles J. McGilvray for legal services in examining titles to 16 lots of land on Hancock Street. Without considering the size of the bill, which, however, the lawyers generally agree was much too large; the City Charter and Ordinances, and two decisions of the Supreme Judicial Court were quoted showing that the employment was illegal.

Notwithstanding that the City Solicitor is given the credit of being a very shrewd lawyer, his name appears on the bill in approval of this questionable transaction.

Thus the evidence accumulates.

In the letter of September 28 conditions in the City Council were examined and the personel criticised. There are, no doubt, many men who are only poll tax payers who are much more competent to pass upon some of the city's great questions of finance than many who own property, and it is not the property test that I argue should be applied to aspirants to this honor, but the test of public spiritedness, ability and experience in large and important affairs which qualify the man for the position. That they are "good fellows" is the least important factor, and is, in fact, just what Quincy is suffering from at present, not only in the Council but in more important positions.

The pernicious practice among the Councilmen of trading votes was gone into, and a large measure of the wastefulness and extravagance from which we suffer was traced to this practice. The "ward system" of representation was found to be largely responsible for this "trading," and the evils resulting from local demands upon a councilman for appropriations of money in his own ward irrespective of the financial condition of the city were pointed out an deprecated.

Conditions in the Water Department were set forth in the letter of October 5 showing how the citizens of Quincy have to pay the highest minimum water rate in the Metropolitan District. It was also computed that the actual cost of water to Quincy in 1911 was $.0986 per 100 cubic feet, but that for some reason, unknown or unexplained the rates were readjusted and large quantities of water are sold to the Fore River Shipbuilding Company at 6 cents a hundred cubic feet, nearly 4 cents a hundred less than the actual cost. In other words the people of Quincy are making a present to the Fore River Company of over $10 a day in water, or nearly $4000 a year.

And all this on top of a tremendous lose by leakage or some other cause owing to poor equipment or incompetence in handling the service, which runs up to over 75 per cent of all the water that comes into our mains. In short, we only get paid for about a quarter of the water we have to pay for, and of this we sell a very large percentage as considerably less than cost.

By-the-way, this 6 cent water rate has never been submitted to the Metropolitan Water Commission for approval as the law requires all minimum water rates to be. I wonder why?

Conditions in the Sewer Department were given some attention in the Oct. 11th letter. The inadequacy of the present sewer assessments to meet the requirement of law that not more than one-half the total cost of the system should be paid by the city was clearly shown by the figures given.

The total cost of the system is about $840,100 while the total assessments foot up to only $324,384.82 showing shortage in assessment of nearly $100,000 which the city has had to pay contrary to law!

The inefficiency and mismanagement of past administrations in appropriating more money "from receipts" than the receipts amounted to and the neglect of the Assessors to include proper amounts in the tax levys was shown, and to this bit of frenzied financing we owe the accumulated deficit of upwards of $50,000 in this department.

The carelessness, inability or unwillingness of the present administration to meet the situation was shown by the Mayor's veto of an order passed by the Council in June, which was intended to relieve this situation somewhat.

AND THUS THE INDICTMENT OF INCOMPETENCY, WASTEFULNESS, UNBUSINESS-LIKE METHODS, PETTY GRAFT AND POLITICAL INTRIGUEING HAS BEEN SLOWLY BUT SURELY ACCUMULATED.

One might ask in the words of the immortal Roman: "How far, Oh! Catilina, wilt thou abuse our patience? How long wilt thou baffle justice in thy mad career? To what extreme wilt thou carry thy audacity?" and so on. But today we are living in the modern age of the mighty ballot. WE, THE PEOPLE OF QUINCY, HOLD THE REMEDY IN OUR OWN HANDS!

It only remains for us to arouse ourselves from our expensive lethargy and take an active, personal interest in the affair of our city, as every true American citizen is in honor bound to do.

Because we only spend a small share of our day in Quincy is no excuse for our sitting idly by and allowing our city to fall into the mire of financial decay through the machinations of a "ring" of cheap, self-seeking politicians.

It is only a few short months ago that one of these "ring" workers, a transplanted Boston politician, bragged openly that he sat down and instructed Mayor Stone how to "make up his slate," and that the Mayor adopted his suggestions. It is a matter of common talk that the present City Solicitor is, and has been the virtual Mayor of Quincy for some time; and the politician above referred to has been accredited with the honor of being number three in the chair.

HOW LONG ARE WE GOING TO STAND FOR THIS SORT OF A GAME, FELLOW CITIZENS OF QUINCY?

Is it not about time Quincy has a MAYOR WHO IS THE MAYOR?

The city primaries are only four week away! Quincy needs men, strong, able, public spirited, beyond the reach of "ring politicians," who will give careful and earnest attention to Quincy's serious needs.

Let every right-thinking citizen ask himself the question—WHAT AM I DOING TO HELP REDEEM THE HONOR AND INTEGRITY OF QUINCY? And unless he is willing to stand for another dollar or two on his next year's tax bill, let him GET OUT AND HUSTLE and see to it that the City COUNCIL of 1913 is composed of the right sort of men.

GET together with your public-spirited neighbors and talk the situation over. Make the candidates for office speak to you publicly, so you may be able to "size them up." GET BUSY!

This means YOU Mr. Easy-Going-Grumbler!

DO IT NOW, before it is too late.

QUINCY DAY NURSERY ASSO.

The Quincy Day Nursery Association has entered upon another year of good work this month, the annual meeting having been held Oct. 1st. Yearly reports of the secretary and treasurer are given below for the benefit of those who were unable to attend the meeting and those who have shown their interest in generous contributions.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The Quincy Day Nursery Association has just finished its ninth year, which has been a very successful one in many respects. Throughout the year the daily attendance at the Nursery has been large and the health of the children has been excellent. Each month friends have responded with needed and generous donations.

Tag Day receipts for 1911 were not as large as those of the previous year, which was a disappointment to the workers, since Tag Day and the two annual dancing parties are the principal means of increasing the finances of the Association.

In December 1911, Bethany Circle very kindly made all arrangements for a provision shower in aid of the Nursery. This was the third affair of this kind, and as in previous years, friends responded generously with all kinds of provisions, which were a great help to the storeroom at the Nursery.

An additional source of income was a humorous lecture in Colonial hall by Emery L. Crane. Part of the proceeds were used to help support the Nursery, and the remainder took the form of a "Katharyn Crane Memorial" to the Nursery.

Mrs. John Johnson of Wollaston also added to the fund by managing a young people's party in Colonial hall, on Dec. 26. Such work is thoroughly appreciated by all who realize the many needs at the Nursery.

The Thanksgiving and Christmas festivities were enjoyed to the utmost, and friends were most kind in contributing to the pleasure of the children.

The annual afternoon and evening dances were held in Alpha hall, thus making the expenses much less than when Music hall was used. Much credit is due Mrs. E. E. Jameson and Mrs. Charles M. Bryant of Wollaston, for kindly taking the responsibility of managing the parties.

A new furnace was installed at the house where the children spend their days, thus making the Nursery quarters more comfortable than previously.

At the monthly meeting in March, Mrs. D. E. Wadsworth, the president, and a most devoted friend to the Nursery, wished to be released from the office, owing to many other responsibilities. Mrs. W. H. Doble was asked to consider the presidency, and very kindly consented to serve.

In April the matron, Mrs. Loring, wished to resign and obtain an easier position. The Association regreted this decision, but were successful in securing the services of Mrs. Barker, who is much interested in such work, and has proved a great help in managing the Nursery.

During the last year nine regular meetings have been held and one special meeting. The October meeting was held at Mrs. Clarence Burgin's home, and the May meeting at Mrs. D. E. Wadsworth's. The other monthly meetings were held at the Women's club house. The attendance at the meetings at the clubhouse has been unusually small. It is the desire of all who faithfully attend these meetings that more members will endeavor to be present the coming year.

The very generous bequest of the late Mrs. George W. Morton was much appreciated by the Association and gratefully acknowledged.

The Association trusts that in the future all friends of the Nursery will continue with their good work, and interest others who are not so well acquainted with this worthy charity.

"Just Around the Corner"

THE HOSPITAL A HUMANIZER

Editor of Daily Ledger:

It is well known that, in times of wide-spread danger from fire or flood, all the wild creatures of forest and prairie, both fierce and gentle, will huddle together in narrow refuges of safety, forgetting for the moment their natural instincts of ferocity and timidity in seeking a common safety. In like fashion we read almost every year of dire calamities of ocean and mine where human beings have stood together for mutual help, without thought of nationality, color or creed We are getting near enough to the millennium so that the Brotherhood of Man embraces all the others.

There are certain institutions in the community which are hardly less valuable for the intrinsic good they accomplish than because they serve as rallying points around which all the people forget their differences of race and creed and join forces for the common weal. One of these is the public school. Our school catalogues read like a list of Peace Congress delegates from the four corners of the earth.

In the same class is the Hospital, which, as an institution of common benefit, must needs enlist all nationalities in its support, and incidentally draw them into closer and more friendly relations with each other.

In a notable Hospital campaign in another city it happened that the general chairman of committees was a Jew, chosen for his sterling worth as a citizen no less than for his unusal business and executive ability. His first name was Isador, familiarly shortened by everybody to "Izzy." There was a "Latest Popular Success" in vogue at the time called "Keeping Up With Lizzie," and at one of the big team meetings the usual irrepressible wag changed it to "Keeping Up With Izzy," a quip which seems silly enough; but it caught the crowd, and in the rush of "Keeping up with Izzy" they not only reached the seemingly difficult goal of $150,000, but actually over-ran it by several thousands! And no one was thinking much about Izzy's nationality just then! He might have been German, Swede, Italian or anything else, and the result would have been the same if he had possessed the other compelling qualities.

In the important matter of general chairman for our campaign the trustees believe they have secured one who will "Keep up with—no matter whom," Mr. George E. Pfaffmann's name has a German tang about it, though he is an all-Quincy boy, and knows all about Quincy affairs. When a business man, who is known as one who makes things go, consents to take time from his own affairs to help push our campaign through, it is truly a thing to be thankful for: And please take particular notice of his corps of lieutenants, soon to appear.

CHIEF READ THE RIOT ACT

To Careless City Men Setting Fires With High Wind

MANY HOUSES IN DANGER

The burning of dead leaves on Atlantic street Tuesday afternoon during the high wind was responsible for calling out the Atlantic combination company on a still alarm shortly after 2 o'clock. It seems that the men employed in the street department had raked a large quanity of leaves into a pile on the street and then set fire to them. There was a high wind at the time and the blazing leaves were blown about in a manner that augured well for a lively fire. Many of these flying embers alighted on the houses in the neighborhood and one lady became so excited that she telephoned the fire station that her house was on fire. The Combination Co., made a quick run to the scene and on its arrival found the woman in hysterics.

Considering the high wind it was rather a dangerous proceeding on the part of the street men and Chief Litchfield read them a lecture on their carelessness.

The alarm from Box 61 at 4.19 Tuesday afternoon called the department to a slight fire in a childs crib in the house of Dennison Smith at 59 Hollis avenue. It is thought that children playing about the room secured some matches and started the fire. The mattress in the crib was destroyed but the fire did not spread beyond the crib. The loss will not exceed $5.

CORPORATOR RESENTS ATTACK

Ill Timed Criticism of Most Worthy Institution

Editor of the Ledger:—

I wish to say a word in regard to the cowardly attack made on the hospital and its methods through the columns of the Quincy Daily Ledger in an article entitled "A Popular Hospital." This attack on an institution which has done so much acknowledged good in the past is exceedingly ill timed and out of place, coming just now when the people are asked to subscribe so generously to its support, to say nothing of its dishonest effort to ignore all the good work done in the past by the hospital staff, Superintendent and nurses.

Let us by all means begin a new regime at the hospital wherein some spirit of fairness, kindness and courtesy shall be exhibited by our Board of Trustees towards those who have been and are doing the work of this institution so well and effectively that it stands today one of the best of its kind through the efforts of its builders and of the people within its walls who in the past have worked so arduously and devotedly in its interests.

Can the trustees afford to ignore this good work, evidenced by the many letters of warm commendation from so many of the poor as well as the rich which have appeared from year to year in the columns of the Ledger and the hospital paper called "Our Hospital." These need only to be looked up, to bring their own denial of these unjust insinuations.

Let us be represented on our Board of Trustees by men of some breadth of mind and some honesty of purpose. Let us discourage this spirit of gossip and personal spite on the part of some members of our hospital board which can only result in harm to the hospital.

A Corporator of the City Hospital of Quincy.

TWELVE JURORS CHOSEN

Has Been Hard Task to Secure Them In Ettor Trial

Salem, Mass., Oct. 16.—The jury for the trial of Joseph J. Ettor, Arturo Giovannitti and Joseph Caruso, charged as the two accessories and the principal in the killing of Mrs. Anna Lopizzo in the Lawrence strike, was completed at 4:14 yesterday afternoon in the Essex county superior court.

The task of picking twelve men has been the most gigantic in the history of New England jury trials. Two special venires of 350 men each had to be summoned. Five full court days were spent in examining the talesmen. It was necessary to examine 416 before twelve were found acceptable to both the prosecution and the defense. The defendants challenged sixty-one talesmen peremptorily and the government fifty-eight.

CONGRESS OF MEN'S CLUBS

Movement Meeting With General Approval of All

PUBLIC WELFARE KEYNOTE

The proposed congress of men's clubs is claiming widespread attention in Wollaston and vicinity and is securing the hearty support of individuals and organizations approached. Acting on the suggestion of William A. Mann, president of the Wollaston Congregational men's club it is proposed to have a union meeting of all the men's clubs and improvement societies in Wollaston and surrounding territory.

The meeting will be held late in November or early in December when all questions concerning the public welfare will be taken up and discussed. Arrangements as to time and place have been left in the hands of a committee composed of one member from each of the societies.

The great amount of public sentiment controlled by a gathering of this nature and the broad discussion of public questions sure to be brought about is expected to be productive of much good.

Just what wil be definitely accomplished by the gathering is not known but it is understood that the movement is looking toward a federation of all the men's clubs and kindred organizations in the city of Quincy.

☞The Ledger is to start a campaign this fall to double its circulation, and hopes to end the year with at least 10,000 daily circulation. Men or women of good standing can find pleasant employment at good pay soliciting subscriptions by applying at the Ledger Office.

Mrs. William H. Cleaves, sister-in-law of the bride played the wedding march. The bride looked charming in a costume of white messaline, with veil caught up with lilies of the valley. She carried a shower bouquet.

A reception followed the ceremony at which the four brothers of the bride, William H., Chester, F., Louis S. and C. Linwood Cleaves were the ushers.

ATLANTICERS FINE RECORD

Christian Endeavorers Took the Banner Three Years

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Memorial church of Atlantic won the banner for attendance of the East Norfolk Union and was presented with the trophy at the session held in the First Presbyterian church, Quincy Adams, Monday evening. The society had a percentage of 102,25 per cent more than any other society of the Union.

The Atlantic society attended the union meeting in style, having a special car to make the trip to and from the gathering. This is the third time the Atlanticers have won the banner in less than a year and they hope to keep up their winning streak and keep the banner as a permanent trophy at their church.

ROOSEVELT IS FEELING FINE

But He Must Spend at Least Ten Days In Hospital

REST AND QUIET NECESSARY

Wound In His Chest More Serious Than at First Supposed—No Effort Yet Made to Probe For Bullet and It May Not Be Removed—Anxious That Friends Should Not Be Unduly Apprehensive—Incident Puts Stop to Speech-Making Campaign

Chicago, Oct. 16.—Theodore Roosevelt was not merely superficially wounded by the bullet fired into his breast in Milwaukee by John Schrank, it was determined last night by surgeons after all-day examinations and consultations, and the colonel must not see or speak to anyone for several days without permission of the doctors.

The wound was definitely described as "a serious wound in the chest" and "not a mere flesh wound." The late bulletin which prohibited communication between the colonel and others than his attendants declared that "quietude is absolutely essential."

The surgeons asserted, however, that it was not yet necessary to probe for the bullet and the patient will be kept as calm as his nature will allow him for a few days. At 8 o'clock he settled down for the night, to sleep and read.

Spends Comfortable Day

Colonel Roosevelt slept well at intervals during the day, ate ravenously of articles customary making up his bill of fare, read lengthy extracts from Macaulay and hinted to his physician that he would not object to a ride in the fresh air.

Finally, learning that the correspondents accompany him on his speaking tour, who had left him after the assault in Milwaukee to file their articles, had rejoined his entourage at the hospital, Roosevelt insisted that the edict of his physicians against communication with him be ignored for the time.

He received the newspaper men with an apology for not arising, jested with them about his condition, and told them "I'll hurry up and get out of here so I can keep you busy again."

His doctors, however, did not feel inclined to allow him to leave inside of ten days, so that they might have no break in their careful watch for possible infection from the bullet.

Where Bullet Lodged

Unofficially it was made known that the physicians do not consider it necessary to probe for or operate to remove the bullet. It lies, as shown by the X-ray photographs brought from Milwaukee by Dr. Janssen and corroborated by others taken in Mercy hospital, not far from the breast bone on the right side and probably five inches below the collarbone. This missile did not get inside the ribs, but ploughed upward and inward for a distance of some five inches from where it entered.

The flesh along the course of the bullet showed no discoloration and there appeared to the physicians no cause for concern from any feature of the assault now past.

Colonel Roosevelt, anxious that his friends, and particularly members of his family, who were en route to Chicago, should not be unduly apprehensive at his condition, protested against the edict barring callers from his room, but acceded when all the consulting physicians indorsed the plan.

Concerned About Friends

He was anxious to greet members of his family. The first he was to see was his daughter, Mrs. Alice Longworth, who arrived from Cincinnati. The colonel's concern all day was not for himself, but for those he believed were likely to be too fearful of his condition.

He read all the hundreds of telegrams that poured into the hospital, and was delighted with several from men of note he met while abroad.

All of Roosevelt's speaking dates were cancelled today, save one tonight at Louisville. To that city former Senator Albert Beveridge of Indiana was sent, after a conference with the candidate, with a message the colonel insisted be read to his friends there.

No announcement regarding future plans of Roosevelt were made, all such action depending upon the length of time demanded of him by the physicians.

Colonel Roosevelt talked little of the assault. Most of that discussion was in jests with those who called on him.

Settles Down For Night

Colonel Roosevelt bade the last of his callers good night at 8 o'clock and prepared for a comfortable night, which was to be spent in part in reading. He said he felt fine and told Dr. Golden, who kept watch over him last night, that unless the final inspection of the tetanus anti-toxin interfered, he would have the "first real comfortable evening to himself" he had enjoyed in many days.

On his bed Roosevelt had piled several copies of writings of Macaulay, several back numbers of magazines and the Bible. His telegrams he had read and answered, leaving those coming after 8 p. m. to be answered today.

With his spectacles comfortably adjusted, all his books within reach, his down pillows replaced by cushions of curled hair, he told Miss Maragaret Fitgerald, the night nurse assigned to his room, that all he wanted was within his reach and that no one need worry about him till be began worrying for them.

Nurse Fitzgerald said that the colonel's pulse after his sponge bath was not far above normal, considering his physical characteristics, and a more important fact concerning it was its strong and steady rhythm, she said. Roosevelt, after his bath and shave, had no pain of any kind, but said he was slightly nervous from inaction.

Wakes Up and Reads

Colonel Roosevelt had laid aside his book a few minutes after 9 o'clock and switched off his reading light. He was scon fast asleep. Dr. Murphy went into the colonel's room at 9:30 and found him sound asleep. The patient's pulse was 86 when taken before he dropped asleep. This is two points higher than it was Monday night after the shooting and four above normal. His temperature was three-fifths of a degree above normal.

Colonel Roosevelt told his nurse as he picked up his book for a second spell of reading, about 11 o'clock, that he was going home to Oyster Bay Sunday. He ordered his breakfast for 7 o'clock and said: "Mind, I want a good one. I'll be hungry."

He gave directions about his clothes and his room to have everything in readiness to see Mrs. Roosevelt in the morning.

SCHRANK PLEADS GUILTY

Held In $7500 Bail For Shooting Roosevelt at Milwaukee

Milwaukee, Oct. 16.—John Schrank, Colonel Roosevelt's assailant, pleaded guilty to a charge of attempted murder when given a preliminary arraignment before Judge Neelen held in the district court. Judge Neelen held Schrank under bonds of $7500.

Sheriff Arnold took the prisoner to the county jail, directly across the street from the central police station, where the prisoner had spent the night, and Schrank was given a cell near the deputies' room, where a close watch could be kept on him.

SLIGHTLY CRAZY

What Bowery People Who Knew Schrank Thought About Him

New York, Oct. 16.—Habitues of the Bowery recall John Schrank, who tried to murder Colonel Roosevelt, as a harmless, inoffensive crank. A German with a somewhat noticeable accent, yellow hair and a reddish brown beard, he lived at White hotel, just a few feet off the Bowery on Canal street, for a long time.

Only one man penetrated the air of exclusiveness with which he surrounded himself. That was Jack Walker, bartender in the hotel, who said that he and Schrank often discussed general affairs over a glass of beer.

According to Walker, Schrank apparently had few friends and absolutely no intimates. He was always quiet in manner and in his conversation never discussed himself. While he had been heard to say that he considered Roosevelt a menace to the country, there was never anything in his conversation that led those in contact with him to believe that he held real animosity toward the Progressive presidential candidate.

Himself"—Condition Satisfactory

Although he said nothing about his affairs to anyone, the impression among the few who came in contact with him was that he was a real estate salesman, trying to dispose of developement projects to working men. He admitted that his work was hard and his sales small.

Everybody at the hotel believed he was slightly crazy, although no one there coulud give any particular reason for that belief other than the general reason that Schrank held aloof from his associates.

Gus Jost, proprietor of the hotel, said that Schrank always paid his bills promptly, and that when he left the hotel about the middle of September he did not say where he was going or what his forwarding address was.

QUINCY ALLIANCE.

The first autumn meeting of the Woman's Alliance was held in First church parlor, Monday afternoon, with Mrs. George G. Saville, the president, presiding. The devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. Saville after which the reports of the recording secretary, Mrs. Isabelle Davis, the coresponding secretary, Mrs. Charles H. Johnson, and the treasurer, Mrs. Ralph L. Lovell, were read and approved. Mrs. John Christiansen read some important religious communications and Mrs. Edward B. Marsh gave a very interesting report of the Alliance conference held last week at Concord, N. H.

It was voted to send a barrel of clothing to the colored school at Swansboro, North Carolina, where Miss Sophia W. French teaches; one to Calhoun, Ala., and another to Snowhill, Ala. Mrs. J. Henry Emery, Mrs. Edward B. Marsh, and Mrs. Charles H. Johnson will have charge of the barrels and contributions of clothing are earnestly solicited.

The Fragment society has invited the Alliance to have an English tea room at the fair to be held in December.

Business being disposed of Mrs. Saville announced the speaker of the afternoon, Rev. Adelbert Lathrop Hudson, pastor of the church, who said in part:

"The fact that the National Alliance had accomplished so much, in planting Unitarian churches throughout the South was a cause of rejoicing and congratulation. In Dalias, Texas, one of the strongest churches in the South is found. In Richmond, Va., a church doing wonderful work was founded wholly through the cheerful letter correspondence. In Jacksonville, Fla., there is another church which is flourishing and accomplishing good results.

"I spent two years as missionary worker in the South and I found the Alliance the great impelling factor among the churches. My first introduction was at Richmond, Va., and I was perfectly astonished to observe the courage, cheer and perfect faith of the people among the worshippers of this church. In talking with different ones they seemed like our New England people, but I supposed they were Southerners they were all so charming and hospitable but I discovered afterwards that they were New England people, who had moved South and made their homes. I enjoyed this beautiful church the gift of Northern people.

"In New Orleans our church dates before the war and the congregation is composed mostly of Creoles; native born, but Spanish descent, very distinguished people. But as a rule our churches in the South are not attended by the Southern people, they are very conservative and the same prejudice exists today towards the colored race. A fact that our church has not found many followers among the Southern people is due to the Southern people being good listeners, while our Northern people are great readers. We glean infomation from books, newspapers, magazines and othe literature. So while the minister will get larger audiences, they are as a rule fifty or sixty years behind the times. They have the idea that the Bible is a book inspired by God and written only in the English language. They take its teaching literally and cannot grasp the trend of modern thought. In Jacksonville, Fla., however we have a few Southern people identified with our church.

"In regard to the negro problem, as a rule the black race in the South is penniless, aimless, shiftless, of course there are exceptions, but there is an immense work to do to educate the colored people and make of them useful and intelligent citizens. We in the North look upon the negro as a principle, as sort of Anglo Saxon with a black skin, but you are dealing with an undeveloped being, wholly irresponsible and devoid of morality.

"For example they will attend a prayer meeting, the minister, so called, will exhort and expound upon the vengeance of God. They will groan, and writhe in contortions, and throw themselves prone upon the floor and on their way home from the meeting will stop and rob a hen roost. When expostulated with, they will say, 'what has God to do about that?'

"I wish to say to you confidentially, would you associate with and be on an equality with some of the lower element of your own city? No, you would resent it with every drop of blood in your veins. So we must take into consideration the feelings of the Southern people and realize how they must resent the colored race being on equality with them or having them ride beside refined ladies.

"We have a litle distance to go ourselves before we can pull the moat out of our Southern brother's eye. We have got this problem on our hands, and we cannot depart from it, but I think we can do more and better work, if we use our New England conscience. We have got to have more sympathy with our Southern brothers and sisters, and redouble our efforts towards redeeming the race feeling sure that God will bless us and lead us at last to peace and victory.

"One of the most stupendous blunders our republican party made was to put the ballot into the hands of the negro. Their votes put in power men who went South to plunder the state. For instance, a syndicate was formed, to build a bridge over a river and ten thousand dollars were needed to build it. By negro votes it was carried through Congress. A plank costing about fifty cents was placed across the river and the money divided among the syndicate.

"We have cherished our opinions and the Southerner is absolutely fixed in his opinion. He looks upon the black man, not as a human soul, simply an animal, no capacity, incapable out of the question for him to advance.

"The Southern people have got to be won by gentle persuasion, and we as an Alliance must redouble our efforts and ambitions, trusting in God to carry our resolutions into actions and bring a good result.

A rising vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Hudson, after which a social and informal hour was enjoyed, during which refreshments were served, Mrs. J. H. Emery and Mrs. T. L. Sturtevant acting as hostesses, assisted by Mrs. Frank S. Davis and Mrs. W. F. Hodgkinson, Mrs. L. H. Sturtevant and Miss L. A. Putnam.

Y. M. C. A. AUXILIARY.

The October meeting of the Women's Auxiliary to the Quincy Y. M. C. A. was largely attended Friday the 11th in Association hall. The president Mrs. E. T. Beale presided. Rev. James A. Matheson lead the devotional exercises, reading from II Samuel 18th chapter and Zachariah 2d chapter, speaking strongly for the safety of our young men. A vocal solo by Miss Miller, "The Homeland" was pleasing, Mrs. Nickerson at the organ.

After the usual business the president graciously introduced Rev. Isaiah W. Sneath of Wollaston. Mr. Sneath has the welfare of the young men of our city much at heart and made an appeal for all mothers to directly or indirestly bring mothers love and mother care to bear on some mother's son. A social half hour followed.

CRIMINALLY LIABLE

Florist Woods Is Held Responsible For Death of Goldrup

Dedham, Mass., Oct. 16.—Albert H. Woods of Brookline, who shot and killed Thomas Goldrup on the night of Sept. 18, was found criminally liable in causing the death of Goldrup, in a report of Justice Perkins of the Brookline court, filed in the clerk's office here.

Judge Perkins summed up his findings as follows: "Woods was not in danger of bodily harm from Goldrup and had no apprehension of the deceased. Woods was not acquainted with Goldrup and had no motive in attacking him other than that of punishing any person whom he might discover trespassing upon his grounds and stealing.

"I find that Albert H. Woods was grossly negligent in discharging the gun at Goldrup and that for the death caused thereby he is criminally liable."

Sues Police Chief

Taunton, Mass., Oct. 16.—Suit for $15,000 has been instituted against Chief of Police Danford by Joseph Silverman, who alleges that Danforth assisted Rhode Island police officers to take him to that state to answer a charge against him, and that the local police head was without authority to do so.

"A GAMBLERS' PLOT"

Probable Line of Defense In Trial of Lieutenant Becker

New York, Oct. 16.—Gamblers, and not Police Lieutenant Becker, instigated the murder of Herman Rosenthal, according to the line of defense indicated by counsel for the accused officer at yesterday's session of his trial.

A large sum of money, raised by the gamblers, was paid to get Rosenthal out of New York when he began to "squeal" on the subject of police protection, and when he took the money and then refused to go, the gamblers, threatened with the loss of their protection, plotted and executed his murder through the agency of the four gunmen.

At least, such was the line of defense implied in questions put by John F. McIntyre, Becker's counsel, to Sam Schepps on the witness stand.

Schepps spent practically the entire day on the stand corroborating the testimony of Jack Rose, Bridgie Webber and Harry Vallon, the trio of self-confessed accomplices in the crime, who accuse Becker of having inspired the murder.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Mrs. Keziah Coffin, supposed widow, is arranging to move from Trumet to Boston, following the death of her brother, for whom she had kept house. Grace Van Horne, ward of Capt. Eben Hammond, leader of the "Come-outer" religious sect, offers to assist her financially if she will remain. She declines. Kyan Pepper, widower, offers marriage, and is indignantly refused.

CHAPTER II—Capt. Elkanah Daniels, leader of the Regular church, offers Keziah a place as housekeeper for the new minister, and she decides to remain in Trumet.

CHAPTER III—Keziah takes charge of Rev. John Ellery, the new minister, and gives him advice as to his conduct toward members of the parish. Ellery causes a sensation by attending a "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER IV—Ellery's presence is bitterly resented by Eben Hammond, leader of the meeting. Grace apologizes for her guardian and Ellery escorts her home in the rain. Capt. Nat Hammond, Eben's son, becomes a hero by bringing the packet into port safely through fog and storm. Ellery finds Keziah writing a letter to some one, inclosing money in response to a demand. She is curiously startled when informed of the arrival of Nat.

CHAPTER V—Nat calls on Keziah, and it develops that they have been lovers since youth. Daniels remonstrates with Ellery for attending "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER VI—Ellery is caught by the tide and is rescued by Nat. They become friends.

CHAPTER VII—Ellery meets Grace while walking in the fields Sunday, and learns that she walks there every Sunday.

CHAPTER VIII—The clergyman takes dinner Sundays with the Daniels. Annabel, the captain's daughter, exerts herself to make an impression on him. She notices with vexation his desire to get away every Sunday at a certain time. She watches him through a spy glass.

CHAPTER IX—Nat again importunes Keziah to marry him. He says he has had a quarrel with his father, who wants him to marry Grace.

CHAPTER X—Ellery asks Grace to marry him. She confesses that she loves him, but says she fears to displease her guardian, who has been very kind to her, and asks time to think about it. Elkanah Daniels tells Eben about the meetings between Ellery and Grace. Eben declares he will make Grace choose between him and the preacher. Grace finds him in a faint, following the excitement of Elkanah's visit.

CHAPTER XI—Just before he dies Eben exacts a promise from Nat and Grace that they will marry.

CHAPTER XII—Keziah breaks the news to Ellery and later he receives a note from Grace saying she is to marry Nat, and asking him not to try to see her again. Keziah tells the story of her own marriage with a man who turned out to be a good-for-nothing, and who was reported to have been lost at sea, and of her love for Nat, whom she cannot marry because the husband is alive. Ellery sees in the story a lesson in devotion to duty and decides to remain and attend to his duties.

CHAPTER XIII—Captain Nat sails for Manila to be gone two years. He says he and Grace have decided not to marry until he returns.

CHAPTER XIV—Nat is overdue, and it is feared that he has been lost at sea. Keziah gets a letter from her husband saying he is coming back. Grace goes on a visit to relatives of the Hammonds.

CHAPTER XV—A vessel flying distress signals is discovered off the coast. Ellery goes with party to board the vessel. A man is found suffering from smallpox, the rest of the crew having deserted.

CHAPTER XVI—He is taken to an abandoned shack on shore and Ellery helps nurse him. Before he dies it is discovered that he is Keziah's husband. Ellery, left alone in quarantine, is found wandering in a delirious condition by Grace. She takes him back to the shanty and sends for help.

CHAPTER XVII—Keziah and Grace nurse Ellery, who is suffering from brain fever. The doctor and Keziah spread a report that Grace and Ellery are engaged. News comes that Nat has arrived safely in Boston.

CHAPTER XVIII—The story of the wreck of Nat's vessel comes out and a home-coming is arranged, but Nat fails to appear.

Nat stopped in his stride. "Well?" he exclaimed. "I almost forgot, after all. Keziah sent a note to you. I've got it in my pocket. She gave it to me when she left me at Cohasset."

"Left you? Why! didn't she come back with you on the night train?"

"No. That's funny, too, and I don't understand it yet. We was together all the afternoon. I was feelin' so good at seein' her that I took her under my wing and we cruised all over that town together. Got dinner at the tavern and she went with me to buy myself a new hat, and all that. At first she didn't seem to want to, but then, after I'd coaxed a while, she did. She was lookin' pretty sad and worn out, when I first met her, I thought; but she seemed to get over it and we had a fine time. It reminded me of the days when I used to get home from a voyage and we were together. Then, when 'twas time for the night train we went down to the depot. She gave me this note and told me to hand it to you today.

"'Good-by, Nat,' she says. 'We've had a nice day, haven't we?'

"'We have, for a fact,' I says. 'But what are you sayin' good-by for?'

"'Because I'm not goin' to Trumet with you,' says she. 'I'm goin' to the city. I've got some business to see to there. Good-by.'

"I was set back, with all my canvas flappin'. I told her I'd go to Boston with her and we'd come home to Trumet together tomorrow, that's today. But she said no. I must come here and ease your mind and Grace's. I must do it. So at last I agreed to, sayin' I'd see her in a little while. She went on the up train and I took the down one. Hired a team in Sandwich and another in Bayport and got to the tavern about eleven. That's the yarn. And here's your note. Maybe it tells where she's gone and why."

The minister took the note and tore open the envelope. Within was a single sheet of paper. He read a few lines, stopped, and uttered an exclamation.

"What's the matter?" asked the captain.

Ellery did not answer. He read the note through and then, without a word, handed it to his friend.

The note was as follows:

"Dear John:

"I am going away, as I told you I would if he came. He is coming. Tuesday I got a letter from him. It was written at Kingston, Jamaica, almost three months ago. I can't think why I haven't got it sooner, but suppose it was given to some one to mail and forgotten. In it he said he was tired of going to sea and was coming home to me. I had money, he said, and we could get along. He had shipped aboard a brig bound for Savannah, and from there he was going to try for a berth on a Boston-bound vessel. So I am going away and not coming back. I could not stand the disgrace and I could not see him. You and Grace won't need me any more now. Don't worry about me. I can always earn a living while I have my strength. Please don't worry. If he comes tell him I have gone you do not know where. That will be true, for you don't. I hope you will be very happy. I do hope so. Oh, John, you don't know how I hate to do this, but I must. Don't tell Nat. He would do something terrible to him if he came, and Nat knew. Just say I have been called away and may be back some time. Perhaps I may. Love to all. Good-by.

"Yours truly,
"KEZIAH COFFIN."

The captain stared at the note. Then he threw it to the floor and started for the door. The minister sprang from his chair and called to him.

"Nat," he cried. "Nat! Stop! where are you going?"

Hammond turned.

'Goin'?" he growled. "Goin'? I'm goin' to find her, first of all. Then I'm comin' back to wait for him."

"But you won't have to wait. He'll never come. He's dead."

"Dead? Dead? By the everlastin'! this has been too much for you, I ought to have known it. I'll send the doctor here right off. I can't stay myself. I've got to go. But——"

"Listen! listen to me! Ansel Coffin is dead, I tell you. I know it. I know all about it. That was what I wanted to see you about. Did Keziah tell you of the San Jose and the sailor who died of smallpox in this very building? In that room there?"

"Listen! Listen to Me! Ansel Coffin Is Dead."

"Yes. John, you——"

"I'm not raving. It's the truth. That sailor was Ansel Coffin. I watched with him and one night, the night before he died, he spoke Keziah's name. He spoke of New Bedford and of Trumet and of her, over and over again. I was sure who he was then, but I called in Ebenezer Capen, who used to know Coffin in New Bedford. And he recognized him. Nat, as sure as you and I are here this minute, Ansel Coffin, Aunt Keziah's husband, is buried in the Trumet cemetery."

CHAPTER XX.

In Which Mr. Stone Washes His Hands.

Mr. Abner Stone, of Stone & Barker, marine outfitters and ship chandlers, with a place of business on Commercial street in Boston, and a bank account which commanded respect throughout the city, was feeling rather irritable and out of sorts. Poor relations are always a nuisance.

Mr. Stone had "washed his hands" of his cousin, Keziah Coffin, or thought he had. After her brother Solomon died she had written to him, asking him to find her a position of some kind in Boston. "I don't want money, I don't want charity," wrote Keziah. "What I want is work. Can you get it for me, Abner? I write because father used to tell of what you said to him about gratitude and how you would never rest until you had done something in return for what he did for you."

Captain Ben Hall's kindness was the one thing Mr. Stone forgot when he said no one had ever helped him. He disliked to be reminded of it. It was a long while ago and the captain was dead. However, being reminded, he had called upon a friend in the tailoring line and had obtained for Keziah the place of sewing woman. She decided to become housekeeper at the Trumet parsonage and so notified him. Then he washed his hands of her.

But now he was compelled to soil them again. Keziah had appeared at his office, without warning, and demanded that he find her a position. "Demanded" was the proper word. Certainly she had not begged. She seemed to feel that her demand was right and proper, and his acceding to it the least he could do.

"What a fine place you've got here, Abner!" she said, inspecting the office and store. "I declare it's finer than the one you had when you first went into business, afore you failed. I wish father could have lived to see it. He'd have realized that his judgment was good, even though his investment wasn't."

Captain Hall had invested largely in that first business, the one which failed. Mr. Stone changed the subject. Later in the day he again sought his friend, the tailor, and Keziah was installed in the loft of the latter's Washington street shop, beside the other women and girls who sewed and sewed from seven in the morning until six at night. Mr. Stone had left her there and come away, feeling that an unpleasant matter was disposed of. He had made some inquiries as to where she intended staying, even added a half-hearted invitation to dinner that evening at his home. But she declined.

"No, thank you, Abner," she said, "I'm goin' to find a boardin' place and I'd just as soon nobody knew where I was for the present. And there's one thing I want to ask you: don't tell a soul I am here. Not a soul. If anyone should come askin' for me, don't give 'em any satisfaction. I'll tell you why some day, perhaps. I can't now."

MONTENEGRINS SCORE VICTORY

Capture Stronghold Upon Which Turkey Placed Reliance

TUSHI NOW IN THEIR HANDS

Thirty-Six Hundred Turks and Large Supply of Munitions of War Are Taken—Road Now Open to Capital of Albania—Tension Between Russia and Austria Grows Serious

London, Oct. 16.—It is officially announced from Cettinje, Montenegro, that 3600 Turks and a large supply of arms and ammunition were captured at Tushi. King Nicholas, who had been watching the engagement, entered the fort and hoisted the Montenegrin flag.

The total losses on both sides in this district are given officially at 1442 killed or wounded, of which 650 were Turkish soldiers.

It is reported that Vranya, another Turkish town to the north of Scutari, has fallen. Heavy fighting continues at Tarabosch.

The surrender of Tushi opens the way to Scutari, where Turkish forces are said to be concentrating and on which the Montenegrin troops are now advancing.

A division commanded by Crown Prince Danilo, after a fierce battle, occupied the fortifications and heights of Psitchanitch, Tushi and Paltnia. The final charge against Tushi and Psitchanitch was at the bayonet point, and the Turks surrendered.

The fall of Tushi is an important victory for Montenegrins, as this fort is practically the only stronghold which kept the second division of the Montenegrin army from advancing south to Scutari, the capital of Albania. Fighting has been going on at Tushi for some days and the Montenegrins had surrounded seventeen battalions of Turks there so that escape was well nigh hopeless.

Shiptchenik, where the heaviest fighting of the campaign has occurred, is a short distance northwest of Tushi, and the capture of the former meant the fall of the latter. It is probable that by this time the main Servian army has passed through the long narrow Morava defile and has emerged on the comparatively high plateau between Vranya and the frontier, where the concentration is finished.

The danger of a general European war as a result of the Balkan crisis continues to increase. British, French and German foreign offices are exchanging views on the increasing tension between Russia and Austria. Meanwhile Italy is mobilizing 400,000 army reserves to be in readiness for whatever may turn up.

Turkey yesterday rejected Greece's ultimatum demanding surrender of Greek ships seized by Turkish authorities. The Greek minister prepared to leave Constantinople in expectation of war.

The Bulgarian minister has already asked for his passports. The Servian minister is expected to follow his example at once.

HANDWRITING OF YOUNG IDENTIFIED

Boston Man Figures In Alleged Dynamite Conspiracy

Indianapolis, Oct 16.—Signatures were identified by witnesses at the "dynamite conpsiracy" trial as showing the movements of the forty-five defendants during the six years in which explosions occurred.

The signature of Michael J. Young, Boston, was identified by Frederick P. Palmer, employer of a Boston trust company. The witness said Young kept an account as treasurer of the building trades of the American Federation of Labor.

Through this identification the government said it would show that Young wrote to J. J. McNamara and other officials of the Iron Workers' union concerning the employment of Ortie E. McManigal to do "jobs" near Boston.

HIS BEATINGS WERE REGULAR

Brown Said His Better Half Pounded Him Once a Month

HE HOBOED IN SUMMER

Phillip M. Brown a well known citizen of Houghs Neck was arraignd before Judge Avery this morning charged with assaulting his wife Mary J. Brown. Mrs. Brown told the court that her husband did not live with her steadily but came to her house off and on. Last Thursday he came to the house and after throwing things about pushed her down just as though she had been a sheet of paper, with the result that her wrist was cut and she was otherwise bruised. She also said that he cursed and swore at her. She could get along splendid without him. She was afraid of her life of him.

Mr. Brown in telling his story said that in summer time he hoboed it and lived in his summer shanty on Adams Shore but in the winter months he lived at home because he could not keep warm in his shanty. Last Thursday when he visited the house he found that his bed had been moved from the room it usualy occupied and he proceeded to move things back when she caught him by the wrist. Suddenly letting go she fell by her own momentum. He declared that he had never struck her but once in his life. That was years ago. but that she beat and pounded him about once a month. That he knew when he came back winters he was in for a beating but he stood it and got along the best he could rather than remain in the shanty where it was cold. The fact was that there had not been three months since he married her that he did not get a licking. The court continued the case until December 1.

TAFT REVIEWS BIG FLEET

Traffic Is Tied Up While War Vessels Steam to Sea

New York, Oct. 16.—Standing on the deck of the Mayflower with the secretary of the navy at his side, President Taft viewed the great Atlantic fleet as it passed out to sea after the mobilization in the Hudson.

The flagship Connecticut led the fifteen-mile line of fighting craft, and each vessel fired the presidential salute of twenty-four guns as it passed the president's yacht off the statue of liberty.

For the first time in years all traffic on the North river was halted for hours.

The review was one of the most wonderful spectacles ever presented in American waters, and was witnessed by thousands who crowded the river docks and the great fleet of passenger craft that was anchored in the upper bay.

SENIER SLUGGED AN OLD WOMAN

Then Robbed Her of All She Had, a Meagre 12 Cents

HELD IN $2,000 BAIL

John E. Senior, the young man who was arrested in City Square early Monday morning on stuspicion that he was the party who broke into the store of George E. Sprague on the corner of Washington and River street was held in $2,000 on two complaints in court this morning for the grand jury.

Monday morning Officer Dhooge saw a man run out from behind the store of Sprague. The officer held him up and searched him but finding nothing criminating about the fellow let him go. A little later de discovered that the store of Sprague had been entered and immediately notified the police station of the facts. The patrol wagon was sent out to pick him up and he was found near the corner of Washington and Coddington streets. When the case was called Monday, Chief Burrell asked that the case be continued until this morning that he might look up the fellow.

That same Monday morning Russell Green, who resides near Newcomb Square, came to the Ledger office with a story that he had seen an old woman held up and robbed near the corner of Shaw and Hayward streets, East Braintree, late Sunday night. The woman he said was picked up in a semi-conscious state and taken into a neighbors house. She refused to give her name or make any complaint.

The Ledger communicated with the Braintree police and learned that the case had not been reported to them and they knew nothing about it. They made an investigation however and upon receiving word from Chief Burrell that Senior claimed to live in that vicinity, learned that the woman was Mrs. Mary Dignon who resided near where the hold up took place. She is a woman over 60 years of age and after knocking her down the fellow robbed her of all the money she had, which happened to be but 12 cents.

The police believed that Senior did this job and when charged with it by the police, owned up that he was the man. A warrant was issued against him for highway robbery and in court this morning he pleaded guilty and was held in $1000 for the grand jury. He also pleaded guilty to breaking into Sprague's store and was held in $1,000 on that complaint.

The topic for discussion at the meeting of the Men's club at the Washington Street Congregational church tonight is "What is Quincy Point's most urgent need?" The speakers on the subject wil be members of the club.

SCANDINAVIAN PROGRESSIVES

Listen to the Arguments of Party Candidates

ENTHUSIASM RAMPANT

An enthusiastic Scandinavian rally in the interest of the Progressive Party candidates was held at Alpha hall Tuesday evening. In addition to the large number of Scandinavians many others were in the audience.

John H. Johnson was chairman of the meeting and the speakers were Professir Joseph L. Larsen, Col. Henry L. Kincaide, James P. Roberts and John Evans, both candidates for the house of representatives.

A delegation from the John A. Boyd Camp, U. S. W. V. attended the rally and Adjutant Henry J. Matthews announced the resolutions endorsing the candidacy of Col. Kincaide for congress had been adopted by the camp and this was received with great applause.

In opening the meeting Mr. Johnson said the land of opportunity to which our fathers came had passed into oblivion and the privileged interests now controlled it. He charged this condition to the boss rule of the Democratic and Republican parties.

Col. Henry L. Kincaide talked on the progressive issues of the campaign and the attitude of Congressman Harris on questions affecting the people. He reviewed his record as published, calling particular attention to the number of times he was listed with the non-voters. He said that Congresman Harris did not fully discharge his obligations to the voters of the district and said that following an examination the thinking voter would repudiate him.

James P. Roberts spoke on the needs of the fifth Norfolk district and charged Representative Piper with violating his agrement with the people.

John Evans, candidate for the house from the sixth district spoke on a minimum wage bill for women and children.In closing he said the standard of $10 was not to much to set for working women.

NEITHER SIDE SCORED.

The soccer teams of the Massachusetts Fields and Coddington schools played a 0 to 0 game at Merymount park Tuesday afternoon.

At the ward three playgrounds the Adams beat the Lincoln team 1 to 0 and the Willard beat the Gridley Bryant 1 to 0. The later contest was close and exciting and was warmly applauded by a gallery of about 300 children.

The groom's gift to the ushers were gold stickpins with topaz and pearls.

The groom's gift to the bride was a diamond pendant.

They were the recipients of many beautiful and useful gifts, namely silver, cut glass, china, pictures and linen.

The bride had sung in the Memorial church choir for nine years and was very popular in Atlantic. She graduated from Woodward Institute in 1906.

The groom was formerly a buyer in a Boston firm but is now garment buyer for C. F. Sherer of Worcester.

MONSTER BANQUET

Marked the 25th Anniversary of the Presbyterian Church

TRIBUTE TO DECEASED

The 25th anniversary of the dedication of the First Presbyterian edifice on Water street was observed Wednesday evening by a monster banquet in the basement of the church at which there were 225 covers laid. Rev. J. A. Matheson was toastmaster and Rev. Herbert Manchester of East Boston, Rev. A. N. Sproul of Newport and Dr. James A. Todd of the Boston Presbytery were the speakers.

The tables were tastefully arranged by the Ladies Aid Society and an abundance of flowers, the gift of Rev. Mr. Sproul, were set among the decorations.

The viands were chicken pie, cold ham, tomatoes, lettuce, celery, oranges, cranberries, ice cream, cake, rolls and coffee.

Rev. Eben Muse and Rev. John Ramsey, the second and third pastors of the church, both of whom died here were accorded a fine tribute by all of the speakers. A large portrait of the deceased clergymen occupied a conspicuous position on the platform.

The outlook of Presbyterianism here was the chief topic of the speakers and their optimism communicated to their hearers and the applause was frequent. All told of experiences and commented upon the friendly feeling existing between themselves and the parishioners.

An orchestra composed of Wendell Clark, Miss Jessie Shirley and Miss Edna Crockett gave music throughout the evening. Solos were rendered by Miss Minnie Miller, Everett Clark and Daniel McArthur.

The following members of the ladies Society served at the banquet;

Mrs. Alexander Clark, chairman, Mrs. N. McFadgen, Mrs. C. Ross, Mrs. J. MacKay, Mrs. S. Dell, Mrs. D. McLennon, Mrs J. McLennon, Mrs. Forbes Craig, Mrs. John Joss, Mrs. D. Muckle, Mrs. W. Farquhar, Mrs. Daniel Dawson, Mrs. Mary Evans, Mrs. G. Johnson and Mrs. James Milne.

ANNUAL FAIR OF THE S. OF V.

In years past the annual fair given under the auspices of the G. A. R. and the W. R. C. has been in most towns and cities, the most important feature emanating from the various patriotic societies. The public has always looked forward to it with much favor. Last year the Sons of Veterans undertook to emulate the example set by their fathers and Camp 95 of Quincy held its first annual fair in Faxon hall lasting a week. Judging by the way the public responded and by the financial returns the fair was a notable success from its start.

With the experience gained Camp 95 has this year planned their second fair to be held in Faxon hall, Oct. 28 to Nov. 2 inclusive. New features will be inaugurated this year and a much larger patronage is already assured. It is the intention of the "Sons" to make their fair a regular annual feature and with that in view every detail is considered that everybody will be pleased and consider it more than "worth while."

SIXTEEN TABLES.

At the whist party given at Protection hall last evening by Maple lodge K. and L. of H. No. 313, sixteen tables were in play and a very enoyable time was had by all. Souveniers were awarded to Mrs. S. E. Sproule, W. M. Dorley, Mrs. Rose A. Reed, Mrs. A. H. Phillbrook, Miss Ethel M. Jones, Mrs. Davidson, Mrs. W. M. Dorley, Mrs. A. J. Williams. The consolation was awarded Mrs. Susan Hewson. The committee in charge were Miss M. Lizzie Furnald, Mrs. Alberta Hewson and Mrs. Rose A. Reed. 51 was the highest and 15 the lowest score.

THE FLAG HE LOVED

Was Wrapped Around His Last Earthly Casket

Isaac M. Holt, an ex-councilman of Quincy and Past Commander of Paul Revere Post, G. A. R. was buried from his home, Cottage street Wednesday afternoon.

Around the casket was the American flag which he wrapped around the remains of Francis L. Souther of Quincy, the first Northern soldier to fall at Big Bethel one of the first battles of war.

The flag came into Mr. Holt's possession after the war and it was his wish that it be buried with him.

Services were conducted by Rev. B. A. Willmott. He delivered a touching address and referred largely to the debt of gratitude which the people of today owe to the veterans of the Civil war. In closing he said that the veterans had engaged in warfare on the field of civil life and now the last warfare was ended. He said Mr. Holt had been mustered out and had gone to the homeland.

During the service the Temple quartet rendered "There is rest in the shade of the trees." At the Grand Army service, which was conducted by Commander Frances P. Loud of Paul Revere post and Chaplain Wyman Nightingale, the quartet sang "When the Boys in Blue are Gone" and "Good Night."

The remains were escorted to the Mt. Wollaston cemetery by the members of the post and a detail from the Col. Abner B. Packard Camp, Sons of Veterans, under the leadership of Commander Loud and Chaplain Wyman Nightingale who beat a muffled drum.

As the remains were lowered into the ground a three round volley was fired and taps were sounded.

The color bearers were Joseph A. Lapham and Charles Cummings. William M. Bird was sergeant of the firing squad which consisted of the following; Asa A. Pope, Edward M. Litchfield, Luther Parrot and James M. Pierce.

The bearers were Lieut. Mark E. Hanson of the police department; Past Commander Thomas Ring, Edward Richardson, John S. Farrell, Samuel DeForrest and David R. Coles.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

An unusual evidence of the coming prosperity of Quincy real estate values was presented at the monthly meeting of the Wollaston Co-operative Bank Tuesday afternoon when Secretary-Treasurer Herbert W. Pinkham reported that 1000 of a new series of 1700 shares which were placed on sale Oct. 1st were sold. Loans amounting to $32,000 were also authorized at the meeting.

Editorial Comment

The Royal Rooters did not get much consideration Tuesday for all their loyalty. Such is base ball. The money counted more than all this tom fool loyalty.

The gales are bound to come any way, so let them travel right along quick and give us the scallops so that there will be no excuse for keeping up the price of this food product.

That eighth inning return sent a thrill of delight to the watchers of the Ledger bulletin.

The returns were coming in a little mixed towards the end Wednesday.

We not only pay more for food but for many other American products than they can be purchased in the European markets.

Mayor Fitzgerald has found something else to buzz around about. He now declares war on the long and menacing hat pin.

There were many cracks before the final adjustment of the world's series.

A woman who has been declared legally dead by three courts has bobbed up and claims a share of an estate.

Sarah Bernhardt is now writing on all subjects from beauty preservation to pugilism and Bull fighting. That is the first we ever heard of the divine Sarah laying claim to beauty.

The agony is over. Some few thousands can now settle down to sane pursuits.

If you are not on the voting lists there is small chance to vote at the state election.

Candidate Wilson is doing a very courteous thing in refraining from campaign speaking while the other speaking candidate is laid up from his wounds.

About this time we hear the usual prosperity nonsense as part of the campaign joshing. The people would refer to hear from the agricultural or some other department that the price of goods on this side of the water was sofewhere near the low figure that American goods are quoted at on the other side.

The Turks and Italians are at peace but now Turkey has a little difference at her own doorstep.

The sleep walker who fell down six stories and escaped with minor injuries was certainly born under a lucky star.

Schepps looked more like a business man than the associate of thugs and gamblers, is the way the papers described his appearance in court. To look neat and kippy is the gamblers chief stock in trade.

BOWLING HEALTHFUL.

Bowling is one of the most healthful of exercises. It affords at all times a play of all the muscles of the limbs and body, from which the greatest development can be secured. The physical development is of benefit to the mental development and the two combined tend towards perfect manhod and womanhood. It is an exercise which both sexes can indulge in. The movement is by no means violent but it is easy and can be made graceful. Of course all are not endowed with the same powers of easy graceful action, but even to the awkward this sport affords much that is desirable.

It is a clean, enjoyable sport. There is nothing in it which tends towards crookedness and the rivalry in tournaments is keen, but kept within reasonable bounds so that no disagreeable features are likely to crop uppermost and mar the complete enjoyment to those who indulge in it.

Bowling should be encouraged. It deserves a high place because of its benefits and the good sport which it provides for winter amusement.

EXERCISE CARE.

Now that the autumn foliage is falling from the trees and littering streets, gardens and lawns, the city as well as individual householders are greeted with the problem of taking care of this great mass of material. The easiest and best way to get rid of it, seems to be to burn it up. This method appeals strongly to every one. It affords the average boy the delight of a bon fire. And even some who have passed beyond the boyhood stage do not hesitate to get some fun out of acting as chief director of a leaves fire.

There has been a tremendous fall of leaves in every part of the city, and the trees along the highway have added their contribution to those which fall from private domain.

It is necessary that the rubbish should be disposed of and the bon fire presents the most feasible plan.

At the same time, every one, with a view to the public safety, and the rights of others should exercise great care in the handling of those fires.

A frisky cow, kicking over a pot of boiling tar, furnished the most disastrous fire ever visited upon Chicago in 1871. The origin of the great Boston fire in the next year, the anniversary of which will be celebrated next month likewise had a small beginning.

Flames from burning leaves are carried high by the blustery October winds. Blazing leaves are carried aloft and spread out a menace to property. Burn up the leaves and clear the streets and lawns and gardens but at the same time exercise care and watchfulness and at all times lay plans to prevent the fire from getting beyond control and doing damage to property.

A DIFFICULT PATIENT.

While it was at first considered that Col. Roosevelt's wound was a mere scratch there are aggravating circumstances which make it painful and unpleasant and may tend to make it more serious than it really should be. And the most dangerous factor in bringing about serious complications, as every one must have an idea, at this time, is the Colonel himself.

A strong, rugged man, with marvelous vitality, wonderful nerve and indomitable spirit, chafes at the injury which confines him to the bed of an invalid.

Bouyant, full of life he cannot understand that even nature can be overtaxed. He has been under a terrific strain for some months. He has labored as few men would care or dare to labor and naturally that strenuous effort should have taken something from his natural strength and vitality.

At this stage the Colonel should realize that the doctors are better able to judge of his case and prescribe the treatment than he is. He should curb his impatience, suffer the restraint which is necessary and aid the doctors in their efforts to make a quick and complete recovery.

The whole country rejoices that the assassins bullet failed of its mission. There would be universal regret if the speedy recovery to which all extend a hope should be retarded by the natural energetic impulses of the distinguished patient.

THOUGHTFUL AND CAREFUL.

That was a thoughtful and careful lady who stopped on Hancock street, Wednesday afternoon and kicked into the gutter, several stray bananna peelings. She was coming along the street, with a youngster who was not more than five years old. The little one was enjoying a banana and with the carelessness of youth dropped the peeling in his tracks. The lady, evidently the mother of the youthful, was more careful and considerate of the feelings and danger to others. She carefully booted the peelings from the brick sidewalk into the gutter where they could do no harm.

A less considerate person would have passed on and permitted the peelings to remain and exercise their baleful influence on some passerby who was not looking for such an obstruction in his path. Careless distribution of banana peelings on streets and sidewalks have been responsible for many serious accidents, some resulting in permanent injury to the innocent victim.

It was refreshing to see this lady, no doubt with visions of some unfortunate slipping on the peelings, take the precaution to shunt them to one side where they were harmless. Such consideration for the welfare of others is rare, but at all times it is commendable and if exercised to a greater degree by people in general would be of material benefit to mankind. More exhibitions of this kind would erase some of that brash indifference to the comfort of others which unfortunately is so pronounced on every hand.

QUINCY GIRL GOT DAMAGES

Awarded $200 for Being Run Over by Automobile

The action of Marguerite Macdonnell against Lila I. Knibbs of Worcester, which was tried in the Superior court Monday was decided by the jury in favor of the plaintiff and damages of $200 awarded. The action was brought to recover for injuries sustained by being run over by an automobile three years ago, on Washington street.

The plaintiff, who was then 13 years old, was going home from the market riding a bicycle. The defendant's automobile, on its way to Brant Rock overtook her and ran over her, the wheels actually passing over her limbs. No bones were broken. Dr. Welch, who attended the plaintiff, declared it a remarkable escape from death. Beyond a scalp wound and nervous shock there was no great injury. The defendant denied liability and refused to settle.

The plaintiff's case was presented by Edward J. Fegan of this city. William C. Foley represented the defendant.

The plaintiff is a student at the Woodward school and lives at Quincy Point with her mother, Mrs. Margaret S. Macdonnell.

EX-MAYOR SHEA COMING BACK.

Editor of Daily Ledger:

It has been noticed the past week that our genial ex-Mayor has been showing unusual activity, and rumors have been rife that he was about to engage in another political fray, with the intention of assuming the position of standard bearer. When our political reporter got on his trail the rumors were found untrue, as to their political aspect, the ex-mayor being engaged in nothing worse than organizing a team of ten able bodied citizens to work in the coming City Hospital campaign.

It may be that ex-Mayor Shea will make campaign speeches, but they will be entirely of a financial nature, and it is presumed that Democrats, Republicans and Progressives alike will be touched by his eloquence.

BILL LESLIE LEADING MAN

At the Regular Meeting of the Montclair Association

At the regular meeting of the Montclair Improvement Association, Wednesday evening, Representative William J. Leslie was the principal speaker.

Mr. Leslie bespoke his pleasure at meeting an organization of this nature which he said was one of the best things for the city. They should bear in mind that there afe other associations at work and not be discouraged if what is sought is not received at first.

The speaker recalled his early experiences in the city council and told of the help an association could be in backing up their representatives

The city planning of Chicago and other cities in which the city is laid out for years to come was mentioned. Work along similar lines could be done in a smaller way by the local associations.

Streets should be straightened and widened before the district is built up and watch should be kept for developments that would injure the locality.

The bill introduced some time ago in the Legislature for a bridge across the Neponset river under cover of which the railroad attempted to complete its freight system between Hyde Park and the proposed freight terminal at Atlantic was instanced.

In summing up his years work in the Legislature Representative Leslie stated that he had won out on everything for which he had stood with one exception.

This was a new bridge across the Neponset river. He now had hope that this would be taken care of by the Metropolitan Park commission in their completion of the parkway between Columbia Road and the Quincy Shore Reservation.

"Keep working" said the speaker in closing, "and if the Association doesn't get what it desires at first try, try again."

Louis F. R. Langelier, one of the members of the association urged the return of Representative Leslie to office declaring that his faithful work deserved recognition and that the best interests of the comunity would be served by so doing.

James Thomas of the Board of Health was the last speaker and also urged Mr. Leslie's election stating the value of an experienced man in office who knew the ropes. He also spoke regarding the ash question.

At the business meeting with President Parlee in the chair several matters of local improvement were taken up including the necessary betterments around the Montclair school.

The evening closed with song with Chairman McCabe of the entertainment committee at the piano and Secretary Kessler strong in the chorus.

Plans are being made for a ladies' night on October 30th at which a fine program and menu is promised.

NEIGHBORHOOD MEETING

Ladies Unitarian Alliance Brought Out Large Gathering

At the neighborhood meeting of the Ladies Aid Alliance in the Wollaston Unitarian church, Wednesday, many members were present from other Alliance branches. The morning session opened at 11 o"clock with a devotional service led by the local president, Mrs. W. F. Atwood.

A conference of Alliance presidents followed with Mrs. George G. Saville, of the Quincy district representative of the national body, in the chair.

Reports were received from Alliance branches in Dorchester, Braintree, Cohasset, Randolph, Quincy and Brockton. Much helpful information was gleaned.

At noon luncheon was served in the vestry by the local branch. Composing the committee included: Miss Harriett L. Turner, Mrs. W. F. Atwood Mrs. Charles S. Adams, Mrs. Jacobs, Mrs. Florence G. Loring, Mrs. Charles T. Baker, Mrs. George Weston Mrs. H. C. Seymour, Mrs. Samuel Chapman.

The afternoon session opened with an organ recital by Mrs. Alma Faunce Smith and was followed by an address by Rev. Joel Metcalf of Winchester, who spoke on "The religious poetry of Edward Rowland Sill.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES

Of the Civil War Related by One of the Old Boys

The Men's club of the Wollaston Methodist chuch held its monthly meeting in the vestry Wednesday evening with President Eric H. Ewertz in the chair.

At the business meeting several new members were admitted and the reading of an entertaining number of the Wollaston Herald by A. B. Cassidy, editor-in-chief followed.

A humorous solo by Allen Painten, entitled "Lucky Jim"" brought much applause. Mr. Painten was accomanied by Mrs. F. G. Bennett.

Rev. G. W. Bicknell of Cambridge was the speaker of the evening and gave an interesting account of "Personal experiences of the Civil War."

The narrative of the speaker was most graphic and the many scenes of conflict were brought invidiy before his audience.

Mr. Bicknell dwelt on the fact that the army was in the main, made up of young men between 18 and 20 years of age. There were over a million under 22. In his own company three of the officers were 24, 23 and 22 years old.

The Army of the Potomac was described and a picture of Antietam drawn, "Both the North and the South were fighting for home and principle" said Mr. Bicknell. "It was right that the North should win as this meant more for the progress of humanity

"My purpose in giving a lecture of his nature," he said, "is to influence the reign of peace instead of war and to contrast the carnage of war with the blessings of peace."

Refreshments were served by a committee consisting of F. A. Sutermeister, T. N. Lane and T. G. O'Connell.

AFTERNOON CEREMONY

Couple Joined at Braintree as the Sun Went Down

A pretty home wedding was solemnized Wednesday afternoon when Herbert Crawford of Houlton, Maine and Miss Nellie Belyea, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Belyea of 24 Mount Vernon avenue, Braintree, were united in marriage at the bride's home. The ceremony was performed at 3.30 o'clock by Rev. Robert H. Cochrane, pastor of the Union church of East Braintree and Weymouth, the bridal party standing in a bower of autumn leaves, hydranges and dahlias. The wedding march was played by Miss Emily Porter of South Braintree. The bride wore a beautiful gown of pale blue satin and carried carnations.

A reception was held from four until six o'clock during which ice cream and cake were served to the large party of wedding guests. The happy couple were assisted in receiving by the parents of the bride.

Ensconced in an automobile and closely pursued by another car containing several friends, Mr. and Mrs. Crawford were whirled away to the North station, Boston, where they took a train for their future home in Houlton, Maine. Mr. Crawford is identified with the grocery business in that place and Mrs. Crawford, a popular young lady of Braintree, was formerly in the store of Arthur W. Cass on Railroad street.

Mr. and Mrs. Crawford received numbers of handsome wedding gifts and departed with the best wishes of their many friends for a long and happy married life. Guests were present from Malden, Boston and Braintree.

How Japanese Matting is Made

The Matting Weavers of Japan live in rude villages among the reed marshes back of Kobe. These marshes extend for hundreds of miles and the reeds grow practically wild.

The natives, left alone, produce grotesque patterns showing dragons and serpents, but of late years American buyers suggest patterns more suited to civilized needs. They distribute pieces of wall paper and designed cloth, and the weavers imitate the model most artistically.

The wonderful colorings are produced by the village dyer, whose secret process is handed down from father to son. You can see how well their work is done, by examining the new mattings we've just received. COME.

FOOD VALUE OF MILK PRODUCT

At the present time, when such vital interest is being taken in the milk situation, our readers will be glad to learn that the Massachusetts State Board of Agriculture has issued a pamphlet entitled, "Food Value of Milk—Its Use and Care by Consumers." This has been prepared by P. M. Harwood, general agent of the Dairy Bureau, and should have a wide distribution among consumers throughout the State. Its primary object is the education of the consumer to the real value of clean milk, as compared with the nutritive value of other common food stuffs.

The object of this pamphlet, issued by the State Board of Agriculture, is to educate the consumer, first of all to the value of milk as a food, and then to the fact that any price up to twelve cents a quart for a good clean article of milk is not extravagance.

A copy of this circular can be secured by applying to J. Lewis Ellsworth, Secretary, State Board of Agriculture, 136 State House, Boston, Mass.

QUEEN ESTHER CIRCLE.

The meeting of the Queen Esther Circle held at the home of Mrs. George Smith of Brock street, Wollaston, Wednesday evening took the form of a surprise shower to Miss Florence Bennett.

At the business meeting the president Miss Mary Cleveland presided in the absence of Miss Marion Nevers the deaconess.

The decorations were Hallowe'en significance and Miss Myrtle Lovell was the hostess. When time came for the social hour, Miss Bennett was asked to serve the refreshments from a huge paper pumpkin and great was her surprise when a shower of gifts fell therefrom.

The opening of the many packages furnished much entertainment.

Among those present were: Mrs. J. A. Sedgwick, Mrs. Frank Foster, Mrs. Wesley Wiggin, Mrs. Washington Williams, Misses Florence Bennett, Mary Cleveland, Nettie Crittenden, Pearl Keith, Flossie Waite, Myrtle Starbird Alfreda Dewsnap, Mabel Lupton and Miss Tripp.

ELMENDORF LECTURES.

There was scarcely an empty seat at Symphony hall, Boston, last week, at the opening lectures by D. I. Elmendorf. This week on Friday evening and Saturday afternoon his subject will be "The Great Canyon of Arizona." Although this was his fifth visit to the Grand Canyon, Mr. Elmendorf found it more interesting than ever before, thanks to the Santa Fe Railway system which has not only so improved its service that the long journey can now be made in comfort, but on the very brink of the Canyon it has built a log cabin hotel which surpasses anything of its kind in America; it has constructed a wonderful road along the rim of the Canyon for nine miles so that the most beautiful views may be obtained without the least exertion, and in addition to all this has built a new trail down to the river, which is not only safe but which affords entrancing new vistas at every turn.

EVENING SCHOOLS.

The enrollment in the evening schools has increased steadily during the past week, especially at the Adams school. At both the Adams and Willard schools the attendance has been much greater up to date than in any previous year not withstanding the fact that one room was opened at the Lincoln school building with an enrollment of about twenty-five.

The most significant and gratifying fact about the opening of the schools has been the attendance and interest shown in the industrial courses. Monday night, an assistant was secured for Mr. Whitehouse, in charge of the drawing course for granite men and even then it was necessary to close the registration lists and put late applicants on the waiting list. Every course at the high school, with one exception is also closed to late applicants and every night it is necessary to send persons away, simply taking their names and giving them promise of registration in case any of those now in the courses drop out. There is still room in the plumbing course for two more men and no doubt these places will be filled before the next meeting of the class, tomorrow evening. Even the general drawing courses and the commercial classes which are not state aided courses are filled. This large attendance of men in the skilled trades is indicative of a great amount of interest in technical education and shows the great possibilities for development in this direction.

MONTCLAIR.

The new furniture for the Montclair school which has been awaited so long was delivered at the building this week and set in position. The furniture is different in design from any that is now in the schools, being made of cast-steel, with much less wood used in its construction than in the ordinary school furniture and it presents an attractive appearance. Unfortunately in ordering the furniture, no attention was paid to the requisition by the school committee as to size of desk or chair, so that a great deal of it is too large for the children. In some rooms, the workmen were unable to set up the full 44 sets. No intermediate size desks were bought so that after the second grade all children have furniture of the largest size, all of it larger than the largest in the new Wollaston school, so far as height and width is concerned. As the rooms in this building are the so-called Boston size, the furniture should have been in proportion as requested by the school department.

NEW ADAMS SCHOOL.

Residents in the Adams district are pleased to see that work has begun on the grading of the new school lot and are looking forward with pleasure to the time when the school work of construction will begin.

QUINCY SCHOOL.

The Quincy school although it lost a large share of the pupils to the new Montclair school is rapidly gaining in attendance as the new houses in the district are occupied. The school hall is not yet ready for occupancy but will be a great help when ready for use.

WOLLASTON SCHOOL.

The old Wollaston school building is rapidly being torn down, only the walls remaining. The residents of Wollaston are anxiously looking forward to the grading and laying out of the new Safford Park.

Remember the concert on Tuesday evening, October 29, in the Assembly hall, to raise money to purchase a piano for the lower grades. Miss Clara Thayer is in charge, and will be assisted by some very fine home talent, including the High School Glee Club and Quartet. The pianist of the evening will be Mr. Keirn, of the Carl-Faelton school of music.

Miss Lilian Newman, Supervisor of drawing and a member of the Wollaston School Art Committee is planning to give the Operetta, "Cinderella in Flowerland" sometime in November.

Miss Fisher is in charge at the school. Teachers and pupils are very much interested and are rehearsing daily. It is hoped that a large sum may be realized to be used in school room decorations.

Unusual attention is being given this year to improve the attendance, realizing that it means better work. Many cases of non-promotion are the results of irregular attendance. Punctuality is one of the best habits to cultivate in the young. It is hoped that parents will co-operate with the school in making this a banner year.

During the month of September this year there were 10 tardy marks, while last year during the same month, 32. Five tardy marks should be the maximum. The attendance for the month was 96.3, a little better than last year.

WILLARD SCHOOL.

The paper to be published by the pupils of the school has been named "The Willard Echo." Isaac Wainiopaa was made editor-in-chief, and he will be assisted by Matthew Bryan, managing editor; James Meda, assistant editor; Russell Johnson, athletic editor; John Cummings, Rose Carullo, Grace Williams, Primo Franzi, John Minihan, general news staff.

A dodge ball league has been formed by the boys of grade eight, each team taking the name of some college the ones being chosen were Harvard, Yale, Dartmouth, and Princeton. The standing of the league:

	Won	Lost	PC
Dartmouth—C. Hinchon,	5	0	1000
Harvard—P. Franzi,	3	2	.600
Yale—J. Minihan,	1	4	.200
Princeton—W. Egan,	1	4	.200

Henry L. Upton, master of the school, was a delegate to the Massachusetts Teachers' Federation at Riverbank Court, Cambridge, last Saturday.

SCHOOL PICTURES.

By the kindness of the Wollaston Parent-Teachers' Association, a great many pictures which came from the old building and which because of unsuitability of frame or slight stain did not seem in keeping with the new surroundings, were distributed through the rooms of the Lincoln and Willard schools where they will be greatly appreciated. The boys at these schools will clean and polish the frames, put new papers across the back and fit them in place.

QUINCY TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION.

Little or no attention was given by the local papers to the notable address given before the Quincy Teachers' Association by Jacob Riis, on Tuesday evening at Coddington hall, his subject being "Our Neighbor." The audience was a large and appreciative one and the address was so stirring and it was at times dramatic in its telling force as to make a strong impression on all. This association is an important addition to the strength of the school department in bringing as it does, some of the best speakers in the country before Quincy audiences. Admission to these meetings is by membership and invitation only, as no tickets are sold.

Metal at Portsmouth Plant Carted Away by Wholesale

Portsmouth, N. H., Oct. 17.—The wholesale thieving of metal at the navy yard was discovered when two yard workmen, Jesse Hood and Joseph Saunders, were arrested at the main gate with 437 pounds of copper, brass and composition in a wagon, neatly boxed for shipment. They were taken to Portland, Me., to be arraigned before the federal authorities.

Metal, old and new, has been disappearing right and left in many of the departments of late and most of it taken outside of working hours.

WHAT THEY ARE DOING AND SEASONS' PLANS

D. A. R. MEETING.

The opening meeting for the season of the Abigail Phillips Quincy Chapter, D. A. R., was held at the home of the regent, Mrs. Edward E. Jameson. As is usual at the first meeting, many items of business needed attention. Two new names were proposed for membership—Mrs. William King of Readville and Mrs. George R. Badger of Wollaston. The attractive programs for the year's activities were on hand for distribution. The series of papers on subjects of local interest, which have proved so interesting in the past, are continued for this year.

In addition to the usual whist, Mrs. Walter Jones of the entertainment committee announced a course of five lectures on Shakespeare, by Mrs. Gurney, open to the general public. The first of these lectures is to be on "A Midsummer Night's Dream," Thursday morning, Oct. 31. A hallowe'en whist is scheduled for Oct. 29 at the home of Mrs. Jameson. Mrs. Damon, chairman of the entertainment committee, called attention to the proposed sale of handkerchiefs and neck-wear at the home of Mrs. Broughton in December. Altogether the outlook is for an unusually busy year.

The paper of the afternoon was given by Mrs. Waterhouse upon Tutor Flynt. It was of unusual interest and brought out the quaint personality of the bachelor brother of the first Dorothy of the Dorothy Q house. The humor and influence of "Father Flynt," as the Harvard boys called him, were strongly portrayed, and the two rooms built for him in the Dorothy Q. House will always seem pervaded by his presence in the thoughts of those who heard the paper.

All through the afternoon, an undercurrent of sadness was noticeable. This was the first meeting since the tragic death of Mrs. Fannie G. Wilde—a charter member of the Chapter. The regent spoke of the loss to the Chapter, and the following resolutions were adopted.

Whereas,—Almighty God, in his providence, has removed from among us, by death, our beloved chapter member, Mrs. Fannie G. Wilde.—therefore

Resolved:—That we, the members of the Abigail Phillips Chapter, D. A. R., hereby publicly express our profound sense of loss, in the removal of one who has led such a true womanly life, filled with sweet testimonies to the principles of her Christian religion.

Resolved:—That we also express our love and sympathy with the bereaved daughters, assuring them that their sorrow is ours, and that we are mutually affected by the event that brings the sadness of this separation into our lives.

Resolved:—That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our records, and also that copy be sent to the daughters.

The usual social hour followed the more formal program. Refreshments were served by the hostess assisted by the ladies of the hospitality committee.

RIIS LAUDS ROOSEVELT

Claims to No Other Man Is Neighborly Feeling Due

AN INTERESTING LECTURE

To no man living or dead as much as to that man who lies stricken in Chicago by an assassin's bullet, to no man more than to Theodore Roosevelt my friend, is the growing neighborly feeling due" were the words of Jacob A. Riis, the philanthropist and reformer, who addressed a large audience at the Quincy Teachers' association at the Coddington school Tuesday evening.

Two solos by Miss Edna Spry of Boston preceded the talk.

Mr. Riis was introduced by Principal Alfred S. Townsend who said Mr. Riis was first a bum, then a reporter, and now a world worker of wide influence.

Mr. Riis spoke entertainingly for over an hour and explained many of his points by stories of a gripping nature. He was loudly applauded.

He said in part:

"In the days of my youth, neighbors lived under the same roof; the difference in wealth was guaged by the number of stairs one had to climb. Human nature could not let anyone suffer then, for all were neighbors.

"With the coming of the steam age and industrial progress, came the split in society. The manufacturer moved from the centre, and the workmen were obliged to live in the smoky hamlets. Ignorance of each other's condition therefore developed.

"In my investigations as a tenement house commission member I found boys and girls living in the slum, our outposts of Democracy. People will say they were foreigners, but they are our future citizens. We invited them in and if they go to wrack and ruin and join political societies without a soul, what are we to find?

"There are two kinds of foreigners, the Southern Italian and the Jew. Both are neighbors to each other. The eviction scenes, with the family sitting on wretched furniture, the squalid and poverty appearance of the children, and the wan-faced mother pitifully begging for the assistance of the passerby,—these scenes are absent in districts of these foreigners because they are neighbors.

"At least we are now stirring with the desire to meet our neighbors and do no man living or dead as to that man who lies stricken by an assassin's bullet, to no man more than Theodore Roosevelt my friend, is the feeling due.

In my 25 years experience I saw the bad of the city, I saw the boys go from the gutter to the gallows. I came out with my faith in God a thousand times strengthened.

"We are neighbors and brothers made in the same mould though we strangely forget when we are moved apart. I want to see the word 'Hope" over the door of our jails instead of the motto, "Forsake all hope, ye who enter here."

"Is our social centre the outpost of Democracy? Is it an interpretation of industrial conditions? The fact is there are many angles from which to examine it.

"Never forget that the religious sentiment has everything to do with settlement work. It is the inspiration and power; cut it off and you cut off your power.

"When will the capitalist see that the union is the effort of a man to live a man's life as a man?

"Find your neighbor and help him and yourself. Grow,, believing in man because he is His image, in the world because it is peaceful and then you will be able to put up with the humanest tests that cling to human efforts.

"The world is growing better in the exact ratio as we are shaking hands with each other. The Lord said "Love one another" and how are you going to do it if you do not know your neighbor?"

"Take our lost brother by the hand and our civic problems grow much easier."

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

It is hoped that the Atlantic reading room will be opened next week. The rooms have been wired for electric lights, the furniture ordered, and the assistants at the Central library are kept busy in preparations for the shipment of books and the necessary detail work.

There is on exhibition in the picture gallery of Crane Memorial Hall a very fine set of pictures of St. Mark's Church, Venice. "St. Mark's is absolutely unique in the variety, wealth and preciousness of its sculptured marbles, and of its gold and colored mosaics. It embodies and expresses the religion, and throws light on the policy of a great Commonwealth, that, through long centuries, held the place intellectually and commercially amongst the nations of the world, that England holds today."

An excellent set of books in eleven volumes entitled, "The makers of Canada" has just been added to the library. In these books the main currents of Canadian growth are traced under the following heads—The French regime, Early British rule, Exploration and settlement of the Great West, The struggle for responsible government, and Confederation and expansion.

NEW COATS WITH CUTAWAY FRONTS

Beautiful Blouses of Chiffon and Silk for Tailored Suits

NET AND LACE WAISTS

We are now seeing on "real live people," as the children say, the clothes about which we have been reading in the advance fashion notes from Paris. Although many of the extreme things observed in reproductions of the photographs taken at the French show places have been modified to suit a quieter taste, we, nevertheless, have a distinct pleasure in recognizing clever adaptations of many charming ideas. Of chief interest just now are the fall and winter coat-suits. We notice that the short coat of the so-called "coat dress" has been lengthened a little for the more utilitarian suit, but it has by no means departed from its jaunty lines. It is especially smart with the cutaway fronts, either square or rounded, featured in most of the recent designs. The disposal of the buttons, also, has much to do with the correct development of a particular style. Shall they extend from the fastening at the waistline upward toward the shoulder, or from that point downward toward the lower edge of the garment? This apparently minor consideration is often the pivot upon which the entire harmony of the model turns.

4939-4909

This is clearly illustrated in this figure. The slightly military look of this splendid design would be quite lost with any other than the attractive arrangement of buttons. Any other, in fact, would be out of keeping with the notched collar and straight lines of the cutaway front. Such a coat is wholly satisfactory made of gray cheviot, as shown here.

With its four-gored skirt, laid in three side pleats at left-front, it is a suit to fill the requirements of every well-dressed woman.

A wider range of materials than ever before is permissible this fall for our useful coat-suits. In fine wools, cheviots, tweeds and zibeline with its soft camel's-hair texture, are in the lead. But we are not restricted, as in former years, to woolen fabrics We have our linen coat-suits nowadays for summer days; in the early autumn we change to taffeta bengaline or satin, preparing ourselves meanwhile with broadcloth and other heavy suitings for the first cool days of winter. This necessitates a greater variety of vesture than we dreamed of in the happy days when one good coatsuit was considered ample supply for every well-appointed wardrobe. But it is a custom not without advantage, overstocked as we may feel ourselves to be with one kind of garb. With plenty of waists to make the necessary changes, we meet our social needs with fewer costumes of other descriptions. Of these a housegown or two, and one pretty dressy frock a year for parties, is sensible provision for the great average of womankind in times like the present, when club meetings and tea-room teas are taking the place of the more intimate social life of former years.

The coat-suit makes the question of the separate waist a vital one. Three-piece suits, so-called, have not proven as popular as separate waists and skirts for this style of woman's dress, partly because the impossibility of change greatly restricts the serviceability of the suit, and for the reason, as well, that one feels much more cleanly with separate waist that can make frequent visits to the laundry or the dry cleaner.

From Paris come interesting descriptions of the new waists. Self-colored waists, that is, those matching in tint the suit with which they are worn, are in best style. Just as chic, however, are blouses of the same material or color as that used to trim the suit. A suit of navy blue for instance, trimmed with Alice blue, should have an Alice blue waist to be in perfect taste. Silk and chiffon over silk are the materials most often selected for the service waists which go with tailored suits, but to change off with for more dressy occasions there are elaborate waists of net and lace. Some of these are much trimmed in color. Beautiful are those corded with red; a fine cord covered with red silk outlining armholes, yoke collar, cuffs and belt.

Black and white striped chiffon cloth waists to wear with black satin coatsuits are best developed with a touch of rose color in the trimming and rose embroidered buttons. For a green suit a beautiful waist of green liberty satin was seen, with large lace sailor collar reaching almost to the waist in the back and fastened in the center-front just below the bust with a gold buckle. Individual taste can find full scope for display in the lovely waists now in fashion, and the woman who is skilled in sewing, need not restrict herself in number as long as she can visit the remnant sales to pick up the few yards of materials for making them.

Items worth remembering in making your waists this fall are that sleeves are long—very long, reaching to the knuckles, almost, in a point or a curving wristline—and collars are as high as you can wear them.

The high collar now in fashion is illustrated with both the smart coatsuits shown here. In Figure Two it is on a lace waist worn with a taupe satin coatsuit. This coat has the cutaway with curved fronts. The three buttons are below the raised waistline in this instance, instead of above it, in arrangement more in keeping with the generall style of this model. Shawl collar and straight cuffs are made of dark-gray velvet, of the same shade as the underfacing of the gray felt hat worn en suite.

The fancy for the high collar shows itself in all styles of neckwear, for those that are open in front in Robespierre or directoire fashion are high in the back, and the V or surplice vests, now extremely stylish both in lace and embroidery, extend upward and outward in Medici collars which entirely conceal the hairline at the nape of the neck—New York, Oct. 10, 1912.

CRANSTON BRENTON SUED FOR DIVORCE

Intolerable Cruelty Is Charged by Preacher's Wife

Hartford, Oct. 17.—In an action filed in the county superior court, Mrs. Elizabeth A. C. Brenton asks for an absolute divorce from Rev. Dr. Cranston Brenton, professor of English literature, lecturer and candidate for suffragan bishop of the Connecticut Episcopal diocese. The complaint is intolerable cruelty.

Besides a divorce, Mrs. Brenton, through her lawyer, demands the custody of her 6-year-old son. It is understood Brenton intends to contest the suit vigorously.

Mrs. Brenton, who is the daughter of the late Dr. Jonathan F. Curtis, was married to the eloquent young professor in 1901.

FINDS POT OF MONEY

Italian Laborer's Good Luck Causes Him to Become Insane

New Haven, Oct. 17.—Pasquale Valenti, a laborer, dug into an iron pot in excavating for the foundation of a new building on Meadow street. He pulled out the vessel and, looking in, found it filled with silver coins. He rushed away with them to a place of safety, where on counting them he found a thousand in number. They proved to be eight-real pieces, a silver coin valued at about 60 cents each as regards their face value.

Valenti became temporarily insane when he learned of the value of his discovery. He broke loose and ran wild through the streets until he could be captured and restrained. When the news of his discovery became known more than 300 people rushed to the foundations of the building and began to dig for more pots of silver. They quickly dug under the foundations and caused them to collapse, resulting in damage of several hundred dollars.

The place of the discovery has held a house which was built in 1790 until last month, when the building was demolished to make room for a business block.

DON'T EXPERIMENT

You Will Make No Mistake if You Follow This Quincy Citizen's Advice

Never neglect your kidneys.

If you have pain in the back, urinary disorders, dizziness and nervousness, it's time to act and no time to experiment. These are frequently symptoms of kidney trouble, and a remedy which is recommended for the kidneys should be taken in time.

Doan's Kidney Pills is a good remedy to use. No need to experiment. It has acted effectively in many cases in Quincy. Follow the advice of a Quincy citizen.

P. J. Garrity, 398 Granite street, Quincy, Mass., says: "Some time ago I suffered so severely from kidney disease that I could hardly get about. I was restless at night and could not find any position that was comfortable. The kidney secretions were too frequent in passage and contained a heavy sediment. I was rapidly growing worse and was at a loss to know what to do as the many remedies I tried failed to help me. Finally Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me and I procured a supply at the Cox Drug Store. After I had taken the contents of four boxes I was in good health. I highly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to other kidney sufferers."

Keziah Coffin

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Mrs. Keziah Coffin, supposed widow, is arranging to move from Trumet to Boston, following the death of her brother, for whom she had kept house. Grace Van Horne, ward of Capt. Eben Hammond, leader of the "Come-outer" religious sect, offers to assist her financially if she will remain. She declines. Kyan Pepper, widower, offers marriage, and is indignantly refused.

CHAPTER II—Capt. Elkanah Daniels, leader of the Regular church, offers Keziah a place as housekeeper for the new minister, and she decides to remain in Trumet.

CHAPTER III—Keziah takes charge of Rev. John Ellery, the new minister, and gives him advice as to his conduct toward members of the parish. Ellery causes a sensation by attending a "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER IV—Ellery's presence is bitterly resented by Eben Hammond, leader of the meeting. Grace apologizes for her guardian and Ellery escorts her home in the rain. Capt. Nat Hammond, Eben's son, becomes a hero by bringing the packet into port safely through fog and storm. Ellery finds Keziah writing a letter to some one, inclosing money in response to a demand. She is curiously startled when informed of the arrival of Nat.

CHAPTER V—Nat calls on Keziah, and it develops that they have been lovers since youth. Daniels remonstrates with Ellery for attending "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER VI—Ellery is caught by the tide and is rescued by Nat. They become friends.

CHAPTER VII—Ellery meets Grace while walking in the fields Sunday, and learns that she walks there every Sunday.

CHAPTER VIII—The clergyman takes dinner Sundays with the Daniels. Annabel, the captain's daughter, exerts herself to make an impression on him. She notices with vexation his desire to get away every Sunday at a certain time. She watches him through a spy glass.

CHAPTER IX—Nat again importunes Keziah to marry him. He says he has had a quarrel with his father, who wants him to marry Grace.

CHAPTER X—Ellery asks Grace to marry him. She confesses that she loves him, but says she fears to displease her guardian, who has been very kind to her, and asks time to think about it. Elkanah Daniels tells Eben about the meetings between Ellery and Grace. Eben declares he will make Grace choose between him and the preacher. Grace finds him in a faint, following the excitement of Elkanah's visit.

CHAPTER XI—Just before he dies Eben exacts a promise from Nat and Grace that they will marry.

CHAPTER XII—Keziah breaks the news to Ellery and later he receives a note from Grace saying she is to marry Nat, and asking him not to try to see her again. Keziah tells the story of her own marriage with a man who turned out to be a good-for-nothing, and who was reported to have been lost at sea, and of her love for Nat, whom she cannot marry because the husband is alive. Ellery sees in the story a lesson in devotion to duty and decides to remain and attend to his duties.

CHAPTER XIII—Captain Nat sails for Manila to be gone two years. He says he and Grace have decided not to marry until he returns.

CHAPTER XIV—Nat is overdue, and it is feared that he has been lost at sea. Keziah gets a letter from her husband saying he is coming back. Grace goes on a visit to relatives of the Hammonds.

CHAPTER XV—A vessel flying distress signals is discovered off the coast. Ellery goes with party to board the vessel. A man is found suffering from smallpox, the rest of the crew having deserted.

CHAPTER XVI—He is taken to an abandoned shack on shore and Ellery helps nurse him. Before he dies it is discovered that he is Keziah's husband. Ellery, left alone in quarantine, is found wandering in a delirious condition by Grace. She takes him back to the shanty and sends for help.

CHAPTER XVII—Keziah and Grace nurse Ellery, who is suffering from brain fever. The doctor and Keziah spread a report that Grace and Ellery are engaged. News comes that Nat has arrived safely in Boston.

CHAPTER XVIII—The story of the wreck of Nat's vessel comes out and a home-coming is arranged, but Nat fails to appear.

This was what troubled Mr. Stone as he sat in his office. Why should this woman wish to have her whereabouts kept a secret? There was a reason for this, of course. Was it a respectable reason, or the other kind? If the latter, his own name might be associated with the scandal. He wished, for the fiftieth time, that there were no poor relations.

A boy came into the office. "There is some one here to see you, Mr. Stone," he said.

"Who is it?"

"I don't know, sir. Looks like a seafaring man, a sea captain, I should say—but he won't give his name. Says it's important and nobody but you'll do."

"Humph! All right. Tell him to wait. I'll be out in a minute."

Sea captains and ship owners were Stone & Barker's best customers. The senior partner emerged from the office with a smile on his face.

"Ah!" he said, extending his hand. "Glad to see you, Captain—er——"

"Hammond," replied the visitor. "Same to you, Mr. Stone."

"Fine weather for this time of year."

"Fine enough, Mr. Stone.

"Well, Captain Hammond, what can we do for you? Going to sail soon?"

"Not right away. Just made port, less'n a week ago. Home looks good to me, for a spell, anyhow."

"So? Yes, I have no doubt. Let me see—where is your home, captain? I should remember, of course, but——"

"Don't know why you should. This is my first trip in your latitude, I guess. My home's at Trumet."

"Trumet?" Mr. Stone's tone changed.

"Yes. Trumet, down on the Cape. Ever been there? We think it's about as good a place as there is."

"Hu-u-m! Trumet? Well, Captain Hammond, you wished to see me, I understand."

"Yes. Fact is, Mr. Stone, I want to ask you where I can find Mrs. Keziah Coffin. She's a relation of yours, I b'lieve, and she's come to Boston lately. Only yesterday or the day afore. Can you tell me where she is?"

"Why do you wish to see her?"

"Oh, for reasons, personal ones. She's a friend of mine."

"I see. No, captain, I can't tell you where she is. Good morning."

Captain Nat was greatly disappointed.

"Hold on there, just a minute," he begged. "This is important, you understand, Mr. Stone. I'm mighty anxious to find Kezi—Mrs. Coffin. We thought, some of her friends and I, that most likely you'd know where she was. Can't you give us any help at all? Hasn't she been here?"

"Good morning, Captain Hammond. You must excuse me, I'm busy."

He went into the office and closed the door. Captain Nat rubbed his forehead desperately. He had been almost sure that Abner Stone would put him on Keziah's track. Grace had thought so, too. She remembered what the housekeeper had told concerning her Boston cousin and how the latter had found employment for her when she contemplated leaving Trumet, after her brother's death. Grace believed that Keziah would go to him at once.

Nat walked to the door and stood there, trying to think what to do next. A smart young person, wearing a conspicuous suit of clothes, aided and abetted by a vivid waistcoat and a pair of yeuthful but promising side whiskers, came briskly along the sidewalk and stopped in front of him.

"Well, sir?" observed this person, with cheerful condescension. "Anything I can do for you?"

Captain Nat turned his gaze upon the side whiskers and the waistcoat.

"Hey?" he queried.

"I say, is there anything I can do for you?"

The captain shook his head. "No-oo," he drawled dryly, "I'm afraid not, son. I admit that don't seem scarcely possible, but I am afraid it's so."

"Looking for something in our line, was you?"

"Well, I don't know. What might be on your line—clothes?"

The bewhiskered one drew himself up. "I am connected with Stone & Barker," he said sharply. "And, seeing you standing in our doorway, I thought possibly——"

"Yes, yes. Beg your pardon, I'm sure. No, I don't want to buy anything. I come to see Mr. Stone on a personal matter."

"He's busy, I suppose."

"So he says."

The young man smiled with serene satisfaction. "I'm not surprised," he observed complacently. "We are a busy house, Mr.—er——"

"Hammond's my name. Are you Mr Barker?"

"No-o, my name is Prince."

"So? Silent partner in the firm hey?"

"No-o, not exactly." Mr. Prince was slightly embarrassed. "No, I am a—a salesman—at present. Was the matter you wished to see Mr. Stone about a very private one?"

"Middlin'."

"Well, I asked because Mr. Stone is a busy man and we like to save him all the—the——"

"Trouble you can, hey? That's nice of you, you must save him a lot, Mr—er—King, was it?"

"No, Prince."

"Sure and sartin', Prince, of course I knew 'twas connected with the royal family. Well, Mr. Prince, I'm afraid even you can't help me nor him out his time. I'm lookin' up a friend of mine, a widow lady from down the Cape. She's a relation of Mr. Stone's, and she's come to Boston during the last day or so. I thought likely he might know where she was, that's all That would be a little out of your latitude, hey?"

"I don't know. Her name wasn't Coffin, was it?"

Captain Nat started. "It certainly was," he answered eagerly. "How'd you know that?"

Mr. Prince's complacence was superb. "Oh," he answered with condescension, "Mr. Stone trusts me with a good many of his personal affairs."

"I should think likely he would. But about Mrs. Coffin? You was goin' to say?"

"She is with James Hallett & Co., the tailors, on Washington street. Mr. Stone found a place for her there, I believe. I—er—er—superintended the carrying of her valise and— What?"

"Nothin', nothin'. Hum! Hallett & Co., tailors? What number Washin'ton street did you say?"

Mr. Prince gave the number.

"Thank you a lot," said Captain Nat, with fervor. "Good-by, Mr. Prince. Hope the next time I come you'll be in the firm. Good day, sir."

"Good day. Nothing else I can do? And you won't wait for Mr. Stone? Very good. Is there any message for him that you would like to leave?"

"Hey?" Nat had started to go, but now he paused and turned. There was a grim twinkle in his eye. "Message?" he repeated. "Why, ye-es, I don't know but there is. You just give Mr. Stone Cap'n Hammond's compliments and tell him I'm lookin' forward to interviewin' him some time. Just tell him that, will you?"

"I'll tell him. Glad to have met you. Captain Hammond."

ROOSEVELT HAS FRACTURED RIB

Precise Location of Bullet Is Not Yet Discovered

A FEELING OF UNCERTAINTY

Doctors Cannot Pronounce Patient Out of Danger For Four or Five Days—Colonel Free From Pain and Appears Least Concerned of All—Wife Shows She Knows How to Manage Him—His Political Campaign Probably at an End

Chicago, Oct. 17.—After a day of ceaseless vigil Colonel Roosevelt's physicians last night could say no more than that his condition was virtually unchanged. Indications, they said, favored the speedy recovery of the ex-president from the effects of the bullet which struck him at Milwaukee Monday.

A rise in temperature and pulse late in the day, however, made his condition for the time being somewhat less favorable. The colonel's temperature went to 99, but soon receded to 98.8.

The fact that a rib was fractured, which was not disclosed until yesterday, and that the precise location of the bullet had not been discovered, added to the feeling of uncertainty.

Fourth Rib Splintered

The first X-ray plate which definitely shows the bullet in Roosevelt's chest was developed late yesterday afternoon. The bullet is shown partly imbedded in the fracture in the fourth rib, about four inches from the sternum. The bullet is much flattened and spread out of shape. It is crushed into the upper edge of the rib. Several small splinters of bone projected near it.

Not before Friday, if all goes well, will the physicians be prepared to say that their patient is out of danger. The intervening period will be required to determine whether blood poisoning or other complications are to be feared.

Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., after a talk with his father and a consultation with the physicians, expressed the feelings of those about the ex-president.

"It will be four or five days," said he, "before we can breathe easily."

Colonel Not Worrying

Colonel Roosevelt spent a quiet and apparently care-free day, seemingly the least concerned of all. He was cheered by the appearance of Mrs. Roosevelt, who arrived early in the day from New York and remained with him constantly. He felt no pain, he said, and moved about at will on his bed, reading or dictating telegrams or talking with members of his family. In the afternoon he slept for a time.

Dr. Murphy, who is in charge of the case, Dr. Bevan and Dr. Terrell, Roosevelt's physician, held three consultations during the day. Aside from the official bulletins, which gave little indication of any change, they would say little of the condition of the patient. Why it was that the fracture of Roosevelt's rib was not previously disclosed was not made known, although it was said there was no cause for alarm on this account.

Mrs. Roosevelt Is Boss

As soon as Mrs. Roosevelt reached the hospital, she took charge of affairs. She was accompanied by Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., Mrs. Nicholas Longworth and Miss Ethel Roosevelt. Later in the day Congressman Longworth arrived. Mrs. Roosevelt installed herself in a room adjoining that of her husband and during the day seldom left his bedside. Mrs. Roosevelt's first move was to decree that the colonel must see no visitors except the members of his family. Once or twice during the day she made exceptions, but otherwise she adhered firmly to her resolution.

The colonel was "feeling fine" and ready to receive visitors, but Mrs. Roosevelt gave him no opportunity to pass upon her ruling, for she made it on her own authority and saw to it that it was enforced. She received the cards and messages for her husband and sent back her replies, with the result that the colonel himself did not know who wished to see him.

Another X-Ray Photograph

It was learned that the X-ray photographs which was taken in Milwaukee a few hours after Roosevelt was shot did not show accurately the location of the bullet, and another photograph was taken yesterday afternoon. It is probable that after the plate is developed, if good results are obtained, a decision will be reached as to whether the bullet will be removed.

The bullet, it was said, is resting against the fractured rib, the fourth one on the right side, and the proximity of the rib rendered it difficult to obtain the desired result with the X-ray.

The impression has grown that Roosevelt will be able to do little or nothing more in the campaign. Although he expressed the hope of leaving for Oyster Bay Sunday, it is probable he will be compelled to remain in the hospital for at least a week longer, and that after his arrival at home he will not be permitted to plunge into the campaign again.

Making the Best of It

Associates of Roosevelt said that while he was deeply disappointed at being obliged to leave the fight during the closing weeks, when it was to be hardest, he was showing no concern as to the possible effect of his removal from the field of battle. It is Roosevelt's desire to make at least one more speech before election day, and that in his own state of New York. If he can do nothing else, he hopes to speak in Madison Square Garden.

There is little in the appearance of Roosevelt to indicate that he was not in his usual health. His face has not lost its color, and as he sits propped up with pillows he moves about easily and apparently is free from pain.

He seemed to enjoy his relief from the cares of politics and seems determined to make his stay in the hospital an enjoyable vacation. His three children who are in Chicago dropped in to see him three times during the day, talking for a half hour each time.

An Encouraging Report

Early this morning Roosevelt was visited by Dr. Murphy, head surgeon in charge of the case, Dr. Terrell and Dr. McAuley. The examination resulted in their announcement that the condition of the patient is normal and thatthere is no indication of sepsis in the wound or of pleural complications.

Following is the official count—Temperature 98.6, pulse 84, respiration 20, leucocytes 6400 per cubic millimeter, polymorphoneuclear neutrophiles 74 per cubic millimeter, general condition good.

Wilson Cancels Dates

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 17.—Governor Wilson tried yesterday to cancel all his speaking engagements, including those arranged for Delaware, West Virginia, Pittsburg and New York, but found it impossible to do so. In his speeches of the next three days he will omit all discussion of the Progressive party, and he will do no more campaigning after Saturday until Colonel Roosevelt is able to speak again.

SOUTH BOSTON WAS BLANKED

Quincy High Trimmed Visitors in Good Shape

BOTH LACKED DASH

Quincy High retrieved after loosing two games and beat South Boston High at Merrymount Park, Wednesday, 12 to 0. Neither team showed a great deal of dash and spirit.

In the last few minutes of play Quincy seemed to awaken to their opportunities and were gradually but surely headed for a touchdown. The ball had been carried over one half the length of the field when the whistle blew.

Quincy outweighed the visitors by about 15 pounds on the line.

Sumner scored the first touchdown in the first period after Qiuncy had plugged the line for gains. Two offside penalties helped the local boys strike within scoring distance.

Larkin made the other touchdowns after a series of rushes, brought the ball to the visitors 10 yard line.

Some players who were disgruntled with the result of the showing made against Medford High which resulted in a large score did not appear perturbed and while some of the boys have something to learn of rudimentary football it can hardly be said that the threatened mutiny will materialize.

It is the feeling that hard coaching will develop a team of championship calibre and inside of a week, Quincy may be the home of a snappy eleven.

NEIGHBORHOOD GATHERING

Neponset and Quincy Residents Get Together

AND TALK OF THINGS

Quincy was represented at the "Fellowship night" of the Neponset Brotherhood Wednesday evening by Mayor E. R. Stone, President C. C. Hearn and Secretary J. O. Hall of the Board of Trade, John L. Miller, chairman of the School Committee and H. Gerrish Smith, General Manager of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. In addition to being a fellowship night it was in the nature of a get together meeting between the citizens of that part of Boston known as Neponset and the City of Quincy.

Quincy's representatives were given the glad hand as they passed over the bridge which separates these two places and the committee in charge of the affair saw to it that the evening was made one of pleasure for them.

All of the Quincy gentlemen were called upon during the evening to say a few words. Mayor Stone was the first to respond for the city. He spoke of some of the many natural beauty spots of Quincy and its many natural advantages, incidentally mentioning the Quincy Shore Boulevard and Furnace Brook Parkway, her superb and unsurpassed water front and of the prosperity which the city was enjoying.

President Hearn of the Board of Trade spoke of some of the things the board had accomplished and what it was trying to do for the future development and growth of the city. He also spoke of the shooting of ex-President Roosevelt and said that while he was a Taft man he was struck with horror that in such a country as we live in there should be men who would seek the life of such a man as Roosevelt.

John L. Miller spoke of the schools of Quincy and what the school committee was doing from an educational standpoint. He said there were too many doctors on the school board and it was time that there were more business men on the board.

General Manager Smith of the Fore River company had a word to say of what his company was doing. He also spoke at length upon the apprentice school established at the Fore River and how much benefit it was to young men starting in to learn their trade.

Secretary Hall of the Board of Trade also spoke of some of the many advantages of the City of Quincy and of the great good and assistance that would come from this get together plan that had been started by the present meeting.He hoped that there would be more of the same kind.

There was also a number of speakers from Neponset including Representative Sanford Bates, who spoke of the work on Beacon Hill in the interest of a new bridge, to replace the present antiquated structure between Quincy and Neponset.

After the meeting there was a social hour during which an appetizing chowder was served.

FIRE AT NORFOLK DOWNS.

An alarm from box 152 at 5.10 Wednesday evening called the fire department to a brisk blaze in the attic of the residence of H. K. Ellis, Jr. at 36 Warwick street, Norfolk Downs.

Just what caused the fire is not known. Mrs. Ellis states that in her preparations for supper she put a lot of small wood in the kitchen stove.

Leaving the things to cook she went to two neighboring houses that are being built to see that everything was locked up for the night.

The children were absent on an errand and there was no one in the house when the fire broke out.

When Mrs. Ellis returned in a few minutes, smoke and flames were pouring out of the upper window and an alarm was rung in.

The department upon its arrival found a blaze that looked serious but prompt work on the part of the men soon had it under control.

The damage by fire was confined to the attic floor while the other floors received damage by smoke and water. The recall sounded at 6.30.

Mrs. Ellis is of the opinion that the fire caught from the chimney in the attic and was in some way communicated by the blazing wood in the kitchen stove. House and contents were covered by insurance.

In dropping down the line of chemical hose from the roof, Captain Gilbert H. Rhodes of the Wollaston department was hit and received a gash on the forehead from the nozzle. He was taken to his home in Chief Litchfield's auto. The injury was considered of a minor nature.

The alarm from box 515 at 3.55 was for a grass fire near the Quincy Mansion school that caused some anxiety to the occupants thereof. It was extinguished however, before any damage had been done and the recall was soon given .

THE NEW COUNTRY SCHOOL.

J. W. Foley.

The walls and the ceiling they're spraying,
They're scrubbing the woodwork and floors;
A stream on the blackboard is playing,
They're boiling the desks and the doors;
The old water pail has been scalded,
A cup for each lassie and lad,
And no one may drink, as we all did,
From that old tin dipper we had.

They've cleansed every pointer and ferrule.
The inkwells are scrubbed out with lye,
The books and the slates are made sterile,
The old well is filled up and dry;
The girls have to wear, willy-nilly.
A button which bears this bold sign:
"The lips that touch germs or bacilli
Are lips that will never touch mine."

The dunce cap is boiled every morning
(They've the individual kind!)
The front door is set with this warning:
"Who enters here leaves germs behind."
No apple is smuggled for sharing,
As was in the schooldays of yore,
Until they've made sterile the paring
And quite disinfected the core.

Alas! The old pump is discarded
And gone in the flight of the years;
The new drinking fountain is guarded
By the Anti-Germ Grenadiers!
The vines from the windows they're stripping
Lest germ-breeding insects might stay;
The eaves and the rafters are dripping
All wet with a sterilized spray.

Oh, come, in the joy of the morning,
What secrets of schooldays we'll tell!
That thick rising vapor gives warning
That Teacher is boiling the bell.
It's time for the B class in Scrubbing,
The A class is set out to cool
From its recent boiling and rubbing—
Three cheers for the Sterilized School.

EARTH SLIDES AT CULEBRA.

Engineers Lack Effective Method of Holding the Earth.

Earth slides in Culebra cut, on the Panama canal, have amounted to 16,500,000 cubic yards since the excavation of the cut began. These slides represent not less than 20 per cent of the total amount of earth and rock so far removed, and represent at least half a year's work. The engineers have found no absolutely effective means to prevent the slides. A process of terracing the banks has been found best.

Excavation on the canal during August amounted to 2,443,353 cubic yards, or 190,074 cubic yards less than excavated in July. There was one inch more of rainfall during August, which helped to cause the reduction. Concrete laying during August amounted to 89,879 cubic yards, compared with 87,485 cubic yards in July.

WAR DECLARED BY BULGARIA

Result of Withdrawal of Turkish Representative

A TWENTY-FOUR-HOUR LIMIT

Fixed by Turkey For Balkan States and Greece to Apologize For Note Sent to Porte—Fortress of Houms Captured by Montenegrins—Turkish Fleet to Participate In Campaign

London, Oct. 17.—The declaration of war by Bulgaria against Turkey was published in Sofia last evening. This step was taken as the result of the withdrawal of the Turkish representative from Bulgaria.

A limit of twenty-four hours has been fixed by Turkey for the Balkan states and Greece to apologize for the sending of their "insolent" note to the porte, according to a dispatch from Constantinople.

The entire lines of the town of Byelopolic, in the Sanjak of Novipazar, has been occupied by a Montenegrin division commanded by General Vukolitch. The Turkish troops either surrendered of took to flight. The other Montenegrin division under General Martinovitch is reported to be developing a powerful artillery attack on the Turkish town of Tarakosch.

The fortress of Houms, the last between Tushi and Scutari, surrendered yesterday to the Montenegrins. Among the Turkish prisoners already captured are sixty-two officers, including a colonel and the commandant at Tushi.

Addressing the war correspondents at a reception yesterday afternoon King Nicholas said that he regretted the bloodshed, but hoped that it would result in a new and better era of freedom and civilization.

The Turkish admirality has ordered all warships held in readiness to put to sea at a moment's notice. Since the war in Tripoli began, the Italian fleet has held Turkey's fighting craft bottled up in port. Turko-Italian peace having been concluded, the Sultan means to use them against his enemies in the Balkans.

The porte received telegrams announcing that the Turkish ministers have left Greece, Bulgaria and Servia without asking for their passports. It was not denied that the informality of their departure was intended as an affront to the Balkan allies.

REJOICES OVER PEACE

How Turkey's Surrender Is Viewed by the Press of Italy

Rome, Oct. 17.—The Italian press is elated over the signature of peace with Turkey at Ouchy and hails it generally as the crowning of the Italian victories on the battlefields in Tripoli.

The newspapers declare that Turkey ceded only after Italy had sent her ultimatum fixing a limit time for the negotiations, and they say that the peace treaty proves in accord with and completely safeguards Italian rights and dignity.

They conclude that the general satisfaction of Italy is assured at the acquisition of a vast African colony which can be easily defended, as it lies on the Mediterranean.

SECRETS BURIED WITH ROSENTHAL

Widow of Slain Gambler Sheds Little Light on Tragedy

New York, Oct. 17.—The prosecution in the trial of Lieutenant Becker for the murder of Herman Rosenthal played its final strong card when Mrs. Lillian Rosenthal, widow of the slain gambler, was called to the stand to testify to the business relations between her husband and the accused police official.

Mrs. Rosenthal proved somewhat of a disappointment on the direct examination. She failed to reveal any of the secrets which were buried with her husband after his tongue had been silenced by the bullets of the assassins on July 16. After a short examination by Assistant Prosecutor Moss, she was turned over to the defense for cross-examination.

The state scored when John F. McIntire, chief attorney for the accused lieutenant, tried repeatedly and unsuccessfully to show, through the widow, that Rosenthal's death was the result of a gambling feud. All questions along this line were excluded.

SOX CHAMPION BALL PLAYERS

Win Deciding Battle of World's Series, Three to Two

GAME GOES TO TEN INNINGS

Closest and Most Bitterly Fought of Entire Eight, the Result Being In Doubt Until Very End—Bedient, Wood and Mathewson the Mound Artists—Hooper Kills a Homer

Boston, Oct. 17.—Jake Stahl and his band of ball players defeated the Giants 3 to 2 in a great ten-inning game, the deciding battle in the great world series championship.

The game was the closest and most bitterly fought of the entire eight, the result being in doubt until the very end.

The lion's share of credit for great victory goes to Hugh Bedient, the youngster, who on last Saturday turned the tide battle in the Red Sox favor. In the final game again for six innings he held the Giants at bay.

Joe Wood, who finished the game, showed his old-time form and redeemed himself for his poor showing of Tuesday.

New York came through in the third for the first run of the game, and that with two down. Devore was passed, and Doyle sent him to second with a sacrifice. On Snodgrass' infield Devore took third, and walked across the plate on Murray's ripping double to centre.

A notable feature of the fifth inning was a wonderful catch by Hooper, the best of the world's series, shutting off a sure home run. The Boston outfielder took Doyle's long fly leaning over the fence in right.

The Red Sox had a good chance to score in the sixth, but Mathewson's quick work ended their hopes. Yerkes reached third. The Boston second-sacker, however, grew careless, and Big Six, ever watchful, caught him by a quick throw to Herzog.

Mathewson gave early evidence that he was pitching the game of his life, fanning two of the Sox, Yerkes and Lewis, in the very first inning. Big Six had not a few supporters even among the Bostonians, who cheered him again and again.

New York threatened again in the second, when, with two out, Meyers and Fletcher singled in succession.

Boston had an excellent chance to score in the second, but was unable to hit at the psychological moment.

The seventh brought a break in the luck for the Sox and in spite of the fine work of Bedient he was yanked out to make room for Henricksen, who came across with the hit that tied up the game, scoring Stahl with the tying run.

Wood went in to pitch in the first of the eighth.

McGraw, desperate to win, put McCormick in to bat for Fletcher in the ninth, but the best the famous pinch hitter could do was a fly to Lewis.

Murray rapped out a solid double in the first of the tenth, after Snodgrass had gone out. Merkle followed next with a single, scoring Murray, and going to second on Speaker's throw home.

Engle was put in to bat for Wood in Boston's half and was given a lease of life by Snodgrass' muff of a hard fly.

Yerkes walked and Speaker singled, scoring Engle, and again tying the game. Yerkes went to third on the play. Gardner knocked a long fly and Yerkes scored the winning run.

A Change of Tone.

YOUNG GREEK RUNS AMUCK

Crazed by Fear That He Would Be Drafted For War Service

Haverhill, Mass., Oct. 17.—Driven crazy by the fear that he was to be drafted with other Greeks to serve in the anticipated war in the Balkans, Nicholas Valdanis is now a raving maniac and is laced in a straitjacket at the City hospital.

Yesterday afternoon, while twenty Greek youths were boarding a train for Boston en route to New York, where a regiment of reserves is being mobilized, Valdanis rushed through the depot, screaming at the top of his voice.

After rushing through the cars of the waiting train, knocking over those who tried to hold him, he stood upright with his back to the brick wall of the station, shouting in Greek that the aristocrats of his native land were dodging military service and trying to compel poor working men to take their places. The police reserves were sent from the station and they surrounded the man, who laughed as he saw them and then attempted to bite the bricks of the station, tearing his tongue and lips to shreds.

The police finally succeeded in restraining him, but were obliged to tie him hand and foot until he reached the hospital.

SCORES I. W. W. LEADERS

Atwill Says They Are Responsible For Woman's Death

Salem, Mass., Oct. 17.—Joseph J. Ettor, the idol and the leader of the I. W. W. forces, was bitterly arraigned by District Attorney Atwill during his opening address to the jury here. He declared that Ettor and his associates were responsible and that he was directly responsible for the death of Anna Lopezzo, who was shot and killed during the Lawrence riot.

While Clerk George read the indictment, the defendants listended very attentively, it being translated into Italian by the official interpreter, Alfred W. Sacco. The indictment charges Ettor and Arturo Giovannitti with being accessories before the fact by inciting with inflammatory speeches, and it charges Joseph Caruso with firing the fatal shot which ended the life of Anna Lopezzo.

THE HUMMING BIRD.

Known as a Flower to Which God Has Granted Wings.

Our continent has a monopoly of humming birds, the gems of the feathered creation. Of these there are said to be as many as 400 species, most of which confine themselves to the tropical regions.

Only eighteen varieties live farther north than Mexico. It is generally thought that humming birds live upon honey. This, however, is a mistake. They do devour some honey, it is true, but most of their food consists of the small insects which inhabit certain flowers.

The little bird is therefore useful as well as beautiful and has been called a flower to which God has granted wings.

Humming birds are so small that when they are captured for commercial purposes it is impossible to use even the smallest shot for fear of injuring their skins. They are therefore stunned with a drop of water from a blowgun or syringe and fall into a net, when they are quickly poisoned.

Humming birds vary in size from those half as large as a sparrow to those about the size of a bee. Their flight is so swift that they can be well seen only when poised on a flower.—Ave Maria.

REPUBLICANS TO HOLD BIG RALLY WITH MUSIC AND RED FIRE

Joseph Walker, Candidate for Governor, to Head the Galaxy of Speakers

Plans for Municipal Caucus and Giving Out Papers

An enthusiastic meeting of the Republican City Committee was held Thursday evening at the committee headquarters in the Johnson building. In addition to planning for a grand rally to be held next Monday evening at Alpha hall arrangements were also made in relation to nomination papers for the municipal caucuses to be held Nov. 12.

From the plans made for the rally it promises to be a rouser as several good speakers will be present. These will include Hon. Joseph Walker candidate for Governor, Congressman Samuel W. McCall and Congressman Robert O. Harris the candidate for reelection from the 14th district, Guy A. Ham, Robert Wolcott, candidate for Senator Representatives Walter E. Piper and Wiliam J. Leslie, and Dr. Everett M. Bowker candidate for County Commissioner. Music during the rally will be furnished by the famous Temple male quartette of Boston.

Previous to the rally at the hall there will be a parade. The Quincy Fife and Drum corps will start from the West Quincy depot, about 7 o'clock and march via South Quincy to the Quincy depot where the speakers, and other guests will be met on the arrival of the train from Boston at 7.28. The speakers will then be escorted to Alpha hall where the speaking will commence at 7.45. Quantities of red fire will be burned all along the line from West Quincy to the Quincy depot and from the latter place to Alpha hall. It is planned to make this rally a hummer. Plans have also been made for an overflow meeting in an adjoining hall if necessary.

In relation to nomination papers for the Municipal caucuses they may be obtained at headquarters any evening after next Monday evening and plans have been made so that headquarters will be open every evening from 6 to 9 o'clock from that date until after the municipal caucuses. Nomination papers will be received beginning Monday evening Oct. 28, and the last date for filing is Thursday evening Oct. 31 at 7.30 o'clock at which time they will be open by the Chairman and secretary of the committee.

METER SERVICE ECONOMICAL

Results in a Material Saving in Water Consumption

OVER 1,000 INSTALLED

The result of the installation of water meters by the City of Quincy is shown by the report of the Metropolitan Water board, of water consumption throughout the Metropolitan district for the month of September. The installation of meters has progressed rapidly this year and Commissioner Frederick E. Tupper reports that up to the presnt time over one thousand meters have been set up. A large gang of men are now at work, and have been for several weeks, setting meters at Houghs Neck and at Germantown. Up to the present time this section of the city has not been generally metered and occupants of cottages have been allowed all the water they wanted for the minimum charge. The chances are that by next season all of these cottages will be metered.

According to the report of the Metropolitan Water board for the month of September the average daily consumption of water in Quincy was 86 galolns per capita. In September 1911 the average daily consumption was 92 gallons per capita, showing a decrease of six gallons per capita. This decrease is largely due to the installation of meters.

TRAMP SUPPER THE FEATURE

Of Most Delightful Gathering of the Rebekahs

A good time followed the regular meeting of the George L. Gill Rebekah Lodge at their rooms Thursday evening. One application for membership was received. Following a drama, "How the Story Grows," a tramp luncheon was served. The affair was under the direction of the sewing circle who took part in the drama and served the luncheon. There was a large attendance.

The circle consists of Mrs. Lillian Baker, Mrs. Mary Smith, Mrs. Addie Dewhurst, Mrs. Walter Walker, Mrs. Eugene Blaisdell, Mrs. Robert Welch, Mrs. George Ela and Mrs. R. C. Wood.

There was dancing until midnight.

The drama represented the origin of a story and a woman figured in it. The creator of the yarn secretly told it to a friend whom she swore to secrecy, but like the majority of women she just had to tell it and the story grew. Finally the community declared that the woman must be dead, and after fashionable gossip they commenced planning a tribute to the deceased when she appeared as one risen from the dead. The usual consternation arose at her appearance and after velvety compliments and charming smiles peace was declared and the curtain rung down.

GEORGE A. McKAY ENDED LIFE WITH BULLET THROUGH HEART

Man Had Been Dead Fully Six Hours Before His Body Was Discovered

Had Been In State of Melancholia For Some Time

The dead body of George A. McKay, brother of Capt. Daniel R. McKay of the police department was found this noon in his room at the Greenleaf lying on the floor with a bullet hole through the heart. Lying near him was a new 32 calibre revolver from which the fatal shot had evidently been fired.

The body was fully dressed and Medical Examiner Fred E. Jones who was notified gave it as his opinion that he had been dead at least six hours.

The body was discovered this noon by one of the employees of the departments who opened the door of the room with a master key. The girl was horrified at the spectacle which met her gaze.

The body was laying almost under the bed, and the impression of Medical Examiner Jones was that after the shot had been fired the body pitched forward and landed under the bed.

The girl rushed from the apartment and notified Paul W. Kribbs the janitor who in turn notified Officer Murray.

Mr. McKay was a special police officer and had been a member of the special police force for many years. According to his brother Capt. McKay, George had not been in good health for some time, and it is to this that he assigns his rash act.

The deceased was born in Quincy about 55 years ago and during his early days was employed in the granite industry. He left Quincy for a time, but came back some 18 or 20 years ago, since which time he has resided in Quincy. At one time he did active police duty but has not been constantly employed for some years.

He was a man who was fond of books and a deep thinker although inclined of late years to be subject to attacts of melancholia. He was never married.

QUINCY GRANITE FOR MONUMENT

To Form Part of the Canton G. A. R. Memorial

The memorial monument recently erected on the lot of Revere Post 94, G. A. R., in Canton Corner cemetery, Canton, will be dedicated Saturday afternoon. Comander Richmond L. Weston, through whose efforts during the last three years a large part of the fund has been raised, will make the introductory remarks. The shaft will be unveiled by Pauline Revere, a granddaughter of Paul Revere, for whom the the post was named.

Alfred Roe of Worcester past commander of Massachusetts, G. A. R., will make the dedicatory address, and Rev. William Grainger, rector of Canton Episcopal church, will have charge of the devotional exercises.

The monument is of Westerly granite, surmounted by a ball of polished Quincy granite. It is 16 feet high and stands on a base six feet square. It is located just inside the Washington street entrance of the cemetery.

J. N. White & Sons of West Quincy had the contract for the monument and all of the work of cutting the stone and polishing the ball was done at their yard in this city.

BRUSH FIRE.

The alarm from Box 613 at 10.35 this morning was for a lively brush fire near the plant of the Boston Gear Works at Norfolk Downs. There was no immediate danger that any of the buildings would take fire, but some person thought so and rang in the alarm. The recall sounded inside of fifteen minutes.

The interest that residents of Wollaston are taking in the coming election was shown at the registration Wednesday when two citizens of that ward who had passed the three score and ten years mark came to City Hall to become registered. —The assertion that no man is indispensable in any good cause offers a wholesome lesson. No matter how useful a man is, the fear that the cause he is enlisted in would go to the dogs without him is a specious tribute to him. The best usefulness is in strengthening the things that remain as men come and go. The man who pretends otherwise is a sham, and the people who foster in him this delusion of egotism, mere idol-worshippers. Change is sometimes beneficial, if for no other reason than to prove the essential strength of a cause and the reliable productivity of human nature.—Christian Register.

SMALL BUT ENTHUSIASTIC PARTY HEAR REPUBLICAN CANDIDATES

Councilman Sandberg's House Scene of Political Love Feast

Progressives Accused of Trying to Wreck the G. O. P.

A neighborhood rally was held at Edward J. Sandberg's house, Thursday evening and the speakers of the evening were Roger Wolcott, Dr. Everett M. Bowker who is running for county commissioner, Representative William J. Leslie and Frank Shay. Edward J. Sandberg presided.

In opening the meeting Mr. Sandberg said that because of a busy evening in the city the attendance was smaller than was expected. He took up the question of the enthusiasm and said that it was growing towards Republicanism everyday, that the Bull Moose party was a fad, similar to that of socialism, which created such a stir a few years ago and then practically died a natural death, and that there was no question but what Congressman Harris would receive a handsome vote and he returned to Washington as the representative in the 14th district.

He stated that previous to the appearance of the Bull Mose party in the field Col. Kincaide was never known to be on any side but the winning one and he said that the vote given the Bull Moose candidates would be a sad surprise to the people who have picked up their banner without thinking the problem out.

Roger Wolcott disposed of the very personal attacks on himself by saying that in calling him an aristocrat the people were doing him an injustice, that he was no silk stocking baby but a citizen who was placed in office by a fine vote and one who did not forget his constituency or his state in his term as a representative.

He spoke of his connection with the Spanish War in which he served and said that Representative Leslie and he had weathered a few legislative storms and that the latter was the gainer for his district in every instance.

He spoke of the Grand Trunk bill which meant competition for the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad and said that in supporting it he not only had the interest of the bill at heart as a member of the railroad committee but that he also believed that it would mean considerable to Quincy because along the Quincy waterfront there was a splendid opportunity to develop a dock system equal to the best in the world.

He spoke in favor of electrification and said that the Boston and Providence road had been given permission to float a new bond issue to electrify its system from Providence to Boston and that while he believed in action he did not want any experimentation in this recent application to speed but hoped in a short time to see all roads running under electric power.

Mr. Wolcott said he was proud of the work of the redistricting committee inasmuch as it took away from a hopelessly Democratic district Quincy and Milton and opened the opportunity of having a congressman from either place which was impossible while hitched on to the 10th district because of the immense size of the Boston wards.

He said that he believed in all good measures, that he was progressive without a capital "P" and that his legislative career had fitted him for the senatorship. He said that while he could say nothing against his opponents neither were in a position to promise a great deal because of their inexperience.

He said a good word for Representative Piper and was given good applause when he concluded.

Representative Leslie spoke on his record in the house and said that in his service as a councilman he was on the outside looking in but that while a member of the legislature he was on the inside looking out. He spoke of his accomplishments while in office and said that the only fight in which he had failed was the Neponset bridge bill which was killed by Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston.

He said that it was perhaps a good thing for Quincy that the bill was killed since under the recent appropriation for an Old Colony boulevard to connect with Quincy it would be necessary for the Metropolitan Park Commission to build a bridge which would be not only suitable for boulevard purposes but also for South Shore purposes.

While he asked for an appropriation of $240,000 to complete the Quincy boulevard he was satisfied with being awarded $120,000, and said that he thought it was a very substantial amount.

He advised the citizens to awaken and probe into affairs, to forget that Quincy was only a place to sleep in and said that he hoped to represent Quincy again in the house and promised even a better showing than made during his first term, one act of which cannot be unfavorably criticised.

Dr. Bowker said that because of his experience as a member of the Board of Selectmen of the Town of Brookline fr 12 years, a position which called for executive ability

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

There was a big slump in the attendance at that last game of the world's series.

We may now hear more of that great murder trial in New York and a few other things of vital and nation wide importance.

That auto chemical still stirs things up in going through the square.

If the speed was reduced no one would find fault, and if the fire was small it would not require such haste and if it was big it would still be there when the machine arrived.

A New York woman fears the effect of a war on the women of the Turkish harems. As the Turks have been at war a good many times, this agitation on the part of the New York lady who wishes to rush into print appears needless.

All this slush about inside base ball must be some trying to those who saw the world's series.

T. R. is bound to keep in the limelight whichever way he turns. But at this time every one regrets that the gentleman is flat on his back while holding the public stage.

Men take off their hat in an elevator when a woman boards the car, and now some people wonder why they do not follow the custom when on an electric car.

Christy Matheson is one great pitcher, but the fates were against him.

President Taft advocates the establishment of a national history house. Not such a bad idea at that.

If Thursday's weather had only been Wednesday that base ball crowd would have enjoyed the sport much better.

All down but one. Set them up in the other alley.

With all the sound steamers coming under one head the dream of Charles W. Morse, the man who was to have died a few months ago will come to a realization.

Mr. Hale has suggested that the three party committees decided upon a candidate for United States senator. Very nice of the Bay State leader of the plain people. But who is running this senatorial matter, the self styled leader or the plain people themselves.

Germany has dropped out of the coal trust as a protest against the raising of the price. Now if the government could lower the price, many people would be much happier.

As yet no one has come forward with a reasonable solution of the Red Sox unaccountable slump. Those who really ought to know have been discreetly silent upon the subject.

A Marathon runner of four years ago has been operated upon 16 times, and all his troubles are laid to that run. Another black eye for a useless expenditure of energy.

The Brooklyn woman who came to Boston to prove that she is not dead is having a hard time of it. No reflections on Brooklyn of course.

THAT EGG BOYCOTT.

Over 40,000 householders in Northern Ohio have decided to leave eggs alone until the price drops to 30 cents per dozen. More power to them. If the people in all the states were to go and do likewise with eggs and other commodities, there would be a prompt slump in the price, but the coroners of the food stuffs have not been sleeping. They have got their grip on other things as well as eggs, and the average person has to eat, so there you are. If they do not pay the price on one thing they will on another and it is as broad as it is long. Boycotting as we have previously pointed out will not bring relief. If the dealers do not win on one thing they do on another.

Coal took a jump a short time ago. Everyone was assured there was no shortage. And again we are assured that there will be a drop in the prices of this necessary within a few weeks. Then why in the name of common sense the raise in price? Who authorized it? Who is responsible? Certainly not the law of supply and demand. And this is the only reasonable and logical regulator of market prices. A few weeks ago a committee of the National bureau of labor, after weeks of research, spending much of the people's money came out with the solemn announcement that certain commodities had increased a certain percentage in prices within a given number of years. A primary school pupil with a slate and pencil could have accomplished the same results without any of that enormous expenditure of gray matter on the part of that committee to say nothing of the money which they wasted. And what did this gallant committee's investigation amount to? Absolutely nothing. They told their little tale, which by the way every one knew and they did not attempt to offer any remedy.

The other day, the secretary of the bureau of agriculture came out with the usual fairy tale of the enormous prosperity of the country with particular stress upon the agricultural department. It is true crops have been enormous. But who is reaping the benefit? Not the farmer because according to all accounts he finds difficulty in having his crop harvested, and even if it is gathered, there is trouble in transporting it, owing to lack of cars, or else the farmer lacks the money. Both of those contentions are borne out by the railroads on the one hand, who have been unable or unwilling to supply cars, and on the other hand by the announcement of President Taft that a method should be devised to provide the farmers with money at low rates of interest to move their crops.

Again we are told that the farmer is exceedingly prosperous. We are told that every big farmer of the west has his own automobile and other up to date luxuries.

So with these conflicting tales where is the poor average buyer to strike a happy medium? Investigations have in the main been productive of very little to the man who pays the freight, yet the self same man has had to bear the burden of expense of those investigations. The senate investigation of campaign expenses when all is said and done will only enable a few people to throw mud without producing any lasting beneficial results.

Those expenditures have been of the past. There is no penalty attached to the findings of guilt whoever may be at fault. Yet this committee is serenely pursuing a course which in the main is merely farcial in its effects.

What the people would like to know is the cause of this enormous increase in the price of necessaries and a remedy if there is one in the brain pan of any of the investigators.

They would really like to know why we in the United States pay a higher price for meat, apples, potatoes, watches and many other things too numerous to mention, all products of this country, than the people of Europe have to pay.

This is not a matter which is confined to the present day alone. It really did not require the efforts of a committee of the New York chamber of commerce to bring this fact forcibly to the minds of the people in this country.

Take any person who has ever been across the pond and if they be of an inquisitive turn of mind he or she will tell you that their researches have proven just what this New York body has shown. Take articles of jewelry for instance, go to London or Paris and see what you can buy American watches of the standard grades for. Any one who has been there will tell you that the price of the United States product abroad is one fourth, if not one third less than the same article can be purchased for in this country. Now if United States products can be sold at such a low rate in European markets, after the added expense of the 3000 miles freight which must be met, and still be disposed of at a profit in the name of common sense why cannot they be sold on this side of the water at an even rate at least?

The question naturally asked is who reaps the benefit of this great difference in price? And the answer cannot be that the working man is the gainer because while commodities have taken a skyward jump, wages have not increased in proportion.

So that the person of average intelligence has only to turn to the Rockefellers, the Morgans, the Carnegies and others of this ilk to understand where the bonus has gone.

If the people would only awake from their day dreams, forget base ball, football, basket ball and a few other things which are of no material benefit to the country as a whole, and settle down to a calm consideration of everyday vital problems, insist that the people they elect to office pay more attention to those matters than the provision of a playground for this or that section of a community, the length of hat pins, settlement of seat at a world's base ball series and a few other trivial matters which have no bearing whatever upon the welfare of humanity as a whole, there would speedily be a settlement of matters which would be far reaching in their scope and effect. But in the present day frenzy of matters which are of as much good as the pigs in clover and a few other kindred puzzles, subjects of great moment are forgotten and every one drifts with the tide regardless of whither it brings us up.

OUT OF WORK, DESPONDENT

The aid of the police department of Quincy, Boston and other cities has been sought by George E. Mellen of 231 Independence avenue, in an effort to obtain some news of the whereabouts of his son Bertie Mellen who has not been seen by the family since last Monday. According to the father his sons is 21 years of age, had been out of work for some time and had become somewhat despondent, and although the father believes he went away to seek work he is unable to understand why he left no word of his intentions. There had been no quarrel or trouble of any description and it was a complete surprise to Mr. Mellen on returning home Monday evening to find that his young man had gone. He took two suits of clothes with him showing that his departure was premeditated.

Mr. Mellen has been in the employ of the Old Colony and New Haven railroads for 48 years and now has charge of the news agency of the company.

MARCONI MINUS AN EYE

Inventor Submits to Operation as Result of Accident

Rome, Oct. 18.—William Marconi's right eye was removed yesterday afternoon by Dr. Bayardi. Marconi was seriously injured on Sept. 25 in an automobile accident. He was removed to a hospital, where he was treated for several days. The severe contusions and swelling around the injured eye prevented a thorough examination until a day or two ago, when it was found that the optic nerve had been affected.

A consultation of physicians was held and it was decided to operate, the removal of the right eye being deemed necessary to preserve the sight of the other.

WEAR HUB RUBBERS This Winter

LAND OF THE MIDNIGHT SUN

Topic of Most Interesting Discourse by Dr. Bronson

The opening lecture in the course to be given at the Hall Place M. E. church, during the winter months was by no means a disappointment to those present and if this first one is a standard for those to come later, a grand opportunity is afforded the people of Quincy to hear and learn about the wonderful places, people and other things of attraction on this grand old globe. It is aimed to make these lectures instructive and helpful as well as interesting to all.

The first lecture was given Wednesday evening by the Rev. Dillon Bronson, D. D., District Supt. of the Boston District of Methodist Churches on "Norway, Iceland and Spitzbergan or the Land of the Midnight Sun.""

Dr. Bronson visited these places twelve years ago and again during the past summer, revisiting some of the old scenes and visiting many new ones. Twelve years ago when he took the trip they followed the coast of Norway, but during the past summer the route was more especially through the country thus giving them a splendid knowledge of the interior.

Dr. Bronson showed about one hundred views of the different places visited and scenes of historic interest. Dr. Bronson said he thought there were many things which we might copy from these people, for instance, a person about to take a car and having a letter to mail could drop it in a letter box on the car, thus having it reach its destination much sooner than by our system. He said it would be a very simple matter to write a letter to Boston from Quincy and get an answer the same day if we were able to post our letters on the same train we took to Boston in the morning. He also said that telephones are much more common there than here, little telephone booths built right on the sidewalk and you can just step into one of these booths and telephone most anywhere for 2-2 cents. Their sleeping cars are also much pleasanter than ours, there being a better chance of pure air than in ours.

Dr. Bronson showed their route from Iceland to Spitzbergan. The point of greatest interest is of course the point from which the sun sets and minute later without any interval of darkness whatever, it rises again on another day. The sun shines contantly from May to October, shining as brightly at midnight as at noonday. Light is as light as day during these months but the constant light is very trying, especially on the nerves of American people. Dr. Bronson said he wouldn't have known when to go to bed if he hadn't had a watch with him.

Dr. Bronson said that the pictures of these places do not do the places credit as no artist could paint the gorgeous colors of the scenery there.

Dr. Bronson is a pleasing lecturer. He is bright and witty and shows a thorough knowledge of his subject.

The first and last pictures thrown on the slide were the American flag at which the audience rose and sang "My country 'tis of thee."

At the close of the lecture Dr. Bronson held the 2nd and 3rd Quarterly Conferences. Reports were received from the various departments of the church conference closed with prayer and the benediction.

NOT SO REMOTE AFTER ALL.

At the reception in the new Nurses' home at the Hospital Wednesday afternoon one of the lady visitors was being shown through the various departments, and among them, of course the latest and most important addition, the new operating building. She freely expressed her admiration and satisfaction at seeing such complete, and one might almost say, attractive conveniences and appliances for ministering to sick and wounded bodies, but confessed that her interest was somewhat formal, and that somehow hospital affairs did not seem to touch her very closely because all her family and friends were so very healthy!

Two days afterwards, on Saturday, that lady's beloved daughter was stricken with appendicitis and hurried to the Hospital, and Sunday morning underwent the usual operation.

Thus almost in a moment the one place of all the world where the interest and anxiety of that family were centered was the Hospital.

You never can tell!

URGENT NEEDS DISCUSSED

Men's Club Talked on Schools and Teacher's Salaries

AND CAR SERVICE

"What is Quincy Point's urgent need," was discused at the regular meeting of the Men's Club at the Washington street Congregational church Wednesday evening. John W. Hendry presided.

The inadequate school facilities were discussed and in connection with remarks regarding the overcrowded Washington school it was generally agreed that the salaries of the Quincy teachers were not large enough.

In regard to trolley service it was stated that while a 15 minute schedule was now in effect it was impossible to count on the service. A loop line through the Fore River district to Quincy avenue was also spoken of and it met with the hearty approval of the members.

The point that ward two has not been well represented in the city council was also strongly made and it was the opinion of those present that the men to be chosen in the future would be men who would have the interest of the community at heart and not be harassed by thought of reelection.

Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

R. C. Drinker will address the club on "The manufacture of steel" at the October 30 meeting.

COURT HOLDS DEED VALID

Mrs. Meaney Claimed She Did Not Understand the Act

CONTENTION NOT SUSTAINED

The bill of Mrs. Margaret Meaney aged 87 years of West Quincy brought in the equity session of the Superior court before Judge Morton to have a deed of her property to her son William Meaney of Lynn, canceled, was dismissed Thursday.

Mrs. Meany is quite feeble. She told the Judge that he daughter Mrs. Mary Donovan of Quincy, gave her whiskey to drink and then took her to the office of a Justice of the Peace where she made her mark on a paper which she later learned was a deed conveying her property valued at $7,600 to her son to the exclusion of the other children.

Mrs. Donovan the daughter denied that she had given her mother whiskey and said that she understood perfectly what she was doing when she made her mark on the deed. W. H. Teasdale the Justice of the Peace before whom the deed was acknowledged corroborated the evidence of Mrs. Donovan.

Judge Morton found that the son William Meaney knew nothing of the deeding of the property to him at the time it was done and that he and his sister, Mrs. Donovan did not act in collusion. The bill was then dismissed.

alone, he was peculiarly fitted to be a county commissioner, and asked for the hearty support of the voters of the district.

Dr. Bowker said that this was the first time in public life that he was ever in a contest where party designations were a factor and that in his town they were forgotten when the proper man was in the running. He also asked for the wholesome consideration of the voters of all the parties and said that he would do his full duty if elected to the commissionership this year.

Frank Shay spoke in his characteristic way and roundly scored the Progressive Party. He said that in hopelessly Democratic districts no candidates from the party had appeared and that they were trying to wreck the Republican party which had been the source of prosperity to the nation, by placing in nomination men who wanted office for the offices return.

The last speaker was Councilman Robert Craig who touched on conditions in general.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE IN BOSTON AND VICINITY

PARK THEATRE.

Rose Stahl in her new play by Chas. Klein, called "Maggie Pepper" has a character which will outlast and outshine her Patricia O'Brien in "The Chorus Lady." Although the piece is now in the midst of a long engagement the house has been filled at every performance. The acting of Miss Stahl is simply great but one of the delightful surprises of the performance at the Park is that Mr. Harris has surrounded his star with a Company of splendid players and Miss Stahl is considerate enough of them and their ability to allow opportunity for the display of their talent, therefore "Maggie Pepper" is one of the best acted plays on the stage. It is a well known fact that Rose Stahl is insistent that no detail of the performance be slighted, and she never occupies the center of the stage to the exclusion of her fellow players, and yet while she is there on the stage, speaking or silent, the audience never forgets that she is the dominant figure in this story of real life which is being unraveled for their pleasure.

It is safe to say that "The Man of the Hour" shares with "The Lion and the Mouse" and "The Third Degree" the honor of being the most popular and most successful realistic dramas of recent seasons on the American stage. It has been played before large audiences all over the country, and it has never failed to be listened to with rapt attention and to receive tumultuous applause. Is engagement at the Castle Square Theatre is for only one week, and it will be acted by the entire strength of John Craig's company, including Wilson Melrose and Mary Young.

After "The Man of the Hour," on Monday, October 28th, Mr. Craig will present a new and original drama called "Butterfly Baronet," for the first time on any stage.

A SCENE FROM "MAGGIE PEPPER," At the Park Theatre.

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

The "Scotch operetta "Little Boy Blue" began the second week of its stay at the Majestic Theatre last Monday night before a large audience that signified its approval of the Henry W. Savage production by continued applause and other evidences of appreciation. There can no longer be doubt of the success of this pretentious and dainty offering and "Little Boy Blue" is surely in for a long and prosperous run.

While Scotch atmosphere is not lacking in this offering and it is pleasing to Scotch people it is rather a Frenchified idea of the subject and has a direct appeal to all classes of play-goers. Musically the operetta is all that could be desired and the singers have the advantage of assistance from an orchestra of grand opera proportions. There is one number that sets the audience to swaying and humming in unison with the singers and that is a more than pleasing duet called "Love Never Dies" which is rendered by Miss Bryan and Mr. Farnum. Not in a long time in Boston has there been heard anything more "catchy" than this number.

"Little Boy Blue" is a "big production," in everything that the phrase implies both as to the ability of the principals and the numerical strength of the company.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

The most notable engagement of a season thus far replete with extraordinary attractions is announced for B. F. Keith's Theatre next week, when Mrs. Langtry, returns to America after an absence of ten years. For her tour this season Mrs. Langtry has selected a one-act comedy written by Percy Fendall and herself, and entitled "Helping The Cause." Mrs. Langtry has the role of an English noblewoman, arrested for stone throwing and incarcerated in Holloway Jail for two weeks. But alas for her unhappy jailers, the lady makes herself so agreeable that the governor and warden of the jail quite outdo themselves in vieing with one another in paying attention to their titled prisoner. Her cell is furnished in gorgeous style, with sofas, gilt chairs, oil paintings, etc., and everything is done to make the lot of the Suffragette pleasant. The outcome of the story is both novel and amusing, Mrs. Langtry has the part of the titled Suffragette, who is imprisoned for stone throwing, and she is supported by an excellent company. A complete scenic production is carried. Mrs. Langtry will head an excellent vaudeville bill.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

"The Man of the Hour" will be acted at the Castle Square during the coming week. It is a powerful drama of everyday life in a large American city, and its plot centres around certain political complications that mingle with them the romantic atmosphere of love. Its characters are all types of people of the present, and in

CLASS OF NINE CANDIDATES

The O. B. Girls, organized to promote sociability met at the home of Miss Flora Collins, Pleasant street, Tuesday evening and elected the following officers:

President, Miss Flora Collins; Secretary, Miss Minnie Moodie; Treasurer, Miss Isabella Main.

Business over the evening passed all too quickly for those present, who were called upon in turn to entertain the others in some manner. Miss Gertrude Welsh easily captured the first prize by rendering some very difficult pieces on the piano. None the less creditable was the vocal solo of Miss Flora Collins.

Those present were: Flora Collins, Minnie Moodie, Isabella Main, Gertrude Welsh, Louise Moyle, Myrtle Brundage and Lillian Collins.

GRASS FIRES MAKE TROUBLE

Kept the Auto Chemical on the Jump Thursday

FENCING BURNED

The automobile chemical was kept on the jump Thursday answering telephone alarms for grass fires in several parts of the city. Shortly after noon the machine was called to the residence of Henry McGrath on Pleasant street. Mr. McGrath had been burning some old papers and the fire got away from him. There was no loss.

Earlier in the morning the auto chemical responded to a call for a grass fire at the foot of Arnold street near South street.

In the afternoon at 2.10 District Chief Packard while near the Adams farm on Sea street noticed a lively grass fire in progress and telephoned the central station. The fire burnt over a large tract and ruined a large section of fencing.

MONSTER APPLE AT ATLANTIC

Nicholas Sprunk Picked One Measuring Fifteen Inches

Nicholas Sprunk of 63 Montclair avenue, Atlantic, picked a mammoth Gravenstein apple from one of his trees this week. It is said to be a record apple for that section of the city. It was perfect in every way. Mr. Sprunk carried his prize to the Tubular Rivet works where it was carefully weighed and measured. The apple weighed one pound, six and three-quarters ounces and the circumference was 15 3-4 inches. That is some apple all right.

THUNDER IN SEPTEMBER.

Weather Record for the Month Reported by the Blue Hill Observatory

The weather during September averaged slightly cooler than usual and there were no abnormal extremes of temperature. The mean temperature of 60.9 degrees was 0.4 degrees below the average as compared with 60.2 degrees in September, 1911, and 62.3 degrees in 1910. The temperature rose above 80 degrees on four days and the maximum of the month was 86 degrees on the 11th. The lowest reached was 34 degrees on the 30th. There was a marked deficiency in the rainfall the total of 1.71 inches being 2.65 inches less than the normal amount and the least in September since 1908. Last year the total was 3.36 inches. A measurable amount of rain fell in ten days and the most in one day was .62 inch on the 16th. The mean relative humidity of 83.5 per cent, was exactly normal. There was slightly more cloudiness than usual and the total amount of sunshine was 4 per cent. less than the average. There was little wind throughout the month, the mean hourly velocity of 12.9 miles per hour being the lowest on record for September, and the lowest for any month since August 1911. The maximum velocity of the month was 40 miles per hour from the northwest on the 30th, and the prevailing wind direction was southwest. A thunderstorm occurred on the 11th and there were frosts in the neighboring lowlands on the mornings of the 28th, 29th and 30th. L. A. WELLS, Blue Hill Observatory.

FASHIONS IN PERFUMES.

Almost everyone enjoys the sweet odors that primarily we associate with flowers, though many people prefer the smell of spices, new mown hay, the breath of pines and balsams, or that indescribable whiff of summer essence that comes on breezes that blow over fields of bayberry, sweet fern and the innumerable growing things which help to make up the bouquet of delicious fragrance which one breathes ecstatically, say in August on the coast of Maine, and in many other delightful places.

MEMORY AND PERFUMES.

It is curious that familiar ordors stimulate memory more than taste or touch. This has been ascribed to the fact that the old factory nerve connects directly with the centre of the brain, where Galen, first and afterward Des Cartes, located the soul. However this may be, history is filled with proofs of the influence that perfumes exercise on man.

The incense burner and bearer are important and oft recurring figures on the mural remains that picture the life of Egypt, Greece and Rome, in the heyday of their civilization.

The sails of Cleopatra's barge were scented, we are told, so that "The winds were love sick with them," and the medical value of sweet odors was attested when, in Athens, Hippocrates rid the city of the plague by using perfumes after every other means had failed.

THE VERDICT TODAY.

Today the proper use of good perfumes is recognized as not only a great pleasure, but a legitimate part of civilized life and my lady's toilet is not complete without a touch of the dainty odor she affects in perfume, sachets, powder and toilet water. Nor is the enjoyment of this luxury confined to the women of society, for men are often accused of using the handy bottle on the wife's dresser, and latest news from London states that English dandies are using scents as their grandfathers did as well as cultivating side whiskers and strapping their trousers under their boots in styles dating back to the same period.

Modern physicians recognize the therapeutic value of perfumes, as a safeguard against contagion, but most people use perfume because they like it, though people of refinement never overdo this use, but confine it to a delicate perceptible fragrance that never offends as do gross common scents.

DAINTY WOMAN OF FASHION.

The dainty woman selects a special perfume and uses this only in all her toilet articles, and it is becoming a fad with young girls to select the odor of some flower that corresponds with their favorite color. Say a girl chooses the essence of violet, clover or heliotrope, and has her sachets, perfume, toilet water, powder and soap to correspond. Her room done up in chintz with the flower pattern, and all her pretty frocks and belongings in some of the flower colors including the dull greens of leaf and stem. Few, perhaps, harmonize to this extent and many women prefer synthetic scents as more assertive and distinctive, but no crude mixing of perfumes is tolerated. If any change is made it includes everything on the dressing table, for Madam La-Mode decrees that only one favored scent is permissible for each individual.

American manufacturers now turn out these fine matching lines of toilet goods in forms that appeal to fastidious society women, at prices far less than one pays for as satisfactory imported products, because these latter have to pay an enormous duty of something like sixty cents on the dollar.

Cheap, coarse, amateur perfumes, indiscriminately mixed, and used in profusion, are relegated to the sort of people who do not understand that while a little of really fine essence is delightful, a thimbleful of coarse alcoholic mixtures is disgusting to any sensitive nostril.

MODISH SACHETS.

Sachets of all sorts are vary much used, from large padded linings for shelf, drawer or wardrobe, to smaller and more personal sachets that are tucked into the bodice, or hidden in the leaf of the satin corsage flower so generously worn.

In the light of present usage any of these sweet scented appurtenances of the dressing table make pretty, and most acceptable presents, if only care is taken to secure the perfume used by the recipient.

—The old rule used to be that three made a crowd, but in the opinion of the librarian at Harvard more than six girls make a crowd, and Radcliffe girls desiring to use that library hereafter will be limited to groups of six, and assigned a special room so as not to disturb other workers.—Somerville Journal.

JUDGE INTERVENES IN THE ETTOR CASE

He Utters a Warning to Counsel For the Defense

Salem, Mass., Oct. 18.—A bitter attack on a government witness, during which he became so violent that Judge Quinn had to intervene, was made by John P. S. Mahoney, counsel for Ettor in the trial here of the Lawrence I. W. W. leaders, Ettor, Giovannitti and Caruso, for their connection with the alleged murder committed during the big strike.

Directing his questions rather to the jury than to the witness stand, Mahoney demanded of the witness, James E. Donahue, if he was not in fact a part of the prosecution, and if he had not declared on every street corner in Lawrence that Ettor ought to be arrested, and furnished information to bring about his arrest.

During one of his interrogations, Mahoney approached the witness stand in such a threatening manner that Quinn said to him: "Try not to get into a personal encounter with the witness."

TAUNTON HAS $150,000 FIRE

Six Buildings Burned as Flames Sweep Over Ten Acres

Taunton, Mass., Oct. 18.—Fire apparatus from four adjoining towns was employed last evening to prevent a general conflagration which threatened to spread through Taunton's manufacturing district from the flames that destroyed the plants of the White-Warner company and the Union Stove Lining company.

The flames swept ten acres adjacent to West Water street, burning six buildings and quantities of stove and heater stock, with a total loss of $150,000.

Most of the loss is suffered by the White-Warner company, which manufactures heating plants and stoves, the damage being estimated at $125,000.

PARTITIONS WERE OF PAPER

And Blaze Ripped Through Them in Jig Time

WITH $1500 LOSS

The alarm from Box 515 Wednesday afternoon was for a lively grass fire near the Quincy Mansion school off Elm avenue. The fire was quickly put out and a recall sounded.

The alarm from Box 152 at 5.11 Wednesday evening called the fire department to a lively fire in the house of H. K. Ellis, Jr., at 36 Warwick street Norfolk Downs. When the department arrived a lively blaze was in progress in the attic and before it was extinguished the roof was punctured with holes and the lower floors of the house were well soaked with water.

Investigation showed that the attic has been partitioned off into several small rooms with paper. That is studding had been put up and over the studding paper had been placed as the partition. There was a chimney running through the attic and when the firemen entered they found the flue out. The supposition is that the flue was left out and when a fire was built in the stove on the lower floor the sparks came out in the attic and ignited the paper partitions, and a lively fire was not long in being started.

The fire had evidently been burning some time before it was discovered. A neighbor said he saw a small wreath of smoke coming from the roof some time before the alarm but thought nothing of it. A little later a resident living near the fire alarm box also saw smoke coming from the roof and he lost no time in sounding an alarm from Box 152 although the box was some distance from the fire.

It will be seen therefore that the fire had a good start. It was some time before it was extinguished and it required considerable water to drown it out. Chief Litchfield estimates the loss to be $1,500.

MISSIONARY OUTLOOK

In Universalist Circles Most Encouraging

The first fall meeting of the missionary society of the Universalist church, was held Monday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. John Williams Quincy street, with a large number present. The meeting opened with devotional exercises, conducted by the president, Mrs. Thomas A. Addison. The reports of the secretary and treasurer were read, after which members responded to the roll call with a quotation or poem containing the word, duty. The watchword for the next meeting is charity.

Rev. Fanny E. Austin, pastor was present and gave an interesting talk Never, in the history of the missionary work, has so large an amount of money been raised in the Universalist churches, as during the past year, so the outlook is very encouraging.

The hostess served refreshments during the social informal hour and proved herself a delightful and hospitable one. The next meeting will be held at the residence of Mrs. Robert J. Reed, South Central avenue, Wollaston.

MISSIONARY CIRCLE SESSION

Mrs. Cross Spoke Impressively of the Missionary Worker

Bethany Missionary circle held its regular meeting in the church vestry, Wednesday afternoon, with a large attendance. The meeting opened with a solo by Mrs. George Stebbins nee Isabel Mitchel of Norfolk Downs.

The devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. W. R. Cross, of Camden, Maine, who is the guest of her sister Mrs. Ernest W. Branch of Putnam street. Mrs. Cross spoke impressively of the consecration of the missionary, devoting his life to the cause.

Reports of the secretary and treasurer were read and approved after which Mrs. Charles W. Miller, the president, spoke on "Home Missionary work" as follows:

"It is great to be out where the fight is strong, to be where the heaviest troops belong, and to fight there for man and God. This is my text, and when ever I repeat it, I think of the brave hearted missionaries, whose courageous lives are carrying out this testimony. They are ministering to every sort of needy people, in every kind of unattractive locality, and it is an inspiration to us to devote our time to them this afternoon.

"Let us pause and glance at a life whose attainments were an illustration of my text. Mount Holyoke college in South Hadley is this fall celebrating its 75th anniversary. It was the dream of my youth to attend Mount Holyoke and having loved it all these years. I never pass the spacious grounds, adorned with magnificent buildings, without feelings of pride and delight which merge into reverence as I think of the woman whose body rests just back of the main building and whose soul of unconquerable energy and splendid faith made possible all that we are, for it was Mary Lyons' voice that called women into college halls and convinced an unwilling public that girls should have facilities for more than a common education. She was the pioneer and although Emma Willard and Catherine Beecher were talented teachers, it was for her to actually found an institution.

"As strongly as Mary Lyons believed in this, just as strongly did she believe in missions. Throughout her life, she gave one third to one half of her salary to this cause, and the stamp of the missionary activity that her rare power of leadership placed upon Mount Holyoke girls has never been lost.

"A tablet recently unveiled in Mary Lyon's hall is inscribed with the names of 178 graduates who have gone as foreign missionaries. Today, the college enrolls hundreds of students in mission study classes and a large band of student volunteers among its numbers. It supports two of its own graduates, one in Japan and one in China. Some facts do not lend themselves to statistics, but no one can know Mary Lyons' life, without realizing her dauntless, devoted spirit under the guidance of God, set in motion forces which encircle the globe, with purifying gladdening influences.

"It seems to me most fitting that a missionary society should recognize these facts, and turn aside from its beaten track to wish Mount Halyoke Godspeed on this its diamond jubilee.

"Education has always been a fundamental principle of Congregationalism and from this has arisen the Congregational Educational Society. In the 95 years since its birth it has assisted over 2000 young men in educating themselves for the ministry. During the last year 44 students in Colleges and 181 in theological seminaries, received aid. Not only students but colleges are aided, Fairmount in Kansas, Kingfisher, Oklahoma, Redfield, South Dakota and Northland, Wisconsin. Redfield, has just completed its 25th anniversary and after great effort has completed its endowment fund of $350,000.

"The mission schools supported by this society are in some respect the most interesting phase of its work. They are scattered broadcast over the country, some in Utah, New Mexico, where the Rio Grande Indians are taught, at Alberqueque and many others.

"The reports of these schools show great devotion on the part of the teachers with admirable results achieved. The Old South church of Boston has had the pleasant experience of supporting one of its missionaries in Oregon for many years. There has been recently established in Claremount, California, a Hindu Sunday school, the first in America. What is our relation to all this? Fifty years ago our country asked its women to give their sons, their brothers, their fathers and husbands to the honor of the battle field, for the purpose of maintaining the union. Today, our country asks its women to give, perchance their sons and daughters, but surely their time and money to the glory of mission work, for the purpose of maintaining and strengthening Christian standards of living, and of delivering not a people but scores of people from the bondage of ignorance and superstition. Have you ever placed your money unwillingly in the missionary treasury? Surely you never will again when you think of these things, but rather thank God that this way is open whereby you may serve yourself, your family, your country and your God."

Mrs. Stebbins sang another solo accompanied by Miss Henrietta Gram of Norfolk Downs, and the meeting closed with a social, informal hour during which refreshments were served.

DOCTORS ARE OPTIMISTIC

Roosevelt May Leave Mercy Hospital Early Next Week

DANGER ZONE NEARLY PASSED

Period of Possible Development of Blood Poisoning Has Another Day to Run—Mrs. Roosevelt Makes Husband "Victim of Machine Rule"—Negro Creates Excitement

Chicago, Oct. 18.—Throughout a day of unbroken calm, Colonel Roosevelt lay in his bed in Mercy hospital with virtually no variation of his condition. It was a day of waiting, with the ever-present possibility of complications, but with lessened fears on the part of those who were watching over the wounded man. He seemed in his normal condition, but there was no relaxation in the strict regime, and his physicians said that he was by no means out of danger.

Colonel Roosevelt's physicians are discussing the length of time it will be necessary for the colonel to remain in the hospital. It is thought it may be safe for him to leave for Oyster Bay on Monday or Tuesday, if all goes well, but not even a tentative decision has been reached.

The clinical records were the most encouraging of any day since Colonel Roosevelt entered the hospital. During the morning the variation in temperature was limited to two-thirds of a degree, and throughout the afternoon it was reported as normal. There was virtually no variation in pulse.

The period of possible development of blood-poisoning has still another day to run and although the physicians say a change might occur within an hour at any time during the day, they are optimistic as to the outcome.

Possibility of tetanus or "lockjaw," always to be reckoned with in the case of bullet wounds, has still to be considered and as the period in which this might develop is six or seven days, Roosevelt will not be regarded as entirely out of danger even should today pass with no signs of blood-poisoning.

Dr. Terrell said the colonel could not leave the hospital safely until the expiration period, and for that reason it was regarded as out of the question to consider the colonel's departure for Oyster Bay before early next week.

All day Mrs. Roosevelt was at the bedside and, although her husband jestingly complained that he was the victim of machine rule, she said he must see no one except the members of his family. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., Miss Ethel Roosevelt and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth talked with their father from time to time, but even the family chats were limited to a few minutes on each occasion.

Twice during the day, however, Mrs. Roosevelt made exceptions to her rule. Miss Jane Addams of Hull House, one of the most active workers for the Progressive party, spent ten minutes with Roosevelt. She had hardly departed when two babies, twins, who were spending the third day of their lives, were brought in. As there was no possibility of conversation between Roosevelt and the twins, Mrs. Roosevelt admitted them for a moment.

Mrs. Roosevelt gave the babies a motherly pat as they were being taken back to their mother.

A negro who attempted to force his way into the hospital, saying he had "got to see Roosevelt," created momentary excitement. The man entered the main door and went to the elevator shaft, where he was stopped by a watchman.

"I've got to see Roosevelt," he said. "I'm a preacher and I've got a special mission."

The man was ejected from the building unceremoniously and went away. No importance was attached to the attempted intrusion.

SCHRANK'S BAIL DOUBLED

Roosevelt Will Not Be Called at Trial of Shooter

Milwaukee, Oct. 18.—The bail of John Schrank, charged with attempting to kill Theodore Roosevelt Monday night by shooting, was increased from $7500 to $15,000 by Judge Backus of the municipal court, to which the case has been transferred. No effort has been made by the prisoner to furnish the bond, and no reason has thus far been given for doubling the amount.

Colonel Roosevelt will not be required to come to Milwaukee to appear at the trial of his attempted slayer, according to the decision of District Attorney Zabel.

"I have sufficient testimony to prosecute Schrank, regardless of his own statements and confessions," said Zabel. "I have witnesses to the shooting and also patrolmen who saw the revolver in his hand and can testify to his struggle to escape from his captor."

Washington, Oct. 18.—A copy of the Republican national committee's bank account in 1904 at the Fourth National bank of New York, placed in evidence before the Clapp committee, showed one deposit of $240,000 during the latter days of October of that year. SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Mrs. Keziah Coffin, supposed widow, is arranging to move from Trumet to Boston, following the death of her brother, for whom she had kept house. Grace Van Horne, ward of Capt. Eben Hammond, leader of the "Come-outer" religious sect, offers to assist her financially if she will remain. She declines. Kyan Pepper, widower, offers marriage, and is indignantly refused.

CHAPTER II—Capt. Elkanah Daniels, leader of the Regular church, offers Keziah a place as housekeeper for the new minister, and she decides to remain in Trumet.

CHAPTER III—Keziah takes charge of Rev. John Ellery, the new minister, and gives him advice as to his conduct toward members of the parish. Ellery causes a sensation by attending a "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER IV—Ellery's presence is bitterly resented by Eben Hammond, leader of the meeting. Grace apologizes for her guardian and Ellery escorts her home in the rain. Capt. Nat Hammond, Eben's son, becomes a hero by bringing the packet into port safely through fog and storm. Ellery finds Keziah writing a letter to some one, inclosing money in response to a demand. She is curiously startled when informed of the arrival of Nat.

CHAPTER V—Nat calls on Keziah, and it develops that they have been lovers since youth. Daniels remonstrates with Ellery for attending "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER VI—Ellery is caught by the tide and is rescued by Nat. They become friends.

CHAPTER VII—Ellery meets Grace while walking in the fields Sunday, and learns that she walks there every Sunday.

CHAPTER VIII—The clergyman takes dinner Sundays with the Daniels. Annabel, the captain's daughter, exerts herself to make an impression on him. She notices with vexation his desire to get away every Sunday at a certain time. She watches him through a spy glass.

CHAPTER IX—Nat again importunes Keziah to marry him. He says he has had a quarrel with his father, who wants him to marry Grace.

CHAPTER X—Ellery asks Grace to marry him. She confesses that she loves him, but says she fears to displease her guardian, who has been very kind to her, and asks time to think about it. Elkanah Daniels tells Eben about the meetings between Ellery and Grace. Eben declares he will make Grace choose between him and the preacher. Grace finds him in a faint, following the excitement of Elkanah's visit.

CHAPTER XI—Just before he dies Eben exacts a promise from Nat and Grace that they will marry.

CHAPTER XII—Keziah breaks the news to Ellery and later he receives a note from Grace saying she is to marry Nat, and asking him not to try to see her again. Keziah tells the story of her own marriage with a man who turned out to be a good-for-nothing, and who was reported to have been lost at sea, and of her love for Nat, whom she cannot marry because the husband is alive. Ellery sees in the story a lesson in devotion to duty and decides to remain and attend to his duties.

CHAPTER XIII—Captain Nat sails for Manila to be gone two years. He says he and Grace have decided not to marry until he returns.

CHAPTER XIV—Nat is overdue, and it is feared that he has been lost at sea. Keziah gets a letter from her husband saying he is coming back. Grace goes on a visit to relatives of the Hammonds.

CHAPTER XV—A vessel flying distress signals is discovered off the coast. Ellery goes with party to board the vessel. A man is found suffering from smallpox, the rest of the crew having deserted.

CHAPTER XVI—He is taken to an abandoned shack on shore and Ellery helps nurse him. Before he dies it is discovered that he is Keziah's husband. Ellery, left alone in quarantine, is found wandering in a delirious condition by Grace. She takes him back to the shanty and sends for help.

CHAPTER XVII—Keziah and Grace nurse Ellery, who is suffering from brain fever. The doctor and Keziah spread a report that Grace and Ellery are engaged. News comes that Nat has arrived safely in Boston.

CHAPTER XVIII—The story of the wreck of Nat's vessel comes out and a home-coming is arranged, but Nat fails to appear.

In the workshop of Hallet & Co., Keziah sat sewing busily. The window near her was closed, stuck fast, and through the dingy panes she could see only roofs and chimneys. The other women and girls near her chatted and laughed, but she was silent. She did not feel like talking, certainly not like laughing. The garment she was at work on was a coat, a wedding coat, so the foreman had told her, with a smile; therefore she must be very particular. The narrow stairway leading up to the workshop ended in a little boxed-in room where the finished garments were hung to await the final pressing. From behind the closed door of this room came the sound of voices, apparently in heated argument. One of these voices was that of Larry, the errand boy. Larry was speaking shrilly and with emphasis. The other voice was lower in key and the words were inaudible.

"No, sir, you can't," declared Larry. "You can't, I tell you. The boss don't let nobody in there and— Hold on! Hold on!"

The other voice made a short but evidently earnest answer. Larry again expostulated. The workers looked up from their sewing. The door opened and Larry appeared, flushed and excited.

"Where's Mr. Upham?" he demanded. "Mr. Upham!"

Upham was the foreman of the workroom. At the moment he was downstairs in conversation with the head of the house. A half dozen gave this information.

"What's the matter? Who is it" asked several.

"I don't know who 'tis. It's a man and he's crazy, I think. I told him he couldn't come in here, but he just keeps a'comin'. He wants to see somebody named Coffin and there ain't no Coffins here."

Keziah's nearest neighbor leaned toward her.

"I guess it's somebody to see you," she said. "Your name is Coffin, ain't it?"

"No, no. That is, it can't be anybody to see me. I don't want to see anybody. Tell him so, whoever it is, I can't see anybody. I—Nat!"

"Keziah," he said, "come here. I want you. I'll tell you why in a minute. Come!"

She hesitated. In a measure she was relieved, for she had feared the man at the door might be her husband. But she was greatly agitated and troubled. Everyone in the place was looking at her.

"Nat," she said, trying to speak firmly, "I can't see you now. I'm very busy. Please go away."

"Come!"

"I can't come. Go away. Please!"

"Keziah, I'm waitin'. And I'm goin' to wait if I stay here all night Come!"

She obeyed then. She could not have a scene there, before all these strangers. She stepped past him into the little room. He followed and closed the door.

"Nat," she said, turning to him, "why did you come? How could you be so cruel? I——"

He interrupted her, but not with words. The next moment his arms were about her and she was pressed tight against the breast of his blue jacket.

"Keziah," he whispered, "I've come to take you home. Home for good No, stay where you are and I'll tell you all about it. Praise be to God!

"Keziah," He Whispered, "I've Come to Take You Home."

we're off the rocks at last. Ah that's left is to tow you into port, and, by the everlastin', that's what I'm here for!"

When Upham came up the stairs after his long interview with "the boss," he found the door at the top closed When he rattled the latch that door was opened by a stranger.

"Are you Mr .Hallett?" asked Captain Nat briskly.

"No, I'm not. Mr. Hallett is in his office on the first floor. But what——"

"On the main deck, hey? Well, all right; we won't trouble him. You'll do just as well; I judge you're one of the mates of this craft. You tell Mr. Hallett that this lady here has decided not to cruise with him any longer. No fault to find, you understand, but she's got a better berth She's goin' to ship along with me Ain't that so, Keziah?"

Keziah, pale, trembling, scarcely realizing the situation even yet, did not speak. But Captain Nat Hammond seemed to find his answer in her silence. A few minutes later, her arm in his, they descended the gloomy stairs, and emerged into the sunshine together.

That afternoon Mr. Abner Stone again "washed his hands" of his poor relation—this time, as he indignantly declared, "for good and all."

HOPED BULLET MIGHT FINISH ROOSEVELT

Dry Goods Merchant Killed For Indiscreet Remark

Pittsburg, Oct. 18.—James W. Colbeck, aged 36, a dry goods merchant, in a cafe heard a group of men Colbeck, aged 36, a dry goods merchant, in a cafe heard a group of men discussing the shooting of Colonel Roosevelt. He got into the discussion.

"Well, anyhow," said Tony Breck, the bartender, "I'll bet that bullet puts him in the White House, and that will be twice Teddy's been shot into the president's chair."

"He deserved what he got," said Colbeck. "It's too bad the bullet didn't finish him."

HOSTILITIES ARE OPENED

War Against Bulgaria and Servia Declared by Turkey

ANTICIPATES BALKAN STATES

Ottoman Armies Advance to Frontier —Montenegrins Already In District Coveted by Austria and Servia—Conflagration May Extend Beyond Confines of Macedonia

Constantinople, Oct. 18.—Turkey has declared war against Bulgaria and Servia.

Turkey also rejected a second note from the powers offering mediation in the Balkans and proposing a general conference to pacify the Balkan kingdoms and Greece.

Athens, Oct. 18.—Greece, not wishing to detach herself from her allies, sent instructions this morning to the minister at Constantinople to communicate a declaration of war to the porte.

Greece at the same time sent a fraternal greeting to the allied states.

Servia was the first of the three states to declare war last night. Bulgaria followed with a similar declaration.

Outcome Difficult to Predict

London, Oct. 18.—A general war, the extent and outcome of which it will be very difficult to predict, has begun in the Balkans—the cockpit of Europe. This conflict has been threatening for many decades, but has been averted time and time again by the inability of the states interested to work in harmony and by the intriguing diplomacy of Abdul Hamid, former sultan of Turkey.

At last, however, Bulgaria, Servia, Greece and Montenegro have agreed to set aside for the time being their special interests and have united to bring about the expulsion of Turkish rule from blood-soaked Macedonia.

But for the cowardly selfishness of the great powers this conflagration might not have taken place. No genuine attempt was made to compel Turkey to carry out the reforms guaranteed to the stricken people of Macedonia by the Berlin treaty. Instead, like hungry wolves they have sat upon their haunches and watched the various massacres—Turkish, Bulgarian and Greek—afraid to move lest one or the other might reap some territorial advantage.

Now Turkey has declared war upon Bulgaria and Servia and the die is cast. Montenegro already had begun war and Greece will join in at once.

It will take the highest kind of diplomacy to prevent the spread of conflict beyond the confines of Macedonia. Already the Montenegrins, and probably by this time the Servians, are in Novipazar, the district coveted by both Austria and Servia.

Turkey has anticipated the Balkan states, opening hostilities by a simultaneous advance of her armies against Bulgaria and Servia. It is also announced that fighting between the Turkish and Greek armies has begun on the frontier; while two Greek gunboats provided the first naval engagemen of the war by forcing the straits between the Gulf of Arta and the sea. In doing so they had a sharp gun duel with the Turkish forts.

There is an inclination among British military men, who as a matter of policy perhaps are pro-Turk, to think the importance of the Montenegrin victories has been exaggerated and that much has been made of them in order to screen the struggle that is going on for the possession of the forts guarding the Turkish town of Scutari.

The Montenegrins are fighting desperately, but they neglect the commissariat service and the hospitals which are essential in such a campaign.

The British cabinet held a long session yesterday to discuss the French proposal for a conference of the powers. It was also said that the British government was supporting the efforts being made to raise a Turkish loan in London, but this is denied at the British foreign office.

Greece for some reason was not mentioned in the official document delivered to the Servian and Bulgarian legations at Constantinople, and the Greek minister has not been asked to leave the Turkish capital, as were his Servian and Bulgarian colleagues. The Turkish minister, however, left Athens without the usual formalities.

Turkey's omission of Greece from the declaration doubtless was dictated by Kiamul Pasha, president of the council of state and the real head of the Turkish government. He has been desirous all along of avoiding a fight with Greece, whose interests, as he recently told the Greek premier, are identical with those of Turkey.

BECKER GRAFT FUND BARRED BY COURT

State Rests Case Against Accused Police Lieutenant

New York, Oct. 18.—The state rested its case against Lieutenant Becker yesterday afternoon after Justice Goff refused to permit the district attorney to prove that Becker, with no other apparent income than his salary of $2250 a year as a lieutenant of police, deposited upward of $60,000 in savings banks during the months that Jack Rose acted as his collector.

It was the only important advantage that the defense heard since the trial began on Oct. 7. The testimony had gone steadily against Becker from the first day.

The district attorney had hoped to clinch his case by showing the jury a money motive for the murder and showing that it was Becker's fear that Rosenthal's exposures would stop the flow of graft and would drive him from the police department that prompted the killing, but Goff held there was no evidence to show that Rosenthal knew Becker was depositing large sums secured by blackmailing gamblers.

WIFE WON'T HELP AGAIN

Sickles' Personal Property Is Attached on Judgment For $5050

New York, Oct. 18.—The personal property of General Daniel E. Sickles, including the war relics, which were recently saved from sale by his wife, was attached again by Sheriff Harburger on a judgment for $5050 in favor of the Bank of the Metropolis for monel loaned. The sale of the property scheduled to take place in two weeks.

The previous judgment, which was paid by Mrs. Sickles when the judgment was assigned to her, was for $8000 and was held by the Lincoln Trust company. Mrs. Sickles pawned her jewelry to raise the money, but following her husband's refusal to be reconciled she has announced that she will do nothing more for him.

Holdup Man Pumps Lead Into Man Who Refused Him

Bennington, Vt., Oct. 18.—Two bullet wounds were received by Austin E. Pinkham, a farmer, last night, when he refused to stop at the command of an alleged highwayman on the Shaftsbury road. The man escaped into the woods, and eluded Sheriff Wilson and a posse.

Pinkham was taken to a hospital to be treated for serious wounds in his cheek and hip.

According to Pinkham's story, a strange man stepped out from the bushes on the outskirts of the town and requested a ride Not liking the man's appearance, Pinkham drove on.

The man sprang to the horse's head, and, drawing a revolver, fired twice, both shots taking effect in Pinkham's body. He whipped up the horse and his assailant jumped into the woods.

BAY STATE ENDEAVORERS

In Annual Convention at Brockton Next Week

A BUSY PERIOD

The 22nd convention of the Massachusetts Christian Endeavor Union will be held in Brockton, Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday of next week.

The program is an elaborate one.

At 1 o'clock on Thursday, there will be a luncheon and business meeting of the Executive Committee. At 4 o'clock Preparatory service conducted by Rev. J. Stanley Durkee, Ph.D., of Brockton. At 7.15 an address of welcome by Hon. Harry C. Howard, Mayor of Brockton. Address "Saints in Rome" by Rev. Raymond D. Calkins, D. D., Cambridge.

The morning sessions Friday and Saturday will be devoted to the study of different phases of Christian Endeavor work under the direction of A. J. Shartle of the United Society of C. E., Robert H. Magwood, Boston, Rev. J. Spencer Voorhees, Lakeville, Conn., Miss Harriette S. Ellis, Boston; and Miss Margaret Koch.

Friday afternoon comes the business session for the election of officers for the ensuing two years. Following the business session is a reception and banquet for Countty and local union officers. DEMOCRATS SIGN PAPERS

Even Candidates Names Appear on Progressive Lists

INTERESTING SITUATION

State House, Oct. 18. Considerable surprise and comment has been occasioned at the State House by the large percentage of Democrats who have signed the nomination papers of the Bull Moose candidates for the legislature which were filed with the Secretary of State Monday. In several instances the names of well-known Democrats have been picked out from among the signers of the papers of the new party candidates.

One instance that will interest Quincy readers is the fact that John J. McDevitt, Democratic candidate for the Senate in the Quincy district, signed the nomination papers of John Evans, who is the Bull Moose candidate for the House in the 6th Norfolk district comprising wards 4, 5 and 6 of Quincy. There is a Democratic candidate for the House in his district and it appears strange that Mr. McDevitt should lend his name to the nomination papers of a rival candidate rather than to those of the nominee of his own party.

NEW ALLEYS DEDICATED

St. Mary's Abstinence Society in New Home

150 AT BANQUET

The formal opening of the new bowling alleys of the St. Mary's Catholic Total Abstinence and Mutual Relief Society took place at their hall on Willard street Thursday evening and was followed by a turkey supper with 150 covers.

Seated at the head table was President Daniel J. Duggan, Dr. John H. Ash, Rev. William J. Duffy, Hon. William T. Shea, Joseph McGilvray, Mayor Eugene R. Stone, William H. Teasdale, Alfred Austin and Charles J. McGilvray.

"Bill" Shea acted as toastmaster and the speakers were Mayor Stone, Dr. Ash, Father Duffy and Charles J. McGilvray.

The committee in charge was President Daniel Duggan, Joseph H. McPherson, Roderick Connelly, John J. Joyce and Thomas F. O'Brien.

Toastmaster Shea offered a $5 gold piece to the one securing the most members before Jan. 1, 1913.

In starting the ball a-rolling Toastmaster Shea gave a review of the society, the almost perilous conditions under which the first hall was built and told how he, as well as others, dug the cellar and laid the foundation for the present hall.

The first speaker was Father Duffy who told how a society like St. Mary's could help the community, its influence on civic lift, and after a talk on total abstinence concluded by saying that a man who could be temperate must make a good citizen.

Fr. Duffy told of the favorable attitude of Pope Pius to total abstinence and also spoke of Cardinal O'Connell's connection with the monster temperance parade some time ago. He said law and order are essential features which the church recommends, and that no socialists or anarchists can be members of the Catholic church.

In introducing Mayor Stone, "Bill" said the office was one that deserves sympathy, and that no man deserves more than the present holder.

Mayor Stone was given a great ovation and said that he deserved no more sympathy than "Bill" since "Bill" Duane had badly beaten him on the new alleys.

The Mayor related his experiences with drinking people and paid a high tribute to the society, saying they could not only command an influence over the young man but also in the community.

At this point Joseph Morrisette sang "Silver Threads Among the Gold" and was obliged to respond to an encore.

William H. Teasdale was presentd by the toast master as one of the men who helped build the cellar and the old and the new society was compared by the speaker. He made a profound impression on the younger members who appeared surprised when they learned of the trials and tribulations of the founders.

Thomas Joyce gave a step dance in fine style and was urged to do it all over again.

The last speaker was Dr. John H. Ash, who, according to the toast master, had been a power in the development of the society. Dr. Ash spoke in complimentary terms and promised a continuance of his assistance which brought forth a cheer from the members. The gathering adjourned after singing "My Country 'Tis of Thee."

McLEOD—GAMBET.

Cards announcing the marriage of Levi George McLeod and Miss Agnes Gambet October 16, have been received by many West Quincy people. The groom is an officer in the Copeland Club, has been a ball player of note and is one of the most popular ward four residents. The bride is a former West Quincy resident.

A GOOD IMITATION.

The repairs to the little bridge connecting Sea street with Post Island, Quincy, has produced a temporary imitation of the famous waterfall of St. John, New Brunswick, which reverses its fall twice a day. A massive ledge beneath the railroad bridge spanning the St. John river produces a spectacle of grandeur when the mighty Bay of Fundy tide comes rolling in. A replica in minature is caused at Post Island by the debris and water and gas mains at the bottom of the channel below the dismantled bridge.—Observant Citizen in Boston Post.

RESCUED IN NICK OF TIME

Boston Men Had Narrow Squeeze When Boat Upset

LEIGH HARRIS THE HERO

Two men from Boston, one named Brown, owe their lives to Leigh Harris of Pratt road, Squantum, who saved them from drowning when they were overturned in a boat off Squantum Head late Thursday afternoon. The two men had just left Joseph Allen's store and rowed around the point when in changing seats the boat overturned. Neither man could swim and they clung to the boat, shouting for help. Mr. Harris saw the accident from his home and rushed to the shore. He secured his own boat and rowed with all speed to the men in the water. One of the men was nearly 70 years old and he was just about to give up and when Mr. Harris hauled him from the water. The aged man was so benumbed that he could not use his right arm when he got ashore. The men were given dry clothes and stimulants and left at once for their homes. They were very thankful to Mr. Harris for his timely aid.

—Vigorous enforcement of the law against automobile speeding seems to have accomplished a decided reform in Chicago. For a week the fines amounted to $500 or more a day, but since then the number of arrests has been falling off until now only an occasional offender is caught. Incidentally, there has been a large reduction in the death list, conclusive proof, apparently that a majority of the accidents from which fatalities resulted were due to reckless driving.—Taunton Herald.

POLITICS CUT MORE ICE THAN REAL BUSINESS ZEAL

In the Manipulation of City Affairs Asserts Irving L. Shaw

What Are We Going to Do About It? And the Answer

Editor of the Ledger:—Having given some attention to the question "What's the matter with Quincy," it is now proposed to attempt a presentation of the constructive side of the situation and consider for a while the question, "What are we going to do about it?"

I think it cannot fail to be apparent to any unbiased person who has followed the discussion thus far that the one answer to the question which looms high above every other is,—TOO MUCH POLITICS AND NOT ENOUGH BUSINESS!

By far too many of the activities and policies of the present administration have very apparently been dictated either by a disposition to give some remuneration for real or fancied political assistance in securing election, or to create an obligation with the view of gaining such favor for reelection.

For cases inpoint, attention is recalled to certain of the appointments to office; the matter of the bill for $400 for outside legal services; the incident of the $32,000 appropriation for extension of water service, and the many other matters which have been brought to light showing how the consideration of reelection has played too important a part in formulating the policy of the administration.

Hand in hand with this answer and considerably dependent upon it, stands another reply that should be given due weight, and that is—too many of our officials, both elective and appointive, are incompetent for the tasks they are set to perform. I make this statement without the slightest personal animus, but with a reasonably good knowledge of the personnel of our city government, and I respectfully recommend that any person who may be inclined to doubt the proposition read through the twelve letters which have preceded this, and then give due weight to the fact that not one of the many matters criticised has been successfully controverted in fact, in only two instances were any replies attempted.

This part of the answer to our question should for convenience be separated into two divisons; (1) In competency on the part of elective officers; and (2) Incompetency on the part of appointive officers. For the first, the people are directly responsible. If they are content to elect to office men of little or no experience and training for the tasks they are called upon to perform, they must suffer the consequence of a poorly managed city and incidentally an abnormally high tax rate and not much to show for it.

In the old days of the "party slate" the people had little choice except as the party bosses saw fit to give it;

OIL SKINS AND SOU'WESTERS

Discarded For More Fancy Rig of Masqueraders

BY WOLLASTON YACHTERS

The successful dancing season of the Wollaston Yacht club was brought to a notable close, Friday evening with a masquerade and costume party in the club hall. A vast hodgepodge of celebrities mingled with one another, making the whole a pleasing picture of color to the rythmic music of the orchestra.

Fact trod on the heels of fancy sublime on the ridiculous. The grinning clown followed close on the sedate heels of Doctor Pill. Indian maids tripped with admirers from across the water contrast ran riot.

A merry time was had of it and when the bugle sounded the call to unmask, many were the exclamations of surprise as familar faces appeared from beneath strange disguises.

The judges had a difficult task in selecting the prize winers. The judges were Commodore Bean, E. W. Cox and Representative William J. Leslie and their choice met with general approval.

As an "Indian Maid" with animal skins and other realistic trappings, Miss Hester Beaumont carried off a silk umbrella as first ladies prize, Mrs. A. L. Marr, as "Flower Girl" came second and received an order for gloves.

In the role of "Doctor Pill," C. A. Franklin was awarded first prize for the gentlemen and received a safty razor. As a "Teddy Bear" R. Gordon Rourke was next best and an order for a hat was the award.

A fine program was arranged with toasts to familiar club bywords. The floor was in charge of E. S. Woodman assisted by George Sherman and J. H. Joyce as aids. Provosts orchestra furnished the music.

BUGLER HEADED ROXBURY CLUB

As They Marched on the Floor at the Manet Party

Delegations from south shore clubs attended the sixth annual dance of the Manet Social Club at Music hall, Friday night. Music was by Wilson's seven piece orchestra.

A large party of Brockton people came to the dance in three automobiles and the Richfield club of Roxbury entered the hall with a bugle in the lead.

During the evening refreshments were served in the annex of the hall.

The floor was in charge of Arthur Wentworth. Murray Kerr was the assistant floor director and the aids were John Main, Russell Gomez, Daniel J. Mahan, William Mac Dermott and J. Joseph Currie.

SHEA WILL PRESIDE.

It was positively stated by Chairman Alfred La Croix of the Democratic state committee that ex-mayor William T. Shea will preside at the Democratic rally at Music Hall, Monday evening.

CHORAL SOCIETY FIFTH SEASON

Interesting Line of Music Study Mapped Out

It is with much interest that the past and present members of the Quincy Choral Society are looking forward to the first rehearsal of this their fifth season, which will take place Tuesday evening, in the new Colonial hall, City square.

Conductor MacConathy, who succeeded the late Arthur S. Wonson, the society's first conductor, has been reengaged for this season and with the executive board, has mapped out a most interesting line of music study, which will be brought before the chorus for their consideration at the first rehearsal. The board has also been fortunate in again securing the services of Miss Olney the talented accompanist, who has most acceptably served the society in this capacity, since its organization.

The officers of the society for this year are: Wendell H. Luce, Vice President; Mrs. Edith Cary Page, secretary; Louis B. Weston, treasurer; Directors: Miss Sara E. Thomas, Dr. George H. Ryder, Dr. C. T. Sherman, Frank W. Crane, Lawrence H. Allen.

Any of the above, will gladly register the names of any singers who are desirous of joining the chorus.

DELIGHTFULLY ENTERTAINED

The members of St. Margarets Guild met at the parish house of the Christ shurch, Friday evening, and following a business meeting there was a peasing and varied program presented. It was Mrs. Walter Burke's night and her audience were keenly appreciative to the talent which appeared.

Miss Marion Swasey gave a reading which was accorded fine applause and E. Hull rendered two piano solos in a finished manner.

Lucien Thayer gave several flute selections which were well received. He was accompanied by Miss Helen Baxter, who later sang in German and Italian.

It was announced that another opportunity to qualify for a part in "The Chaperon" wil be given the Guild on Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Collins Centre of Pleasant Gathering

Headmaster and Mrs. Ernest L. Collins were tendered a reception in the high school gymnasium, Friday evening by the three upper classes. It was the first social recognition accorded Principal Collins and the committee say that it was only the first of others to follow.

The early part of the evening was devoted to receiving. The party stood in a corner of the gym which was banked with ferns and rubber plants.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest L. Collins were assisted in receiving by Superintendent and Mrs. Albert L. Barbour, chairman of the School Committee and Mrs. John L. Miller, President Richard Z. Crane of the class of 1912, and President Harry Burr of the class of 1913.

Dancing followed, music being furnished by Corey's Wollaston orchestra. About 125 couples were present. Punch was served by the committee. Miss Dorothy Lowe, Miss Marion Rand Miss Marion McLeon, Richard Z. Crane, Alfred Atwood and Harry Burr

POOR HEALTH FANCIED WRONGS

Probably Account for Suicide of George A. McKay

The funeral of George A. McKay who committed suicide Friday at the Greenleaf Chambers will be held Sunday afternoon from the residence of his brother Capt. Daniel R. McKay on Roselin avenue at 2.30. But little surprise is expressed that he should have taken his own life. He had not been in the best of health recently and in addition to this he was constantly brooding over fancied wrongs. That he feared himself was evinced by the fact that he did not carry a revolver but left it at the police station for safe keeping. Two days ago he called at the station and said that he would take care of his revolver. It is now thought that he had in mind taking his own life at that time.

SOCIETY TURNED OUT IN FORCE IN APPRECIATION OF CHANTANT

Clever Sketch Skilfully Presented By Talented Local Amateurs

Jollity Reigned As King of the Brilliant Carnival

No more novel or delightful society event was ever held in this city than the Cafe Chantant at Alpha hall, Friday evening, under the direction of the executive board of the Quincy Women's club. The affair was one that called out many of Quincy's society people and was a success beyond the most sanguine hopes of the promoters It was a form of entertainment entirely new to Quincy and the approval which greeted this offering to the society palate was very gratifying to all concerned.

The hall was prettily decorated with pine boughs and autumn leaves which gave a soft tone to the surroundings and set off the many beautiful creations, worn by the ladies, to the best possible advantage.

Sixty or more tables were arranged about the floor of the hall, containing parties of from four to six while on one side was a large round table at which were seated Hon. Russell A. Sears and Mrs. Sears and a gay party of young people. The guests assembled early to witness the adaption of a sketch from Francis Hodgdon Burnett's "Fair Barbarian."

The adaption was the work of Mrs. Eben W. Speppard the club's president who read the introductory passages. There was no scenery upon the stage yet so clever was the work of the actors, that the imagination of the audience supplied the lack of accessories.

The play called for team work on the stage, yet there was nothing about this team work that was suggestive of amateurs. The parts of the two old aunts were well taken by Mrs. N. S. Hunting and Mrs. Chandler W. Smith. Miss Mollie Brown as Octavia the "Fair Barbarian" and Mrs. Dexter E. Wadsworth as Lucia were very natural in the rendition of their parts and true to life.

The two bashful youths Miss Georgianna Lane as Mr. Francis Barold and Mrs. George Badger as Mr. Durmiston, carried themselves with dignity and natural reserve through their trying experiences. The maid, Miss Beatrice Morrison was equally good. Indeed throughout the witty, rollicking sketch the interest of the audience was keen and each fine point of the action of the play was fully appreciated, and received deserved applause. As a whole it was a delightful bit of comedy, prettily rendered.

Following the play there was singing by Miss Anna Holmes Ruggles, it being her first appearance since her concert and drawing room work abroad. She was enthusiastically received.

Miss Elsie Harrington gave an exhibition of aesthetic dancing which was a delightful and graceful portrayal of the possibilities of the poetry of motion.

Mr. Ralph Doble gave a group of songs which called forth rounds of applause.

One of the hits of the evening was the singing of "Oh you beautiful doll" by John Jones, Jr. and Paul Blackmur. Mr. Jones made up like a typical French doll and sang the verses from the platform while Mr. Blackmur in the gallery sang the chorus with a vim that caused the hall to ring with applause. The catchy words and music was too much for

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Tom Lawson agrees with the Ledger that the senate investigation of campaign contributions has to date been somewhat of a joke.

It is expected that the Eastern Europe war will be short. It certainly cannot be termed merry by any means.

Three days old twins were brought in to see Col. Roosevelt, because they would not annoy him by talking. Maybe their squalls would be just as troublesome to the patient.

The Boston waiters have declared their strike ended and negotiations will now be entered upon with a view to having as many as possible reinstated.

Chinamen are said to show their politics by their dress. They know a good thing when they see it by ordering American shoes.

The Lynn barbers have decided to advance the price of hair cutting. The long haired styles of long ago would be most welcome under those circumstances.

A Dorchester man only 28 years old is getting ready for his 13th operation. If he passes that safely there is hope that he will be able to pull through many others.

Public men cannot be too careful. They take great risks in going about the country exposing themselves to the attacks of all manner of cranks.

Things are getting to a pretty pass when Senator Dixon, campaign manager for the Progressive party had his trousers stolen. Fortunately he had another pair so that the inconvenience was but slight.

Gov. Wilson promises a stirring valedictory of the campaign, the Saturday before the election.

The doctor's bulletins, reading between the lines, confirm the declaration of Dr. Abbott with regard to Col. Roosevelt's habits. Few people any way believed that story about the former president.

Icebergs have made their appearance in the North Atlantic earlier than usual this fall.

The jury did not get an official knowledge of Lieut. Becker's bank deposits, but the chances are they know all about them.

Col. Roosevelt chafes at the enforced inactivity, but gallantly acknowledges that in this instance Mrs. Roosevelt is the boss.

The newspaper injunction proceedings, against the recently enacted law, have already reached the supreme court and will be promtly acted upon.

Another Diaz has arisen in Mexico, a nephew of the former president. Nothing like keeping the ruling business within the family circle if possible.

Commissioner Rourke of Boston, calls attention to the fact that the poor of Boston who use the least water pay the highest price. The same old thing applies to every commodity.

The Hathorne postmaster who is running for the legislature should know better.

Sad but true, one of the oldest churches in Pittsfield is to be turned over to a moving picture enterprise.

A GOOD MOVE.

The Citizens' Association of South Boston has entered upon an active crusade which will undoubtedly have good results. The movement as planned is to clean up and remove a certain lot of old and dilapidated buildings, in a part of the community which is getting to put it mildly to look pretty shabby.

The buildings against which it is decided to make the assault upon are occupied by poor people. They are not by any means beauty spots in the community. Their days of usefulness, when compared with present day building progress are over.

They are sadly lacking in many of the necessary requirements for comfortable, wholesome homes. The Association will make an effort to have those buildings removed, and more modern structures erected in their place.

They will endeavor to interest the banks to advance money at lower than the market rate of interest so that the progressive movement may be entered upon immediately.

This is certainly a move in the right direction. There are many other places which might take pattern from South Boston in this good work and get rid of some of the old shacks which are permitted to rear their roofs skyward and provide, good, clean, healthful tenements for the poor people at reasonable rents.

GET A GOOD CROP.

Now that the Lynn barbers have decided to raise the price of hair cutting probably the same enterprise will be shown by barbers in other sections. There is really no reason why the barbers should not be as progressive as others in following the natural trend of raising the cost of everything.

Some people contend that the bald headed persons, has in this situation something to be grateful for. On the whole the bald headed man has to keep his fringe trimmed up more carefully than the fellow with an abundant mop, so that he is by no means benefited by this condition.

The people who are proud possessors of a good head of hair, will no doubt rejoice at a return to the style of years ago of wearing the hair very long. And if the advance in cutting is wide spread is no reason why they should not all unite and agree to long hair fashion.

POSTMASTER A CANDIDATE.

It is pretty far fetched to try and make a martyr out of a Postmaster, holding an office under the Federal government, who aspires to legislative honors, who is officially notified that he cannot run for the latter office while holding the former.

It should be pretty well known by this time that a person holding a Federal position canot hold an office under the state or municipal government and cannot be elected to any such office. Even in the case of a City council man where there is no salary attached, a government employee cannot hold two such places. If the Postmaster referred to desires to go to the legislature, then he should resign his postmaster's billet. There is no dodging this issue.

Hon. John L. Bates, who holds a place as receiver of a bank, under the United States court appointment resigned as a Republican presidential elector when question was raised as to his eligibility for the latter place while holding a government position.

SLIPPERY PROPOSITION.

According to advices from the United States consel at Nicaragua many fake banana companies have been floating stock in this country for banana plantations whereas there are no real plantations or fruit with which to maintain them.

As usual in such cases the persons who are in moderate circumstances have been the victims of those unprincipled promoters and undoubtedly the wily operators have secured considerable spoils before their schemes were exposed.

It is well for investors to carefully investigate every proposition which is put up to them for investing their hard earned and carefully hoarded money.

Banking houses of repute keep well posted on all financial undertakings and possible investment properties and the wise investor consults those banking houses before rushing pell mell into some enterprise which may prove later to be nothing more or less than a fake and the poor investor is so much out without a ghost of a chance of getting any returns for the money invested.

SOCIETY TURNED OUT

the audience which could not resist the temptation to join with Mr. Blackmur in singing the rollicking and snappy chorus.

While this part of the program was in progress light refreshments were served at the tables by the young people and many took the opportunity to visit friends at adjoining tables. A group of Tech boys led the singing of popular songs in which everybody joined. Thus the evening closed. It had been a very happy one, the sort of a good time that makes one feel young and keeps one young.

The head ushers were John Pfaffmann, and Winslow Sears. The refreshments were in charge of Mrs. Percy H. Holman and Mrs. Thomas B. Pollard, assisted by Mrs. G. B. Bates, chairman of the Women's Exchange department of the club. The young ladies who served were Miss Lacey, Miss Ninnon Lacey, Miss Caroline Sprague, Miss Dorothy Sayward, Miss Florence Barker, Miss Dorothy Brokaw, Miss Milicent Chapman, Miss Dorothy Kitson, Miss Marjorie Penniman, Miss Florence Thayer, Miss Esther Beckford, Miss Catherine Merrill and Miss Helen Walker.

The ladies who had active charge of the affair were Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard, Mrs. H. H. Kitson, Mrs. Chandler W. Smith, Mrs. Walter S. Pinkham and Mrs. John D. McKay.

THREE-DECKERS A NUISANCE.

It was high time that someone in authority should voice a needed protest against the public nuisance of the three-deckers that are being multiplied in the outlying sections of the city. The word has been fitly spoken by Acting Chairman Dailey of the Board of Assessors, who said Wednesday before the special legislative committee appointed to investigate municipal finances that the three-flat construction was very materially impairing property values, because every one of them was reducing the value of surrounding property. This is no glittering generality. Anyone anxious for the proof can visit any section where these abnominations have been grouped and see the "for sale" signs thick upon residences that have cost many thousands of dollars. They cheapen every section where they are constructed, and their builders apparently prefer to plant them near to other houses whose owners have built safely and sanely and have endeavored to keep up the character of the neighborhood. All this is independent of the even greater objection that they are danger centres, and more than any other class of residence property invite fire and conflagration. They are uneconomic, they are unsightly and they are a nuisance yet they continue to go up on all vacant plots and corners, no matter how many or important the interest that they threaten. But protests are useless unless followed by effort to provide ourselves with some means of protection against these nuisances.—Boston Transcript.

—It becomes young fellows who take girls on automobile joy rides with them to avoid accidents. A man is being sued who invited a girl to ride with him, and who had an accident in which the girl alleges she was injured.—Waltham Free Press.

ACCIDENT AND INCIDENT

One day in a certain city a short, four-wheeled electric car was bowling along at a pretty good clip, pitching and swaying over a rather uneven road, as such cars will, when suddenly the front wheels jumped the rails and the car slued partly around and tipped over on its side.

Of course there were shrieks and a confused scramble of passengers to get out, and there were plenty of bumps and scratches, but no one seemed to be badly hurt except one poor fellow who had been riding on the platform, and had fallen under the car and lay there groaning.

There was an instant rush of pedestrians to the scene, and a moment of helpless hesitation and horror. Then an elegantly dressed young man of athletic build pushed quickly to the front, and in a clear, commanding voice shouted "Come on, boys, let's lift the car!" It seemed a hopeless task, but everybody jumped for places alongside, and when all were ready they lifted and strained with a will, but without avail. There was a big hulking loafer leaning against a building close by, whose truck-horse wits had hardly taken in the situation so far; but he now touched across the sidewalk, pulled a boy out of the way who was lifting with all his little strength beside the well-dressed leader, and settled his huge frame into lifting position. Other big men had taken the places of boys, including a gigantic darkey teamster and a stalwart policeman. Now, then, up she goes," shouted the leader, and the big bum gave a sort of answering roar from his hoarse throat. And how they all lifted! The great stubborn mass creaked a little at first, and then rose a trifle, and then a trifle more, until eager, waiting hands were able to pull the victim out, now happily unconscious.

A doctor who was somehow on the spot felt the sufferer over quickly with skilful hands, and gave assurance that he would probably be all right if he could be rushed to the hospital. A corner druggist had thoughtfully telephoned to the hospital, and in a moment the ambulance came hurrying up the street, and the patient was soon rolling swiftly away.

This really ends the story; only it was a study to note the smile of satisfaction that spread over the faces of the crowd at thus having rescued a fellow being from death. The elegant young man had his silk hat rubbed the wrong way, his gloves were split, and his clothes were dirty, but he and the bum and the darkey exchanged friendly little nods of mutual respect. The bum himself was seen to square his massive shoulders a little, straighten his elephantine legs, and even show a faint spark of fire in his fishy eyes, as the ghost of a grin flickered over his sodden features. The boys started a little cheer, and everybody was happy.

Thus does a deed of humanity and charity ennoble for the moment every one who has a share in it!

CLUBS TO FEDERATE.

There has been for sometime a movement underway for a large union meeting this fall of the various improvement associations and church men's clubs, of Wollaston, the Park, Norfolk Downs and Montclair, for the consideration of such matters of public improvements as would interest all citizens of this section of the city.

This movement originated within the Congregational Church Men's club and its president, William A. Mann has received assurances of support and interest from most of the other local clubs.

Committees from these other clubs have been appointed, and before calling these committees together to complete arrangements for a meeting of all the clubs, Mr. Mann is waiting to hear from only one or two clubs who have not yet acted upon the invitation extended.

The federation of men's clubs in other cities have been able to influence many reforms and improvements of local conditions, and undoubtedly of the "get together" spirit prevails amongst the men, we may look for good results to be accomplished in Wollaston.

GOOD CITIZENSHIP MEETINGS.

Good Citizenship meetings, to which all men of whatever political or theological creed are cordially invited, will be held in the Wollaston Unitarian church auditorium Sundays at 12 o'clock. Irving L. Shaw, who through his public letters in the Ledger on "What's the matter with Quincy" is rendering this community a most valued service in telling the citizens how things stand and awakening in them the sense of civic responsibility, will lead the discussion. All men interested in the welfare of Quincy are urged to attend these informal gatherings and participate in the discussion. The first meeting will be held Sunday at 12 o'clock. Come and bring your friends.

Police Testify That Caruso Does Not Require an Interpreter

Salem, Mass., Oct. 19.—Joseph Caruso, one of the defendants charged with the murder of Anna Lopizzo at Lawrence during the textile strike, who is on trial here with Joseph J. Ettor and Arturo Giovannitti, sat in the prisoners' cage with an interpreter by his side, while Lawrence police officials testified that they frequently conversed with him in English, and that the defendant had understood them without difficulty.

Counsel for Caruso sought to have all the testimony relating to Caruso before his indictment on the present charge excluded, but Judge Quinn admitted it.

Caruso, according to Inspector Vose and Officer Flynn of the state police; flatly denied any connection with the Lopizzo woman's death when he was taken by the police on another charge.

An important meeting of the City Council is scheduled for Monday evening but in view of the fact that the two great parties have rallies scheduled for that evening the chances are that the meeting will be a brief one. MR. MILLER EXPLAINS

Claims That His Neponset Speech Was Misquoted

Editor Daily Ledger:

In your issue of the 17th inst. your report of the Neponset Brotherhood meeting misquotes me very badly. You make me say "that there were to many doctors on the School Committee, and it was time that there were more business men on the board." I never said that, neither thought it. What I did say was: "Ten years ago there were many professional men on the School Committee." At that time there were six doctors, and at that time many thought there should be more business men on the committee, and quite a change has been made in that direction.

BRIEFS

Professor Frank Wrigley is seriously ill with pleura-pneumonia at his home on Adams street.

Miss Viola Jackson of Hollis avenue has resumed her studies at the High school after a brief illness.

Friends of Mrs. Anne C. Wright will be pleased to know that she is convalescing from her recent severe illness.

John J. McDevitt spoke to a large rally at Readville Friday night, regarding his election as senator from the first Norfolk district. He advocated a bill for $200,000 to be appropriated for the benefit of people who were financially unable to secure expert medical attendance.

With both the Republicans and Democrats holding rallies Monday evening and parading through City Square with drum corps and burning red fire there will be something doing Wonder what would happen if the two parading parties should meet head on. Both parties have a good array of speakers but unfortunately one can not readily attend both no matter how much they would like to

Mrs. F. H. Morgan's Sunday school class at the Wollaston M. E. church took the banner Sunday for attendance. On Sunday and the three following weeks A. R. Poquet's, Mrs. A. R. Poquet's and Miss Marguerite Holbrook's classes will enter a competition for the banner class. The primary department under Mrs. Geo. Crothers is adding new members each Sunday. The Royal Daughters Bible class with Mrs. Wesley Wiggin as teacher has entered upon their work for the fall and winter with increased interest and are planning for a large increase over last year. The Wiggin Bible class extends a cordial welcome to all men not connected elsewhere. They are alive and thoroughly in earnest. New plans are being considered for the fall work.

THREE LABORERS KILLED BY CAVE-IN

Futile Efforts to Dig Them Out of Trench and Save Lives

Fall River, Mass., Oct. 19.—Women with coal shovels worked side by side with policemen and firemen in a futile effort to save the lives of three laborers buried in a cave-in in the yard of the John J. McDonough school.

The men were at work in a ditch laying the foundation for a retaining wall when a twenty-five-foot embankment slid down upon them, burying them under tons of dirt and rocks.

The men were Basil Belanger, Frank Robideau and John Bourdois. All were married.

LABOR MEN ALARMED

General Conditions Are Being Discussed In Secret Conference

Washington, Oct. 19.—Aroused over the labor conditions in the United States, the executive council of the American Federation of Labor has begun a secret conference to consider the various phases of the disturbing situation.

Among the subjects which will be given exhaustive consideration is the outgrowth of the Lawrence, Mass., textile strike and the present trial for murder of the leaders of that industrial struggle.

Preparations also will be made for a special report to the annual meeting of the Federation in Rochester next month. The conference of the leaders is likely to last well into next week.

BRAINTREE PHILERGIANS.

Monday afternoon, Oct. 15, in Cochato hall, the second meeting of the season was held. The president, Mrs. George O. Wales, introduced Henry L. Gideon and Miss McCloskey. Mr. Gideon, who is organist at Temple Israel in Boston, gave a lecture recital on "Great Operas of Our Time." He divided the operas into three classes, French, German and Italian, saying that the French are delicate and esthetic in their music; the Germans are careful, thorough, intellectual in their workmanship, their "musicianship;" the Italians are direct, obvious frank, and show intense feeling.

Massenet was given as a typical French composer. The illustration of French opera was a song from Charpentier's Louise, by Miss McCloskey. The Germans are represented by Wagner, Humperdink, and Strauss. Mr. Gideon rendered on the piano the prelude to Wagners "Parsifal" pronouncing it the "acme of the German school. Pucciui is the ideal Italian composer—La Tosca's Prayer from his opera "La Tosca" was well sung, followed by the Romance Song from Wascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana," both showing the intense feeling which characterizes Italian music. Miss McCloskey's voice is a strong dramatic soprano.

During the business session three excellent reports were given by the delegates to the State Federation at Templeton in the summer, Mrs. Willard E. Dow, Mrs. Harold M. Gage, and Mrs. Walter A. Poore.

—"Made in Austria" is the declaration to be found on certain hats now on the market, together with the label or trade mark of some real or imaginary firm in that country. But when the same hat bears the label of the hatters' union of America, something seems to be wrong. The two do not dovetail. "Made in Danbury" or some other hat-making locality, would probably be a more truthful statement.—Milford Gazette.

MR. SHAW'S LETTER

but today, when any citizen may be a candidate for office by receiving the endorsement of a very small number of voters, there is no excuse for there not being good men in the field from which the people may choose worthy representatives.

As to the second part of this answer also, the people are again responsible, although indirectly. If we see to it that a strong, capable, public spirited man, who has the real welfare of Quincy at heart, and is not attached to the "ring politicians" is elected Mayor of Quincy then we are pretty sure to get able and competent administrative officers; but if we elect scheming politicians or weak easily influenced aspirants for public honors, who will not hesitate to trade for the influence of the "ring vote" our administrative officers are too apt to reflect the "machine" and fall short in the matter of fitness and capability.

Then there is the third answer which perhaps ought to be propounded in the form of a question,—Is our form of city government conducive to the best results?

This is an intricate and deeply vexed question which is sorely perplexing the foremost students of political economy of the times, and is worthy of more careful and painstaking study than can be given in the form of this series of letters. Nevertheless, there are a few of the fundamental questions of city government which it may be of interest and profit to touch upon later, and it is hoped that such views as present themselves in subsequent letters may stimulate enough public interest and discussion of these matters to bring out some conclusions which will take form and ensure to the benefit of Quincy.

Let us first consider what, if anything, may be done to eliminate this incubus of POLITICS which we have found to be so disastrous to our city's welfare; and consider ways and means to secure the election of men of such character and ability as will insure a clean, economical business administration, and help to put our city back on a stronger financial basis.

This must be brought about by an awakened public interest in municipal affairs and concerted action toward better conditions, for it is entirely in the hands of the people to perform. Public sentiment when once aroused and united has an electric quality which is capable of sweeping all before it, and there is nothing that must not yield to its irresistible force.

It has been shown in previous letters how Quincy has been ruled and governed for several years past by a "ring" of selfish, scheming "bosses," who have descended to all sorts of trickery to secure the election of members of their own ilk or men they could "handle."

The one possible remedy for this cancerous growth in Quincy's body politic, is a thoroughly aroused public opinion which will rise up in its righteousness and remove these parasites from our system root and branch.

We must lay aside party differences and petty local jealousies, and combine our forces in one solid battle front of opposition to any candidate for office who cannot give us positive and satisfactry assurance that he has no connection either express implied, or suggested with the "ring politicians" that have been in power these five years or more. Unless we rid our city of this "boss-rule" NOW, we cannot complain if we get another year of the same wasteful, incompetent, debt-increasing, tax-rate-raising conditions which have struck us such staggering blows in the pocket-book this fall.

Will the people of Quincy accept more campaign promises from this same "machine" again this year? Will they listen to the oily tongue and wily arguments which have so often beguiled them before? Will they sit idly at home while the "machine" vote is rushed to the polls and the same old "ring" walks serenely into office again? Or will they, now that their eyes have been opened, form their own conclusions, think their own thoughts, and get out and hustle for clean able candidates of their own choosing; and, taking a good look at their tax bills now and then for inspiration, go out to the polls, get their neighbors to do the same, and nominate and elect men to run the affairs of Quincy who are pledged to the confusion of "ring politics" and to the rehabilitation of economical business methods in the management of Quincy's affairs.?

This is to be the real issue in the coming campaign in Quincy. The development of the water front sinks to insignificance. Pet schemes for improvements in this or that section of the city fade to triviality. Sectional and party lines disappear in sheer unimportance. The very foundation of the city is threatened!

QUINCY MUST HAVE A THOROUGHLY CAPABLE, ECONOMICAL BUSINESS ADMINIST,RATION FREE FROM POLITICS AND FREE FROM "INFLUENCE" IF WE ever hope to shake off the burden of excessive taxation and disproportionate returns. QUINCY NEEDS RELIEF NOW!

The sooner every citizen of Quincy feels the full responsibility of his own PERSONAL, ACTIVE INTEREST the better it will be for Quincy.

Not a single voice has been lifted in denial of the charges of incompetence, wastefulness, petty graft and political intriguing contained in my letter of Wednesday, Oct. 16. Is not this fact significant?

ELLOW CITIZENS OF QUINCY, let us make one grand united effort to CLEAN THE SLATE and REGISTER SUCH A STINGING REBUKE to these "RING POLITICIANS" who are so surely to blame for Quincy's unfortunate conditions, THAT THEY MAY NEVER GAIN A FOOTHOLD IN OUR CITY AGAIN.

THEN, and NOT UNTIL THEN, shall we have made the first long step toward BETTER CONDITIONS, BETTER STREETS, LOWER WATER RATES, A LOWER TAX RATE, and the hundred and one other conditions that MAKE A CITY INHABITABLE.

Another letter Wednesday.

IMPRESSIONS OF ROOSEVELT

He Gives His Own Version of Shooting at Milwaukee

HIS HOUR ON THE STAGE

Had No Means of Knowing Whether He Was Wounded Fatally, but Determined to Finish Speech If Strength Held Out—Calmly Discusses Chance of Complications Developing—Still Has Trouble With Broken Rib—Hopes to Make Campaign Speeches Week After Next

Chicago, Oct. 19.—The first vivid impressions of Colonel Roosevelt on the night on which he was shot in Milwaukee were related last night from the colonel's own lips. Apparently well on the way toward recovery, he was permitted to enjoy a greater degree of freedom, and for the first time he gave an account of the happenings in the first few hours after the bullet found its mark.

The colonel said that on Monday he expected to leave for Oyster Bay, and hoped to be back in the campaign, making speeches again, week after next.

"I feel as lively as a bull dog," said he, by way of preface. He was sitting in a huge leather chair by a window in Mrs. Roosevelt's room, adjoining his own. He was wrapped in a blue bath robe of Turkish toweling, with a steamer rug thrown over his feet to protect him from the autumn breeze which was borne in through the open window.

What seemed to impress Roosevelt most strongly was not the shooting itself, but rather his hour on the stage of the Milwaukee Auditorium, when he was speaking with a bullet in his side. But he insisted that to make that speech was only what any other man would have done under the circumstances.

"It was nothing," he said. "I felt a little pain, but it was not severe. When I stretched out my arm, or reached for my manuscript it made me gasp a bit, but that was all."

"A Matter of Course"

Colonel Roosevelt showed no indication that he had felt the fear of death. He said he had no means of knowing, as he delivered the speech he had promised to make, whether he was wounded fatally, but accepted as a matter of course that he should go on until he had finished, if his strength held out.

But when it was all over, and he had turned away, to go to the hospital, he said he found it difficult to keep his temper when half a dozen men scrambled over the edge of the platform and asked him to shake hands.

If the shooting itself, Roosevelt had little to say. Not once did he mention the name of John Schrank, his assailant. He talked in an unemotional way of being shot, as though he was discussing the case of a man with whom he was not acquainted. He said he bore no bitterness or rancor.

In a dispassionate way, Roosevelt spoke of his present condition, and speculated upon the chance that he would have blood poisoning or some other serious complication.

Chance of a Set-Back

The physicians thought that he was getting well, he said, but they had told him that there still remained the chance of a set-back.

"Isn't it a curious thing," he said, "that little spot"—he placed his thumb near the top of his forefinger to indicate how small a spot he meant, "can become affected and set the whole thing back."

Then, he said, there is the possibility, the physicians had told him, that pleurisy or penumonia might develop. Dr. Lambert, he said, had spoken of returning to New York, but his associates asked him to remain, because they felt that all danger was not past.

The colonel said that he felt no pain at present. He placed his right forefinger carefully on his breast to indicate the position of the wound, and said that while he still had an occasional twinge to remind him of it, he was at ease.

As he talked he moved his arms freely, although he was careful not to move his body. He punctuated his remarks with gestures, but they were not the same vigorous gestures which he is wont to make. He waved his hand or thrust forward a finger with a quick dart, instead of bringing down a clenched fist upon an open palm with a thump.

Broken Rib Troubles Him

The colonel still had trouble with his broken rib, he said. His only apparent worry was lest the rib should not knit quickly enough to permit him to make a few more speeches in the closing days of the campaign. If he took a deep breath, he explained, the edges parted and the beginning which nature had made at her task of knitting them together would be all for naught.

"If I can get that rib so that the edges hold," he said, "and it doesn't pain me to take a deep breath, I hope to make some speeches week after next. They'll have to be short speeches, at first, I suppose," he said, "but I'll make some good ones."

The colonel paused for a moment. He set his jaw hard and clenched his fist for the only time during the interview. "I ask no quarter," he said.

"It is amusing to see the predicament of Governor Marshall," he added. "The governor has been making his campaign on the assertion that I was not at San Juan Hill. This may stagger him, but in a week he will discover that I was not shot at all, and that anyway it was bird shot, and that it hit another man instead of me, and finally that I was in Oshkosh that night."

In Hurry to Get Home

Colonel Roosevelt's physicians told him that probably he could leave for Oyster Bay on Monday or Tuesday, and the colonel at once made up his mind that he would go to the earliest train on Monday which suits his purposes.

Despite his confidence that he will be back in the fight week after next, the colonel has not yet received assurances that he will be able to make a single speech. A week of absolute rest at Sagamore Hill comes first, and it will depend upon his progress then what comes next.

At the outset of the talk he bore himself in a way which gave no indication of his condition, except that he sat quietly in his chair instead of moving about in his customary energetic way. But finally he spoke in lower tones in which there was a trace of weariness.

He had plucked a little green sprig from a plant which someone had sent him, and as he talked he held it by the leaves and used the stem as a pointer, thrusting it quickly at one after another of his interviewers to emphasize a point. At last he dropped the sprig and let his hands fall to his knees. It was his sign that the interview was over.

"Good-by," he said.

JOHNSON CHARGED WITH ABDUCTION

Court Separates Negro Pugilist From White Sweetheart

Chicago, Oct. 19.—Three distinct legal moves placed a barrier between Jack Johnson, negro pugilist, and Lucille Cameron, aged 19, his white sweetheart, that is expected effectually to separate them for many weeks, at least.

The day's struggle between Johnson and Mrs. F. Cameron-Falconet was distinctly one of victories for the mother, who is battling to save her daughter from what she believes to be a mad infatuation.

Here are the legal steps of the day in the order in which they were taken: Johnson arrested on a charge of abduction and released on $800 bonds a few minutes later.

Miss Cameron taken into custody by federal authorities and held under $25,000 bonds as a material witness against Jeanette Dorr, charged with conspiracy. The case was continued until Tuesday.

County Judge Owens signed commitment papers under which Miss Cameron will be taken to the detention hospital to be tried for her sanity should Johnson succeed in securing the $25,000 bonds in the federal case.

BEACHEY'S BOAST

Aviator Will Have to Show Court He Was "Only Fooling"

Washington, Oct. 19.—Lincoln Beachey bragged at great length to newspapermen Thursday night about how he and a companion bagged a fine lot of wild ducks while flying over the Potomac marshes in a hydroplane.

Now Beachey is trying hard to recall the story as the result of a visit from the game warden. The latter announced that he intended to prosecute because the duck season does not open until Nov. 1.

"But I was only fooling," protested Beachey.

"Well, convince the court of that," replied the hard-hearted warden.

Paint and Rouge Also Tabooed in Bayonne High School

Bayonne, N. J., Oct. 19.—"We don't want moving pictures, neither do we want any Galateas or living oil pictures around here; this is a public school," said Miss Oldham, to the girls at the high school, in tabooing the future use of paint and rouge. Then, as an afterthought, she added: "And there are too many fancy colored stockings. Hereafter only black and tan will be permitted."

RESOLVES INTO HOLY WAR

Macedonia Would Get From Under Feel of Moslem

BIG BATTLE IS ANTICIPATED

Reliable Accounts Say Turkish Army Has Not Yet Met Any Opposition—Bad Time of Year to Begin Campaign In the Balkans—Turks Unaccustomed to Rough Weather

London, Oct. 19.—King Ferdinand in his proclamation declaring war on Turkey says that the conflict now on is for the succor of the Christian populations of Macedonia from under the heel of Moslem—a holy war for humanity.

All of the nations involved have formally declared war—Turkey, Bulgaria, Servia, Greece and Montenegro. The Turkish and Bulgarian forces are both advancing and it is thought probable they will meet somewhere near Mustapha pass on the frontier and one of the few passes through the mountains leading from Bulgaria to Macedonia. At the same time the Servian army is on the way to Uskup, where another big battle is anticipated.

In northern Albania, where the Turks and Montenegrins are striving for supremacy, there is a lull in the fighting. This, however, is regarded in military circles as only the lull which precedes the big storm that will break when the two armies come together in the struggle for the possession of the Turkish town of Scutari.

Many rumors are published of heavy fighting on the Bulgarian and Servian frontiers. All these reports lack confirmation, while more reliable accounts say the Turkish army marching on Bulgaria has not yet met with any serious opposition.

On the other hand, a Belgrade dispatch says the Servian army is proceeding toward Uskup without encountering resistance.

The campaign opens at the worst possible season for the unfortunate soldiers of the rival armies. It has been suggested in this regard that the troops of Bulgaria and Servia, being largely composed of mountaineer peasants and conscripts, accustomed all their lives to the rough weather of middle Europe, are likely to fare better under the rigors of such a campaign than Moslem soldiers drawn largely from warmer climates, and used to the comporatively easy living of the lowlands. But the endurance and hardihood of the Turk was amply proved when he was last seriously engaged in contest in these regions. How the sultan's forces suffered during the winter of 1877, and how gallantly they bore themselves under all sorts of privations the records of that bitter campaign fully show.

The populations on behalf of whom the Balkan states have taken the field dwell for the most part in mountainous and almost inaccessible country.

On the disputed territories the vilayet of Adrinople is the most easily traversed by an army and it lies within the easiest reach of Philippopolis, the probable headquarters of the Bulgarian forces. Both for this reason and because it is on the road from Sofia to Constantinople the province of Roumelia is the one which is most immediately threatened as a theatre of war.

The present quarrel will inevitably be decided by the clash of large forces on a scale necessitating railway transport. Motor transport is not at present available in the theatre of war, though it will perhaps be brought into use in the more civilized regions of Bulgaria and Roumelia later. The decisive operations must then take place along the two railways which traverse the peninsula from north to south.

TROOPS NOT NEEDED

Withdrawal From Nicaragua Will Be Begun Next Week

Washington, Oct. 19.—Rear Admiral Southerland, in command of the American forces in Nicaragua, considers it advisable to begin withdrawing his troops beginning Monday.

In a message to the navy department he announced that after Monday, except for small guards on the passenger trains, he would have the National Railway company take complete charge of the line. The withdrawal of bluejackets should be completed by Nov. 15, he added.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Suffragists Can Darn Socks, After All A Minnesota Plan that May be Soon Afoot in Massachusetts—Harvard Books Have Crowded out Dining Tables, and Millionaires' Sons Are Reported Famishing—Mayor Fitzgerald Runs Up Against Ladies' Hatpins and Wants Them Abbreviated—New Transportation May Reduce Living's Cost.

The unique method of winning the favor of the bachelors and widowers (and mayhap some married men, too) to the cause of equal suffrage as tried out in Minnesota might well be adapted to New England suffragist fairs and other occasions. At the Minnesota State Fair, men were invited to bring to the suffrage booth their undarned stockings that they might be mended by the skilful needles of the would-be voters. This had the double effect of making the sceptical good natured toward the representatives of the local suffrage party, and of demonstrating that even though these women wanted to have a say in the government they could still darn stockings. One may imagine that the announcement of this invitation had a third salutary effect in stirring up some of the antis to a session of darning socks which should absolutely preclude any male member of their respective families from visiting the booths of the suffragists.

Harvard students are reported as finding it extremely difficult to obtain enough to eat this year, owing to the lack of facilities for dining in and around Harvard Square. The tearing down of Gore Hall is primarily responsible since the books formerly contained in that building have been stored at Randall Hall where many of the students have previously been accommodated. Other buildings are being pressed into use, but the waiting list is of several hundreds, the waiters having to shift for themselves at the few and small lunch counters or private boarding houses in the vicinity. There has long been a lack of proper eating facilities at the Cambridge University, and the exigencies of the present season have brought the matter to the attention of the faculty. Not long since the patronage of the two dining halls at Harvard was not sufficient to pay their running expenses, but they have suddenly jumped into a favor which has proved to be overwhelming.

Boston's doughty mayor is still on the Job. He is now preparing a draft of an ordinance to present to the City Council limiting the length of the much discussed hatpin to six inches. Having eliminated the rooster in order that respectable citizens may get their nine hours' sleep, he is ready to battle against the dangerous weapon which threatens the public in its waking hours. A six-inch hatpin, however, will doubtless be protested by the feminine population, as it would be next door to useless in the prevailing size hat crown.

Both shopping and shipping by trolley will soon be possible throughout eastern New England, in accordance with an arrangement that has been reached between the Boston Elevated Company and the electric companies operating outside of Boston. Passenger use of the great interconnected system of electric traction is already too well established to be any longer a novelty. A very large proportion of the people who enter Boston from a distance now come in over the trolley lines. Many people in going from Boston to other New England cities by preference use the trolleys. To have these convenient carriers, however, collect the farm products of a wide area and bring them to the biggest New England market for distribution among consumers will be a new kind of service in most parts of this section. As a starter it is understood that very shortly, under permission granted by the public authorities, there will be inaugurated an electric express service that will extend north as far as Nashua, west to Worcester and south to New Bedford and Fall River. The plan of a Boston terminal has been under consideration for some time and decision is reported to have been reached that the cars from outside can be properly handled by the Elevated Company. The economic consequences of this service will be interesting to watch. It has been widely hailed as one of the efficient means of decreasing the cost of living. Concerning the reasonableness of such a claim the Christian Science Monitor says editorially: "The steam railroad is better euipped for long than for short hauls. The fact that farmers find it better to send their products to market by wagon than by rail at this late day shows how much the steam railroad has fallen short of meeting local needs. The electric car should do better. If the intelligence, enterprise and energy that characterize passenger carrying traffic shall be put into the carriage of light freight, it will be within bounds to expect a revolution in the methods of supply and a prononunced lowering of the cost of living."

GAMBLERS PLANNED TO "FRAME" BECKER

Sullivan's Testimony For Defense In Lieutenant's Trial

New York, Oct. 19.—Jack Sullivan, king of the newsboys, indicted with the four gunmen for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, tried to unfold on the witness stand at yesterday's session of Police Lieutenant Becker's trial, his version of an alleged conspiracy of gamblers to kill Rosenthal, and "frame up" Becker for the murder.

Through him the defense planned to go far in proving their contention that Becker had nothing to do with the murder, but was himself the victim of a conspiracy.

But much of Sullivan's story was untold. That part which Justice Goff permitted him to relate was based upon testimony already given by the state's witnesses, Rose, Webber, Vallon and Schepps. Sullivan not only denied portions of their testimony, relating to Becker's participation it the alleged conspiracy to murder Rosenthal, but declared that after the murder Webber and Schepps told him they were going to "frame Becker and turn him over to the district attorney."

Sullivan became as petulant as a child when Goff narrowed his testimony to contradictions of that of previous witnesses. Again and again he begged the court to "give me ten minutes to explain the thing."

SIX FIRMS LOSERS

Three Thousand Persons Idle as Result of Haverhill Fire

Haverhill, Mass., Oct. 19.—Six firms in the shoe manufacturing district suffered an aggregate loss by fire and water of between $75,000 and $100,000 last night, and twenty-five other firms will be without power for forty-eight hours as a result of a blaze in the four-story brick factory building at 67-69 Washington street.

Much of the interior of the building was burned. The Jacques power plant in the rear, which supplied power to twenty-five firms employing 2000 persons, suffered a heavy water damage, and will be out of commission for forty-eight hours.

The fire started from an unknown cause in the shoe factory of Harry A. Smart on the third floor of the building.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Mrs. Keziah Coffin, supposed widow, is arranging to move from Trumet to Boston, following the death of her brother, for whom she had kept house. Grace Van Horne, ward of Capt. Eben Hammond, leader of the "Come-outer" religious sect, offers to assist her financially if she will remain. She declines. Kyan Pepper, widower, offers marriage, and is indignantly refused.

CHAPTER II—Capt. Elkanah Daniels, leader of the Regular church, offers Keziah a place as housekeeper for the new minister, and she decides to remain in Trumet.

CHAPTER III—Keziah takes charge of Rev. John Ellery, the new minister, and gives him advice as to his conduct toward members of the parish. Ellery causes a sensation by attending a "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER IV—Ellery's presence is bitterly resented by Eben Hammond, leader of the meeting. Grace apologizes for her guardian and Ellery escorts her home in the rain. Capt. Nat Hammond, Eben's son, becomes a hero by bringing the packet into port safely through fog and storm. Ellery finds Keziah writing a letter to some one, inclosing money in response to a demand. She is curiously startled when informed of the arrival of Nat.

CHAPTER V—Nat calls on Keziah, and it develops that they have been lovers since youth. Daniels remonstrates with Ellery for attending "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER VI—Ellery is caught by the tide and is rescued by Nat. They become friends.

CHAPTER VII—Ellery meets Grace while walking in the fields Sunday, and learns that she walks there every Sunday.

CHAPTER VIII—The clergyman takes dinner Sundays with the Daniels. Annabel, the captain's daughter, exerts herself to make an impression on him. She notices with vexation his desire to get away every Sunday at a certain time. She watches him through a spy glass.

CHAPTER IX—Nat again importunes Keziah to marry him. He says he has had a quarrel with his father, who wants him to marry Grace.

CHAPTER X—Ellery asks Grace to marry him. She confesses that she loves him, but says she fears to displease her guardian, who has been very kind to her, and asks time to think about it. Elkanah Daniels tells Eben about the meetings between Ellery and Grace. Eben declares he will make Grace choose between him and the preacher. Grace finds him in a faint, following the excitement of Elkanah's visit.

CHAPTER XI—Just before he dies Eben exacts a promise from Nat and Grace that they will marry.

CHAPTER XII—Keziah breaks the news to Ellery and later he receives a note from Grace saying she is to marry Nat and asking him not to try to see her again. Keziah tells the story of her own marriage with a man who turned out to be a good-for-nothing, and who was reported to have been lost at sea, and of her love for Nat, whom she cannot marry because the husband is alive. Ellery sees in the story a lesson in devotion to duty and decides to remain and attend to his duties.

CHAPTER XIII—Captain Nat sails for Manila to be gone two years. He says he and Grace have decided not to marry until he returns.

CHAPTER XIV—Nat is overdue, and it is feared that he has been lost at sea. Keziah gets a letter from her husband saying he is coming back. Grace goes on a visit to relatives of the Hammonds.

CHAPTER XV—A vessel flying distress signals is discovered off the coast. Ellery goes with party to board the vessel. A man is found suffering from smallpox, the rest of the crew having deserted.

CHAPTER XVI—He is taken to an abandoned shack on shore and Ellery helps nurse him. Before he dies it is discovered that he is Keziah's husband. Ellery, left alone in quarantine, is found wandering in a delirious condition by Grace. She takes him back to the shanty and sends for help.

CHAPTER XVII—Keziah and Grace nurse Ellery, who is suffering from brain fever. The doctor and Keziah spread a report that Grace and Ellery are engaged. News comes that Nat has arrived safely in Boston.

CHAPTER XVIII—The story of the wreck of Nat's vessel comes out and a home-coming is arranged, but Nat fails to appear.

CHAPTER XIX—Keziah intercepts Nat on his homeward journey and tells him of Grace's love for Ellery. He releases Grace from her promise to him. Keziah gets delayed letter from her husband saying he will return soon, and not having yet heard of the identity of the smallpox victim, she leaves Trumet. Ellery tells Nat that the dead man was Keziah's husband.

CHAPTER XXI.

In Which Keziah's Parson Preaches Once More.

Time has wrought many changes in Trumet. The packet long since ceased to ply between the village and Boston the stage has been superseded by the locomotive, the old "square-riggers," commanded by Cape Cod men, no longer sail the seas. Along the main road the houses have changed hands Didama Rogers peers no more from her parlor window; that parlor is now profaned by the frivolous and irreverent summer boarder. But the old residents love to talk of the days that are gone and if you happen to catch Mr. Isaac Higgins, now postmaster and a dignified member of the board of selectmen, in a reminiscent mood he will very likely tell you of the meeting of the parish committee called by its chairman, Elkanah Daniels, to oust Rev. John Ellery from the pulpit of the Regular church.

"I'll never forget," says Mr. Higgins, "that parish committee meetin' if I live a thousand years. I, and two or three other young shavers, was hid in the little room off the vestry—the room where they kept the dishes they used for church suppers—and we heard the whole business. Of course nobody knew that Nat was goin' to marry Keziah then, but they did know that he wa'n't goin' to marry Grace Van Horne, and had given her up to the minister of his own accord. So Daniels's guns were spiked and he didn't have no chance at all. However, you'd never have guessed it to look at him. He marched into that meetin' and up to the platform as stiff and dignified as if he'd swallered a peck of starch. He called the meetin' to order—'twas a full one, for all hands and the cook was there—and then got up to speak.

"He opened fire right off. He raked John Ellery fore and aft. The parson, he said, had disgraced the society and his sacred profession and should be hove overboard immediate.

"Three or four sung out 'Question' and 'Vote.' But Elkanah held up his hand.

"'Gentlemen,' says he, 'before I ask for the vote I want to say just one word. I've worshiped in this meetin' house ever sence I was a child. I was christened in it; my father worshiped here afore me; I've presided over the meetin's of this body for years. But I tell you now that if you vote to keep that rascally hypocrite in your pulpit I shall resign from the committee and from the society. It'll be like cuttin' off my right hand, but I shall do it. Are you ready for the vote? Those in favor of retaining the present minister of this parish will rise. Those opposed will remain seated."

"Every man on the floor stood up. Daniels himself was the only one that stayed settin' down.

"'It is a vote,' says he, white as a sheet, and his voice trembling. 'Gentlemen, I bid you good day.'

"He took up his hat and cane, give one look around the vestry, as if he were sayin' good-by to it, and marched down the aisle as straight and starchy as he'd come into it. Only, when he reached the door, he put up one hand as if he was steadyin' himself. There was precious few in that vestry that liked Elkanah Daniels, but I'm bettin' high there wa'n't a one who didn't feel sorry for him then."

Captain Daniels and his daughter moved to Boston that summer. They never came back to Trumet to live. Annabel remained single until after her father's death; then she married a man very much younger and poorer than she was. It was remarked by acquaintances of the couple that the difference in age became less and less apparent as their married life continued.

On a Sunday morning, a few weeks after the committee meeting, the Regular church was crowded. John Ellery was to preach his first sermon since the San Jose came ashore. Every member of the congregation was present. Even Mrs. Prince, feeble but garrulous, was there. Gaius Winslow, having delivered his brood of children at the church door, made a special trip in his carryall to fetch the old lady. Captain Zebedee and Mrs. Mayo beamed from their pew. Dr. Parker and his wife smiled at them across the aisle. Didama Roger's new bonnet was a work of art and her neck threatened to twist itself off as she turned to see each one who came in.

Lavinia Pepper sailed to the front. She was dressed in a new black alpaca which rustled so very much like silk that nearsighted people might have been deceived by it. With her was a man, apparently suffering from strangulation, because of the height and tightness of his collar. "It's Caleb Pratt, from Sandwich," whispered Didama. "Thankful Payne's relation, you know. Have you heard what folks are sayin'? I guess it's true, because — Look at Kyan! you'd think he was goin' to his own funeral.

There was a stir at the door. All heads swung in that direction—all but Mr. Pepper's, that is. The minister and Grace were coming up the aisle and behind them came Captain Nat Hammond and Keziah Coffin. Nat was smiling and self-possessed. Never before in his life had he entered the Regular meeting house as a worshiper, but he seemed to be bearing the ordeal bravely. It was Grace's first visit to the church, also, and she was plainly embarrassed. To be stared at by eighty-odd pairs of eyes, and to catch whispered comments from the starers' tongues, is likely to embarrass one.

Yet the comments were all friendly. "I declare!" whispered Mrs. Prince, "I never see her look so pretty afore. I knew she was the best lookin' girl in this town, but I never realized she was such a beauty. Well, there's one thing sartin'—we've got the handsomest parson and parson's wife in this county, by about ten mile and four rows of apple trees. And there's the other bride that's goin' to be. I never see Keziah look so well nelther."

The minister went up the stairs to the pulpit. He was still white and thin, but his eyes were bright and his voice clear. He gave the opening hymn and the service began.

Morgan Down For $150,000 and Others For $100,000 — McCormick Makes Campaign Speech, Calling Hilles a Liar and Character Assassin—Statement Is Admitted to Committee's Record

Washington, Oct. 19.—Elmer E. Dover, secretary of the Republican national committee in 1904, placed in evidence before the Clapp committee what he said was a list of contributions to the committee that year, given by the late Cornelius N. Bliss. It itemized contributions by E. H. Harriman, $100,000; "H. R. H.—J. D. W.," $100,000; J. P. Morgan & Co., $150,000; George J. Gould, $100,000, and "G. W. P., $100,000, and many others.

Dover said he had made his list shortly after the close of the 1904 campaign from a book which Bliss let him see. Dover said his list undoubtedly contained errors made in copying, and that he never had compared it with the original.

The list as put in evidence totalled up $2,280,018. Dover testified he supposed the "G. W. P." stood for George W. Perkins. H. H. R. are Rogers' initials and J. D. W. part of John D. Archbold's. Dover said he thought it referred to the Standard Oil contribution. He explained he believed the list showed repetitions and inaccuracies. J. P. Morgan already had told the committee he gave $150,000, though Dover's list shows more in separate items. Other items in the list as Dover presented it might either be interpreted as repetitions of the one contribution or separate gifts. Dover testified he believed the list without verification was of little value.

Medill McCormick of Chicago stirred up a sensation before the committee when he read a prepared statement touching upon the attempted assassination of Colonel Roosevelt, declaring it had been incited by "falsehoods of character assassins and liars like Charles D. Hilles."

"It is difficult for an ordinary man in the compass of ordinary language to compete with the testimony of character assassins and liars like Mr. Hilles, men, who by their falsehoods incite weak-minded men to actual assinations," was the passage which brought out a storm of protest from the committee in which Chairman Clapp joined.

McCormick argued that this statement was admissible as evidence, while Senators Oliver and Clapp declined to allow McCormick to read and demanded that he withdraw his words. The statement finally was admitted to the record without being read from the prepared copy.

The reference to the attempt upon Roosevelt's life was incidental to McCormick's general statement of campaign expenses of the Progressive party in Illinois. Substantially, it was as follows: "So far as I know, the cost of the campaign in Illinois was defrayed by Chauncey Dewey and myself. I gave Colonel Dewey $16,000. In addition I gave not to exceed $10,000 toward the maintenance of the Chicago general headquarters, inclusive of everything which was given me by my friends, but of which I kept no record."

McCormick added: "During the whole campaign the Taft people assiduously circulated the lie that I am connected with the Harvester trust. I have never owned and do not own a share of Harvester stock and do not expect to own a share."

Mr. McCormick denied that the steel corporation was supporting Colonel Roosevelt.

ANNUAL TRIP TO THE SOUTH

Charles Cummings of Post 88 G. A. R. started today for his annual trip to St. Clouds, Florida, where he will register at the Piper House. Mr. Cummings has been in poor health of late and it is hoped the warm climate combined with the pleasure of gunning and fishing which he finds so enjoyable will be of great benefit to him this winter.

He has the best wishes of the members of Post 88 G. A. R. and all his neighbors and friends, who hope he will return next spring in his usual good health.

GRAMMAR BOYS IN SOCCER GAME

Attendance at Games Picking Up Manifesting Interest

An enthusiastic crowd of rooters followed the soccer games at Merrymount Park, Friday afternoon and the interest which is developing is characteristic of grammar school classes. Dr. Smith said that before the season advances much further the games will be attended by record breaking crowds.

Washington and Wollaston school were unable to score against each other in a hard fought game.

Quincy defeated Montclair in the second period after Montclair had to be satisfied with a defensive game the first half.

The teams are rapidly rounding into shape, are learning not to bunch around the ball and are improving their passing.

MAKING GOOD IN THE ORIENT

Louis F. McGowan of Quincy Successful in China

The tremendous struggle that is going on in China to secure food for the 2,500,000 sufferers from the great floods that swept every part of that country, this summer leaving a trail of famine and death behind, finds a Quincy young man in the midst of the great work of raising funds for the suffers in every part of the world. While Massachusetts people are contributing their share in response to the appeal of Governor Foss, they may rest assured that their contributions will be well expended.

The young man is Louis F. McGowan, a son of Mrs. Helen McGowan of Orchard street, Squantum. Mr. McGowan after a few years apprenticeship in a Boston importing house went to China four years ago. His success was remarkable. He is located at Tientsin and under his care a great American storehouse has been constructed which in the recent turbulent revolution was turned into barracks for foreign troops for the protection of foreign residents of that section.

It was Mr. Gowan who with a number of American officers made the first automobile trip into Northern China. He was gone for weeks into a trading territory where the American agent had never penetrated. And the most remarkable thing was that the Chinamen all wanted to buy automobiles. The result of the trip was that Mr. McGowan sent to America for a large consignment of American made automobiles which are today being run by wealthy young Chinamen.

BLACKMUR STAR OF THE GAME

Braintree and Quincy High Fail to Score

IN FAST CONTEST

Braintree A. A. and Quincy High school 2d played a scoreless game at Merrymount Park, Friday afternoon. The visiting team was composed of students of Thayer Academy.

The game was full of action, both teams rushing up and down to each others 30 yard line. Paul Blackmur easily outshone the other players and in the last period was headed for a touchdown when three men tackled him on the Quincy 10 yard line.

Penalties were an important factor in the game and considerable ground was lost by both teams because of offside playing. Forward passes were not acceptable to Referee Larkin because of the offside work of the team possessing the ball.

Paul Blackmur dropped back for a drop kick in the last period and his brother made a poor pass. Paul got the ball off all right but the Quincy line smashed through and spoiled a score.

M'FARLAND ACQUITTED

Immediately Attempts to Marry Woman Who Figured In Trial

Newark, N. J., Oct. 19.—Immediately that he was freed from charges that he murdered his first wife, Allison M. MacFarland attempted late yesterday to marry Florence Bromley, the woman who had figured in his case as author of affectionate letters to him signed "Bunny." MacFarland's plans were upset by a mere technicality, the woman not having a copy of the decree of divorce when application was made for a marriage license. The couple will be married later.

Florence Bromley, who was MacFarland's former stenographer, is a divorcee. It was her letters to MacFarland which the prosecution presented as showing MacFarland's motive for the alleged poisoning of his wife.

MacFarland's counsel rested the case with MacFarland's own story of how he placecd cyanide of potassium in his wife's medicine chest with innocent intentions.

FIFTEEN COWS ROASTED IN SOUTH BRAINTREE FIRE

Horse, Auto Truck, Wagons and Farming Implements Also Food for Flames

Loss Estimated at $6,000 Partly Covered By Insurance

A spectacular and disastrous fire occurred this morning shortly before 1 o'clock when the barn of Fred G. Foster, 1291 Washington street, South Braintree was destroyed, together with all the contents, including 15 cows, a horse, wagons, harnesses, farming implements, hay, etc. A milk wagon kept in a shed was saved, but an automobile truck and the building containing it was completly wrecked.

The dwelling house occupied by Mr. Foster and family was badly scorched in the rear, and the interior and furniture were considerably damaged by the water which was poured onto the building.

The house next door, owned and occupied by Daniel Buckley and family, was slightly scorched.

Mr. Buckley, who is gate tender at the Plain street crossing near by, saw the fire and notified Michael J. Branley, driver of Hose 1, who hitched up and was well on the way to the engine house before the alarm was turned in. Mr. Buckley's young son William pulled the alarm from Box 51 at the corner of Highland avenue and Mr. Foster telephoned to the Central office for the fire department. Had it not been for the quick action of Mr. Buckley, it is probable that his home and also that of Mr. Foster would have been destroyed. As it was, the firemen arrived in record time and did good work under direction of Chief Fred a Tenney in checking the spread of the flames and saving the two dwelling houses.

A second alarm was turned in very soon after the first one, to summon the Braintree department, but so quickly did the fire burn, their services were not needed when they arrived.

The barn formerly belonged to the Jacob Dyer estate but at present the property is leased by Mr. Foster from Jabez S. Dyer of Melrose. The loss is estimated at $6000, which is partly covered by insurance. The all-out signal was sounded at 4.45 A. M.

DIED AFTER SHORT ILLNESS.

Mrs. Bertha A. Bridges died at the Convalescent Home, East Milton, Sunday after a short illness. During the past two months Mrs. Bridges has been treated at her home, Squantum street, and was removed to the Home only a week ago. Mrs. Bridges was a member of the Mission Church of Our Saviour at East Milton and services will be held this Tuesday afternoon. The deceased was in her 43rd year and leaves a husband.

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT AND LONGER TERM FOR CHIEF EXECUTIVE

One-Year Mayor and Council Cannot Perform Efficient Service in That Brief Period of Time

Danger of What One Man Might Do in Two Years Overlapped by the Good the Right Man Would Do

"What's the matter with Quincy?" was further brought out, Sunday noon, when over 70 men from all parts of the city gathered in the Wollaston Unitarian church for an open discussion of the question.

The meeting was the first of a series to be held Sunday noons in the church to consider questions of civic welfare. Several councilmen past and present and others prominent in the city government were present.

Rev. Carl G. Horst opened the meeting and referred to the letters of Irving L. Shaw which have been appearing in the Ledger. He paid a tribute to Mr. Shaw in rendering the community a great service by telling the actual workings of the city government and where we are today. He urged that the meetings be free and easy, with frank discussion in order that some definite conclusions might be reached.

Irving L. Shaw declared that he regarded it as his duty and opportunity to speak upon the question at issue, He said in part:"—It is the greatest privilege of American citizenship, to be able to tell our friends and neighbors how we feel. Stevenson says 'The first duty of man is to speak.' By speaking and having everyone speak we get a broader viewpoint.

"The whole country is passing through a reconstructive period. Old ideals are passing and new interests are claiming attention.

"We all remember when party politics so predominated that at the country store the native declared he would vote for the devil himself if he were a party candidate.

"Party distinctions are now losing their claim and must produce principles to which thinking men agree if they would continue. Philanthropy is merging into civic interest.

"If national issues are of importance how much more are those of local interest.

"Our local conditions are dependant upon one man. On the legislative side, what he does is helped or hindered by the kind of men who go to the city council and raise our tax rate and help us spend our money.

"It is up to us to get up and speak our minds freely. If we held as much stock in some private business as we do in the city of Quincy how many would sit still and let things go in the wrong way? They would at least say something.

WORK STARTED ON ADAMS SCHOOL

Loutelli Threw Up Contract Which Goes to Cunningham

NEXT LOWEST BIDDER

After many weeks of delay work has finally been commenced on the erection of the New Adams school building at South Quincy. As stated in Wednesday's Ledger the lowest bidder for the job, Joseph Loutelli had refused to accept the contract. The Mayor stated to the citizens committee of South Quincy Tuesday evening that as soon as the legal time expired that the contract would be let to th second lowest bidder or new bids advertised for.

The time limit has now expired and the Mayor has given the contract to the C. F. Cunningham Co., whose bid was $65,385. Messrs. Cunningham are the same firm which constructed the new Wollaston school building, of which the proposed new Adams building is a duplicate.

This morning men from the City Engineers office made their appearance on the Madison avenue lot and staked out the building and the batten boards were in position this noon. Active work excavating for the foundation will be under way before night.

In addition to this, gangs of city men are at work on the lot excavating for water, gas and the sewer pipes as well as doing some of the work of grading the lot.

FRIENDSHIP DEMONSTRATED

In the machine shop of the Tubular Rivet and Stud Co., Saturday, A. N. Birse was surounded by a company of his fellow-workmen and completely surprised.

In a speech, a gem of oratory, Stephen A. Brown presented Mr. Birse with a valuable watch, chain and charm, the charm being suitably inscribed.

Mr. Birse leaves this department, in which he has been for a number of years, to receive a promotion, and his square, upright dealings and genial disposition having endeared him to this body of men, the occasion was taken to show him their esteem and to wish him success in his new work. Mr. Birse, in responding to the presentation, thanked these good friends heartily for their splendid gift, hoping same kindly spirit would continue that while in a measure separated, the among them.

The Message From Rev. Mr. Horst at Young People's Union Anniversary

Wollaston Organization Celebrated 10 Years of Life

The Wollaston Young People's Religious Union celebrated its 10th anniversary in the Wollaston Unitarian church, Sunday evening. In addition to parish members from unions in Greater Boston were represented including Quincy, Dorchester, Brookline, Winthrop, East Boston, Brighton, Hyde Park and others.

The speakers were Rev. Dudley H. Ferrell of Brockton, president of the national body; Leon F. Cummings of Dorchester, president of the Boston Federation, Fred M. Rollins, first president of the local Union and Rev. Carl G. Horst, pastor of the church. Lucien H. Thayer, president of the Wollaston Union presided.

The meeting opened with an organ voluntary by William E. Weston which was followed by a short business meeting and devotional service.

President Lucien H. Thayer attended a cordial welcome to those present and urged renewed interest in the work of the organization. Fred M. Rollins, the first president of the Wollaston Union spoke on "Our History." Mr. Rollins recalled the organization of the society Sunday evening, Oct. 19, 1902 when at a large meeting in the church a membership of over 50 was enrolled. In the nine years of existence nothing extraordinary had been accomplished but rather the progress had been normal. In the 160 meetings that had been held there had been an attendance of from 13 to 100 with an average attendance of 40. Two meetings had been omitted, on account of inclement weather.

He referred hopefully to the present well organized society and urged all to strive and make the present year the brightest and most successful yet recorded.

A solo "The plains of peace," by Barnard was acceptably rendered by Miss Ernestine Litchfield of Wollaston.

"Why a young Peoples Religious Union?" was forcefully pictured by Rev. Dudley H. Ferrell.

He pointed out the duty and privilege of the young people in working in their respective unions and in helping the national society.

Mr. Ferrell congratulated the union on its ten years of life and brought the greetings of the Brockton Guild. In closing he said—

"I trust as the years pass on, that each will bring to you greater success and a deeper spiritual insight of the things in the pursuit of which we are banded together.

"What we owe the Boston Federation and what it owes us," was the subject of Leon F. Cummings. He pointed out many ways in which each could help the other and urged a wide exchange of ideas.

A sermonette on "Consecration" was preached by Rev. Carl G. Horst and the program ended with the solo "King of love" by Miss Litchfield.

"We should pledge ourselves anew," said Mr. Horst, "to truth, service and above all to worship. Things seen are temporal. Only the unseen are the enduring realities."

The meeting closed with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne." and a benediction by the pastor.

A reception in the vestry followed.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

To even things up the Republicans should attend the Democratic rally and the Democrats, the Republican rally tonight.

Sunday was an ideal fall day, such as could be appreciated by those who enjoy walking.

Johnson is finding that even a champion pugilist can even go too far in defying public opinion.

Becker on the stand under the grilling of an able lawyer and Becker the taciturn prisoner who kept his mouth shut will be two separate and distinct personages.

Another crank made a nuisance of himself by an effort to intrude upon Col. Roosevelt yesterday.

The state election is only two weeks away and then for the hustle and bustle of the City election.

All does not appear to be harmony in the Boston Central labor union.

Those beautiful reports of abundant crops are encouraging, but they do not appear to have much influence on sending prices downward.

People in the Wollaston peat bog district need have no fears of a coal shortage. The fuel is right at their door.

The war stories as usual are conflicting.

Some of the names are more difficult than those of the Boer war, but in this more recent encounter other features fortunately have to be translated into plain every day English.

It was "sweet sorrow" parting with the Bermuda cup to such good sportsmen as the Winthrop Yacht club contains and then of course there is the ever possible contingency that it may come back.

Some years ago rival party parades and rallies on the same night would lead to sore heads and some disturbances. All of which goes to show that people are becoming more rational as a whole.

The moving picture men are after Schrank. In case they are successful state legislatures should promptly place them under the ban as they did the Johnson—Jefferies fight pictures.

Some newspaper writers are now busy, telling of the reported trouble in the ranks of the Boston base ball team, while others are equally industrious with denials of trouble.

With Perkins and Ryan on the stand today that senatorial investigation committee of campaign expenses should learn a thing or two about high finances.

That Milford tax collector of 20 years ago who plans to collect back taxes will have a fine young job on his hands.

It should not be very difficult to hide Jack Johnson in a dark corner.

Upham's Corner has got into the lime light. A gang of hoodlums beat up the sexton of a church during service period last night.

Newspaper heading—"An aviator falls 500 to his death." Most any one could tell that he did not fall into heaven.

UNWHOLESOME EXHIBITS.

Schrank, the would be assassin of Col. Roosevelt has made a request that his revolver and the bullet which entered the body of his intended victim, be forwarded to the New York historical society and be held as a constant reminder to posterity of "the danger of attempting to violate the third term tradition."

It is said this request forms a part of the will which the prisoner has prepared. Rather a modest request to say the least. Probably when Schrank gets out of jail he will be seeking a theatrical engagement and there are men so calloused to the eternal fitness of things that they would flock to see this poor speciman of humanity on exhibition.

Schrank may be what is commonly termed a "crank" but he was not so insane but he figured out well in selecting a state where capital punishment is not in force to commit his cowardly and unwarranted assault. The unwholesome exhibit of the murderous implements he suggests should be treated as they deserve. No good can ever come of satisfying the morbidly curious by an exhibition of the things, but that roll of manuscript and mental spectacle case which fortunately were strong factors in saving the Colonel's life will undoubtedly be treasured by the Roosevelt family for many years to come.

WISE IF NOVEL.

That Plymouth judge may not be following the law very closely when he continued the case of a bad boy, declining to dispose of the matter until the parents agreed to whip the offender if he engaged in any more misdemeanors, but he certainly suggested a common sense remedy for the parents to follow. The juvenile dockets are really more burdened than they should be by youthful offenders against the law. To many judges, it seems a harsh and unwise act to imprison boys for some of the offenses which they commit. Results in many cases have borne out the judgment of justices in this treatment of boy offenders. They are the most difficult cases to handle. It is hard to determine just what is good for boys who seem to have no fear or regard for the law. When they are brought into court, they are placed on probation, and escaping punishment which they deserve, their fear of the law is lessened.

That some punishment should be metered out to them is recognized. Their commitment however to institutions in so many cases have only tended to make the offender worse, that naturally judges hesitate about taking this step. The Plymouth judge however has offered a remedy which may prove of benefit. At any rate proper parental punishment for offences might have a good effect in many cases and may be the means of starting the boy on the right path and keeping him there. If he knows he is to be punished he will be careful. If he realizes on the other hand that nothing more than good adivce will follow his apprehension, he is liable to be just a little careless after the first escape and drift into wrong doing again which may mean his complete rejection of all methods of reform and a settling down into a life of carelessness as to keeping within the law which can have but one end, prison.

LETTER WRITING.

A correspondent who has been reaping much thought harmony from an intelligent digestion of Mr. Shaw's letters has entered the letter writing field and forwarded a communication to the Ledger. The letter contains many statements which appear to be well backed by existing conditions, but the writer modestly or otherwise omitted to affix his signature to the epistle.

Many points made by the writer appear to very apropos, but we are forced to decline using it without a knowledge of the writer. This is not necessary for publication, but as an evidence of good faith.

If the writer wonders why he does not see his effort in print, this will tend to enlighten him on the subject. The letter was either dictated by some one of mature years to a more youthful penman or else an effort was made to disguise the penmanship.

ALL PULL TOGETHER.

The prosperity of a town is not guarded by the wealth of its inhabitants, but by the uniformity with which they pull together when any important undertaking is to be accomplished says the Foxboro Reporter. A man with a thousand dollars at his command and a love for his town in his heart, can do more for the building up and improving of it than the millionaire who looks up his capital and snaps his fingers at home progress.

Quincy does not need wealthy men so much as it needs more men who are interested, keen and alert to the possibilities here, and are willing to enter into the fight for what they believe can be realized, single handed if need be. Men who will enter into the work unselfishly for the benefit not for themselves but for their community at large.

Much more progress could be made if more people would put aside selfishness and jealousy, and individually enter into the work of building up our beautiful city and making it more a centre of activity.

Never mind whether your work is appreciated or not. There will probably be little appreciation of the community as a whole; but endeavor at least to show that you are interested in the progress of Quincy and are willing in every way possible to further that interest.

THEY WANT TO VOTE.

The desire of about 100 Harvard college students to vote in Cambridge this year has been submitted to the supreme court and the response upon the questions of law involved will be quite interesting and establish a precedent upon a long and much mooted question. The young men have been assessed for a poll tax by the City of Cambridge, but the board of registrars acting upon the advice of the City Solicitor declined to enter their names upon the voting lists.

Naturally many of those interested have little concern in the local affairs of the city and would not be much aggrieved at their inability to take part in the municipal elections. Those who are residents of Massachusetts when it came to voting for state officers would be subjected to little hardship in making the trip to their home city or town to vote. But even this would in many cases entail an expense which probably many of the students could ill afford to incur.

With students from other parts of the country, many of whom come from extreme points, the case is different. And the situation this year, presents an aspect not encountered every year. This a presidential year and the young men naturally desire to manifest their choice for national officers. The decision of the court on this important subject will no doubt exercise considerable influence upon future desires of the student body in other parts of the country with regard to their right to vote.

AN EXPERIMENT.

The United States government is to try the experiment of purchasing navy shells from a foreign manufacturer. An order for 500 of the 3500 armor piercing projectiles desired has been placed with an English firm. It is claimed that the foreign shell of equal quality to those manufactured in this country cost one third less. That is quite a difference in price and the purchase by the government of the foreign product will mean quite a saving. Of course there will be a protest and a great howl about the lack of patriotism in an attempted effort to turn to a foreign market for goods which are produced at home. Individuals would no doubt avail themselves of the privilege of making a saving in their purchase of many things needed, but they would be handicapped by the tariff, which the government in this instance will not have to pay.

The government officials of the navy department believe that a disposition on the part of the government to purchase those shells abroad will cause the American manufacturers to make a substantial change in their prices from the exhorbitant ones which they now demand.

—Large, blue-eyed, married men were much in demand in New York—by Policeman Charles Becker. COMMISSION GOVERNMENT

"We need awakening, see what is going on and pass judgment upon it. How else are the mayor and council to know whether they are pleasing or not.

"Many people expect to find the government operating like a well oiled machine. They get out and crank it up once a year and expect it to go along first rate.

"No matter how beautiful a form of government is it will never work out unless the people take a strong and keen interest in the city's affairs. The political machines or rings are in the habit of thinking that they and not the people own the city. What we need is a personel of the very best men in the city to work out the reconstruction of Quincy's policies and get out of the financial rut we are already in.

"It is a fact that Quincy pays more of its revenue for debt and interest than any other city in the Commonwealth and is 10 per cent worse off than the next worst city. In fact 43 5-10 per cent of the whole revenue goes to pay debt and interest. That alone should awaken every man to take an active personal part.

"The form of Quincy's government is pretty good. Its charter squares up pretty well on the whole. There are some things which might be bettered however. One is the short term of the mayor and council. How is a mayor to do efficient work in one year. If we select the right man we ought to give him time to work out his policies.

"A one term mayor feels about his next election the moment he steps into office. Instead of what is best for the city, it is what is best for re-election?

"Is not the danger of what a man might do in two years if he were not the right man overlapped by the good the right man would do. Another point is whether it is good or not to have party designation. One of the most absurd things is to pick a man for city government because he happens to feel the way we do about the tariff and other great questions.

"What difference does it make whether or not he believes in free silver so long as he knows how to run the city? Party designations divides the strength of clean public opinion. There are just as good men in one party as the other. It makes a line of separation between two parties that ought to be together. A man gets more attention because of that designation. If removed every man would have to stand on his own merits and his own feet.

"Other questions are the ward system and the size of the council. The ward system encourages local selfishness and causes a scramble for unfair local advantage."

Mr. Shaw instanced the manner in which councilmen are gotten after in the matter of streets and other matters. "We work on the principle that if we don't get what we want some other part of the city will get it.

Councilmen are harassed by their constituents. The value he is in relation to what he gets for his ward, not the value he is to the whole city and whether or not he puts it on an unsolid financial basis.

"It is wiser when we elect men to office to choose them for their worth rather than local popularity. I believe in a council at large. This is favorable to the voter as well because he has the whole city to choose from. Where one man might get votes in his district, in the whole city personal ability counts rather than being a good fellow.

"A council of 23 members is unwieldy. It makes the ballot too long. We do not pick the men we want. So many names are confusing.

"I favor the reduction of the council to at least nine members with the purpose of getting better men in the field. There would be better men to choose from and nine could do more business in less time than 23.

"I do not object to ward representation from the broad standpoint when elected by the whole city. One ward would only have more representatives than another because the whole city had passed on them. The councilman won't try to cater to his ward alone because he must square his action by the whole city's support.

"I believe in a two years' term for the council the same as mayor. It might be a good plan to elect four one year and five the next so as not to change completely each year. A short ballot would bring out better men."

Mr. Shaw reviewed the points he had brought out and urged an awakening of public interest. Unless we make up our minds to get busy and make our feelings felt, we can make no difference in present conditions."

In the general discussion, N. G. Nickerson stated that at a house meeting recently held of some 15 citizens of Wollaston a commission form of government with a council of perhaps seven but not to exceed nine was unanimously favored.

Verne S. Brokaw raised the question if a commission was advisable. Mr. Shaw was of the opinion the reason it had worked well in some cities because in obtaining it public sentiment had been aroused. If we could get the same interest in our own form we would get the results without the upheaval.

William E. Rowe asked what could be done as individuals. "Take enough interest to go and vote. Attend rallies and look over the candidates. Get the right kind of men in the field. Able men seldom get out for political honors," said Mr. Shaw.

"The vital spot in the city today" said A. L. Baker, "is the re-election of the mayor. Just as soon as a mayor is elected he plays for re-election. The charter should be so amended that we elect him for three years and then build an iron fence around him." (Great applause.)

Eugene H. Sprague declared one trouble was that the local press did not take its stand on local affairs because it was influenced by the printing office. He declared that a new vehicle with no local printing office was the way to put the public right. There was nothing the trouble with the city charter or Quincy. What was wanted was men. We should not vote for a man because he needs the job after being a failure in other things. (Applause.)

Fred F. Green, proprietor of a local newspaper declared he had been hammering away on these questions but had not received the support he should. He declared a certain local paper received the bulk of the city's printing and that it paid them to keep quiet. Mr. Green did not agree that the charter should be changed if a strong man with back bone was placed in the mayor's chair. A man that was not the tool of a body of politicians. "If you change the charter it wil be nothing more than the machine in the citizens association advocated and they will be prepared to perpetuate themselves in office for another long term of years."

It was voted to appoint a committee of five to govern future meetings and to invite all interested including the ladies. Meetings will be held every Sunday at 12 o'clock in the church and it is proposed to close sharp at 1 o'clock.

BRIDGING OF WASTE AND WANT

Would be of Great Benefit to Humanity as a Whole

"If only a little bridge could be thrown from the Island of Waste to the Island of Want, how both would benefit!" said Lady Wolserton, when confronted by the pressing need of a certain charity. But not content with the framing of her aphorism she proceeded at once to build the bridge of Needlework. This was in 1883 at Dorsetshire, England, and since that time many of these structures have united waste and want, with great and inspiring results. Lady Wolserton showed marked genius in organizing her society by making its machinery of such beautiful simplicity that it be a burden to no one! and the condition of membership, only two new articles of clothing a year was so small a demand that the society became popular immediately. The elements of popularity and steady growth were in its very structure—no caste, no sect, no hampering prejudices."

The National Guild of America was started from this society in England in 1885 and in June 1896, received a perpetual charter at Philadelphia. From this beginning branches have sprung up all over the United States Each branch has its offices and directors and controls the distribution of its own garments.

The Quincy Branch was founded in 1895. We have in this branch a president, vice president, secretary and treasurer, and seven directors; but we want more. We want one, at east, in West Quincy and one at Quincy Point. Last year 292 garments were collected. These have been given to needy and worthy families, and alls have been received from the Day Nursery, Hospital and the secretary of "The Associated Charities. Winter is approaching and the time for the annual collection. Therefore, it is hoped that each member will respond promptly when the notices are received and give her garments to the director, to whose list he belongs. All who are interested in this worthy object are cordially invited to attend the exhibition of these garments. The place and notice will be given later.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

Topics and Anncuncements For Coming Week

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN CHURCH

This church, in common with others of the Unitarian Fellowship accepts "The Religion of Jesus, holding in accordance with his teaching that practical religion is summed up in love to God and love to man." All are invited into its fellowship, who are in sympathy with its religious spirit, its consecration to freedom and its loyalty to truth.

Rev. Carl G. Horst preached Sunday morning the third in the series of sermons on "Corner Stones of Our Republic," which had for its theme "Respect for Law," based upon the text "Put them in mind to be in subjection to rulers, to authorities to be obedient." Titus 3, 1. He said in part: "The words of our text today are a little different from the inscription on one of the banners carried in a recent parade "No God, no master." But thank God we are living in a country founded by men of conviction and backbone, men who believed in God and the moral law, men who believed in law and in liberty, and knew that the only liberty worth having was through obedience to law. Lawlessness always means bondage, but obedience to law always means freedom. Liberty and law do not exclude each other. They go hand in hand. Liberty can come only by obedience to law. You can not have liberty without law. The only thing that can keep this republic from disintegration is respect for law. Law must be upheld and enforced,—if need be at the mouth of gatling guns. Without law no humon society is possible. Respect for law is the very anchor of the institutions of our civilization. Now there are some in our midst who do not believe in the teachings of our text. They meet in Faneuil hall square and send a telegram to the governor of the state saying 'We will never let your law nor your vigilants injure the members of the I. W. W. without retaliation.' They prefer the red flag to the stars and stripes, and then have the audacity to tell us that the red flag is not an emblem of anarchy, but the symbol of the red blood, that flows through the veins of the toilers. This is putting new wine into old bottles. Throughout the world the red flag stands for anarchy, and anarchy means the state of society where there is no law or supreme powers. Now no human society is possible without law. Therefore anarchy is simply an impossibility. In this country in the past we have been rather indifferent to anarchists. They have found a veritable paradise here. We have allowed them to live unmolested and even to proclaim their pernicious principles from public platforms. This they cannot do in any other civilized country. Some of our cities have become veritable hotbeds of anarchistic propogandism. To argue with revolutionary anarchists is simply a waste of time. When men announce themselves as the enemies of society, society must take them at their word and treat them accordingly. Government has two main functions—the police function, under which individual rights are safeguarded and crimes punished, and the function of economic and social co-operation. Just as there are natural laws, so there are social laws. They inhere in the very nature of society. They come into operation the instant society comes into existence. On the recognition of and obedience to these laws social order depends. Law is the condition of life; physical law of physical life, bodily law of bodily life, social law of social life. We have absolutely nothing whatever to do with the question whether or not we shall be under law. We are under law and we cannot help ourselves. Law comes neither from the divine right of Kings nor from a divine right of democracies. It proceeds, as Hooker said, from the bosom of Almighty God. Therefore let every soul be in subjection to the higher powers; for there is no power but of God. He that resisteth the power, withstandeth the ordinance of God; and they that withstand shall receive to themselves judgment. For rulers are not a terror to the good work, but to the evil. And wouldst thou have no fear of the power? do that which is good, and thou shalt have praise from thes ame; for he is a minister of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid; for he beareth not the sword in vain; for he is a minister of God, to administer punishment to him that doeth evil."

The Unitarian Sunday school union of greater Boston meets in the South Congregational church, Exeter and Newbury street, Boston, this evening. Supper at 6, address at 7 by Prof. Edwin D. Starbuck on "The Five Worlds of Religious Education."

FINNISH CONGREGATIONAL

The Christian Endeavor society of the church held a successful meeting, Saturday evening, largely attended by member and friends. Sacred music was sung.

The reorganization of the Sunday school was accomplished at the regular session, Sunday morning. New classes were created, new teachers set to work and the litle girls chorus sang.

Morning service was rather brief regarding the sermon and usual ceremonies. Mr. Hull from Wollaston, one of the trustees of the City Hospital, spoke to the people about the $35,000 campaign which was to be conducted this week.

The Christian Endeavor meeting at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, was of especial interest to all. Fred H. Lawton, of Boston, assistant superintendent of the Anti-saloon league delivered an address upon the liquor traffic. He spoke in English and the translation was by the pastor Rev. John E. Lillback.

At the evening service after solos and congregational singing, the pastor preached on the subject, "Life in Spirit," referring to three different bible texts.

Tuesday night the Martha society will meet, women alone taking part in the program but the public is invited to be present. Wednesday evening, Rev. John E. Lilback will deliver a political essay on how political campaigns are conducted at present. All are invited and a general discussion will follow the address.

INFLUENCE OF THREE DECKERS

Wollaston People Will Discuss This Type of Dwelling

MANY OBJECT TO THEM

Residents of Wollaston plan to hold a discussion on an important subject at a meeting Tuesday evening. The subject is the much talked of three decker dwelling houses. There is a strong tendency at this time for owners of real estate to erect houses of this type on their land.

Residents of Wollaston do not approve of the type, yet are fearful that a movement in this direction will be advanced and do injury to this residential section of the city. Invitations have been extended to about 100 residents of this section of the city to attend this gathering and express their views. The meeting promises to be full of interest to all residents of the city, but more particularly to those who dwell in Wollaston.

PEAT BURNED MERRILY

While the Smoke Carried By Wind Enveloped the City

HOUSES ESCAPED DAMAGE

The alarm from Box 52 at 1.48 Sunday afternoon called the department to fight a fire in the peat bog at Wollaston which required over four hour's hard work to extinguish. Every year about this season this bog gets on fire and it is a severe job to get it out. The fire had been burning some time before the alarm, and the dense smoke enshrouded the entire section of Wollaston in this vicinity. While the fire in the bog had been burning some time no action was taken toward extinguishing the blaze until the fire spread to quick burning under-brush in the vicinity of houses, and out buildings and fearing that these would take fire the alarm was sounded. This brought the Central station, Wollaston and Atlantic apparatus and it was a fight of nearly four hours before the all out sounded.

Many of the citizens residing near where the fire was burning turned out and assisted the firemen when the flames showed any signs of getting too near their property. Several of these buildings were frequently threatened with destruction but fortunately they were prevented from taking fire.

While the firemen were fighting this fire a telephone call came for a grass fire near North street and the Auto chemical and Hose 4, responded and put it out.

BUMPER CROPS THIS YEAR

October Prices Indicate Saving to Consumer of Nearly $500,000,000—Meat Should Be Cheaper—General Reduction Will Not Become Apparent For Several Months

Beverly, Mass., Oct. 21.—In a statement issued here, based upon reports from Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, President Taft declares that the wave of high prices for food throughout the world has begun to subside in this country.

"The wave of extremely high prices for food throughout the civilized world," the statement says, "has reached its height in the United States and is subsiding. The American people have cause to be thankful that because of our industrial prosperity it has not been attended here with the great hardship which has prevailed in some of the countries where high prices have combined with low wages to reduce the working people to a point bordering on starvation."

According to the announcement of White House officials, Secretary Wilson made an investigation of the causes of the prices and the effect of the bumper crops in the United States upon such prices. The great prosperity of the American farmer has brought about a material decrease in the cost of food products, although in many instances the reduction will not become apparent to the consumer for several months.

The report promises that the price of meat will decrease notably on account of the bumper corn crop after cattle, sheep and hogs fed from that crop reach the consumer.

Secretary Wilson advised the president that on the nine great crops of the country—corn, wheat, oats, barley, rye, buckwheat, potatoes, flaxseed and hay—the October prices indicated a saving to the consumer of about 9 percent, or nearly $500,000,000.

Mr. Wilson's report, according to officials here, shows that the aggregate crop in the United States will be about 20 percent greater than it has been for years. Summed up, the statistics show:

Farmers will receive $4.454,000,000 this year, against $3,868,000,000 last year.

Corn has dropped 7 cents a bushel.

The price of hay has fallen $2.74 a ton. This will help decrease the prices of meat, milk, butter, cheese and other farm products.

Oats cost 33.6 cents per bushel against 42.5 cents a year ago.

The sum of $94,500,000 has been saved to the consumer on potatoes alone. Last year they cost 88.3 cents a bushel, this year 51.5 cents.

The greatest cotton crop on record is expected to reduce the price of cotton goods.

FIRE ABOARD STEAMSHIP

Passengers and Crew on the Berkshire In No Danger

Beaufort, N. C., Oct. 21.—The Merchants and Miners steamship Berkshire, bound from Savannah for Philadelphia, which raced into Cape Lookout Cove Sunday morning with her cotton hold afire, is now anchored within 200 yards of shore with passengers and crew safe on board.

From the position in which the ship lies all on board could be landed at any time in any weather and no alarm is felt. It is believed that the vessel will be able to continue her trip to Philadelphia tomorrow.

Capain Hart had the cotton hatches opened and turned streams of water upon the burning cargo. The crew will only attempt to keep the fire under control until assistance arrives.

CONFESSES MURDER

Police Say New York Negro Admits Beating Woman With Hammer

New York, Oct. 21.—George Bishop, a negro, confessed, the police say, that with a hammer he beat to death Mrs. Margaret Bell and nearly killed her maid, Mary Hogan. The two women were attacked in their home in Brooklyn and Mrs. Bell died at a hospital.

Bishop, according to the police, went to their home to demand a reference for his wife, who had formerly worked for Mrs. Bell, and attacked the two women when the reference was refused.

Shoe Dealer Kills Robber

Chicago, Oct. 21. — Charles Schwartz shot and killed a man who was trying to rob his shoe store. He saw a man's arm through a broken window pane. He fired and then gave chase, firing two more shots at the fleeing figure and bringing him down.

TRIBUTE TO YOUNG HERO

Fifteen Thousand Attend Funeral of a Chicago Newsboy

Chicago, Oct. 21.—"Billy" Rugh, newsboy, who gave his life that a girl might live, was given a funeral Sunday such as was never known before.

The boy saved the life of a young girl, who was seriously burned, by giving the skin from his crippled leg. The surgeons were compelled to cut off the leg, as it was nearly stripped of skin. This the boy bore bravely, saying he was glad to make the sacrifice. Shortly after the operation he died.

Fifteen thousand persons, singing "Nearer, My God, to Thee," crowded about his casket on a street corner in Gary, Ind., yesterday afternoon. By their very numbers they had blocked a mile-long funeral cortege and prevented the holding of a church service.

Strong men of many races wept as they formed in line with their employers and walked slowly past the casket of the dead newsboy. Their wives and children were with them and many stretched forth their hands in an effort to express their reverence by offering money for the erection of a monument.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Mrs. Keziah Coffin, supposed widow, is arranging to move from Trumet to Boston, following the death of her brother, for whom she had kept house. Grace Van Horne, ward of Capt. Eben Hammond, leader of the "Come-outer" religious sect, offers to assist her financially if she will remain. She declines. Kyan Pepper, widower, offers marriage, and is indignantly refused.

CHAPTER II—Capt. Elkanah Daniels, leader of the Regular church, offers Keziah a place as housekeeper for the new minister, and she decides to remain in Trumet.

CHAPTER III—Keziah takes charge of Rev. John Ellery, the new minister, and gives him advice as to his conduct toward members of the parish. Ellery causes a sensation by attending a "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER IV—Ellery's presence is bitterly resented by Eben Hammond, leader of the meeting. Grace apologizes for her guardian and Ellery escorts her home in the rain. Capt. Nat Hammond, Eben's son, becomes a hero by bringing the packet into port safely through fog and storm. Ellery finds Keziah writing a letter to some one, inclosing money in response to a demand. She is curiously startled when informed of the arrival of Nat.

CHAPTER V—Nat calls on Keziah, and it develops that they have been lovers since youth. Daniels remonstrates with Ellery for attending "Come-outer" meeting.

CHAPTER VI—Ellery is caught by the tide and is rescued by Nat. They become friends.

CHAPTER VII—Ellery meets Grace while walking in the fields Sunday, and learns that she walks there every Sunday.

CHAPTER VIII—The clergyman takes dinner Sundays with the Daniels. Annabel, the captain's daughter, exerts herself to make an impression on him. She notices with vexation his desire to get away every Sunday at a certain time. She watches him through a spy glass.

CHAPTER IX—Nat again importunes Keziah to marry him. He says he has had a quarrel with his father, who wants him to marry Grace.

CHAPTER X—Ellery asks Grace to marry him. She confesses that she loves him, but says she fears to displease her guardian, who has been very kind to her, and asks time to think about it. Elkanah Daniels tells Eben about the meetings between Ellery and Grace. Eben declares he will make Grace choose between him and the preacher. Grace finds him in a faint, following the excitement of Elkanah's visit.

CHAPTER XI—Just before he dies Eben exacts a promise from Nat and Grace that they will marry.

CHAPTER XII—Keziah breaks the news to Ellery and later he receives a note from Grace saying she is to marry Nat and asking him not to try to see her again. Keziah tells the story of her own marriage with a man who turned out to be a good-for-nothing, and who was reported to have been lost at sea, and of her love for Nat, whom she cannot marry because the husband is alive. Ellery sees in the story a lesson in devotion to duty and decides to remain and attend to his duties.

CHAPTER XIII—Captain Nat sails for Manila to be gone two years. He says he and Grace have decided not to marry until he returns.

CHAPTER XIV—Nat is overdue, and it is feared that he has been lost at sea. Keziah gets a letter from her husband saying he is coming back. Grace goes on a visit to relatives of the Hammonds.

CHAPTER XV—A vessel flying distress signals is discovered off the coast. Ellery goes with party to board the vessel. A man is found suffering from smallpox, the rest of the crew having deserted.

CHAPTER XVI—He is taken to an abandoned shack on shore and Ellery helps nurse him. Before he dies it is discovered that he is Keziah's husband. Ellery, left alone in quarantine, is found wandering in a delirious condition by Grace. She takes him back to the shanty and sends for help.

CHAPTER XVII—Keziah and Grace nurse Ellery, who is suffering from brain fever. The doctor and Keziah spread a report that Grace and Ellery are engaged. News comes that Nat has arrived safely in Boston.

CHAPTER XVIII—The story of the wreck of Nat's vessel comes out and a home-coming is arranged, but Nat fails to appear.

CHAPTER XIX—Keziah intercepts Nat on his homeward journey and tells him of Grace's love for Ellery. He releases Grace from her promise to him. Keziah gets delayed letter from her husband saying he will return soon, and not having yet heard of the identity of the smallpox victim, she leaves Trumet. Ellery tells Nat that the dead man was Keziah's husband.

CHAPTER XX—Nat goes to Boston, finds Keziah and brings her home.

(Concluded from last issue.)

They said it was the finest sermon ever preached in that church, and perhaps it was. When it was over before the benediction was pronounced, Ellery stepped out from behind the pulpit to the edge of the platform. He looked over the friendly faces upturned to his and, for an instant, it seemed that he could not trust himself to speak.

"My friends," he said, "I cannot let you go without a personal word. I owe you so much, all of you, that nothing I can say will convey to you my feeling of gratitude and love for this congregation and this church. You have stood by me all through. You trusted me and believed in me. I came to Trumet a stranger. I have found here the truest friends a man could hope to find—yes, and more than friends. If I live, and while I live, I shall hope to prove by the best effort that is in me my realization of the great debt I owe you and my desire to repay it, even though the payment must, of necessity, be so inadequate. God bless you all—and thank you."

There was much hand shaking and congratulation and the church emptied slowly. Among the last to leave were the Peppers and Mr. Pratt. Lavinia took the minister aside.

"Mr. Ellery," she simpered, "I've—that is, Caleb and me—will prob'ly want you to— That is, we want you to be the one——"

"Yes, Miss Pepper?"

"Oh, my sakes, you see— 'Bishy dear, come here a minute, won't you?"

Kyan approached the picture of desolation.

"What do you want?" he asked gruffly.

"Heavens to Betsy! Don't look so sour. A body'd think you was goin' to be hung, to look at you. 'Bishy, you tell Mr. Ellery all about it, there's a

"She's Goin' to Marry That!"

dear. He'll tell you, Mr. Ellery; and remember we count on you. Neither me nor Caleb won't have nobody else."

She seized Mr. Pratt by the arm and led him hastily away. Kyan looked after them.

"Hung?" he muttered. "I wish, by godfreys mighty, I had the hangin' of some folks! I'd put a tighter collar on 'em than they've got now, I bet you!"

The minister's lips twitched. He knew what was coming. Hints of a surprising nature had been circulating about Trumet.

"What's the matter, Mr. Pepper?" he asked.

"Matter? Matter enough! You know what she's goin' to do? She's goin' to marry that!"

The last word was emphasized by a furious gesticulation toward the back of the gentleman from Sandwich.

"Who? Mr. Pratt? Is your sister to marry him? Indeed! I congratulate them both—and you. I suppose Mr. Pratt will take his bride home to Sandwich, and you, being here alone, will be more free."

"Free?" Kyan repeated the word wrathfully. "Free! I'll be about as free as a settin' hen under a barrel, I will. Is a feller free when he's got two pickin' at him instead of one? I thought I was goin' to have a little peace and comfort; I thought that same as you, Mr. Ellery. I've had my suspicions as to her and him for some time. That day when I cal'lated I'd locked her up and come back to find she's gone buggy ridin', I thought 'twas queer. When she went to conference and left me alone I smelt a rat. When she took to letter writin' the smell got stronger; until the last few weeks I've been sartin of the game she was up to. When Laviny come to me and told me what she was goin' to do, was I obstinate? Did I stand on my rights as head of the family and tell her she couldn't do it? No, sir-ee, I didn't! I was resigned. 'Bless you, Laviny,' says I, 'When you goin' to go away?' And what do you s'pose she says to me? Why, that she wa'n't goin' away at all. That—that Pratt thing has sold out his shoe store up to Sandwich and is comin' here to live. Comin' to live at our house, mind you, with her and me! 'Twill be so nice for you, 'Bishy dear,' she says, 'to have a man in the house to keep you comp'ny and look out for you when I ain't round.' Godfreys mighty!"

This portion of Kyan's disclosure was surprising, if the announcement of his sister's engagement was not.

"Mr. Pratt is coming to Trumet?" the minister repeated. "What for? What is he going to do here.

"Keep shoe store, I s'pose likely. Laviny says there's a good openin' for one in this town. However, he and Laviny ain't got any mortgage on the marryin' business. Other folks can do it as well as them. What do you think of Hannah Poundberry?"

"What do I think of her? What do you mean?"

He turned away and moved sulkily toward his beckoning sister and her escort; but wheeled once more to add, in a mysterious whisper, "Don't you forget now, Mr. Ellery. Remember that question I put to you: 'What do you think of'—Yes, yes, Laviny, I hear you!—of you know who?'"

That evening, at the parsonage, Keziah was clearing the table and Captain Nat was helping her. A happy party of four had enjoyed the meal, John and Mrs. Coffin acting as hosts and Grace and the captain being the invited guests. Now the younger couple had gone over to the church, the bell of which was ringing for evening service.

"Hurry up, Keziah," urged Nat. "If you and me don't get decks cleared pretty soon we'll be late for meetin', and I'd hate to do that, considerin' I'm such a brand-new disciple, as you might say."

He walked to the back door of the kitchen, threw it open, and stood looking out.

"Keziah," he said, "come here a minute."

She came from the dining room and stood at his side. He put an arm about her.

"Look off there," he said, pointing with his free hand. "See that?"

The sun was just setting and all the west was gorgeous with crimson and purple and yellow. The bay was spangled with fire, the high sand bluffs along the shore looked like broken golden ingots. They were to be married in another month. It would be a double wedding, for Grace and the minister were to be married at the same time. Then Nat and his wife were to go to New York, where a new ship, just out of the builders' hands, was to be ready for him. She was a fine one, this successor to the Sea Mist. She had been building for more than a year and when Captain Hammond returned, safe and sound, and with their money in his possession, the owners decided at once that he should command the addition to their fleet. She was to sail for Liverpool and Keziah was to be a passenger.

"I can't hardly wait to get to sea," went on Nat. "Think of it! No more lonesome meals in the cabin, thinkin' about you and about home. No, sir! you and home'll be right aboard with me. Think of the fun we'll have in the foreign ports. I ain't rich enough to give you what you deserve, nowhere near; but I'll work hard and do my best, my girl—you see."

Keziah was looking out over the bay, her eyes brighter than the sunset. Now she turned to look up into his face.

"Rich!" she repeated, with a little catch in her voice. "Rich! there never was a woman in this world so rich as I am this minute. Or so happy either."

THE END.

GETS $25,000,000 BALANCE OF ESTATE

Alfred G. Vanderbilt Comes Into Full Possession

New York, Oct. 21.—Under the will of the late Cornelius Vanderbilt, his son, Alfred G. Vanderbilt, has come into full possession of the last half of the residuary estate left by his father, which amounts to $25,000,000.

The will provided that Alfred G. Vanderbilt should not take full possession of all the wealth which his father bequeathed to him until he was 35 years old. Yesterday was the thirty-fifth anniversary of Vanderbilt's birth, and, in compliance with the will, the executors who have held the great estate in trust for him, turned all the property over to him.

Until he was 30 years old only the income of his estate was paid to Vanderbilt under the terms of the will, which provided that not until he was 30 should the first half of the residuary estate be placed unreservedly in his possession.

Vanderbilt has twice been married. His first wife was Miss Elsie French, who obtained a divorce in 1908. Two years later he married Mrs. Margaret E. McKim. A month ago a son was born to them, and this son will eventually share in his father's great estate with Vanderbilt's son by his first wife, now in the custody of his mother.

NURSE'S FATAL ERROR

Gives Patient Acid by Mistake and Becomes Seriously Affected

Yonkers, N. Y., Oct. 21.—As the result of administering a dose of acid in mistake for salts to Mrs. Alice Haight in the Yonkers Homeopathic hospital early Sunday, causing the patient's death, Florence Harris, a nurse at the institution, became so unnerved that she was unconscious all day. Physicians have been unable to arouse her and they are greatly puzzled over her case.

The husband of the dead woman has asked the police not to make any charge against the nurse, as he is satisfied it was through no fault of hers that the poison was administered.

Do the right thing at the right time.

Plenty of evidence of their worth.

Mrs. Ellen Lawler, 51 Meridian St., East Boston, Mass., says: "I praise Doan's Kidney Pills just as highly today as I did some years ago when I gave a public statement in their favor. The cure this remedy effected has been permanent. The principal symptom of kidney complaint in my case was a dull, heavy ache in my hips and back, often accompanied by pains in my loins. I became dizzy when I stooped and lost my strength and ambition. My entire system was run down and I did not know what to do for relief. Finally I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills and it was not long before they restored me to good health."

"When your back is lame—remember the name." Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Lawler had. 50c all stores. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL.

The message of the Sunday morning service at the Wollaston Congregational church struck its usual comforting notes of faith and optimism. Dr. Sneath's theme was "The Father we want to see."

"In all ages," said Dr. Sneath "there has been a great desire to know—to—see—the great Heart of the Universe. What kind of a Father is it that this age desires to see?" In answering this question he mentioned four qualities that the yearning heart of humanity in this age demands in its God: sinlessness, loving kindness, sympathy, and a spirit with which the human spirit may commune. "The vision of a sinless Father has come to us just once—in Jesus Christ. The selfishness and hate in the world cause the yearning for a loving father This vision also has come in Jesus Christ." Dr. Sneath instanced the belief of Henry Drummond that God s made manifest in nature. "Is it not possible that we inject God into nature by means of our knowledge of Him through Jesus Christ? Whether his be true or not, it is true that we have the manifestation in Christ; and the more we catch this vision, the more we become like him." In elaborating the fourth division of his heme he said that living as we do in a time when, amid all the hurry and stir of our daily life, the heart seems often alone, we feel the need of someone to whom we can go in thoughtful communion. God is the only friend that "sticketh closer than a brother;" the only one in whom we find "optimism without frivolity and seriousness without despair." "If we have had a vision of Jesus Christ in his true life and character, we have had a vision of God. We can come no nearer to Him than Jesus takes us."

A feature of the service was a most illuminating account of the history and present situation of the Quincy Hospital, a campaign for support of which is to be made this week. The account was given, at the invitation of the pastor, by N. G. Nickerson, treasurer of the hospital. His statement and appeal were made in a most interesting and forceful way.

The music of the morning consisted of two anthems—"Oh, be joyful in the Lord" and "Saviour, when the night involves the skies," beautifully rendered by the choir, and a tenor solo, "Alone with Thee" by Mr. Spooner.

The usual session of the Sunday school was held at the close of the service, the primary department with Mrs. C. A. Hutchins as leader, and the general school with C. A. Randall, Superintendent.

The Christian Endeavor meeting in the evening was led by Miss Mary Broughton, the topic being "Christian Sociability."

CAPITALISTS RESPONSIBLE

For the Present Conditions is the Claim of Brennan

AT SOCIALIST LABOR RALLY

The Socialist Labor Rally in Electa hall Sunday evening was well attended. The main speakers Thomas Brennan who spoke on "The elimination of the present industrial wage system" Patrick Mulligan of Salem spoke on his candidacy for governor. John Sweeney of Boston presided.

Mr. Brennan said that the Socialists Labor party believed in acquiring their demands through the intelligent voting of the working class. The party was opposed to the I. W. W. which organization according to Mr. Brennan was headed by undesirable citizens who did not believe in the ballot.

The Socialist Labor party was a political, as well as an industrial propoganda, and one must be advanced with the aid of the other.

The present industrial systems put the management of industry under the direction and absolute control of capitalist corporations, trusts and private proprietors, because under this system the workers are an unrecognized peoples. He claimed the workman has no vote in the election of the industrial officers or in the control of the industrial policy.

He laid the present conditions at the door of the capitalists and said the movement was for an overthrow of the present capatilistic industrial system and the establishing of a system of industrial administration representative of the workers industrially organized.

The tenets of the party, denies to non-producers the right to voice or vote in matters of wealth production end that they demand democratic industrial self-government for the producers, admitting that brain workers and hard workers should be active participants in the enfranchisement.

WOOD THERE WITH THE PUNCH

In the Football Game Knocked Out a Soldier

THE CONTEST A FAST ONE

Quincy A. A. beat Fort Strong at Merrymount Park Saturday afternoon in one of the fastest football games ever seen in the city. McDonald kicked a goal and Hunter skirted on a forward pass for uincy's 10 points. Fort Strongs only touchdown was made by Capt. Sterner, who also kicked the goal.

During the second period, one of the soldier boys tossed Wood after the whistle blew in rather a rough manner and Capt Wood pasted him on the jaw and he took the count. Both were put out for the rest of the period by referee Manning, and Wood was permitted to re-enter the game in the third.

MscDonald's drop was a surprise to the visitors who expected a punt. The ball was kicked from the 40 yard line and sailed over the bar with extra length.

During the third period the Quincy A. A. assumed the offensive and an end run by Hunter and Boyle, and a criss cross by Matty Cummings, the ball was steadily advanced towards the soldiers line. A forward pass to Hunter netted Quincy a touchdown.

Capt. Wood crossed the line in the third period but referee Manning brought the ball back to the 40 yard line, claiming Wood had been pushed between the posts.

Harkins at centre plays a strong game on the line plunging did wonderful work in smashing through.

The Fort Strong eleven is composed of young men who are built for speed and strength and Captain Sterner according, to all the Quincy boys is one of the fastest backs in New England.

Sterner said he would like to arrange a scrimmage at the fort for next Sunday. In all probability Manager Flynn will close the offer.

CHARGES "SYSTEM" IS BACKING BECKER

Whitman Hears Policemen Testify For the Defense

New York, Oct. 21.—Two members of the police force came to the aid of Police Lieutenant Becker in his trial for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, giving District Attorney Whitman opportunity to charge that the "system," whose workings were revealed following the Rosenthal assassination, had come to the relief of the accused official.

The policemen were Lieutenant Patrick B. Shea and Joseph B. Shepard, a former member of the "strong arm" squad, whose testimony contradicted part of the stories of Jack Rose and Sam Schepps, two of the prosecution's important witnesses.

Hospital Campaign Fund Now in Full Swing with Favorable Outlook

Captains and Teams Lined Up In Battle For Humanity

The campaign is on. The citizens committee is now on the warpath after that $35,000 for the Quincy City hospital. Will they succeed? Well if you had any doubts on that subject you should have been at the Y. M. C. A. building, Monday night and listened to the singing and cheering of that enthusiastic group of community workers and any doubts which might have existed upon the subject would have been dispelled.

The session was short, snappy and to the point.

There was a little talking, a little singing, but plenty of sharp, snappy activity which pointed distinctly to the determination and temper of the crowd and if that thermometer on the Hancock building is not smashed to smithereens by the high tide wave of coin which will pour into the hospital coffers before the battle closes, Monday night, then it is the fault of the public in general and no blame can be attached to the committee.

Promptly at 6.30 o'clock, about 50 gentlemen sat down to dinner in the Y. M. C. A. banquet hall.

The feature of the gathering which stood out stronger than any other was that they attended to everything with business like celerity. While they were eating they attended to that.

A. FITCH BROMLEY,
General Secretary of Quincy Y. M. C.A Doing Great Work in Hospital Campaign.

While singing they vocalized with vengenance. When talking they devoted attention to that department and when it came to work they were determined and forceful in this branch of their enterprise. The result was that the meeting was concluded within an hour and the captains and their teams were speedily armed with the lists of people they were to see, and the campaign had opened.

Seated at the head table were George E. Pfaffmann, chairman of the committee, A. B. Franklin of Melrose who brought a word of the similar campaign in that city, Dr. John A. Gordon, Dr. John F. Welch and Fred B. Rice of the Board of trustees of the Quincy City hospital, and A. N. Murray, chairman of the publicity committee.

Chairman Pfaffman called meeting to order and explained the science of separating people from their money in this worthy cause. Mr. Franklin, Dr. Welch, F. A. Rice, A. N. Murray, and A. F. Bromley were the other speakers.

The singing was led by Thomas B. Pollard and J. A. Sedgwick. What the speakers had to say was to the point. Little time was wasted in fanciful oratory. It was a meeting bent on business and they went through it in jig time.

All struck a happy note. They all spoke of the benefits of the hospital and the need of it in a community and its claims for public support.

OLD PARTIES BOSS RIDDEN

The Claim of Candidate Bird Before Fore River Men

KINCAIDE FLAYED HARRIS

Charles S. Bird, the Progressive Party candidate for governor addressed about 800 men at the Fore River yard gates Monday evening as they were leaving their work. He spoke on the issues of his campaign and attacked both parties saying they were boss ridden.

CHARLES S. BIRD,
Progressive Candidate For Governor.

He favored the passage of a bill regulating and providing for old age pensions, saying that he had sometime ago started one at his paper mill at Walpole and that it was entirely of his own accord.

He favored a bill calling for six days work in seven and that if an industry was not good enough to allow their workmen the day of rest they were not good enough to do business in this state.

He advocated a minimum wage for women. He pointed out that women were working for $4 per week, some for $5 and that in the interests of them a bill to regulate their wages was one of the finest pieces of legislation that could be passed by the National house.

He was heart and soul in any movement to pass a national law which would forbid child labor and thereby end the moving of one industry from this state to another in order to escape any such regulation.

He favored the election of a Progressive ticket all through so that the governments would not be hampered in their executive functions by opposing legislative bodies.

He attacked the newspaper reports stating they were paid to misrepresent the Roosevelt principles and favored the direct election of United States senators.

Col. Henry L. Kincaide spoke on his campaign for congress and in a short snappy summary of Mr. Harris' record showed how the latter had opposed the workingmen. He read Harris record and said that if the people wanted a politician who was allied to any interest they should support the present congressman, but if they wanted a congressman who was fearless and aggressive then he expected their vote. He was roundly applauded.

Red Fire and a parade with a band escorted the "Old Boy," Governor Foss to the Democratic rally at Music Hall, Monday evening where he was hailed with cheers. The parade came down from South and West Quincy, with transparencies and a large American flag, and passed Alpha hall just after the Republicans had entered.

Another rally was held at Braintree and the speakers went back and forth. It was after 11 o'clock when the rally closed.

Alfred A. LaCroix introduced Hon. William T. Shea as the presiding officer. On the platform was Governor Foss, David I. Walsh, Edward Gilmore of Brockton, David B. Shaw of Charlestown, Dr. J. P. Ratigan of Hyde Park, Michael T. Sullivan, John J. McDevitt, Charles J. McGilvray, James M. Curley, all candidates and George H. Corliss. Mayor John F. Fitzgerald was unable to attend.

A notable feature was the applause given the speakers, particularly David I. Walsh, by the Progressive Party supporters who were in the audience. About 1200 attended the rally.

After the Republican rally had adjourned many went to Music Hall to listen to the Democratic orators.

Governor Foss said the people were looking to the Democratics for relief. "The Republicans had their opportunity. They promised a tariff reduction, to remove taxes from the poor man, to make a distribution of the advantages which come from the protection and that workingmen should share the benefits of the protective system. They are split in twain and going down in defeat.

"The issue is the tariff, the high cost of living. The necessities of life have increased and a removal of taxes would not hurt.'

"We do not stand for free trade but for revision. Our platform is constructive and progressive. It is a prosperous era. Since the 1907 panic which happened under Roosevelt, the country has progressed in anticipation of a Democratic victory.

"We do not say the high cost of living is due to the tariff. There are many causes, but the tariff plays an important part. We believe in removing the duties from the necessities and then from the raw material.

"This is an industrial city and state and we should safeguard and protect, strengthen and make it possible for us to compete here and abroad.

"Democrats will revise the tariff if manufacturers can show the necessity of it.

"Wilson and Marshall are to be elected. (applause.) In order to put the program into effect you must have a Democratic congress.

"I have been your governor for two years. The legislature has fought to a large degree my recommendations. I expect a Democratic house and you will give them to me. (applause).

LOUIS F. R. LANGELIER

Alpha hall was packed to and beyond the doors Monday night for the Republican rally. It was a very enthusiastic audience in which there were quite a number of ladies and the applause was frequent and spontaneous. There was but one discordant note and that was when one man, during the speaking of Guy A. Ham hissed twice. He did not have an opportunity to repeat his action for Constable Henry P. Furnald, who was on duty at the door grabbed the man and ejected him from the hall. Previous to the rally a drum corps marched from West Quincy to the Quincy depot to meet the speakers on their arrival and escorted them to Alpha hall, where for half an hour all were entertained by the Temple male quartette.

Louis F. R. Langelier President of the Republican City committee presided and after a few introductory remarks introduced as the first speaker Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge, the senior senator from Massachusetts Senator Lodge got a rousing reception. He began by saying that he was present to urge the election of President Taft, Mr. Harris for congressman, Joseph Walker for Governor, Robert Luce for Lieut. Gov. and the candidates for Senator and Representatives. The MUNSEY'S IDEA.

It can hardly be credited that Frank Munsey, a far seeing and successful business man, is correctly quoted when he is credited with a condemnation of the publicity of campaign expenses, either before or after election. Mr. Munsey is credited with reasoning that political campaigns are educational, that only rich men will finance them and as soon as the amounts of their gifts are made public they will stop contributing. But when he claims, or at least is said to claim that those men must be protected from the public scrutiny if the republic is not to go to ruin, he will find that he has struck a false note.

Lack of publicity, lack of interest on the part of voters have resulted in the enormous development of evils which are eating at the nations vitals far more destructive in their temper than any volume of campaign publicity could ever prove.

Laxity, a covering up of many things which should have been made public have been productive of the great unrest which has swept the country in the past few months, despite all plausible denials of such an existing condition which can be advanced.

When rich men finance a campaign or anything else, they are looking for returns upon their money. That they have received favors for their contributions is accepted by the most casual observer. The claim credited to Mr. Munsey is tantamount to a positive assertion, that to the rich alone belong the right, or at least power of conducting political campaigns and the sovereign people should know as little as possible about it. No more destructive doctrine to the peace and future of this republic could be adopted.

FREE SPEECH.

The right of free speech is accorded to every one as it should be. The trouble is that some people have no discriminating power between what is actually free speech and really a violation of the law. Free speech as we understand it does not accord any one the privilege of inciting to riot, murder or any other acts which come within the province of the laws of the land.

It is all very well for people exercising the right of free speech, to point existing evils and recommend a reasonable and legal remedy. But when they suggest as a remedy, breaking heads, shooting, emptying of the gunshops and the like they should be restrained. Some are clever enough to convey this purpose to an ignorant gathering, surrounded by such qualifying phrases that legally they are not trespassing, but the person out looking for trouble does not care to dissect the speeches thus delivered, so that they may get at the meaning of those fine points and the orator is usually well aware of it. Thus while the author and incitor of disturbance and riot is clearly within the law he has laid the seed on fertile soil, in his poor ignorant and misguided hearer and the deed is done. The purpose is accomplished and while the person who from education and ability is morally the offender, he is legally beyond apprehension and the poor deceived follower of his clever sophristry has to bear the burden which later comes to him. Leaders of any great cause should be temperate in their language in the first place and in the second place be so clear that there should be no misunderstanding their meaning with the usual unfortunate results. When the intent is criminal the incitor is far worse than the poor tool and a greater menace to society.

THE SCHOOL AND PARENT.

The new superintendent of the Boston schools, Mr. Dyer has struck a true note when he urges a close co-operation between the parents and the school. This cannot be attributed as entirely original with Mr. Dyer, still coming from one in his position it carries the weight which it deserves.

There is no question but what the parents should take a great interest in the schools as part of their natural concern for their children. Parents should impress this activity upon the children by the influence of their inquiry as to their studies and the progress they are making. The reports which parents receive from the teachers as to the standing and work of the children should be given scrutiny and attention. If the marks show to the discredit of the child, the parent should immediately take steps to understand the case. If it is due to neglect of school studies the scholar should be impressed with the importance of accepting all the advantages which an education affords.

While some of the young people may not grasp the importance of this in their youthful heedlessness and carelessness, it should be pointed out to them from the experience of others that when they grow older, they will have many an occasion on which they will regret this inattention to their studies. If on the other hand, the marks are low owing to the dullness of the pupil, other means must be provided to make up for the lack of capacity. In either case, by judicious and kindly interest in the school and the studies, the parent can aid the teachers and what is of course greater importance create a firmer and more lasting impression upon the scholar of the benefits to be derived from adequate appreciation of the educational facilities within their grasp.

DEMOCRATIC RALLY

Some say he speaks as if sure of re-election. I am going to be, (loud applause), and by a larger plurality than ever before (applause). The state ticket is going to be elected. Put "Dave" Walsh over the line. (Applause.)

"Our friends in Alpha hall have given up. (applause). They have lost all hope of carrying the state and they are trying to save the legislature.

"The council is a relic of the past. The people hold the governor responsible and ties his hands. We have one councellor out of eight. You do not appreciate what that means. They are eight little governors and are holding me down.

"You have an aggressive governor. We have been fighting and have accomplished something notwithstanding an adverse house and council. Think of the legislation we have put on the statute books under Democratic leadership."

Governor Foss reviewed his administration and then spoke of his public utilities bill which gives the railroad commission mandatory powers. He said "as long as I am Governor of the state I will be the master of the situation and no organization should exist except for the purpose of serving the public.

"I believe in competition and dry docks. Our proposed railroad regulation touches the people. We must give the power to the commission or create a public utilities board."

As Governor Foss left the band played "Hail to the Chief" and he was given one of the greatest ovations ever tendered an official in Quincy."

David I. Walsh was roundly cheered as he was introduced. He said that he was unfettered and no one had contributed to his campaign. "I am under no obligations to anyone," he said.

He asked his hearers to vote for the man who has the interest of the people at heart and to let the sound of the Democratic legislation ring with the voice of the people.

"We have a leader capable of serving the people," he said, "and he is fine, has made a great record, has defied the interests. He is a man among men."

He said he was glad John J. McDevitt favored elimination of party designation, that it was his desire to bring it about. "In '61," he said "we fought against the lash and the brand and won in '65 and we must do away with branding ourselves with a designation. No one but our God should know how we vote and Mr. Luce should be defeated for defending a bill which labels a voter.

"I cannot win this elimination alone I want to do this. I want the honor of handing down a legacy, to those who come after me, this reform. It is a declaration of political freedom. Rebuke Mr. Luce for placing it on our books." (applause).

Mr. Gilmore said that Mr. Harris practically endorsed Democratic principles when elected but had now joined the ranks of the standpatters. He reviewed his record and said "my answer to Congressman Harris is that I am proud to wear the collar of the people and if I am elected from one of the country's best districts I will go as a spokesman and representative of the people and not as a man who assists the money power by voting with them or ducking the roll call and not hearing the voice of the people.

Congressman James M. Curley said in part:

"We are informed that the crops this year are of greater value than ever before in the history of the Republic, amounting to somewhere in the vicinity of about nine billions of dollars. As has been the case in the past, the Republican party deny the right of even the Lord himself to receive any portion of the credit for this splendid agricultural prosperity. When an individual or a party assumes the responsibility for all good that occurs, it is difficult for them to deny the responsibility for evil that occurs. And in the light of the present and past history, the Republican party can find no method by which it is possible to evade that charge that they alone are responsible for the discontent and poverty that has made necessary the strikes in the highly protected textile industries of our country. They would have the people believe that the election of a Democratic President would result in the closing down of many industries, as it would be impossible for these industries to exist without a high protection tariff.

"I attended a year ago in this section of South Eastern Massachusetts the launching of the largest battleship that ever floated on the bosom of old mother ocean. And upon inquiry, I discovered that the contract for the building of the this ship had been a matter of open competition participated in by concerns representing 17 nations of the world. Not only did free trade England submit a proposal but nearly every nation in Europe as well. The contract however was awarded the Fore River Ship Building Co. This concern is one that enjoys no governmental subsidy or aid of any character. It is not conducted on a co-operative plan upon a charitable basis. It is conducted as our most American enterprises, purely with a view of dividends and of profit It may be contended by some that the purpose prompting the proposal submitted by this Company was the desire to hold together its working force or organization. But in view of the fact that this contract called for the building of the largest ship of its kind that had ever been constructed at any shipyard in this or any other country, this conclusion is not tenable, and the conclusion that the bid was made purely with a desire for profit is the only one we can accept "The ship was constructed for a sister republic, Argentina, South America. Every bolt was set in place by a highly skilled and well paid American mechanic. Every rivet was headed by the sturdy arm, assisted by the trained eye and intelligent mind of an American mechanic. And when on that beautiful day the word was given to clear the words, and the charming wife of the Argentine Minister pronounced the words, "I christen thee Rivadavia," and the great monster amid snapping hawsers and the cheering of the multitudes, proceeded on her way and floated proudly into Fore river, she became at once a monument of the most highly developed human intelligence the world has ever known, and who given free raw material can defy the competition in any part of the globe, the American mechanic.

The United States of America leads the world today in the manufacture of nearly every class of goods that requires inteligence and skill in the making. With a high tariff wall equivalent to a partly closed door to every nation of the world, your manufacturers here in Brocton, Abington, Whitman, Randolph, Rockland and the Braintrees, still continue to do a tremendous export business, and the French and English prefer the shoes you manufacture in this section.

"The Democratic party is opposed to the enactment of any legislation that would tend to destroy a single American industry or deprive a single American mechanic of a means of livelihood in this country.

The cost of living has advanced 60 per cent in the last 16 years of Republican rule, while wages have increased but about 15 per cent, and the increase has been largely as a result of sacrificing and suffering by that patient, perservering and patriotic body of men, The American Federation of Labor.

J. J. McDevitt, candidate for senator received a glad welcome and said that he was in the house of his friends.

He spoke on his issues as they have been presented in all parts of the district and told how he was working hard, working to go to the senate so that he could support the Democratic administration, help in the enactment of Democratic laws which were for the people and do all he could for the district he would represent.

Dr. J. P. Ratigan, candidate for councillor spoke briefly on his campaign and told of some of the power of the Governors council. He pledged himself to help Governor Foss who was to be reelected.

David B. Shaw spoke on the needs of the hour, claimed the young voter should vote the Democratic ticket, and concluded with a masterly tribute to the present executive, Governor Foss.

George H. Corliss, a former draughtsman at the Fore River yard and now president of a Wilson club, at Boston University was presented with a large bouquet as he commenced speaking. He reviewed the accomplishments of the Democratic party and defended the Cleveland administration from what he termed as unjust and prejudiced attacks.

That is the story in a nut shell, When the collectors get around the citizens will have a chance to do their part. That they will respond generously goes without saying.

The thermometer on the Hancock building will indicate the returns each day.

The captains of the teams are, Hon. W. T. Shea, Edward B. Marsh, Joseph A. Dasha, Charles W. Bailey, Richard H. Freeman, J. A. Sedgwick, W. F. Cummings, Alexander Clark, George J. Curran, Herbert S. Barker.

Mr. Franklin said Melrose had passed through just such a campaign, and despite the fact that the Y. M. C. A. had raised $45,000 and the Patriotic citizens $40,000 last year their hospital had been able to raise $125,000. Melrose had very few rich men. The largest subscription was $5000. This meant a per capita contribution of $9 for the city. In Quincy only $35,000 is asked which means a per capita contribution of about $1. The required $35,000 should be swelled to $45,000. You will do it if you put your heart in it. Nothing appeals so strongly to the people as a whole, as a hospital. You have no apology to offer for this work. Make your demands firmly and be sure and ask enough. It would be well for the solicitors to go around in pairs. No one can tell, just when they may need the hospital aid. My son-in-law, a great tall fellow, was one of the active workers in our campaign. He suggested that the hospital be equipped with a bed long enough to accommodate tall men. This was done and strange to say it was not long before he was called upon to test the capacity of that bed. See only the people assigned to you individually, do not go to see other people as this only leads to confusion and probable loss in the securing of funds. I know you will succeed and I feel sure that when the returns are in, the amount secured will far exceed that which you ask.

At the back of the speakers a blank sheet of paper was hung to the wall. After the opening when this blank sheet was removed, the following verses were revealed and at intervals they were sung with much vim to the tune, of "What's the matter with Father, He's all right."

What's, the matter with Pfaffmann
He's all right.
What's, the matter with Pfaffmann
Ain't he right?
For He's the man to stir up the crowd,
And soon of him we'll all be proud,
What's, the matter with Pfaffmann
He's all right.

What's the matter with Quincy, It's all right,
What's the matter with Quincy, It's all right,
What if our tax is high,
When everyone knows the reason why

CITY COUNCIL

$20,000 for Quincy's share of the repairs to the Fore River bridge was passed. One of the most important matters was the veto of the Mayor on the order amending the Auditors ordinance. The main objection to the proposed amendment was because the legislative body attempted to interfere with the executive power and because the duties fixed by the Charter were vested in the Auditor that rightfully belonged to the City Solicitor.

Councilmen Ericson and Sandberg were absent.

A communication was received from the Mayor returning without his approval Order No. 293 for the following reasons amending Ordinance No. 38, establishing a uniform system of auditing and accounting in the City of Quincy, for the following reasons:

1. Said order after stating the conditions under which the Auditor may approve accounts, claims, bills and pay-rolls against the City of Quincy, proceeds as follows:

"But no such account, claim, bill or pay-roll shall be approved by the City Auditor if at the time the indebtedness is contracted the unexpended balance of the appropriation to which it is chargable IS IN EXCESS of all prior orders not paid and other indebtedness chargeable against it."

I do not understand what is meant by this limitation to the authority of the Auditor to approve such accounts etc. Clearly, the unexpended balance of the appropriation against such accounts, etc., are chargable should BE IN EXCESS of all prior orders and indebtedness charged against it before the Auditor approved them.

I think there must be some mistake in the wording of this portion of the proposed amendment.

2. The order proposes to amend Section No. 7 of said Ordinance by adding at the end thereof the following:

(a) "All supplies and materials of every description purchased by any department, board, officer or by the Mayor shall be so purchased only on written order of such department, board or officer or the Mayor, which order shall be made in triplicate on printed blanks in a form approved by the City Auditor, one copy to be delivered to the dealer furnishing such supplies or materials one copy to be retained by the department, board, officer or Mayor and the third to be transmitted forthwith to the City Auditor."

(b) "No terms of such written contract shall be waived or altered in any way, unless the approval of the City Council shall previously have been secured."

In my opinion these portions of the proposed amendment, in so far as they undertake to direct the department officials as to the manner in which they shall perform their respective duties is in violation of the following provisions of Section 38 of the City Charter.

"The..... administrative officers and boards shall in their respective departments, make all necessary contracts for work, and for the furnishing of materials and supplies for the city and for the construction, alteration, repair and care of all public works, institutions, buildings and other property; and shall have, subject to the Mayor, the direction and control of all the executive and administrative business of the city. They shall be at all times accountable to the Mayor, as the Chief Executive officer, for the proper discharge of their duties." and also of the following provision of Section 2 of said Charter.

"The Executive department shall never exercise any legislative power,

GAVE $450,000 TO DEMOCRATS

Ryan Liberal in 1904, Although Against Parker

DESIRED TO SAVE THE PARTY

Cleaned Up All Its Debts at Close of Campaign—Perkins Pays Respects to Hilles and Penrose—Uses Harsh Language in Denial of Underwriting Roosevelt Campaign

Washington, Oct. 22.—Two millionaires, George W. Perkins and Thomas F. Ryan, disclosed to the Clapp committee how they loosened their purses in political campaigns. Perkins said his total contributions to Colonel Roosevelt's cause last spring were only $123,000, despite rumors that he had given millions.

Thomas F. Ryan admitted giving $450,000 to the Democrats in 1904, and said that he gave between $70,000 and $80,000 this year to Governor Harmon's war chest, and $35,000 to Representative Underwood's campaign.

Perkins indignantly denied that either the steel or harvester trust was backing Roosevelt. He branded such statements flatly and squarely as "he's made out of whole cloth." He demanded that Chairman Hilles of the Republican national committee and Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania be called before the committee to produce proof to substantiate such charges.

Ryan's testimony was remarkable in that he said he was against Judge Parker in 1904 and yet gave $150,000 to the campaign, and $300,000 more at its close, paying up every debt of the party to "keep it from disintegration and disgrace."

"I know very little about the 1904 campaign, except my own contribution," said Ryan. "Judge Parker's friends came to me when I was at the St. Louis convention before the candidate was nominated, but I was for Senator Gorman of Maryland. I took no part, and made no promise to furnish funds in the campaign. Afterward I made a contribution of $50,000. Later I contributed in smaller amounts up to $100,000.

"Towards the end, the national committee told me the Parker campaign would collapse unless they had more money. I decided to give further financial aid. Just before the close, for the party workers, I contributed in the neighborhood of $300,000 and paid the debts of the election. So that at the end of the campaign every debt of the party was paid. I did that because I didn't want to see the party disintegrated and disgraced because of the debts it had incurred.

"Every dollar of the $450,000 contribution was made by myself," said the millionaire emphatically, answering Senator Clapp's question as to whether the money was given as an individual or as representing any corporation or firm. "Not a dollar came from any corporation or other interest. I gave it all myself."

George W. Perkins denounced as an "unmitagated falsehood the charge that he had underwritten the Roosevelt preconvention campaign this year in the sum of $3,000,000. Rising from the witness chair before the Clapp committee and shaking a clenched fists, Perkins shouted:

"Among the long list of unmitigated lies throughout this campaign that statement perhaps ought to be placed at the top, because it is largest. I was in hope that Senator Penrose would be here. He made that statemen on the floor of the senate and he ought to be required to prove it, or, like a gentleman, he ought to take it back. There is not a scintilla of truth in it, from A to Z."

Mr. Perkins protested that he had been "villified" as no other man had been and he insisted that the committee require his accusers to prove their charges.

Senator Clapp replied that the committee had no means of doing that.

"If I were president and a subordinate should make such a charge as Mr. Hilles has made I should make him prove it or dismiss him from office," replied Perkins, still standing and shaking his hand violently.

REPUBLICAN RALLY

Republican party has always stood for good government, which he did not think would be received from the Democrats. Continuing he said:

"I should oppose the election of any Democrat as Senator from Massachusetts because I differ from them on great questions of public policy.

"There are men, however, in the Democratic party who would as men be a credit to the State—Richard Olney, William A. Gaston, Charles S. Hamlin and John R. Thayer. Any one of these men, I think, should be opposed on grounds of public policy, but they would be personally a credit to the State.

"But you know and I know that not one of those men or any man like them has the slightest chance of being selected by a Democratic caucus if the Legislature should be controlled by that party. Men of that type would have no more chance than I would have in a Democratic caucus, and I cannot put it any more strongly than that.

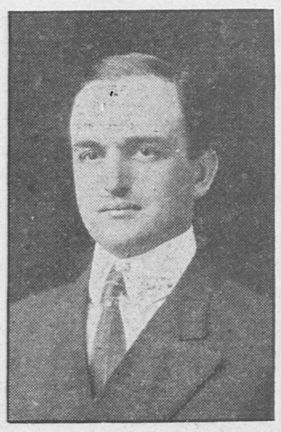
HON. ROBERT LUCE.

"It is for that reason that I appeal to good citizens who have the honor and welfare of the State at heart without distinction of party to see to it that there is not fastened on the State for six years any man to whose name our children and our children's children would wish to close their eyes when they read the history of the times.

"Not only do I want to see the Legislature Republican, but I want to see Massachusetts have good government. I do not think it will receive that from the House of Representatives organized by the Democratic city machine of Boston."

Speaking on the tariff, Senator Lodge said:

"If there is any town in the United States which should adhere to the protective tariff it is this town of Quincy You are greatly interested here in a great shipyard. The democrats forced upon the Panama bill a provision for free ships, so that we now can buy our ships for foreign trade built in foreign yards by foreign labor.



REP. ROGER WOLCOTT.

"They tried to extend it to the coastwise trade, but that was beaten with some difficulty in the Senate."

He also spoke at length on the Constitution of the United States and how the Democrats proposed to take away from that Constitution the checks and limitations which secured for every man his rights. He also touched upon the recall of judicial dicisions. In closing he said that he stood for the Constitution of the United States which Washington framed and which Lincoln preserved.

Congressman Robert O. Harris spoke largely on the tariff question and how it affected the two great industries of Quincy, the Granite and Ship Building industries. He had for a year and a half had an opportunity to get a close view of a Democratic congress and seen a Democratic congress in action. He also spoke of how the Democrats felt toward the industries of New England which they believed had been too prosperous. He was not for a free tariff but for a tariff that protected intelligent labor. He then spoke of the Panama canal how, when the eyes of the world were on this great undertaking and foreign nations were preparing to take advantage of it, along came the Democrats and put something in the bill which would allow foreign built ships to be admitted free to American registration. "I did not vote for that bill" said the speaker. This country has got to be prepared for trouble. To take care of people engaged in our industries and who find all progress in the Republican party and he could see no reason or sense in changing at this time. The speaker then told how the tariff on shoes had built up the city of Brockton for from a small city to a city of over 60,000 people.

Joseph Walker the Republican candidate for Governor received a rousing reception. He said in part:

"I believe that wage workers have a right to organize for a legitimate purpose, namely, to protect or raise the wage scale and to maintain or improve conditions of labor.

"This is my opinion in a legimate way for American working men and women to protect their interests and to raise the American standard of living.

Like every good citizen I deplore lawlessness and violence. I admire the patriotism recently displayed by the citizens of Lawrence.

"We must take to heart, however, the lessons taught at Lawrence, first: the danger of a sub-normal wage scale, a wage scale which does not permit the American standard of living, and second: the fact that responsible trade unions when led by honest law abiding men, are a conservative influence in the community and should be encourage.

"In all fairness let me ask whether Massachusetts, during the last fifty years, under the Republican party, has not been truly progressive. It has blazed the way in the great progressive movement for the control and regulation of public service and other corporations. Its Railroad Commission was established 44 years ago, way back in 1869.

"The great progressive movement to protect the food supply of the people was begun here in Massachusetts, 30 years ago. In this movement Massachusetts in still a leader.

"Last year the Legislature passed an amendment to the Constitution of Massachusetts empowering the Legislature to submit to the people by referendum any measure it sees fit.

This year we established a Minimum Wage Commission. We have a Bureau of Labor and Industry to insure the enforcement of labor laws, to furnish proper inspection, to investigate labor conditions and to suggest further legislation. We stand ready to pass laws to safeguard workers against occupational disease and danger.

"Now my friends, Massachusetts is truly progressive. The difficulty lies in another direction. We must recognize the hard fact that the industries of this Commonwealth are in direct competition with those of her sister states.

"We must remember that the legislature cannot give employment nor pay wages. Good wages and steady employment can come only from prosperous concerns doing a good business all the year round. If, therefore, we get too far ahead of our sister States; if we so handicap our industries as to check their development, prevent their prosperity, and thus lesson their power to give employment and pay wages, then we injure the very people whom we are seeking to help."

Lieut. Gov. Robert Luce who followed defended his action during the strike of the L not to allow the strikers to invade the State House, while he was acting Governor. He said that he had informed Mr. Fay that he was willing to receive a committee but when he announced that a crowd of 3,000 was to invade the corridors of the state house he refused to allow them. He believed that he was right in so doing and that if a similar occasion should again arise he would do the same thing. With a crowd of that size invading the corridors, in which there were always many people, there is no knowing what damage might result and he believed that any man could not have done otherwise had they been in his place. "I have been accused of being a friend of the corporations" said the speaker, "but if the corporations ever had a thorn in the flesh I was that thorn."

He spoke of the progressive legislation that had been enacted in Massachusetts and said that today many of the Massachusetts acts were being copied by other states. In every movement of progress the old state of Massachusetts had been a leader. All of the things advocated by the Progressives had already been enacted in Massachusetts. His opponent Mr. Bird is going about the state advocating measures which he personally had presented more than five years ago.

He then spoke of the bill in the last legislature to place the control of the telephone in the gas and electric light commission which measure had been worked for and advocated by both Representatives Piper and Leslie. Yet because the bill did not go far enough these men must be expelled from office.

Hon. Guy A. Ham said he appeared as candidate for your Councillor yet he could not say that the cost of living would be lowered if he was elected or there would be a dire calamity if he was defeated. Gov. Foss had recently been accused on the platform of appointing too many Republicans to office and had replied that the reason was that his council was composed of Republicans and would confirm no one but Republican appointments. "I can assure you that if elected only efficient men who are appointed to office, men who are honest and the public respect will receive endorsement."

The Progressive party means to place the control of the state in the hands of the Democrats. The chairman of the Democratic city committee told the Progressives if they could not get enough signatures to their papers he would furnish names enough. Even in your own city we find a Democratic candidate for Senator signing the papers of a Progressive candidate for the legislature. It is a scheme to turn the control of the state over to the Democrats and with the present men in charge of the Democratic party in Boston he did not want to see that happen.

The last speaker was Roger Wolcott candidate for senator from this district. He spoke briefly, of the three issues which he had advocated. The first was the compulsory electrification of all steam railroads, the second the taking of Quincy and Milton out of a Democratic congressional district where they would never have an opportunity to have a candidate and placing Quincy in a Republican district now so ably represented by Robert O. Harris. The third was the entrance of the Grand Trunk railroad into Boston. In the city of Boston the dockage front was practically all gone. The railroad must have dockage and with an unsurpassed water front like here in Quincy it is natural that the Grand Trunk will eventually turn to Quincy for its docking privilege. He therefore believed that Quincy would be benefited by the entrance of the Grand Trunk into Boston. In closing he asked the support of the voters.

The meeting closed with three cheers for President Taft and the Republican candidates.

THE HANDWRITING ON THE WALL

The Case of the Anonymous Letter Writer of Philadelphia

The reason for the prevalence of the anonymous letter writing evil is because of the apparent safety of the person guilty of this nuisance. A man of the anonymous letter writing type has an enemy. He is afraid to face him in the open, but he wants to hurt him. What easier or what more safe—apparently—than to write an unsigned letter containing information, alleged or real, or slander, which is certain to cause the assailed person harm, or at least considerable annoyance?

There is a certain type of cowardly person to whom the anonymous letter appeals as does the vengeful stiletto to the vicious blackhand criminal. It is a means to harm, and—apparently—a safe one. What easier than to write a few lines in a disguised hand? Or on a typewriter? How can anybody trace a letter prepared in such a way and dropped in the mail box by stealth and in the dark of night? True, admits the letter writer to himself—or herself, for women are numerous among this element, such letters have been traced and their authors caught. But, reasons the intending writer, they did not take the necessary precautions to hide their tracks. It looks like a cinch. It looks safe. But— it isn't.

Any crime or misdemeanor that will place in the hands of a trained detective a piece of writing, pen or typewriter, or a piece of printing, or, in fact, any physical trace of a person's expression, is the least safe sort of wrong-doing in the world. No sort of wrong-doing is safe, of course, but the kind that leaves a trace of a person's identity in the hands of the men who get on the track is the kind most certain to be run down eventually.

This does not mean that it usually is a cinch for the detective to run down the average anonymous letter writer.

On the contrary it is usually very hard, for the wrong-doer invariably has taken a multitude of precautions to throw his followers off the track But the point is that the detective has in the letter a tangible clue to follow, and in the end it is practically certain that the writer will be caught.

My first experience with an anonymous letter writer came about in queer fashion. One day a young man, who looked the part of the bookkeeper that we afterwards found him to be, came into the New York office of the Burns agency and planked down three anonymous letters that he had received during the past few weeks. Here is one of them that gives the gist of the three missives:

"Dear Sir:

"You will never know who this letter comes from, but you may be assured that it is from a friend. You have a friend named Carlin, who is treasurer for the Blank Heating company. If you will spend more time in Carlin's company we will reward you in a manner that will surprise you, on the condition that you let no one know that you ever received this letter. Especially do not let Carlin know."

The name of the man who brought the letters in was Blake. He had come to us for advice.

"We aren't giving away advice," said the office manager. "If you want us to find who wrote those letters to you and why they were written, we'll be glad to give you a man for $8 a day and expenses. It may take some time to find the writer, so your bill probably would run up pretty high."

"Oh, I couldn't afford to hire a detective," said Blake.

"I thought not," said the manager. And there the case ended for the time being.

Three months later, almost to a day, we got a call from a business house in a large nearby city to send a man over there at once. I happened to get the case. I found my people to be the Continental Heating company. The name of the general manager was Haney. I didn't like him from the start.

"Mr. Cornell," said Haney, when I had introduced myself, "I'm glad to see you, glad to see you, indeed. We've got a little matter here in this office, a queer matter, that we can't quite understand. We thought we had better have a detective in to look the thing over."

"What is it?" I asked.

For answer he turned to his desk and drew out three letters and handed them to me.

"Those letters, Mr. Cornell, have been received in this office in the last two weeks," said Haney. "Take a good look at them."

I did. The letters were simply addressed "Dear Sir," without the name of the firm being mentioned. They were all about in the same tone. Here is a sample:

"Dear Sir:

"You are trying to land the contract for heating the five new school buildings. We know all about it. You have made the lowest bid. You don't know that, because you're on the outside. We know, because we're on the inside. Yes, your bid is the lowest that has been turned in. We don't mind telling you that. It won't do you any good. You think that will land you the contract. Well, we don't mind telling you that it won't. The figures in the bids don't settle this contract by a long sight. We settle it. You know who we are. Now, the reason we write this to you is this: Come across.

"That's what will land you this contract, if you do land it. Come across. Come across strong. Show us that you're right, and we'll show you that we're right. Show us that you're not right and—good-by contract for you. You know who we are and you know how to get to us."

The letter ended abruptly. It wasn't signed. The other letters ran along in about the same strain, the third one being much in the nature of a threat, and assuring the firm that it had no chance in the world of landing this heating contract that it wanted so badly unless it began to show that "it was right" within the next week.

"I got that last letter yesterday," said Haney. "That week will be gone in five days. And we certainly do want that contract."

"Do you know who wrote the letters?" I asked, bluntly.

He looked at me in amazement.

"Know?" he said. "What do you think I am?" Do you suppose I'd be paying your agency $8 a day and expenses if I knew who wrote those letters?"

"Hardly," I said. "Do you know who is responsible for their being written?"

Haney looked at me a little longer this time without speaking.

"No," he said. "No."

"But you could make a pretty close guess, couldn't you?" I went on.

"Yes," he said, "I could."

"Sure," I said. "There wouldn't be any sense to these fellows writing the letters if you couldn't. I suppose it's a bunch of grafting politicians who are trying to hold you up, isn't it?"

He gave me a look which was an undisguised attempt to read my thoughts.

"Yes," he said, "that's what we think, of course. That is what I and Mr. Garver, the president of the company, have agreed upon as the truth."

"Garver?" I said. "I haven't met him yet, have I?"

"Mr. Garver is president and owner of this company," said Haney. "He's an old man. I attend to all this sort of business."

"Doesn't he want to be in on this conference?" I said.

"No," said Haney.

I thought it over a little.

"Well," I said. "I want him to be here."

"What?" Haney began to get a little mad.

"It's a rule of our office," I explained.

Haney leaned back, mollified.

"Oh," he said, "if that's the case, all right. Mr. Garver doesn't like to trouble with such details, but if you insist—"

"I do."

"Then we can go into his private office."

We went in. Garver was an old man, as Haney had said. He was over seventy and was in poor health. His mind was quite as clear as it should be, but as I saw him and Haney together the contrast struck me too forcibly to be lost. Garver was the fine type of honorable business man who has built up his success by virtue of the excellence of his products and square dealing, and who was more frequently met a couple of decades ago than in this age. Haney was the type who forces his way to the top by bulldozing and unscrupulous conduct. Garver would rather lose business than sacrifice his self respect by a dishonorable action. Haney would get the money anyway so long as he could keep out of jail.

"Well, Mr. Cornell," said Garver courteously, "it looks as if the Continental Heating company would have to resort to bribery to get a much-desired contract, doesn't it? I dislike to do it, very much, but it is extremely necessary that we get this school contract. I am sorry to have to pay a bribe to unscrupulous politicians. I would not do so except to beat a company that wants to put an inferior heating plant into our schools. I have a large amount of pride in my own city, Mr. Cornell, and I want to get my heating plant—which is a good honest one—into the schools. I am afraid we will have to appease certain politicians with a good-sized bribe before this can be accomplished."

"Oh, I guess not," I said. "We'll get this letter writer for you after that your politicians won't bother you."

Garver smiled.

"I admire confidence, Mr. Cornell," he said. "But Mr. Haney informs me that this thing is sewed up too close for comfort. The local ring already is negotiating with the Blank Heating Company of New York. Mr. Haney has had their treasurer, Mr. Carlin, watched, and a certain young man named Blake, who is a clerk in the New York office of one of our local politicians, has been with him constantly. They are the people who want to put the inferior plant in our schools, and through this envoy the politicians are in close touch with them. Isn't that the situation, Mr. Haney?"

"Yes sir," said Haney. "This young fellow has been hanging around Carlin for the last few weeks, so it's a cinch they've got something framed up. The politicians are trying to make us overbid the other people's bribe."

"How much will the bribe be?" I asked.

"Mr. Haney informs me that it will take $10,000," replied Garver.

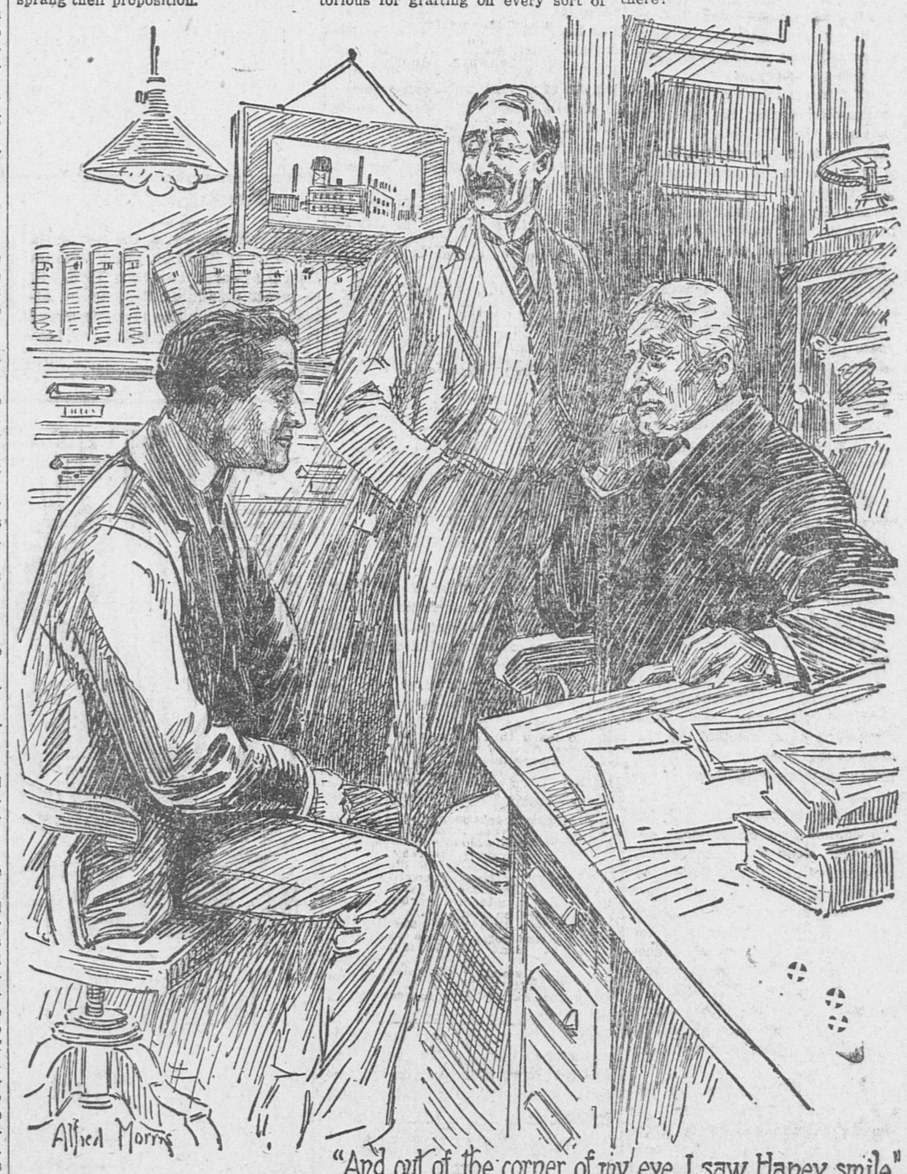
("Oh!" said I to myself. "Mr. Haney informs you, does he? I begin to see a little ray of light.")

"I still say," said I to Garver, "that we will have your letter writer in a few days and that you won't have to bribe your politicians."

And out of the corner of my eye I saw Haney smile.

The next two days were busy ones for me and for Cluffer and Doheny of the Burns agency staff. I went back to New York; Cluffer and Doheny on my wired request came rushing to the place I had been working. Cluffer knew the ins and outs of the political ring in that city like a book. He had worked on a couple of city hall cases there. Doheny had been brought up in the town and was chummy with half a dozen of the most powerful politicians of the lower class, the kind who would be in on such a deal as the school heating contracts.

For two days Cluffer and Doheny combed the political corners of the town. They smoked and drank and chummed with everybody they needed in their business, from the king of the levee district, who was the biggest politician there, to the little hangers-on of husky ward-heelers. Then they sprang their proposition.



"And out of the corner of my eye I saw Haney smile"

"We've got a cheap heating proposition we want to get into the schools," Cluffer told the big politician. "We know that we can't compete with the other firms that are bidding on the jobs; our plant won't stand competition—it isn't in their class. But we're right. Understand? We're ready to come through big on this proposition. You and your friends can get as nice a piece of change as you've seen in a dog's age if you'll see that we get that contract, and nothing said about the kind of plants we put in."

The big fellow crossed his hands over his stomach and said:

"Now, I tell you, me boy, it's like this about those school contracts. We've made it a habit here—me and the other fellows who control the votes—to have our finger in every bit of city money that's been spent for the last ten years. We've been in on it all. But about this school business, y' know, we got to thinking about it and the first thing we knew we discovered that the health of the little kids who go to school depends a whole lot upon the heating and ventilation system that goes into the rooms. They get all sorts of things the matter with them if the heat ain't right in the winter time. The air gets bad, as I understand.

"Now, as I say, we've been in on every piece of city money that's been spent; but about this one—well, some of us have got kids of our own, and we says, says we: 'Let's let the kids get decent air and heat;' and we said: 'Hands off the heating contracts. Let the people with the best plant get the job, and nothing doing for us.' I'm sorry, but we've decided to let that job go clean."

Cluffer wired me in New York what he had found. It was what I had hoped and expected, because my theory pointed that way.

In the meantime I had gone straight to Blake. He had seen me in the office when he came in with his anonymous letters three months before.

"Are you getting any of those letters nowadays?" I said.

He was fidgety, and he lied and said, no.

"Then why are you associating with Carlin so much lately?" I asked.

"How do you know I am?" he demanded.

"The man who wrote you the letters told me so," I said.

His curiosity overcame him.

"Who is he?" he said. "Do you know, I'm worried half to death over the thing. It's perfectly crazy to me. Here a month ago the letters began coming again, and a twenty-dollar bill in each one, and a promise that they'd continue if I'd only hang around Carlin a lot. 'Let yourself be seen with him,' was the expression. What in the deuce does it mean?"

"Easy enough," I said. "You work in the New York office of a man who's big in politics in this other city where the letters are mailed, don't you?"

"Yes."

"And Carlin's in the heating business, isn't he?"

"Yes."

"And there's a big heating contract to be let in this other city. And the politicians there always have been notorious for grafting on every sort of city contract, haven't they? Well, then: here you are, working for one of the politicians, and there Carlin is, in the heating business. Now, if you're seen a lot with Carlin wouldn't anybody who knew it decide that you were the go-between for the politician you work for and Carlin, the heating contractor?

"Perhaps," he said. "But darn it, man, I'm not. I haven't said a word to Carlin; I haven't been asked to. There's nothing in it, man, nothing but the appearances."

"And that's just what your friend who sends you the twenties is after," said I. "He wants the appearances to be just what they are."

"But I'm not guilty of anything wrong."

"Certainly not, my boy; but you come pretty near being an innocent tool."

"But who's the man who sent me the letters?" asked Blake.

"Oh," I said, "I don't think you need to know. But I promise you this: you won't get any more letters or twenties, and you can stop being seen so much with Carlin."

And, in the meantime, I had been studying the letters. The ones that Blake had received were in the same hand that had penned the ones that came to the Continental Heating company. They were in a peculiar hand. After studying it for a while I saw that it was the looping, continuous hand of a telegrapher. But it wasn't a good telegrapher's hand; the letters were just a trifle shaky.

"Easy," I said to myself. "Find a telegrapher who's on the toboggan from drink or dope."

I went back to the city where the letters had been mailed, the city where the fight was on, and called on the heads of the local telegraph company and showed them the handwriting and asked if any such man worked for them.

He didn't. They had fired him for drunkenness several months before He was an old expert named Handy who had gone the whisky route.

When you have a man identified to that extent it isn't hard to find him. Some of the old telegraphers in the office knew the particular lodging house where Handy was living. He had touched them at intervals for small loans.

Cluffer and I went to the lodging house and found Handy in bed, recovering from a terrible spree.

"I want you to write some letters for me, the same kind you've been writing for my friend Haney, of the Continental Heating company," I said.

"Get me a drink, for God's sake," said the wreck. "I haven't got a cent."

I got him something to steady his nerves and set him to work. He wrote enough to show me positively that he was my man.

"How did Haney happen to get you to write his letters for him?" I asked.

"Oh, I used to know Haney before the booze got me," he said. "I went up to his office and tried to touch him. He told me he'd pay me for writing some letters for him, and I wrote them for him and mailed 'em, too, as he ordered. Ain't any trouble about it, is there?"

"Oh, no," I said. "Not for you."

I went to Mr. Garver and saw him at his home that night and placed my evidence before him. It took me four mortal hours to convince him that his manager, Haney, had simply put up a bluff about the politicians wanting to hold up the firm that got the school heating contracts. I had to send Cluffer and Doheny after the levee king and bring him up to Garver's house and get him to tell the story about how the crooked politicians had decided to let the heating contracts alone. But when I had him convinced he was convinced all over.

The case never went to court. Garver didn't want any news that would mention the name of his town even indirectly in a graft scandal to get before the public. But the manner in which he threw Haney out of his job broke that crook's nerve. Garver let other people in the heating business know about Haney's awful crookedness, and Haney became a man shunned. He tried to make another start, but his reputation had become too black. He dropped down little by little, and not long ago one of our men saw him in the same lodging house that still held his old friend Handy.

The sale of the Quincy Chapter, Order of Eastern Star, at Electa Hall, Monday afternoon and evening was well attended and a grand success. Booths decorated with foliage and crepe paper were set up around the hall and presented a very pretty effect. Between the sessions there was a business meeting.

Mrs. Henrietta Files of Houghs Neck was chairman of the general committee, and those in charge of the tables were:

In the drawings of fancy articles, the following were the winners; tatted bag, Mrs. Helen Faircloth, crochet fancy bag, Mrs. William Patterson; knit shawl, Mrs. Charles Coy; tray clothes, Mrs. Mary Wordsell.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

A children's dancing party will be given at Brazee's hall, Saturday, at 2.30 P. M. It will be a Mother Goose costume party with novel features to please the young people. Only children in costume will take part in the grand march. The party is in charge of Mrs. Frank A. Page and her assistants Mrs. S. H. Couch, Mrs. Clarence Hutton, Mrs. Arthur Hillman, Mrs. W. E. Simmons, Jr., Mrs. Aylmer Hatch, Mrs. Roy Baker, Mrs. H. C. Seymour, Mrs. Wallace Bennett, Miss Clara Thayer.

The first church supper of the season will be held in the vestry, Thursday, at 6.30 o'clock, followed by a novel entertainment. All members and friends of the church are urged to attend and get acquainted with one another.

The men in our church are cordially invited to attend a good citizenship meeting in the Wollaston Baptist church, Wednesday evening, Oct. 23, at 7.45 o'clock, when Roger Sherman Hoar of Worcester will expound the Democratic principles, Courtney Crocker of Boston the Republican and John B. Connolly of Dorchester the Progressive.

A card party for the benefit of the fair in December is to be held at the home of Mrs. Harold Green, 68 South Central avenue, Saturday evening.

The very large attendance at the men's meeting yesterday showed that the people are aroused and ready to work for the good of Quincy. It was voted unanimously to open the meetings to all, men and women alike. Don't fail to attend next Sunday at 12 o'clock. The meeting lasts one hour.

The floral decorations yesterday in charge of Miss Almira Simmons and Frederick H. Bishop were much appreciated by the large congregation.

ELMENDORF LECTURES.

Next Friday evening and Saturday afternoon the theme of lecture in Symphony Hall, Boston, will be "The Great Southwest." The tour will start at the Grand Canyon and lead directly to Los Angeles, where by means of pictures taken in 1885 and others made this summer, the lecturer will offer his audience visual evidence of the great development that has taken place in this city during the past 27 years. From Los Angeles the trip is continued to scenes of beauty in Pasadena, Riverside and Redlands. In addition to all of this there will be glimpses of Santa Barbara, the seashore resorts near Los Angeles, Santa Catalina Island, Coronado Beach with its tent city and finally San Diago, that marvellous city of the far southwest, where the preparations for the exposition to be held in 1915 will be shown. The Pacific coast, from Monterey to Mt. Ranier, will be the subject of the next lecture in the course.

CITY COUNCIL

I am not personally opposed to the principal involved in the foregoing portion of the proposed amendment, stated under subdivision "a" above as I thoroughly believe in it; in fact, it is practically similar to one I have established in my own private business. My difficulty in approving this portion of the order arises entirely from the provisions in the Charter, restraining the legislative branch of our city government from interfering with the executive and administrative branches thereof, and regard the above portion of said order as being contrary not only to the letter but to the spirit of the charter. The system you seek to inaugurate by this portion of the order should be established by an order issuing from the executive department and not by ordinance adopted by the legislative department.

If I understand the provisions of subdivision "b" as above stated if a department makes a contract, we will assume for one hundred blank books, and then after the order has been given finds that it does not need but seventy-five, it cannot vary that order or contract without first going to the City Council and obtaining its approval.

It seems to me such a provision would work a great deal of confusion and besides, in my judgment, it is clearly in violation of the provisions of Section 2 and Section 38 of the City Charter above quoted. I can hardly conceive a more clear invasion of the domain of the executive and administrative branches of our City Government by the leglislative than would be created by this provision of the proposed amendment if it were to become a law.

There is no doubt in my mind that such a provision, even if approved by me, after having passed the Council would have no legal force.

I therefore, cannot approve this portion of the proposed amendment to the ordinance.

3. The order provides that the Auditor after receiving a copy of the written order referred to, shall at once examine the same and shall not approve if he finds it to be

(A) "Not in conformity with the charter."

(B) "Not in conformity with the Ordinances relating thereto."

(C) "Or if it implies an expenditure from unexpended balance of an appropriation to which it is chargeable in excess of all prior orders not paid and other indebtedness charged against it." And "that orders not approved by the Auditor for either of the above reasons shall be cancelled."

In so far as this portion of the order is an attempt to prohibit the Auditor from approving any bill against an appropriation, unless there is at the time a sufficient unexpended balance and unappropriated balance to meet it, I am in full sympathy with it; but the order as worded is very doubtful in its meaning. In fact if the Council will read that portion of the order above quoted under "C" it will notice that there is an obvious error in the wording thereof, as the order is now drawn.

That objection to the order, however may be readily corrected by an amendment changing the phraseology of the order. My principal objection to this portion of the order is more fundamental.

The order undertakes to vest the Auditor with the authority to determin whether such written order or contract issued by a city official, "is in conformity with the Charter or ordinances thereto relating" I do not know what is meant by the words "in conformity with the Charter" but I do know that as the Charter stands today it is the duty of the law department, whenever requested by the city Council or any department official, to advise as to whether any contemplated contract order or act of the city government or any of its departments or officials is in accordance with or in violation of any of the provisions of the Charter, and there is nothing in the Charter either constituting the City Auditor the official to construe such acts and orders for the purpose of determining whether they are in harmony with the City Charter or otherwise, or vesting the legislative branch of the city government the power to vest him with any such authority; even if the city council and the Mayor were disposed to do so, we have no authority to take any of the duties vested by the Charter in the law department and give them to the City Auditor. Such a radical change in our Charter can only be accomplished by an act of the legislature.

4. The order provides that if the written order issued for the purchase of supplies and materials shall be found by the Auditor to be either in excess of the unexpended or unappropriated balance of the appropriation to which it is sought to charge it, or not to be in conformity with the Charter or Ordinances relating thereto, the Auditor shall so notify the department and the order shall be at once cancelled.

For the purpose of the moment, laying aside my objections hereinbefore stated to the attempt to vest the Auditor with the authority this order seeks to give him, it seems to me that these provisions of the order do not sufficiently protect or safeguard either the city or the party with whom the city may be dealing. For instance, the order directs that the department shall furnish the Auditor with a copy thereof and then if the Auditor finds that it does not meet the requirements of the order, the order shall be at once cancelled. If such a provision is to be adopted, the ordinance should direct that the department making the contract or issuing the order should FORTHWITH forward a copy thereof to the Auditor and the Auditor should at once pass upon it, and if found objectionable, promptly return the same with his objections to the department, so that there may be no unecessary delay in cancelling the order, to the end that the city may not by reason of any laches of the department in forwarding a copy thereof to the Auditor or on the part of the Auditor in notifying the department that he cannot approve the same, he plunged into litigation. You can readily see the injustice to a party dealing with the city if some such a safeguard is not adopted protecting his right. The contract might be in force or order delivered for a matter of a week or more before the Auditor, in the exercise of his authority and discretion, decide it to be in the violation of the provisions of the ordinance as amended, and such a decision at that late date resulting in the cancellation of the order might well lead to confusion and possible litigation.

I do not think that portion of the ordinance in its existing form is such that I would approve it, and I therefor refuse so to do.

While I feel compelled, for the reasons above stated, to withhold my approval from this order, I wish to state that I thoroughly approve of the main purpose of the order. I believe the remedy to the conditions which your honorable body had in mind at the time this order was passed, will be found in a proper amendment to Ordinance No. 38, and an executive order dealing with the same subject matter. The amendment should be such a one as to direct the Auditor not to approve any contracts, claims, bills and pay rolls against the city, unless there is at the time he approves them and places them on the warrant, a sufficient unexpended and unappropriated balance of the appropriation against which they are to be charged, to meet the same, and a further amendment, that whenever an order for such an account, claim, bill or pay roll is presented to him, it shall be presented in triplicate and he shall endorse thereon his approval, or disapproval, as the case may be, and forthwith return two copies thereof to the department from which the same issued.

The executive order should issue from the Mayor's office to each of the administrative departments, and should require each department, before entering into any contract or order, where the amount involved exceeds $25.00 to have the contract or order reduced to writing, and before the same has been delivered to the party with whom the city is about to transact its business, three copies thereof furnished to the City Auditor, who shall forthwith pass on the same, and upon receipt of two of the copies from the City Auditor with his approval thereon, the contract or order should be formally delivered to the dealer and then become operative and binding. One copy of the order with the Auditor's approval should be retained in the department office, and one copy with the Auditors approval thereon should be delivered to the dealer. By some such a process the rights of the dealer as well as those of the city, would be fully protected in the premises and a party dealing with the city would know when he receives his contract that it had been approved in advance by the Auditor, and that there was an appropriation outstanding against which it had been charged.

If there are any legal objections to the contract or order being entered into by the city, either on account of exceeding the balance of the appropriation against which it is charged, or otherwise, the time to have these objections raised and determined is before the contract is made or order issued, and not at some later date."

On motion of Councilman Abele the vote was laid on the table.

A communication was received from the Mayor appointing the following as members of the citizens committee to act with the special committee of the City Council, the Mayor and Dock Commissioner to select a site for a public dock:—George W. He had no funds therefore to meet this additional expense. Referred to the Finance Committee.

OFFICER CORBETT'S HEROIC EFFORT TO STOP TEAM OF RUNAWAYS

Horses Maddened By Noise and Fireworks Run Bridleless Through Square

Big Crowd Rushed Right and Left of Frightened Animals

In trying to stop a pair of runaway horses Monday night, officer Henry F. Corbett was thrown to the ground and the wheels of the heavy truck passed over him breaking his right leg. A two horse vegetable wagon owned by Mr. Hadder of Scituate stood on Hancock street, near the corner of Saville street, and the driver removed the bridles from his horses to feed them. While they were feeding the Democratic parade came along with its band and red fire with the result that the horses became frightened and started to run. Officer Corbett grabbed the off horse by the head while Norman Everson grabbed the nigh horse.

It was a wild sight to witness. The square was full of people. The paraders scattered to right and left to escape being trampled down by the runaways. As the horses passed Thompson's restaurant the pole strap connecting the collars of the horses evidently parred and animals spread wide apart in their flight, pulling against each other to a certain extent yet maintaining forward progress.

As they neared a point opposite the cemetery, the off horse shied in toward the curb stone, and this movement crowded the gallant officer so that he slipped and fell. Norman Everson was thrown when the horses made a swerve in the other direction.

Officer Corbett was picked up and carried to the police box and conveyed to the City hospital in the police ambulance, where the extent of his injuries were learned. The horses kept on their mad zig zag flight through the square but were finally stopped near the corner of Granite street. Sherman Hayden, a young man who rushed out of the crowd and succeeded in bringing the animals to a standstill. He was cheered by the large crowd which witnessed his brave act.

This accident leads to the question of why the ordinance relative to feeding horses in the public streets is not better enforced. All summer long that part of Coddington street near the First church yard has been daily used as a feeding ground by teamsters. The bridles are removed from the horses and they are allowed to feed at will without proper attendance. That there has not been an accident before is a wonder. Aside from this the feeding of horses in the public streets is in the nature of a nuisance.

MAYOR'S STATEMENT.

This morning Mayor Stone issued the following statement upon the accident and the heroism of the officer:

"The bravery displayed last evening by police officer Henry F. Corbett, Norman Everson and Sherman Hayden in jeopardizing their lives to stop a pair of runaway horses, makes me feel proud that Quincy possesses young men of such sterling qualities. Their act was of a commendable character. Officer Corbett, who unfortunately lies injured in the City hospital did his duty faithfully. The other young men performed a deed worthy of the praise of every citizen, who has the welfare of our people at heart. It is gratifying to me as the Chief Executive of this City to extend to those men the heartfelt thanks of the city. Hundreds of lives were endangered by the spirited horses. It was indeed fortunate to have men of courage, coolness, and forethought on the scene."

Eugene R. Stone, Mayor.

BARONI'S VICTIM MAY NOT LIVE

Connecticut Man Wanted in Stabbing Affair.

ARRESTED IN QUINCY

Inspector Goodhue with Officers Holloran and Cahill and State Officer McGuley arrested Salvatore Baroni in an old barn in the Fore River district late Monday night for Connecticut officers by whom he is wanted for alleged attempted murder. Inspector Goodhue and Officer McGuley have been working on the case for the past week. The man was first located in a house at Water street but before the officers were able to catch him he made his escape. Monday Inspector Goodhue located the fellow at the Fore River and last night the officers went down and captured him. They found him secreted in a closet in an old barn. He was taken back to Boston. This morning his trunk was secured at the Water street house. It seems that Baroni and a man named Anton Olsen were employed by a florist at Crowell, Ct. Last July it is alleged that during an altercation Baroni shot Olsen and it is believed that he will die. After committing the act Baroni skipped and was located in Quincy. To the officers he admitted his guilt.

Best Means of Checking Assassinations, Says New York Judge

New York, Oct. 22.—"It is my belief that the best means of checking assassinations in this country is to have the government control the sale of firearms." So said County Judge Fawsett of Brooklyn in sentencing George D. Franklin of Boston to seven years in Sing Sing. He had been convicted of holding up a Brooklyn merchant.

"There were 9000 assassinations in the United States last year," continued the court. "The carrying of concealed weapons in Brooklyn must be stopped."

FORGETS FATAL ERROR

Nurse Does Not Remember Killing Patient by Mistake

Yonkers, N. Y., Oct. 22.—Florence Harris, the nurse who by mistake administered acid instead of salts, causing the death of Mrs. Abram Haight, a patient at the Homeopathic hospital here, awoke yesterday afternoon after twenty-four hours of unconsciousness, due to a collapse upon realizing her error.

Physicians say the nurse seems to have lost all recollection of what took place while caring for Mrs. Haight.

TEN THOUSAND DEER IN THE BAY STATE

Do Much Damage to Small Trees and Apple Orchards

Boston, Oct. 22.—Irving O. Converse, one of the state game wardens, is of the opinion that there are at least 10,000 deer within the borders of Massachusetts and that they are propagating far faster than they are being slaughtered during the one week's open season allowed by law.

"I know of one herd in this vicinity where there are forty-seven deer," said Converse. "They have herded together for several seasons and each successive season the herd becomes larger, notwithstanding inroads which the hunters must make in them.

"The farmers occasionally kill a few, but the deer do much damage. The deer eat up the small trees and destroy many good apple orchards. I have counted 118 young fruit trees gnawed in some spots by deer all on one man's farm."

JURY STILL DEADLOCKED

Out More Than Four Days In the Kreis Murder Case

Scranton, Pa., Oct. 22.—The jury in the Kreis murder case, which has been deliberating for more than four days, was still deadlocked when court adjourned last night. They have come in three times to report there was no hope of agreement, but each time the court has sent them back with instructions that they must agree.

Kreis was a Delaware, Lackawanna and Western special officer. He attempted to arrest a crowd of train jumpers, and shot and killed a 14-year-old boy named John Heningan, who was on top of a rapidly moving freight train.

OTHER LEAGUE GAMES

The old rivals, the Government and Hull draftsmen had an exciting match at the Coliseum alleys Monday evening in the Fore River bowling league. Melendy and Altstein tied at 396 on the third string and on the reel off Melendy won by one pin. In the totals the Government won by 15 pins.

The Machinists Gallery beat the Patternmakers and the Machinists floor team won from the Engine draftsmen. Akroid, after an unsteady showing in the other matches led the rollers with a single string of 113.

YACHT CLUB CASE GOES TO MASTER

Wollaston Organization Seeks to Keep Tobin Out

A rather novel case came up before Judge Morton in the superior court, Monday, which was sent to a master for hearing of evidence and recommendations. The case is one in which Eleazer F. Drew, commodore of the Squantum Yacht Club, against J. Charles Tobin in which Drew acting in behalf of the club, seeks to have Tobin restrained from visiting the clubhouse at Quincy and the winter quarters of the club at Wollaston from participating in the club meetings and using the premises of the club.

THERMOMETER SET AT $2500 IN THE HOSPITAL CAMPAIGN

One Contributor Gave Lump Sum of $1,600 Towards the Funds

Teams Made Good Showing in First, a Broken Day

The hospital campaign fund reached a total of $2529 when the captains and teams met for their daily conference and supper at the Y. M. C. A. building Tuesday evening. This was less than the average which should be maintained each day to bring the total up to the required sum when the campaign closes Monday. There were many reasons however why the average was not reached. It does not mean however that the $35,000 will not be secured because the teams are earnest and sincere in their activities and no stone will be left unturned for the solicitors to reach the goal of their ambitions.

Of the ten teams engaged in the work, only seven submitted a report, showing pledges of $929.

Added to this amount was $1600, which Fred B. Rice announced had come in the nature of a private subscription. Mr. Rice did not announce the name of the generous contributor.

Team number six showed the largest pledges for the first day, $415 and team number three showed the smallest, $47.

The reports of the teams, for the first day were as follows:

Team	Captain	Amount
No. 1	W. T. Shea	No Report
No. 2	Edward B. Marsh	$80.00
No. 3	Joseph A. Dasha	47.00
No. 4	Charles W. Bailey	102.00
No. 5	Richard R. Freeman	150.00
No. 6	J. A. Sedgewick	415.00
No. 7	W. F. Cummings	74.00
No. 8	Alexander Clark	61.00
No. 9	George B. Curran	No Report
No. 10	Herbert S. Barker	No Report
	Private Donation	1600.00
	Grand Total	$2529.00

The rallies of the Republican and Democratic parties Monday evening, naturally attracted a great many members of the teams so that on the first days drive they were unable to give as much attention to the work as they will be able to for the next few days.

One thing is certain, there is no lack of enthusiasm on the part of the workers. All have taken hold with a will. They plan to raise that $35,000 and there is little doubt but what they will be successful. That it means lots of hard work, and a great sacrifice on the part of the workers is self evident. But that they are willing to accept the obligation and the hardship is likewise apparent.

At the meeting Tuesday night, the tables for the supper were arranged a little different from on Monday night. Tuesday night they were arranged so that each team had a table to itself, giving them a chance to consult and compare notes, at close range.

The supper as usual was an excellent one in every particular. There was an abundance and variety to the food which appealed to every one and every one present was right on deck with a good appetite.

The supper was under the direction of Miss Etta Prescott and she was assisted in her efforts by Mrs. Perry Lawton, Mrs. Jessie I. Litchfield, Miss Alice Putnam, Miss Georgianna Lane Miss Edith Randall and Miss Annie L. Prescott.

MAYOR STONE STILL IN DOUBT

Uncertain as to His Candidacy for Mayor This Fall

HIS VIEWS ON SITUATION

Up to the present time it has not been definitely decided by Mayor Stone whether he would be a candidate for the Republican nomination for Mayor or not. Several meetings have been held with prominent citizens at which the question was discussed but as yet His Honor has not made known his wishes.

Mayor Stone feels that he has been subjected to much unjust criticism. He claims that he is not responsible for the present financial condition of the city as is well known to all who are in any way familiar with city affairs. The present condition of affairs can not be laid to any one administration, although naturally the Mayor in office is the one to whom many not conversant with affairs will lay the blame. There has never been any suggestion of graft in his administration of city affairs. The main trouble this year apparently being the lack of harmony between the Mayor and certain members of the city council. That the Mayor and Council have not been in harmony on many matters has been apparent to all who have followed the meetings of the Council. No one will say that they do not believe that the Mayor has been honest in the stand that he has taken on various matters and there is no question but that he has tried hard to give the city an economical administration.

DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATES

Whom Rumor Puts in Mayoralty Running

There was a rumor about City Square this morning that ex-City Treasurer John C. Curtis would be the Democratic candidate for Mayor at the coming municipal caucuses. Mr. Curtis has always been affiliated with the Democratic party and has frequently held positions in the past under Democratic administrations. During the four years term of ex-Mayor Shea he filled the office of City Treasurer. Mr. Curtis was for many years engaged in the grocery business in Quincy and East Milton. It is also rumored that James Wall last years Democratic candidate would also be out seeking the nomination.

THREE-DECKER OPPOSITION

Recorded Without Discussion by Wollaston Club

FEDERATION FAVORED

The Wollaston Congregational club opened its seasons meetings, Tuesday evening, with a large increase in attendance. Shortly after 6.30 those present sat down to a shore dinner, starting it with steamed clams and with baked blue fish as the piece de resistance. The supper hour and other intervals during the evening were enlivened with vocal solos and duets by Clyde Boyer Long, tenor soloist of the Leydon street church, Brookline and Charles Harvey Everett, bass soloist of the Wollaston Congregational church. Walter Clarence Rogers, organist of the church was accompanist. Among the numbers were "Go not happy day" and "Over the desert" by Mr. Everett; "My flute and I" and "For all eternity" by Mr. Long with flute obligato by Mr. Everett and two duets, "Oh! Mimi!" from "La Boheme" and "Passage of the birds."

President Mann welcomed those present and stated that the club had nearly doubled its membership and urged that the new members be made to feel at home.

Wendell H. Hall reported for the committee appointed to work for the old Wollaston school lot as a public park. The object had been attained and the spring would probably see it blossom out in all its beauty. He moved a vote of apreciation to the Safford heirs for their assistance.

Rufus B. Tobey moved a committee of three be appointed to advocate passage of the bill aimed against "Three deckers" so-called, now under consideration and Wendell H. Hull, James L. Whiting and C. A. Campbell were appointed.

R. B. Blanchard, E. W. Blake and C. C. Turner were appointed additional members of the benevolent committee. Mr. Tobey presented each member with a copy of simplified rules of parliamentary law, edited by him.

President Louis F. R. Langelier of the Wollaston Unitarian club, a guest of the evening spoke a word in favor of a committee chosen to consider the proposed federation of Mens clubs. In such a federation there is a great power for good at present lying dormant. The serious consideration is just where the line should be drawn.

Dr. Sneath gave an entertaining five minute talk on "Optimism," full of interest. Among other things he very nicely paraphrased the lives of well known poem to "Smile! Thank you! Smile!

A five minute talk on the "Coal business" was given by Charles P. Hutchins in which he claimed the present price of coal was due to labor conditions.

The main entertainment of the evening was the presentation of "Captain Warrens Wards" by Edward H. Frye. For an hour and a half the audience was amused by the apt impersonations of the various characters in the story and the quaint Cape Cod philosophy of Captain Warren.

WISE POLICY TO STRENGTHEN WEAK POINTS IN GOVERNMENT

Intelligent and Constant Watchfulness on Part of Citizens Necessary

To Guarantee Honesty and Efficient Administration

Editor of the Ledger: When it comes to considering the question as to whether it would be profitable to make any changes in the present form of our city government in the hope of bettering conditions in Quincy, there seems to be considerable diversity of opinion.

There are undoubtedly many who believe the present form of city charter is all right, and that there is nothing the matter with Quincy but the men who have been running our affairs or letting them drift) into the present unfortunate condition.

Again, there are many more who believe the only remedy is to do away with the city charter entirely and establish a commission form of government.

Perhaps those who hold to the first belief are correct, but it would seem to be only fair to call attention to the fact that it is under this present form that the conditions from which we are now suffering have arisen, and that the strong tendency of all modern legislation upon the subject is to establish a number of important changes in old time methods of municipal government.

It would not be at all surprising if a form of government which was admirably suited to the needs of our city in 1888—nearly a quarter of a century ago, when our population was considerably less than half its present number and the property valuation only about a quarter its present size,—it would not be surprising if such a form of government were found not to be entirely suited to our present day needs.

Still, I doubt if a majority of us would care to go so far as to say that this form of government had proved entirely wrong, and should be cast aside in toto. To be sure, our city is in a pretty serious and uncomfortable condition today. But how much of this can be traced to the form of government alone is problematical.

Personally, it seems to me that by far the greater portion of the trouble is traceable to other causes, principally to certain men who have proved themselves unworthy of the great public trust which has been reposed in them, and who have sacrificed the

$35,000 FOR OUR CITY HOSPITAL

Would mean only $1.00 for Each Inhabitant of our city IF the money could be collected. BUT Quincy's Population of 35,000 probably represents about 7000 Families of 5 members each, or 7000 Heads of Families who might be counted on as contributors.

Of this number some cannot give and others cannot be reached, so that the number of Possible Participants in the Hospital Campaign can be safely estimated at 3,500, making necessary an average contribution of $10 each to raise $35,000.

Now you know, Mr. Well-to-Do Citizen, that all these people cannot afford even the $10, and someone must do better.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

A Baltimore surgeon says that many baseball players "move almost of themselves, with little direction from the brain." Yep, we've seen some of that kind.

This is the season when army officers unhappily discover that daily gallops in a mahogany chair unfit one for 90 mile hikes in a pigskin saddle.

Politics is a freeze out game in which the winner cashes in on November 5 and hurries out to catch his car.

THAT $35,000 CAMPAIGN

The hospital campaign to raise that $35,000 to meet all obligations, is now in full swing. It will not close until Monday of next week. While the time is short much can be accomplished. Rapid movement is productive of success. A long period of the conduct of such an enterprise might fall short of the desired results. Every eye will be on that monetary termometer on the Hancock building, in City Square. No one would regret to see that instrument smashed to a frazzle by the mercury of dollars which it may have to inadequately record.

The captains and the teams are working with a will. They are permeated, saturated, completely enveloped and tirelessly laboring, in their abundant enthusiasm. And the women, well they are doing their part. When they provide the workers with a good feed, at the close of the hard day's task, they only inspire them to greater efforts on the day following.

No one denies the need of a splendidly equipped hospital, such as Quincy can truly boast of. The greatest danger and menace to which it can be subjected is a handicap owing to insufficiency of funds. There is one thing certain that people can never tell when they may need the care, attention and the scientific treatment of the operating room.

In his brief remarks at the first meeting of the workers, Monday night, Dr. Welch brought this forcibly to the minds of all by an incident at the opening of the nurses home. A well known lady of the city was talking with the doctor, and remarked upon the splendid equipment of the hospital and how much it should be appreciated by all, as one never could tell how soon they might be subjected to the tender mercies of the hospital and its efficient corps. It was only a few days later that the young son of this lady was hurried to the hospital for an operation for apendicitis.

The anual campaigns for more momentary needs do not frame up to the full measure of desired accomplishment. They always leave the same condition to be repeated the next year, which not only taxes the energy and enthusiasm of the workers, but in a measure makes the average contributor rather callous.

A cleanup should be accomplished by this campaign which will have a lasting and benificent effect. There should be no halting when the $35,000 is reached but the effort should be maintained to the close to raise as much as possible so that the institution may be placed upon a sound financial basis.

The issue is plain. It cannot be misunderstood by any one. Those who can afford will give in proportion of their abundance. Others will do according to their means. But all should do their share, so that all may say that they have an interest in the hospital, beyond that of being a possible patient and all may feel that Quincy is not one whit behind other places in the support of such a worthy and humane public necessity.

UNSELFISH HEROISM.

Few people indeed can be found so cynical or calloused to unselfish action who will not gladly contribute the full measure of honor and credit to Officer Henry Corbett, Norman Everson and Sherman Hayden, who took part in stopping that pair of maddened runaway horses in City Square, Monday night.

Corbett was unfortunately seriously injured. Everson, was thrown aside, but Hayden was the one who succeeded in accomplishing the feat of stopping the runaways. It is not with a desire to detract from his act, but rather to give to the others the full share of credit in the transaction, that it should be pointed out that Corbett and Everson had materially slackened the speed of the horses by their determined efforts.

For an illustration of true, unselfish effort to save the lives of others at the risk of their own, the officer and the two young men stand forth as shining examples. Too much praise cannot be given them. To their efforts many people owe their safety, possibly their lives. Corbett showed that he is the type of men who make good guardians of the peace and bulwarks of the public safety. Everson and Hayden demonstrated that they were good examples of young American manhood, all three of them without hesitation taking a risk for the care of others without regard to their own personal safety. It was no stagey act to spring at the heads of two bridleless horses, maddened with fear and running wild as they were and so the men deserve full measure of credit for their heroic work.

A HANDY WEAPON.

Possibly some of those ardent agitators of the clipping of a few inches off the present day style of hatpin will not be so vigorous in the advocacy of their pet measure, now that it has been clearly proven to be a goodly weapon in the hands of the female owner. A burglar visited a Beloit, Wis., house, the other evening, and entered the room where the young lady guest of the house, a New Bedford girl, by the way, was sleeping, and on being aroused the girl went at the burglar in the most savage manner, with a hatpin, forcing him to cry out with pain and seek safety in flight. The heroic girl chased the burglar through a window and continued her prodding until his fleetness of foot saved him from further punctures. This is certainly an argument in favor of the hatpin, not an ornament, but as a weapon offensive and defensive in the hands of a plucky girl. It served its purpose in the house and this may be used as an argument in favor of having one in the room all the time, but how about it when a girl is molested on the street. While the present lengthy hat pins are dangerous to others when the fair wearer is not on the war path pursuing burglars, it is suggested that a folding type be manufactured, which would meet the objection of people who run the risk of having a hole bored in the side of their head or an eye gouged out by the head movement of the wearer and this would obviate the danger to innocent people and at the same time provide the girl with this handy and effective weapon on occasions when its use might be required.

BILL NOT IN THE RUNNING

Close Friend Says He Will Not Be a Candidate for Mayor

OTHER ASPIRANTS RELIEVED

Hon. William T. Shea, four times mayor of Quincy and often mentioned candidate for the office again has decided definitely that he will not enter the race this year. Although he was not reached by phone this morning one close in his confidence verified the declaration.

Since "Bill" was succeeded by the present executive, Mayor Eugene R. Stone, he has been asked time and time again what his disposition towards reelection was, but "Bill" diplomatically side-stepped an answer.

It has been known to his close friends that he would not be a candidate this year but they have all been "mum" on the subjects. A rumor to that effect was in circulation Monday and was verified Tuesday morning as above stated.

CITIZENS MUST WAKE TO DUTIES

Lack of Interest Responsible for Present City Conditions

Quincy, Mass., Oct. 17, 1912.
Editor of The Daily Ledger:—

I have read with interest your articles on "What's the matter with Quincy." They have interested every thoughtful citizen of Quincy. I have also noticed that the author, Irving L. Shaw, in one of his recent letters referred to the Commission of Municipal government. Let me explain why. But in the first place let me stipulate to everybody that no government can better Quincy unless the men of Quincy are interested enough in the welfare of Quincy to vote at election time and to at least know the vital problems which daily confront us. Ask any man on the street to name the councilmen and you have him stuck easily. He has we will presume, a vague idea that there is a place called City Hall in Quincy Square but he knows not what is inside of it unless he goes in to pay his taxes once a year. He knows nothing of the character of the men who constitute the municipal council; he votes as he is told for the sake of an auto ride and a couple of five cent cigars.

I was talking with one of Quincy's most public spirited men who said to me, "The men of Quincy are not interested in civic affairs enough. They are so absorbed in their little two-for-a-cent business occupations that they are not even willing to give up a few hours of their time that Quincy may have good government."

This is altogether too true; Our Board of Trade might help to remedy this. The Ledger has already done much toward this end. Quincy is indeed lucky in having such a public spirited paper.

There seems to be one fault with the present form of city government namely:—too many cooks. And as the old proverb declares—they certainly do spoil the broth.

Take for instance, the office of tax collector. Nobody seems to know where the blame belongs,—It may fairly be put in any place. We lost an efficient tax collector in Mr. Child. Indeed the office is a hard one, but he was capable of performing the duties pertaining to that office.

Now in the Commission form of government there are four commissioners and one mayor commissioner. One commissioner alone is responsible for the collection of taxes and if he fails to do so the blame rests upon him alone.

Our financial matters are in a fizzle. If the Ledger would hire a competent inspector to look over the financial affairs of the city for the last ten or twenty years, they would indeed be adding to the great pile of good services rendered the public of the "Granite City." I do honestly believe that there is a flaw somewhere. Better find it out now than bear the shame of a graft, scandal hereafter. Quincy citizens have a right to know what has been going on for the last few years.

Citizens of Quincy! You have a right to know the reason for a $22 tax rate.

ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATIONS

A meeting was called at the parsonage of the Hall Place M. E. church Monday evening of people who were present at the first preaching under Methodist auspices at West Quincy 40 years ago, M. P. Fuller, Mr. and Ms. F. W. Fuller, C. A. Goucher, Mrs. Robert Newcomb and Mrs. William McCormick to arrange for the celebration of the 40th anniversary.

Investigation reveals the fact that it is the 38th anniversary of the dedication of the church, the 40th anniversary of the first sermon preached under Methodist auspices and the 45th anniversary of the starting of the Sunday school which was later turned over to the Methodist church.

THE FIRST BOY.

Charles W. Nightingale of 70 Pleasant street is in an ecstatic frame of mind. He has a dreamy look in his features and smiles benignly on every one. The cause of this excess of joy is an eight pound boy, who on Saturday afternoon condescended to join the happy family. It is the first boy in the family circle and naturally there never was anybody like him. Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Nightingale are in order. Mother and boy are doing well.

EPWORTH LEAGUE

Of the Hall Place Church Organized a Lookout Committee

The regular monthly meeting and social of the Epworth League of the Hall Place M. E. Church was held at the home of Miss Edna and Jessie Burke on Willard street, Monday evening. The president, J. M. Francis, conducted the usual devotional exercises.

Miss Edna Miller, Susie Edwards, Rita Hunter and Addie Newcomb were elected to membership.

The second vice-president, J. Lawrence Martin announced that their department had decided to take up the study of Mormanism and at the November meeting Mrs. Martin would give a summary of two addresses on Mormanism she heard in Boston.

The third vice-president reported that she had re-organized a Look-out committee and divided the parish into different sections, each member of the committee having a certain territory to cover, and in this way systematically covering the whole community.

The fourth vice-president, Miss Helen Martin, reported that her department had planned for a new reading table to be placed upstairs in the hall entrance to the auditorium. They also propose to take up in the literary meetings each month the history of Quincy, its industries and government. This department is planning a post-card exhibit early in November in order to raise funds for its departmental work.

The reports of these officers together with the treasurer's report were approved and it was voted that each department raise the money to be used in their respective departments. It was also voted to have a church calendar in which dates of all meetings, etc., be announced and that all societies in the church be asked to forward dates of their meetings, socials, etc., so that there may be no conflicting of plans.

Miss Helen Martin, J. M. Francis and Miss Edna Burke were appointed to have charge of this work.

A pleasant social hour was enjoyed. Julius Fuller favored the company with piano solos and Miss Pauletta Kristofferson played the violin, accompanied by Miss Maud Nichols. Miss Kristofferson and Miss Nichols also sang a duet and there were solos by Miss Helen Martin.

Ice cream and cake were served by the hostess after which all gathered round the piano and enjoyed a good sing of old time songs.

A feature of the Evening Session will be the awarding of prizes—valuable or otherwise, in the two grand contests:

1. To the individual, man or woman, attending from the greatest distance in Massachusetts.

2. To the group of individuals from the city or town that scores the greatest number of points, this score being obtained by multiplying the number of individuals by the distance travelled.

A similar contest was tried last year and added much to the zeal and merriment of the occasion.

At the afternoon session, Arthur J. These two State Organizations have co-operated from the first, and since October 1908 have had a definite working agreement; but the co-operation today is especially wholehearted.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

The second regular meeting of the Quincy Women's club was held Tuesday afternoon. The reports from committees were very interesting. Mrs. Alfred W. Jelenick, chairman of the Art and Crafts committee told of the various classes that are being formed for the ladies of the club. There are to be classes in china painting, millinery, basketry, Irish crochet and jewelry. Mrs. Chandler W. Smith, chairman of the Philanthropy committee, reported that a sum of a little over $60 raised at the June breakfast had been voted to the following charities: to the Visiting Nurse Committee $25; Assocoated charities $25; Tuberculosis Association, the price of one dozen bath towels.

The Corresponding secretary read a description of the new president of the Natioial Federation of Womens Clubs, Mrs. Percy V. Pennypackerr of Texas.

Mrs. Edward B. Marsh, gave a concise report of the State Federation meeting at Concord to which she went as a delegate.

The president, Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard, read a letter from the publishers of the Delineator in which they offered the services of a speaker upon the subject of the "Widows Pension Bill." The name of the speaker is Miss Helen Winslow.

Mrs. Mary Hastings Slade, who by the way is the club favorite as a singer, delighted those present by her exquisite rendering of "Caro Mome," by Rigoletto, "Verborgenhut" by Hugo Wolf and "My Mother Bids me Bind my Hair," by Handel; Mrs. Chandler W. Smith.

The speaker of the afternoon, Miss Zilpah Smith, who is associate director of the School for Social Workers spoke upon "Methods Common to Social Investigation."

Miss Smith in her talk outlined methods of social investigation. She explained what qualities were necessary for a successful social worker and what kind of investigation was the most satisfactory and revealed absolute conditions. She laid stress upon the spirit which underlies the investigation; how it must be broad and deep and aim to remove need and avoid reoccurance of the condition. She emphasized the necessity of having faith in the power of recovering every person. In the matter of making inquiry into cases of charity where assistance is needed, she explained how much more to be relied upon was the information which could be obtained by the trained, social worker than that of persons not trained to accuracy of speech and exactness in thought. She showed how time and energy could be conserved by having access to carefully kept records of each specific case of assistance given and how these records are often used rather than more personal interviews.

She pointed out the necessity for the social worker to be a person of unusual keenness of mind, and an accurate judge of character—one who must act with caution and make the person in need give out all that there is in him to help himself, and yet be prompt with assistance but remember how intimate his relations are—and the call for privacy in his movements.

She dwelt upon how the social worker must approach each case with no preconceived ideas of conditions or he would be unable to absolutely fairly sense conditions which he found. The good investigation should be free from prejudice, beyond making careless observation and free from alteration of memory.

Miss Smith was followed closely by her audience and her talk was thoroughly appreciated.

ATLANTIC SHAKESPEARE SOC.

The Atlantic Shakespeare Society held its first regular meeting for the season of 1912-1913 with Mrs. F. A. Bartlett, Billings road. The president Mrs. W. Ward Whitcher, opened the meeting with greetings to the members and called for quotations from Hamlet after which Mrs. Tenney, took charge of the reading, giving a synopsis of the first act in Hamlet; Mrs. Marble the second and Mrs. Read the third. The members then read the fourth act through to a part of scene seventh, Mrs. Cummings singing Ophelia songs.

At the business meeting, after the reading, Mrs. Whitcher called attention to the disposal of the one hundred dollars the society had raised and voted in 1907 to be used, whenever the Trustees of the Quincy Public Library should establish a branch reading room in Atlantic, for books or furnishings. As the happy day was about to be realized and the reading room to be opened October 23rd it was the duty of the society to vote their preferences and it was voted that one hundred dollars should go towards the furnishings, and an additional twenty dollars to be appropriated towards purchasing a set of Rolf's Shakespeare, forty volumes, to be placed in the reading room.

At a special meeting of the society in September it was voted not to accept the resignation of the president Mrs. Whitcher, she feeling that her removal to another city rendered it wise to resign. The society wishing her to remain as president for the year. At her request it was voted that Mrs. Theodore Parker represent her at the meetings, and become associate president, her duties being less arduous, as each member was to serve as chairmann for an afternoon.

At the close of the business meeting the secretary read a tribute, prepared by a committee and written by Mrs. Charles L. Coe, to our late member Mrs. Roger H. Wilde whose tragic death occurred last August. It was a fitting tribute to a noble woman who as expressed by all will be sadly missed. Her cheery ways and willingness to help will always be remembered. We truly mourn her with grief too deep for tears.

ATLANTIC READING ROOM

Formally Opened to the Public for Service Today

The Atlantic Reading room, a branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library of Quincy, was formally opened to the public at 3 o'clock, this afternoon. Invitations had been sent out to a great many people who took advantage of this opportunity to make an inspection of the new branch.

The hours of the reading room will be from 3 to 5.30 and from 6.30 to 8.30 P. M. The room will close Friday at 6 o'clock.

The distributing station will be conducted similar to the West Quincy reading room. There will be a stock of volumnes on hand and it will be possible to request a book from the person in charge and it will be secured inside of a few days.

Advantages which will accrue to the reading public of Atlantic are manifold, and no doubt a particular interest will be displayed by the school children. At West Quincy they can be termed the life of the place and they easily outnumber the adult patrons.

The Thomas Crane Public Library was established in 1871. It is an endowed institution and has filled a want in the city. The Crane Memorial Hall was dedicated in 1882 and an addition erected in 1908. The West Quincy reading room was opened in 1910.

Quincy has a population of 32,642 and there are 32,900 volumes in the library, an average of one to a resident. The total circulation in 1911 was 107,882 volumes which is a great increase over former years.

EFFORTS APPRECIATED.

With the opening of a branch library and reading room this afternoon at Atlantic ones thoughts naturally turn to the one who has been the prime mover and worked hard to accomplish this end.

A few years ago, some seven years or so there came to reside at Atlantic Mr. and Mrs. W. Ward Whitcher, both of whom quickly identified themselves with the city's interests and looked about for some good work to do.

Mrs. Whitcher organized the Atlantic Shakespeare Society, for the mutual benefit and pleasure of its members but for a broader work as plans were soon under way to raise money for a library and reading room at Atlantic.

Mrs. Whitcher also became active in the Quincy Women's club as chairman of the Civic committee and undertook the improvement of the grounds about the Atlantic station and shade trees on the streets, also interested her committee and club members in her pet scheme of branch libraries. Her aim was to have eventually a branch in every ward of the city.

The trustees of the Thomas Crane Public Library were unable for lack of funds and other causes to open even one branch library. Mayor Shea was approached and immediately became interested. When a vacancy occurred in the board of trustees of the library he appointed Mr. Whitcher to the place who immediately began to work for branch libraries.

It was decided that West Quincy stood most in need of one and since its opening over a year ago, the wisdom of the movement has been demonstrated by the use and appreciation of its privileges.

This year Mayor Stone has been interested in the work as was his predecessor and it was decided to open another reading room, the choice being naturally and justly given to Atlantic in recognition of the long and continued efforts of the loyal band of women who have worked for it.

The Atlantic Shakespeare Society has for some time stood ready to help financially and recently voted money for furnishings, etc. We do not know whether the trustees have accepted this generous offer, but today sees the branch reading room in Atlantic an accomplished fact due probably to the energy and loyalty of this club of Atlantic women.

It is hoped the work and interest will not abate until every ward in the city has its own branch. No better appreciation of Mrs. Whitcher's efforts could be given than by carrying forward what she has so well begun.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitcher are to move to Waterbury, Conn., the first of November and their going will be a distinct loss to the city, for since they became residents here they have been identified with every thing progressive and for the betterment of the city.

MR. SHAW'S LETTER

best interests of our city upon the altar of their ambition.

But it also seems to me that we should be failing to take advantage of all the opportunities the situation is offering if we did not make a careful examination of some of the salient features of our form of government with a view of discovering whether there are not some weak points which it might be wise to strengthen.

There is one political superstition which may as well be exploded first as last:—It is utterly and absolutely impossible to construct a self- acting mechanism which will secure honesty and guarantee efficient administration without constant and intelligent watchfulness on the part of the citizens. We may as well cease to beguile ourselves with the illusion that it is possible to construct such a mechanism of government as will require the attention of the citizens only on election day. Just as long as ours is a government "by the people," the people must take sufficient active interest in the doings of the officials elected to manage their affairs to keep these officials thoroughly alive to the fact that they are the servants of the people, and it is the interests of the whole ciy, not their own personal interests which they are elected to serve.

It is this lack of public interest between elections that permits officials who are so disposed to apply the test of personal interest in reelection to their official actions, rather than the test of the city's welfare, and it is this lack of watchfulness in the past that has largely contributed to our present awakening.

Undoubtedly the one thing we should strive for NOW is the election of men of well recognized ability and integrity to pilot Quincy through the shoal and dangerous waters of financial infirmity and too much stress cannot be laid upon the imperative necessity of every comunity in the city putting forward the best possible materialat its command for service in the city council of 1913.

The message to those citizens of Quincy who by reason of their experience and proved ability in the handling of large affairs are well fitted to serve the city as Councilmen, is QUINCY NEEDS YOU! YOU OWE YOUR CITY A DUTY! Be willing to make some sacrifice to the general welfare in this time of Quincy's need.

With an able, efficient, public-spirited man as Mayor, and a strong, efficient body of Councilmen, much can be done in the coming year to lighten the load. It cannot all be done at once, and it is folly to expect any man, however capable, to undo in one year the accumulated errors and burdens of several years; but a long step in the right direction can be taken by a good capable Mayor and an efficient Council.

So our present efforts ought to be bent principally upon the selection, nomination, and election of the right kind of men to direct the management of Quincy during the coming year. If your ward has not been sending the right men, Mr. Citizen, it will be YOUR FAULT if it does not send the right men this year.

At the same time, there are one or two features of our form of government which it seems to me deserve a little attention.

One of the matters which it may pay us to consider is whether a one year term is sufficient to give a Mayor or Councilman enough time to carry out their policies effectively enough to prove their worth.

This suggestion bears with a greater force upon the office of Mayor, because the major part of dictating the policies of the administration falls to this official.

One of the advantages of a two year term is the removal to a large degree of the temptation to "play politics for re-election;" and this fact alone, to my mind, is enough to commend the change. Those who have followed the discussion in previous letters will recall many points which have indicated how this "political forethought" has militated to the great disadvantage of the city.

The idea is not new. It seems to be the consensus of leading opinion among the law-makers and students of political economy that a two year term is more desirable than a one year term.

Among the ten or twelve cities which have applied for revision of their charters within the past three years more than half have adopted the two year term.

In nearly all cases the term of the councilmen has also been increased to two years. and only half of that body are elected each year, thereby shortening the ballot and thus ensuring a more careful selection of the men.

Three of the later revisions have adopted the abolishment of the party designation, which also seems to be a step in the right direction.

There seems to be little or no connection between the broad fundamental issues of state and national politics and the issues of our purely local governmental affairs. With the party designation in city elections abolished, there ought to be a strengthening of the thoughtful public sentiment of the city which would result in the election of more independent, public pirited, efficient public officials.

It would shorten the ballot and concentrate the interest on the personal characteristics and individual worth of fewer candidates, and this fact alone is not without considerable force in solving the problem which confronts the citizens of Quincy.

The matters above discused are, I believe, worthy of the careful and thoughtful attention of every citizen, and I sincerely hope there will be sufficient interest manifested to bring out further discussion of these and similar matters in order that the force of public opinion upon these points may be felt.

Another letter Saturday.

FORMER QUINCY YOUNG MAN DEAD

It is with much sorrow that Quincy people learned of the death on Monday of Walter P. Jones, the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Jones of Dorchester, formerly of Quincy.

The deceased was a pupil of the public schools of this city, having graduated from the Washington school class of 1908, and attended the High school until his removal to Dorchester.

For several months he had been in ill health and although the best of medical aid was administered he failed to rally.

Funeral services will be held at his late home 12 Lonsdale street Dorchester, Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. Friends and relatives are invited to attend. Burial will be at Lowell.

HOSPITAL CAMPAIGN

Chairmann Pfaffmann was right on the job at the close of the supper and had things moving at a lively clip. The teams compared notes and submitted their reports as shown above. The three teams which failed to report were on hand but for various reasons withheld their statements. There is no rivalry or petty jealousy bearing upon the size of the pledges received. All are doing the best they can and that best means that the ground is fully covered.

At the suggestion of Chairman Pfaffmann the members of the teams, made their pledges at this session and quite a little sum which does not appear in the returns Tuesday night was realized. Fred B. Rice, said he did not think it was judicious to announce the donors at this time. The teams were at work on several propositions which would undoubtedly result in large donations of this kind from time to time which will materially swell the total.

While optimistic as to the result the teams are by no means going to permit this sentiment to lead to any laxity in their efforts and it will be a continuous dig from now on until the campaign closes to reach the $35,000 mark and go as far beyond that as possible.

The supper this evening will be served at the usual hour 6.20 o'clock and will be in charge of Mrs. Albert G. Olney, assisted by Mrs. Walter Brady, Miss Gertrude Lacey, Miss Florence Olney, Mrs. Thomas Lacey, Mrs. Francis Corey and Mrs. Edward Badger.

On Thursday evening Mrs. George E. Pfaffmann wil have charge of the supper. This will be distinct novelty as it will be of the Dutch type, when Dutch dishes of all kinds will be served.

MOSLEMS WON'T READILY YIELD

Last Ditch Fighters Have Advantage of Fortifications

BULGARIAN ARMY SUCCESSES

Capture of Kirk-Kilisse and Taking of 20,000 Prisoners There Appears Improbable at This Time—Big Battle, However, Cannot Be Long Delayed—Powers Continue to Confer

London, Oct. 23.—If the report be true that Servian and Bulgarian armies have formed a junction before Adrianople, mustering 325,000 men and 600 guns, the situation there is most perilous for the Turk. It would seem hardly possible that any such body of troops could be collected at this point in so short a time.

However, the Bulgarian army is well organized and capable of rapid concentration. Whether this can be said of the Servian establishment is open to question.

Opposed to this alleged overwhelming force is said to be 100,000 Turks with 300 guns. But the Moslems are behind fortifications and are last ditch fighters. There is little fear that they will not render a good account of themselves.

Stories of Turkish troops fleeing in panic before all-conquering Balkan arms must be taken with a grain of salt. In spite of the persistence of the rumor it is doubtful if Kirk-Kilisse has been "captured after a day of severe fighting with 20,000 prisoners, three months' food supplies and ammunition enough to supply the army for some time."

Kirk-Kilisse is but thirty-two miles from Adrianople, and a report says that the victorious invaders pressed on, stormed the northern forts of Adrianople and cut the communication between that city and the outside world.

In other quarters minor Bulgarian columns are developing an attack against the Salonica-Constantinople line. Yet another column is marching down the Struma valley, and, with the aid of the guerilla chief Sandansky, is said to have inflicted heavy loss on a small Turkish force, south of the Servian frontier.

The armies of Servia and Greece also continue to clear their way to their main objective points, the Turkish fortresses of Uskup and Servia, the last of these a Turkish town on the Grecian frontier.

Greek Armies Cross Frontier

Greek armies have crossed the Turkish frontier at two points. In Epirus, at the western end, they have occupied the heights of Grimbovo, while at the eastern end they are pursuing the Turkish troops to their base at Servia, where an important battle is expected to be fought, and the taking of which by the Greeks would carry them appreciably nearer to the Monastir and Salonica road.

The Servian armies are probably having the hardest fighting at the present moment. They are operating toward Uskup and Pristina and further north in the district of Novipazar and have to contend not only against Turkish regulars, but also against Arnauts, who are fierce fighting Albanian tribesmen. One of their armies has advanced as far as the outskirts of Kumanova, the principal town between the Servian frontier and Uskup.

Pristina, which was reported to have been captured some days ago, is still in the hands of the Turks, although the Servian invaders have secured possession of the mountain pass leading to that city. A large Turkish force is marching on Kumanovo, and a decisive action in this quarter of the field cannot long be delayed.

A telegram from Vienna says it is announced from Salonica that Zekki Pasha has concentrated 100,000 men at Kumanovo, with numerous artillery and machine guns. The Servians also have probably 100,000 men.

The Greeks are reported in a telegram from Athens to have seized the island of Lemnos, near the mouth of the Dardanelles.

The representatives of the powers continue actively to confer, and it is now suggested that intervention in the Balkans might occur earlier than was hitherto thought probable. It is generally believed, however, that one big battle must be fought before the powers can take any decisive steps.

Johnson became more closely enmeshed in the web the federal government is weaving around him with the developments of yesterday and last night. The negro still remains closely in his cafe, fearing assassination if he appears on the street.

Young Tyson procured a revolver, wrote a note that his "dying wish" was "to conquer the world" and get "his Alva" and went to the home of the Rosses. He was denied admittance to the flat.

Getting in at last and failing to find Alva, Toby, crying that life was not worth living without her, shot himself in the head. He died three hours later.

ROOSEVELT AT SAGAMORE HILL

Says It Is Mighty Good to Be Home Again

A WEEK OF ABSOLUTE REST

All That Is Required to Put Him In Best of Condition—Train Leaves Him at Syosset Instead of Oyster Bay—Shows No Ill Effects From Trip—Will Do Some Campaigning

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Oct. 23.—A week of absolute rest is all that is required, in the opinion of the physicians, to put Colonel Roosevelt in the best of condition. At the end of that time, if he follows the strict regime which has been planned for him, it is expected that he will be able to take up the campaign in its closing days.

The colonel reached Sagamore hill from Chicago yesterday and walked unassisted up the stairs, and went to bed.

"Its mighty good to be home again," he said.

While a week was set as the period of absolute rest, it was explained that for a considerably longer time Roosevelt must avoid hard work, and that it will be impossible for him to attempt to make many speeches. Several weeks will be required for the complete healing of the wound and the knitting of the fractured rib.

Mr. Roosevelt and party stopped at Syosset, four miles south of Oyster Bay, the train being routed thither in order to avoid any crowd. Only a handful of persons were on hand when Roosevelt stepped from his car and walked unassisted to a waiting automobile. He was driven immediately to Sagamore hill.

When he reached his home the colonel's wound was dressed. The doctors said the wound showed no ill effects from the trip.

"I'm feeling just fine," said Roosevelt as he waved his hat to the small crowd. To the townfolks at Oyster Bay, who were a bit surprised at not seeing Roosevelt come in there, the following message was sent by his physicians:

"Colonel Roosevelt has stood the journey well, but we believe him in no condition to stand the excitement of receiving his many friends at Oyster Bay. He deeply appreciates their interest in his welfare. We regret the necessity of avoiding landing at Oyster Bay, but deem it better for him to go from Syosset to Sagamore hill."

Colonel Roosevelt was eating a hearty breakfast when the train pulled into the Pennsylvania station in New York from Chicago. He was fully dressed. In accordance with plans previously arranged, all persons were barred from the trainshed except the members of the family. The colonel's special car and the car of the physicians and newspaper men were quickly detached and started toward Oyster Bay. Drs. Lambert and Terrell said that the colonel's wound was oozing some, but that he was in excellent condition.

Man Shoots His Wife and Finishes Job to End Her Suffering

San Francisco, Oct. 23.—"I've just killed my wife," said a voice over the telephone to police headquarters. "You'd better come get me in a hurry before I kill myself."

At the address given the police found Mrs. Alice Currier dead on the kitchen floor. George, her husband, told the police his wife had attacked him with a knife and pistol, in delirium resulting from typhoid fever, and he had shot her in self-defense.

As the woman lay on the floor, the husband asserts, she said to him:

"Well, George, you'd better finish me," so he shot her again.

Currier formerly was an inmate of the Napa Insane asylum.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

OYSTER SOUPS.

A NOURISHING and palatable soup or stew may be eaten by many persons who do not care for oysters served in any other way.

The milk should be absolutely sweet and fresh, and the same should be true of the butter which enriches it.

Nourishing Food.

Oyster Soup.—Scald half a dozen oysters in their own liquor, having first carefully taken off the beards; put them in a small soup pot; simmer the beards and liquor in half a pint of white stock; strain, season with salt, pepper and mace; thicken with a tiny bit of flour and butter, add two tablespoonfuls of cream, reheat, pour over the oysters and serve.

Oyster Chowder.—Take about four dozen large oysters. Prepare one cupful of finely chopped celery and two cupfuls of cold boiled rice. Lay a layer of celery in the bottom of a saucepan. Over this put a layer of rice and a layer of washed oysters. Season with salt and pepper and repeat until all the materials are used. Pour one cupful of boiled water on this and cook slowly for half an hour. Into the beaten yolks of two eggs pour one cupful of milk and add this to the chowder. Stir carefully for a few minutes and serve hot.

Rich and Tempting Soups.

Bisque of Oysters.—Take about a quart of fresh oysters, one quart of rich milk or cream, eight crumbed and powdered soda crackers, a teaspoonful of beef extract, a half cupful of finely minced celery, two tablespoonfuls of butter, worked into an equal quantity of flour, the yolks of three eggs, a teaspoonful of salt and one-half teaspoonfuls of pepper, with a sprinkle of cayenne. Chop the oysters, put into a stewpan of their own liquor and a pint of water, the celery, beef extract, crackers, salt, pepper and a little parsley. Boil slowly for twenty minutes. Rub through a sieve until all moisture has been pressed through. Return to the stove, add milk and simmer again for ten minutes. Set back and stir in the beaten yolks of the eggs. Serve at once.

A Palatable Stew.

Oyster Stew.—Take two quarts of oysters and drain them with a fork from their liquor; wash them in water to free them from grit. Cut in small pieces two slices of lean bacon; strain the oyster liquor and put in it the bacon, oysters, some parsley, thyme and onions tied in a bunch as thick as the thumb. Season with pepper and salt if necessary. Let it boil slowly, and when almost done add a lump of butter as large as a hen's egg rolled in flour and a gill of good cream.

SOME CURRIED DISHES.

PERSONS who prepare their food highly spiced will like curried dishes.

These foods are either seasoned by the use of a curry powder or are served with a curry sauce.

Curry sauce may be used with eggs, chicken, etc., and is prepared as follows:

Curry Sauce.—Take a tablespoonful of chopped onion and cook for five minutes in a tablespoonful of butter. Stir in a tablespoonful of curry powder and two tablespoonfuls of flour and stir it into the butter. Then add a pint of hot milk, stirring it in very gradually.

Meat and Vegetable Curries.

Curry of Beef.—Take cold roast beef and cut it into small cubes. Mince an onion and brown it in a frying pan. Add to the onion a teaspoonful of curry powder, a saltspoonful of salt and quarter of a pint of water. Thicken this with a teaspoonful of flour mixed with a little cold water. Add the meat and squeeze over it the juice of an orange.

Curried Tomatoes.—Take a cupful of rice and wash well. Then open a quart can of tomatoes and have a casserole dish ready. Put in alternate layers of tomatoes and the uncooked rice, season with one tablespoonful of minced ham, one teaspoonful of minced parsley and a teaspoonful of curry powder. On the top layer sprinkle cracker crumbs and dots of butter and bake.

These Are Highly Spiced.

Curried Eggs.—Take four eggs, an onion, an apple, one tablespoonful of curry powder, one dessertspoonful of minced chutney, one ounce and a half of butter, one ounce of flour, half a pint of stock, a squeeze of lemon juice and salt. Boil the eggs hard, remove the shell and cut in half lengthways. Chop the onion and apple and fry in the butter. Add the curry powder and then the flour and the stock. Boil for ten minutes; then put in the eggs until they are warmed through. Serve with boiled rice.

Curried Chicken.—Take a nice tender chicken. Cut up and place in a deep saucepan. Fry in butter until light brown. Take out the chicken and fry chopped onion in the same butter until light brown, add one dessertspoonful of curry powder and fry a little, constantly stirring. Put the chicken in again, with one dessertspoonful of grated cocoanut, three cloves and a small stick of cinnamon. Mix well. Add one gill of rich brown sauce, one-half gill of tomato pulp and one-half gill of stock or water. Boil and skim. Cover and let simmer forty minutes. Ten minutes before serving salt to taste and add the juice of one-half a lemon. Serve with plain boiled rice.

KILLED DURING AUTO RIDE

Woman Shot to Death by One of a Party of Five Men

Bridgeport, Conn., Oct. 23.—A young woman who is supposed to have lived in Waters street, in this city, was taken in an automobile to a lonely spot on the road from Bridgeport to Derby last evening by five men and shot to death by one of them.

Three men believed to have been members of the party are under arrest in Stratford, and the state police and the local authorities in all the surrounding towns are making diligent search for the others.

A chauffeur named William Hull took the five young men and the woman from this city. He told the Stratford police he had driven along the highway until a mile from Stratford. There he was ordered to stop his car. The men and the woman got out and he was told to drive on a short distance and to turn the car about. As he was about to turn around he heard five shots and on reaching the spot where his passengers had gotten out, he saw the woman lying dead in the road. The five men had disappeared.

GOVERNMENT BOAT TO CHASE PIRATES

Services of Special Cutter Needed in Philippine Waters

Washington, Oct. 23.—Piracy has again broken out in Philippine waters, according to advices received from Manila, and the Philippine government is taking vigorous steps to suppress it. The pirates are reported to be active in the Sulu archipelago and the government has authorized the construction of a fast cutter at a cost of $100,000.

The cutter will carry two Hotchkiss rapid fire guns, and two speedy motor boats, to be carried on davits amidships, also will be armed. The motor boats are intended for use in the pursuit of the buccaneers when they seek to escape by sailing their light craft over the reefs that cannot be crossed by the larger vessels.

THE PRETTY LITTLE GOVERNESS

The train shot out of sight in the blackness of the night; a pencil of light from the station lamp, shimmering upon the wet platform, dimly outlined the figure of a young girl clad in a water-proof. A carriage drove up, with the curtain closely drawn, and a loud but not unpleasant voice called out:

"This way, please."

A drive over a rough road brought them to a commodious residence, surrounded by grounds ample enough for a park. As it was late she was shown at once to a room.

She arose early the next morning, awakened by the brightness of the atmosphere and the sweet singing of the birds.

She had given her name as Kate Conover, and had come to accept the position of governess in the family.

Presently the lady of the house knocked and entered the room. Evidently she was much pleased with the new arrival, for her eyes rested upon a sweet, frank face, graceful, compact form, and an attire as neat as it was sensible.

"I hardly expected to find you so young," Mrs. Cameron said.

"No?" asked Miss Conover, "still—you will find me proficient."

"Oh, to be sure." Mrs. Cameron hurriedly said, "Please walk down to breakfast."

The breakfast-room reached, she said:

"Miss Conover—Brice Rutherford, my nephew."

The name startled the young lady so much that her self-possession almost failed her. She bowed in recognition of the introduction, and then turned her attention to the two children who were to be under her charge.

During the morning meal she cast several furtive glances at Brice Rutherford, not quite sure whether he was the man who had driven her from the station or not. He was reticent then—he seemed to be reticent now. He was young, handsome, refined, with, perhaps, rather an exalted opinion of himself.

It was not remarkable that, during the summer, he began to take considerable interest in the pretty little governess. He was thrown almost daily in her society, and her frankness was especially charming to him, because he was not much disposed to be frank himself.

His interest at last assumed a more fervent shape, and finally led him to make a declaration of love. A look of triumph crossed her face, but it escaped his notice, for she was seated in the shadow.

"This isn't unexpected," she replied, but—"

Brice Rutherford frowned at the remark, and waited for her to conclude it.

"You see, you don't know anything about me," she said, starting in afresh.

"Oh, but I flatter myself I do," was his reply. "I never act without proper consideration."

"I mean as to my—my—antecedents," Miss Conover said. "As to my—my—purposes—"

"I don't care about your antecedents," he interrupted. "And as for your purposes, I hope one of them will be to make me as happy as you can."

"Oh, to be sure," replied she.

"Well, I am glad that we understand each other, and—"

"But, I don't know that we do," interrupted she, in turn. "I know that you proposed to me, but I cannot recall that I accepted you."

"Oh!" he ejaculated, with a crestfallen look.

Miss Conover laughed softly, and said: "I am willing to hold your offer under advisement."

"That will not satisfy me," he replied.

"But it must," replied she. "I think I am according you a great deal."

"Well, maybe you are," he said, with a grimace. "I can't say that I'm excessively grateful."

"I'll give you my answer in September," Miss Conover replied. "That isn't far off you know."

"Well, no it isn't" assented he, and that closed the conversation.

In the early part of September business took him to the city, and he was absent a week. When he returned to his aunt's country seat he found that the pretty little governess was no longer there. He was almost dumbfounded.

"Where is she?" he asked.

"I don't know," replied Mrs. Cameron. "Amongst her friends, no doubt."

"She is coming back?"

"No much to my regret and the disappointment of the children."

Brice Rutherford stared at the carpet.

"Did she leave a message for me?" he asked.

"A letter, at least," replied Mrs. Cameron. "I notice that there is one on her bureau directed to you."

He hurried up stairs in a manner not in keeping with his habitual dignity. When he opened the envelope he was surprised to find one of his own letters in it, although he had never written to her. A look of consternation spread over his face as he read it.

In his boyhood he had had a little sweetheart, named Rose Ralston. It was stipulated between the parents of both that the two should be married when they were old enough.

He was sent to school on the continent, where he stayed until he had attained his majority. He then wrote home declining to renew the attachment of his boyhood, or to carry out the stipulations. Indeed, so emphatic was he, that one or two sentences were unkind, because uncalled for.

He stared at the letter in a dazed way.

"How did Miss Conover get hold of it?" he asked himself. "And what was her object in redirecting it to me? She promised to give me her decision—"

He broke the line of his thought with a sharp exclamation.

"I've solved the mystery," he muttered. "Kate Conover is Rose Ralston. She is a little flirt, and fancies that she's got even with me."

He closed his conjectures with an expression which was near profanity.

"Aunt Rachel," he said, when he had rejoined his aunt, "do you know that Miss Conover is Rose Ralston?"

"Impossible!" exclaimed Mrs. Cameron.

"But, aunt, she is."

"No. Do you think her coming here was—was—planned?"

"Why, no, Brice. It came about by accident. She didn't know you were here or that I am your aunt."

"You are sure of that?"

"Of course I am. What does she say in the letter?"

"It isn't from her."

"Eh! Who then?"

"Why did she masquerade here under another name?" evaded Brice. "Why should she masquerade any where?"

"My dear boy, I can't answer that," Mrs. Cameron said. "I am not convinced that she did."

"Well, it doesn't matter much, anyhow," Rutherford rejoined, which was a bold falsehood, for he knew that it mattered a good deal to him.

A year later found Kate Conover standing in a grove in the Yellowstone Park. She was looking down a long vista of charming scenery, her face bronzed, her form plump and the blue in her eyes deeper and sweeter than ever.

She heard footsteps behind her, and on turning around beheld a handsome, sun-burned tourist. A second, and her face grew very red, for the man was Brice Rutherford. She had punished him, to be sure; but she had also punished herself.

He relieved her of her embarrassment by offering his hand with easy gracefulness.

"I'll now take your answer," he said.

"What answer?" she asked with renewed blushes.

"This is September," he reminded.

"Oh!" ejaculated she. "So it is, but I named last September. I left you my answer."

"But there wasn't anything in it for me, or else I was too stupid to see it. It may have implied—"

"Yes, it implied," she interrupted with a charming little laugh.

"Oh, bother that idiotic letter!" Brice cried.

"And your stumpy, romping, freckled-faced, tom-boy sweetheart, Rose Ralston," added she, quoting from the letter.

"I meant nothing by it, and I'm sorry I wrote it," replied Brice getting red in the face in turn. "I could not foresee that I'd afterward meet Rose Ralston in Kate Conover, and fall in love with her. You have two names and you should not be punctilious about assuming a third. Mine is at your service. Please give me the answer you promised."

"Well, Brice," she said, her blue eyes dancing with fun, "I am not able to recall the question with much distinctness. If you will repeat it, in the same attitude, with the same fervor and with the same wild waiting look in your eyes, perhaps I may be able—"

"Oh, I couldn't," interrupted Brice, laughing. "One such effort in a lifetime is enough. I haven't yet recovered the energy which I expended on that occasion. You intend to accept me but you are too—too—modest to say so. I will not insist, you know."

"Oh, thank you," she replied. "It is a—a great relief to me."

And as they were married before the close of the year, it is presumed that they reached an understanding at last.—Frank H. Stauffer.

CONFESSION OF SHAPIRO

Backs Up Rose's Story of the Murder of Rosenthal

CRIME DIRECTED BY BECKER

Heavy Blow to Defense When Chauffeur of "Murder Car" Decides at Last Moment to Let Other Defendants Shift For Themselves—Sullivan Recalled to Stand

New York, Oct. 23.—The case of the state against Police Lieutenant Becker closed abruptly and dramatically yesterday afternoon with the district attorney, at the court's command, reading into the record a flood of testimony from Becker's star witness, "Jack" Sullivan, for whose admission Becker's lawyers had fought long and hard when Sullivan testified before.

The jury will retire tomorrow morning to decide whether or not Becker is guilty of the murder of Herman Rosenthal. Today will be devoted entirely to summing up for the defense by Mr. McIntyre and for the state by Mr. Moss. Each will have four hours. Tomorrow morning Justice Goff will deliver his charge to the jury.

These arrangements were ordered by the court yesterday afternoon, after the defense had rested its case without calling Becker.

The case of the defense sagged to an end at noon yesterday after their last witnesses had made admissions hurtful to Becker's cause and discouraging to his lawyers. And then the district attorney, as a final blow, hurled against them the testimony of William Shapiro, the chauffeur of the murder car, who, bending to the persuasion of his lawyer, Aaron J. Levy, broke away from the gunmen, who cursed him as he left them in the Tombs, and corroborated on the witness stand everything that Jack Rose had testified to about the rounding up of the murderers and about their departure from Webber's gambling house to kill Rosenthal.

Shapiro's decision at the last moment to let the gunmen, Jack Sullivan and Becker shift for themselves, was a shocking blow to the defense. They had tried to get Shapiro to testify for Becker. In the Tombs the chauffeur had been urged to keep his mouth shut at least. But Levy, his lawyer, advised him that if he hoped to save himself from the electric chair he had better volunteer to tell the truth.

So yesterday Shapiro made an affidavit covering his connection with the murder. It was not only a detailed corroboration of the testimony of Rose or the other informers as to the movements of the murderers, but of their accusation that Becker was the director of the murder.

Shapiro was permitted to testify to practically everything contained in the affidavit, except as to what he had heard one of the gunmen say to another about Becker, and except as to Sullivan's efforts to get him to say that he had driven Vallon and Schepps from the murder. But he was allowed to testify that he had not seen Vallon or Schepps after he left them with Rose and Dago Frank at Webber's poker room. Herein lay the keenest disappointment to the defense. With one word Shapiro destroyed the impression that Becker's lawyers had sought to create, that Vallon and Schepps were the actual murderers.

Mr. McIntyre had declared his case rested when Sullivan was recalled. He said frankly that he did not want Sullivan's testimony.

The court ordered the case reopened and instructed an attendant to bring Sullivan over from his cell in the Tombs and put him on the witness stand. McIntyre refused to question him and Justice Goff instructed the district attorney to ask the witness, "as a part of the case of the defense," certain questions which the court had excluded during Sullivan's previous testimony.

These questions had to do with conversations Sullivan said he had in jail with Rose and Webber.

Sullivan told his story belligerently and excitedly, in his own way, just as he had asked permission to tell it when he was on the stand before. Sullivan's testimony, guided by the unwilling hand of the district attorney, was in direct support of the contention of the defense that Rose, Webber, Vallon and Schepps, informers and state's witnesses, had conspired in jail to send Becker to the electric chair by their own perjury.

Becker spoke somewhat bitterly over the refusal of his lawyers to let him take the stand and do the best he could for himself.

"I wanted to testify," he said, "but whenever the matter came up for discussion there was always a difference of opinion. They couldn't agree."

"What kind of a verdict do you think you will get?" he was asked.

"Why, I'll be acquitted," said Becker soberly. "How could there be any other kind of a verdict?"

RACE TRACK CLOSED

Citizen Soldiers Carry Out Governor's Orders at Mineral Springs

Chicago, Oct. 23.—Two companies of the Indiana state militia took charge of the Mineral Springs race track and prevented any of the races on the card from being run.

When the horses were brought out for the first race, Captain Kimball of the South Bend company ordered his men to fix bayonets, and the horses with their jockeys were driven back into the stables. The citizen soldiers had been ordered out by Governor Marshall, with instructions to close the track.

Army Aviators' Close Call

Washington, Oct. 23.—Lieutenant Geiger of the United States army aviation corps and Corporal Rice narrowly escaped death in a hydroplane flight. While 100 feet above the Potomac river the wind capsized the machine, carrying the two men into the river. They were rescued by a launch.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. WOODS FIRE ANNOYING

Houses Endangered at Many Points Off Quincy Avenue

NO WINDOWS OPEN

The Central station auto chemical was called out twice, to check a heavy woods fire in the vicinity of Quincy avenue. The first call was about six o'clock last night. After working for some time, the blaze was supposed to have been deadened, but it broke out with renewed energy during the night. Prior to this first call the woods had been burning for some time, and the flames leaped high in the air catching in the trees and forming a brilliant illumination. Ats everal points houses were endangered so close did the flames approach.

That entire section of the city was enveloped in a dense canopy of smoke, which became so thick and disagreeable that people were forced to keep their windows closed all night to exist in any degree of comfort.

At 3 o'clock this morning the same piece of apparatus was called to a lively fire in the woods off Quincy avenue. The woods had been burning for some time and again there was danger of some of the houses in the vicinity taking fire. One of the drivers of cows on his way to Brighton saw the fire and as he passed the fire station he notified them.

Hydrant streams were played on the flames and houses at several times to prevent the fire getting the mastery.

DIED AT ATLANTIC.

Mrs. Christine H. Morse, widow of William Morse, died at her home on 69 Atlantic street, Tuesday. The deceased was 49 years old and will be buried at Cedar Grove cemetery.

DEAD TREE ON FIRE.

A fire in a decaying willow tree on Cherry avenue was extinguished by the auto chemical squad at 8.05 Tuesday evening. The call was made by a nearby resident who telephoned the central station.

LIVED ALONE FOR YEARS

Romance In Life Story of Hermit of Mason's Island

New London, Conn., Oct. 23.—An unfortunate romance of close to three-quarters of a century ago is recalled by the death in this city of Andrew Mason, who, for the greater part of his ninety-two years, had lived as a hermit on Mason's island in the Mystic river.

In early life, Andrew and his brother John both were rejected by the daughter of a neighbor. This caused enmity, which proved lifelong between the brothers, and drove them to the life of hermits.

They divided in half Mason's island, which they had inherited from their father, and there for over fifty years each lived on his own portion without intercourse with each other, and having as little as possible to do with the rest of the world.

OLD-TIMERS TO HAVE SAY

At the Trophies Offered at Montclair Today

There were many old timers lined up on the Montclair links of the Wollaston Golf club today, for the handicap medal play tournament. Many were at the links Tuesday to get in form for the event.

George Wright sent out 150 invitations and it was expected that 100 players would be on hand.

Play commenced in the morning and luncheon was served at the club house at noon.

The Wollaston course is just right for the old crowd of players who will compete, being very hard and dry and giving a magnificent run to the ball, making the frozen swing and the hefty heave of old and middle-aged golfers very effective in getting distance with the modern resilient and race-up-the-course forever golf ball.

George Wright says that at least 100 will compete, and that if he had let down the doors to those who wished to play, the gathering would have been several hundreds more.

To those on prize winning bent it might be mentioned that if they take the cake they will not lack the basket to carry it home. The first net prize is a silver cake basket and the second a smaller, but little less desirable, silver basket.

WOMEN'S CLUBS

NATIONAL FEDERATION PRESIDENT.

Mrs. Percy V. Pennypacker, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, is very much appreviated in her own State. Texas men and women both delight to do her honor. A fine tribute to her abilities is printed in the General Federation Bulletin. Folowing is an abstract of the article:

For the next two years Austin will be the capital of woman's clubdom. It means something to be president of an organization containing a membership of approximately a million women. No greater honor is within the gift of the women of the country.

Mrs. Pennypacker has due appreciation of the magnitude of the position to which she has been called and the responsibilities that it entails upon her. It is an office that possesses far-reaching and tremendous power. The organization performs work of vast import for the uplifting and betterment of the women of America. No governor of a State is charged with greater responsibilities, nor has within his power the performance of more vital services than those which are embraced within the limits of action of the president of this Federation.

This organization, which reaches into the homes of the people of nearly every town and city in the United States, has perhaps a greater grasp of the real needs and aspirations of the masses of citizenship than the political parties which are dominated by men. Mrs. Pennypacker, knowing full well as she does, the great factor for permanent benefit that the organization can be made to serve, is entering upon her term of office deeply impressed with the responsibilities that rest upon her. There is hardly an avenue leading to the betterment of womankind in the United States that the National Federation of Women's Clubs is not striving to occupy. Already wonderful results have been accomplished by the work of the well-directed efforts of the organization. Aside from its own separate and distinct operations it is an organized power as an aid to other interests in accomplishing things that have for their purpose the uplifting and improvement of women. Many instances might be cited of what has been done along this line.

Mrs. Pennypacker is typically a home-loving woman. She believes that the higher inspirations come from home life. She has been a widow thirteen years. Her husband was a prominent educator of Texas. She has three children. For many years the people of Austin and of Texas have had an affectionate regard for the woman who now heads the National Federation. She has long occupied a position of prominence and honor in the educational and literary affairs of the State. She is the author of the history of Texas used in every public school in the commonwealth. She first wrote the Texas history twenty-four years ago and since then it has been revised several times.

THE CAMPAIGN WAXES WARM

Strong Undercurrent of Feeling to Bring Out Large etoV

DEMOCRATS AID PROGRESSIVES

Said to Help Them Against Republicans—Many Democrats Want Boston Charter Changes—Fight For Police Control

The presidential campaign is beginning to be energetic. Three parties are waging the most active canvass seen in the state in many years. Even the Socialists are putting up the hottest fight they have made for nearly a decade.

Boston has seen more spectacular campaigns, more red fire and flags, torches and marching bodies, more cheering multitudes on the streets and in halls, but seldom if ever such a man to man canvass, such personal appeal, such house to house presentation of arguments, as has been going on in every district for the last three weeks.

With a real fight in every district in the state this must be the kind of an appeal to win. That is, for the Republicans. The Progressive bolt has brought in a new kind of canvass. Democrats have always rung doorbells in their local fights. Not only within the party, but in their fights against other parties. They have found it a successful method. Republicans will see what they can do with that style of campaigning. The outlook seems good.

It may be said with perfect confidence that the prospects for President Taft in the state are improving steadily. Republican leaders say they believe he will carry the commonwealth by a substantial majority, and that the size of the total vote cast will astonish everybody. They say it is many years since there was so strong a feeling on the part of all Republicans that not to vote this year would be a disgrace, and that the stay-at-home vote will be extremely small.

Local Contests Interest Voters

Those who are not particularly interested in the presidential election are absorbingly interested in the vote for state officers and congressmen, and still more so in the choice of members of the legislature. The local contests will bring out the vote in every part of the commonwealth, unless all reports are misleading. With a great vote, the prospects of Republican success are most cheering. This is the story which comes to Boston from all over the state. It inspires confidence. There are some so optimistic as to say that President Taft will have close to 50 percent of the total vote in Boston. There is no doubt that he will receive many Democratic votes, especially of the foreign born voters.

Governor Foss is finding much difficulty in trying to placate the western part of the state in the matter of his veto of the Western Trolleys bill, so greatly desired in that section. Because he could not get the legislature to pass his pet scheme for a public utilities commission in order that he might make places on it for his political supporters, the governor threatened to veto all other legislation, and the Western Trolleys bill happened to come along just then. He vetoed it to impress the legislature, but the legislature refused to be impressed. He had promised to sign it, but that counted for nothing. Now he is talking waterways for the western part of the state, but the people up there decline to trust the promises of a man who makes them only to break them. His visits there seem to be marked with a coolness on the part of the voters which discourages many of his friends. There is no doubt that he will lose heavily over the vote of last year, when he was aided by the votes of the farmers.

Fight to Succeed Crane

The great contest of the whole campaign seems to be over the succession to Senator W. Murray Crane, and Mayor Fitzgerald is making a tremendous fight to elect a Democratic legislature. It is said that there is no lack of funds for Democratic candidates, and substantial encouragement is being given to Progressive candidates for the legislature all over the commonwealth. It is significant that the Progressives have made no nominations in the strong Democratic districts, but in all the strong Republican districts, and in fact in all other Republican districts, they have put candidates in the field. The charge is made by many Republicans that the Progressive leaders are in a combination with the Democrats for the purpose of defeating Republican candidates for the legislature, and throwing the United States senatorship to Fitzgerald.

As a matter of fact, the Progressive leaders have indicated that they would as soon see Fitzgerald elected senator as a Republican. Mr. Bird started out in a strain like that, in his canvass for governor on the Progressive ticket, but the storm of protests from Progressives themselves at such sentiments has caused Mr. Bird and the party leaders to take another tack, and seek to disavow their responsibility for Fitzgerald and make a show of opposing him. Nevertheless, every vote cast for a Progressive candidate for the legislature is admitted to be a vote for Fitzgerald members of that body.

Democrats Would Repeal Charter

But it is said that the Democrats desire to control the legislature for other reasons than to name a successor to Mr. Crane. The Boston Democracy has always opposed the state control of the police of Boston, because it took a powerful agency out of their hands. Boston has never seen, under state control, any such scandal as is now being uncovered in New York because the control of the police is in the hands of men free from Democratic domination. One of the first things the Democrats are said to plan to do in the event of a Democratic legislature, is to turn back the control of the police to the Boston Democracy, together with the excise commission.

The Boston Democracy has never concealed its aversion to the new Boston charter bill, and it has tried to repeal it in vain. A Democratic legislature would make short work of that charter, with its checks upon such grafting as were seen during the first term of Mayor Fitzgerald, and for which jail sentences followed in at least one case. The Democracy has never taken kindly to the civil service law, and a Democratic legislature would have an opportunity to amend the Massachusetts statute to suit its own sweet will.

The Last Big Rally

The last big rally of the campaign on the Republican side will be held in Tremont Temple, Boston, Saturday evening, Nov. 2, which will be preceded by a band concert. Hon. Samuel J. Elder, president of the Republican club of Massachusetts, under whose auspicies it will be given, is to preside, and the other speakers will be Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, former Governor John L. Bates, former Governor Utter of Rhode Island, former Speaker Joseph Walker, candidate for governor, and others.

FOOTBALL TEAM EAGER FOR FRAY

It Looks as if the Quincy A. A. Would Live Up to Record

It looks like another banner season for the Quincy A. A. football team and the boys who were in the game last year and have appeared to advantage this season are living the clean, sane life necssary to the development of husky athletes.

Manager Flynn has been rather unfortunate to date in securing games and the Millstream A. A. of Chelsea and the Hilton A. C. of Norwood have both cancelled at the last moment. While some of the followers of the local association say that it was cold feet, others are charitable and say it was because they did not want to play in Quincy.

No matter what explanation is advanced by those managers, Manager Flynn is after them for a game and the boys are with him. They want to play football and these two teams are among the best in the state and they are not discouraged by the cancellation of the games.

Sunday afternoon the Millstream A. A. and the Fort Strong team played a scoreless contest at the fort. The day before the soldiers were defeated by Quincy at the park 10 to 7. A game is being arranged between the locals and the Fort Strong players for next Sunday.

CARRITY'S WILD JUMP NEAR ENDED HIS EARTHLY CAREER

Knocked Down By Hose Wagon, Chief's Auto Just Grazed His Body

Fortunate For Him Apparatus Was Homeward Bound

Patrick Garrity will probably never have two closer calls to death and give the grim destroyer the go by, by a narrow margin, than he did Wednesday evening when he jumped directly in front of Hose 1, as it was returning from a fire near the National Sailors Home. Lieut. Faircloth was driving the spirited three horse hitch and as he came out of Ridgeway street on his way back to the station after the fire he saw a man standing on the side of the street. As he reached a point nearly opposite, the man ran into the street with his hands in the air, directly in front of the horses. Lieut. Faircloth did his best to stop his horses but the distance was too short and the man, who proved to be Patrick Garrity, was knocked down by the horses. Fortunately he fell in such a manner that the animals avoided stepping on him and the wheels of the heavy apparatus did not pass over his body.

Directly behind Hose 1, was Chief Litchfield in his auto. His driver however succeeded in checking his car so that when it came to a stop the wheels touched the body of Garrity. Had either the Chief or Hose 1, been going to a fire instead of coming from one their speed would have been such that it would have been impossible to stop or check their apparatus as they did and it would have been good bye for Garrity.

Chief Litchfield picked him up and took him to the Sailors Home. He was put to bed but apparently was none the worse for his experience. Garrity was considerably under the influence of liquor which probably accounts for his freak act of jumping in front of the apparatus.

The fire was in the house of Winifield S. Thompson at 22 Ridgeway street and the department had been summoned by an alarm from Box 154 at 5.53 P. M. The blaze was in a closet under the front stairway. The closet was used for a store room for children's playthings and as there had been no one in the closet during the day it is thought that rats and matches were the cause of the fire. The loss was very slight.

Mr. Thompson and his family were sitting in the kitchen when his young daughter smelled smoke and it was traced to the chamber. When Mr. Thompson opened the door a burst of flame greeted him and the alarm was rung in by young Keith who did not wait at the box to direct the firemen and when they arrived they were at a loss for some moments to locate the blaze.

HOSPITAL FUND NEAR $10,000 BIG JUMP MADE IN RECEIPTS

Fred Rice Announced Another Lump Sum of $3,000 From Friends

Team No. 3 Created a Sensation with its $3,225 Bump

The third "feed" of Hospital campaign fund committee, at the Y. M. C. A. proved a monetary feast, as the thermometer jumped to $9775.50. Team number three created a sensation with its bump of $3225 and Fred Rice, sent the enthusiasm skyward when he quietly announced another $3000 subscription from that evidently fathomless well of finances which he has been tapping with such good effect.

This big jump over the first day made every one feel happy and stirred each team member to dig deeper and harder to make their showing as good as possible.

Still there is much work to be done. The average is a little less than $5000 per day even on this good showing, which means that bigger jumps must be made in the remaining days if the goal of desire is to be successfully reached.

While the receipts up to Tuesday night showed a total of $2529.00 with three teams to hear from, Herbert S. Barker of team No. 10 had slipped in $77. raising the first night total to $2606.

Chairman Pfaffmann was on the job from the drop of the hat. Of the 50 others present, all manifested the same enthusiasm. Every night Mr. Pfaffmann comes forward with an announcement that he has a speech prepared but he mislaid it or some one appropriated it or some other misfortune befell his manuscript so that he declares he has to talk off hand. His off hand addresses however meet with the hearty approval of the others and stimulates them to renewed effort.

It is unfortunate that one of the best workers, George B. Curran, captain of team No. 9, is sick so that he cannot give, as much attention as he would otherwise to this work. However it is hoped that he may be around on the job before the campaign closes and if he does not an effort will be made to have the people assigned to him interviewed.

Hon. William T. Shea, of Team One reported pledges of $50 up to last night, but explained that his team had not struck their gait yet, but when they did, there would be something doing as the returns would show.

The first sensation of the evening came when Capt. Dasha of team three, announced $3,225. At first some people thought he meant $32.25 but when the larger figure was verified there was a cheer of aproval.

Then came Mr. Rice's announcement of $3,000.

CITY HOSPITAL, FRONT VIEW.

TRINITY OF ISSUES DISCUSSED AT NOVEL POLITICAL SOCIAL

Sherman Hoar, Courtney Crocker and James B. Connelly, the Speakers

Progressives Delighted as Roosevelt Led in a Straw Vote

A large audience heard the national issues of the present campaign discussed by members of the three big parties at the political social of the Walther and Rand classes in the Wollaston Baptist church, Wednesday evening.

The speakers were Hon. Roger Sherman Hoar, of Worcester, son of the late Senator George F. Hoar who set forth the Democratic principles. The Republican party was represented by Courtney Crocker of Boston.

James B. Connolly, spoke for the Progressives. Pending the arrival of the last speaker John H. Johnson of Wollaston took the stand for the Progressives.

John L. Miller, president of the Walther class was chairman and in introducing the speakers gave a brief sketch of the political history of the United States.

In presenting Mr. Hoar, Chairman Miller eulogised his father, Senator Hoar, as an honest man and one who had died poor. The speaker raised a laugh by stating in his opening remarks that it was one of the objects of the Democratic party to so change economic conditions that an honest man might die rich.

"Some people say," said Mr. Hoar, "that there are no fundamental distinctions between the three political parties and we should vote for the best man. Each party is fighting toward some common end and we should support our party throughout the entire ticket except where there is a marked disparity in the candidates.

"The Democratic party believes in home rule, that no form of government has the right to interfere with the rights of citizens, that the state has no right to interfere with the municipality, nation with state, or nation with nation, except where affairs directly affect themselves. The Democrats believe that the United States has no right to hold on to the Philippine Islands and that it should get out as quickly as possible. The Democrats stand for a true democracy as against the interference, imperialism and paternalism advocated by the Republican party. The Democrats stand for a government of the people, by the people and for the people. They stand for a reresentative government instead of the delegative government of the Republican.

"They believe all election systems should be simpler and nearer the people in direct primaries and the direct election of United States senators."

Mr. Hoar declared it was the agitation by the Democratic party that forced the Republican vote in favor of direct primaries and the direct election of United States senators.

Limiting the president's term to one year, the limiting of campaign expenses, prevention of press distortion were advocated. The speaker declared for equal rights to all and special privileges to none.

Mr. Hoar spoke against high tariff which he declared caused high prices and let foreign countries get our manufactures at a lower price than we do.

"The Republicans say 'Rob everybody and give it to the man at the top of the pyramid and hope that he will let some of it trickle down to the men below him.' Democrats believe in increasing the purchasing power of the American dollar. It seems to be the object of some of the Progressives to bolt the party ticket. Do not vote for a split alliance but for a united Democracy."

Courtney Crocker of Boston, called attention to the fact that Massachusetts was dependent on her manufacturing plants. "The Democrats," he said, would do away with the protective tariff. With what results? Massachusetts would be thrown into competition with the mills of the world. Many of our mills would have to shut down and many men would be thrown out of work.

"Furthermore the Republican party does not stand pat on the tariff but advocates a progressive tariff program.

"The Republican party has other claims in the personality and achievements of William Howard Taft. The commision of economy and efficiency, bureau of mines, childrens bureau, self sustaining system of the post office, postal banks, parcels post and many others were given as results achieved by the Taft administration."

The achievements of the state Republican party for the last 50 years were brought out by the speaker. Among these were the railroad commission bill, pure food and corrupt practices acts, child labor law, minimum wage and others.

"Do you want your vote used to

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Becker did not take the stand, a circumstance which is supposed not to weigh for or against a defendant, but if he had taken the chance, he certainly would have had no occasion to have felt elation over the results.

Chicago white men of wealth and influence were as much interested in the deluded Cameron girl as the big black.

Theodore Roosevelt is making more voters by convalesing at Oyster Bay, than he would on the stump.

Watch that Thermometer in City Square.

It will grow and grow until the desired $35,000 will look rather small.

The Port directors have cast another few millions into the dock proposition.

Mayor Fitzgerald wants automobilists to notify him of holes and cradle holes in the roads of Boston. Marvelous bid for votes, but how about the people who have to travel over the wavy brick sidewalks in all sections of Boston. Will any attention be given to remedy those abominations for the benefit of pedestrians.

Hyde Park residents want a five cent fare and the citizens do not hesitate to ask for it. What is the matter with Quincy people making a similar demand?

Trusties in the Hillsboro, N. H. jail broke out and went on a regular bat which does not speak well for the discipline of the jail.

The experts are still trying to explain the loss of some of the games in the world's series. The incident is closed. If they have not the backbone to come out and tell the true cause let them give the people a rest on the subject.

Some of the stuff sent out by the publicity bureaus of all the political parties would give an outsider an idea that they were providing stuff for the digestion of a nation of lunatics, or at least less than average intelligence. In doing this they undue all the fulsome flattery of the oratorical departments.

There are several people in Massachusetts, one-eyed and all, who closely ressemble "Big Bill" Haywood, so that he would have little difficulty in establishing several healthy alibis, if the occasion ever required.

With only one week permitted for their slaughter the deer in Massachusetts are rapidly multiplying.

That Boston mascot did not receive such a big slice from the generous ball players as many people supposed. All of which goes to show that if they put any stock in his good offices they soon forgot the obligation.

What about that Lawrence dynamite investigation. Has the campaign become of such absorbing interest that it has been shelved for the time being?

Becker will know his fate today, in all probability.

It is refreshing to note that Dist. Atty. Whitman did not make capital out of the police graft to secure for himself a gubernatorial nomination, which would have been handed to him without a murmur.

Not always can one judge how a man will vote by the way he talks. Many an honest progressive will cast his ballot for Taft rather than help to turn the country over to the Democrats.

A penitent resident of Elyria, Ohio, used a newspaper ad., to notify saloon keepers not to sell him a drink, nor serve him should a friend want to buy him a drink. There's a citizen who absolutely knows it pays to advertise.

THE MAYORALTY SITUATION.

As the time for the city election draws near the mayoralty situation is getting warmer and much interest is felt on every hand over the possible outcome. According to last returns, Mayor Stone is undecided as to his attitude. Several conferences have been held, which have not as yet raised the cloud of doubt from the mayor's mind as to his ultimate position.

Other candidates have been mentioned for the office and if all those who are spoken of enter the field the citizens will have a large and varied collection to draw from.

One thing is certain, whoever may run it is up to the voters to select the man, and the man selected must measure up to the office. He must have a well earned reputation for independence and a desire to put forth all his skill and energy in the interests of the city.

In this connection it is also necessary that the voters carefully select the members of the City Council. When you get right down to hard tacks, the citizens might just as well accept the situation now as at any other time, they and they alone are responsible for any laxity, any deals in the City Council which later lumped form such monuments for criticism.

Members elected from certain sections of the city are constantly importuned to obtain this or that improvement for their section. In order to successfully carry out those desires the councilman is forced to obtain the needed votes for his measure —to vote for measures which other council men desire put through, although they may not be absolutely necessary.

Voters in one section of the city find fruitful sources of criticism of the acts of members from the other sections of the city, without stopping to think, that those men they criticise have to meet the similar appeals to which they subject their own particular ward members.

If many of the so-called organizations started for the improvement of certain sections would only broaden out, consider what is for the interests of the city as a whole and instruct their council to act in accordance with this wiser and broader policy, greater good would be accomplished and there would be less cause for fault finding. A patch here and there, creating an expenditure of money which at the best can only produce temporary benefits, which are almost lost sight of before the money is expended, is not good business. It would not prove profitable in private enterprise.

If permanent improvements were carried out in sections of the city where most needed, from time to time, and this method of doing business carried on successfully for a few years, there would be such a brightening of the municipal horizon that all would unite in commending the change. But the throwing of a few dollars here and there, just to temporarily choke up holes which are bottomless under such a system means a useless expenditure which is evil in its tendencies and certainly not wise in pursuing.

All this talk of graft in a City Council of 23 members is nonsence and not based on facts. If there are any grafters, the citizens would be quick to note them by the trend of affairs and the remedy is at hand in the ballot in ousting such from office.

But the main consideration is to select necessary improvements, carry them to a successful finish, then enter upon others and in this way make work permanent and until such a system is inaugurated the same old conditions will prevail and the voter must bear his measure of censure.

LOCAL MAIL SERVICE.

A letter mailed in Wollaston, at a late hour Tuesday night, did not reach its destination, in City Square, Quincy Centre, until about 12 o'clock, noon Wednesday. And then it was necessary to send to the Quincy post office to secure it at that hour, or wait until the regular delivery time. No blame can be attached to the Quincy post officials for this condition, but does seem as if some method could be employed to prevent such a delay. The letter in question was of more than average importance.

It would have been desirable to have it reached its destination, early Wednesday morning, but fortunately provisions had been made to meet the contingency which presented itself, so that the inconvenience was slight, compared with the anxiety engendered by the possibility of the letter not reaching its destination at the hour it did.

It was an expected missive. When it failed to arrive at the usual time, the telephone was brought into play and the sender was astonished to learn that the person to whom it was addressed had not received it up to 11 o'clock Wednesday morning.

No attempt was made to connceal the time the letter was dropped in the box at Wollaston. That it was a late hour after the office had closed was admitted by the sender.

Mail dropped in the box at Wollaston before eight o'clock at night, is gathered up and sent direct to the Quincy Centre post office that night. So that mail dropped before that hour has the advantage over matter dropped in the same receptable after eight o'clock at night by several hours.

The latter mail is forwarded to Boston at 9 o'clock the next morning from Wollaston, and from Boston is returned to the Quincy Centre post office, arriving at the latter place about noon.

It seems only reasonable to assume that the same system of sending evening mail could be exercised to advantage in handling morning mail. dropped in the box after eight o'clock the night before. It certainly would be of greater convenience to the person to whom the mail is addressed.

The envelope of the communication referred to bore the post mark, "Wollaston, Oct. 23, 7 A. M., Mass." Under the method of handling the mail it did not leave Wollaston for Boston until 9 o'clock. No criticism can be offered the local officials on this score. They have a schedule which they must follow. Yet it seems that some remedy should be offered for a delay which appears inconsistent when distances and conditions are considered.

The Board of Trade it would seem is the proper body to take up this matter up with the post office authorities and see if some means cannot be devised for a direct delivery to the Quincy Centre post office of mail matter which is admittedly received at the Wollaston branch at 7 o'clock in the morning instead of sending it into Boston from Wollaston and then back to Quincy Centre. It seems to send mail on an unnecessary trip all "around the barn to get in at the door."

DETACHABLE LIFE RAFTS

Patented By Handwriting Expert Hingston

EASILY LAUNCHED

William E. Hingston, the well known Wollaston park handwriting expert, original Bull Mooser, shark fisherman and holder of other accomplishments has a new honor. This time it is as an inventor, for on Tuesday he received notice from the patent office at Washington, that his application for a patent on a new life saving device had been received, recorded and granted.

Ever since the disaster of the Titanic, people with an inventative turn of mind have been trying to get something new in the way of a life saving device for ocean and coastwise passenger steamers. It is believed that Mr. Hingston's invention has solved the problem and will be generally adopted by steamship companies. His device consists of a detachable rail. In this case the upper and lower rail consists of a hollow tube which is filled with compressed air, or for that matter it would not be necessary to fill them with compressed air, as long as they are water tight. The cross rails are also hollow tubes Across these, instead of the usual knotted rope are slats. The rail is made in sections of ten feet each in length and can easily be detached and thrown overboard, serving as rafts. Mr. Hingston claims that each raft will support eight people and that 240 of them can be launched in a brief space of time providing safety for about 2,000 persons. He also claims that they will ride the roughest seas.

Mr. Hingston said Wednesday night that he had shown his invention to the Steamship Inspectors in Boston and that they had pronounced it the best thing in the way of a life raft they had ever seen. A steamer captain who was in the Inspector's office at the time was so much impressed with it that he desired to immediately place an order to equip his steamer. Today the device will be shown to Calvin Austin and others of the Eastern Steamship Company.

AUTUMN WEDDING SOCIETY EVENT

Gilson-Smith Nuptials Followed By Big Reception

One of the prettiest autumn society weddings took place Wednesday evening in Brockton, when Miss Minnie Warren, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Baker Smith, became the bride of Lorenzo Haynes Gilson, only son of Dr. and Mrs. Alfred Henry Gilson of Linden place of Quincy. The marriage was solemnized at eight o'clock at the residence of the bride's parents, 637 North Main street, in the presence of friends and relaitves, Rev. Dudley Ferrell of Unity church officiating; the double ring service being used. Miss Rosamond Gray Smith, only sister of the bride, attended her as maid of honor, and Bradford L. Beale of Boston served the groom as best man. The wedding march was played by William B. Chapman of Brockton.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. The bridal party entered the spacious parlor through a path of rose petals, scattered by the little cousins of the bride, Viola and Samuel Atkins of Provincetown. Ten younger girl friends made a very pretty gateway by holding wide white satin ribbon, through which the bridal party passed.

Miss Smith made a very handsome bride in her gown of white satin and shadow lace with pearl trimmings. Her veil was most artistic, arranged in the shape of a cap with a pearl band, and she carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. Miss Rosamond wore pink charmeuse, trimmed with pink chiffon and carried day break carnations. Little Viola was dressed in white muslin and Sammey wore white corduroy, both carried baskets tied with white ribbon.

Immediately following the ceremony, the young couple held a reception to their many friends, over 300 attending, their respective parents assisting. Mrs. Smith wore white embroidered crepe trimmed with gold and Mrs. Gilson, black and white lace over black silk trimmed with jet The house was very daintily decorated with the autumn foliage and the bride and groom received beneath an autumn vine. The ushers were Carl B Sheppard, and Harry M. Drake of Quincy, Warren Packard and J. Wilbur Rhoades of Brockton.

A wedding supper was served, assisted by the ribbon girls, Misses Dorothy Hyde, Alice Healy, Ruth Mitchell, Edith Wilde, Harriet Scott Helen Brooks, Katherine Smith, Edna Foy, Gertrude Talbot, Edith Toole All of the members of the bridal party received pretty souvenirs of the happy occasion.

One of the upper rooms was filled to overflowing with beautiful gifts of cut glass, silver, china, besides many checks, showing the popularity of the young people. One of the gifts was a chest of silver from the directors of the Home National Bank of Brockton where the bride's father is cashier. Guests were present from Provincetown, Salem, Worcester, Brookline, Boston, Quincy and many of Brockton's prominent people.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilson left in an auto amid a shower of confetti and good wishes for a three weeks' trip. On their return they will reside on Locust street, Montello, where they have a newly furnished home awaiting them. The best of wishes go with them from their Quincy friends. Mr. Gilson will be greatly missed, as he has always made Quincy his home, and has been most popular in society, and his bride has made many warm friends here, who wish them every kind of prosperity. Mr. Gilson holds a very responsible position with the Brockton Rand Co.

SUCCESSFUL LAUNCHING

Of the Choral Society Upon Another Season

A bright moonlight autumn evening, balmy atmosphere and congenial spirits seemed to inspire toward a most successful opening of the season's rehearsals of Quincy Choral Society. A large number of singers, old and new members, assembled in the New Hancock Hall on Tuesday evening and began the study of Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise." Mr. McConathy, the able conductor of last year, was given a warm and hearty welcome. All feel that the society is extremely fortunate in securing him again this year.

The "Hymn of Praise" is a glorious work, and any musical society cannot well afford to let many seasons go by without presenting it. As the singers went through the score for the first time, only evidences of joy and enthusiasm were expressed as each got a glimpse of the wonders of the composition. The next rehearsal will be Tuesday evening at the same place. All who have voices are cordially invited to join the chorus and have the benefit of the uplift and education derived by the study of music of the world's greatest masters.

WANDERING QUADRUPED.

A bay horse, owned by Henry L. Estabrook of Fenno street wandered away from the grounds Monday morning and was afterwards found grazing in the marshland near the National Sailors Home. The police department were notified of the disappearance and a description of the horse was sent out. A party of neighbors and boys searched the vicinity and after a couple of hours located the animal.

Long and Fruitless Journey to Witness Eclipse of the Sun

Colon, Oct. 24.—Several astronomers from American universities, who made an unsuccessful trip to Rio Janeiro to observe the solar eclipse, have engaged passage on the Panama steamship line, and will sail for home this week.

Weather conditions made observations impossible, and, besides the American party, half a hundred scientists from points in Europe and Asia were obliged to turn back after a long and fruitless journey.

Rope of Pearls Necklace Worn by Mrs. Gould at Small Party

New York, Oct. 24.—Around Mrs. Frank J. Gould's throat were twined for the first time the famous "rope of pearls," three strands of lustrous gems, matched and graduated.

A Paris dealer in precious stones, commissioned by Gould, has been perfecting the "rope" for three years. The cost of collecting this wonderful necklace is estimated at $300,000, but only Gould knows.

Mrs. Gould went to a small party given by the William Guggenheims and adorned herself with the new jewels. It contains more than 300 pearls from the size of a pea to that of a filbert.

The necklace, with its delicate setting, wrapped thrice around Mrs. Gould's neck, yet the last strand fell to her waist, where it was fastened by a rare diamond clasp.

EVENING SCHOOLS.

The industrial evening classes have been inspected the past week by Charles R. Allen, acting deputy commissioner of education with a view to their approval by the state and will be looked over again next week by one or two of the agents of the Board of Education for the same end. The necessary application for the registration of the teachers in these courses has been made by the local school authorities and it is hoped by the end of the current month that the courses will be definitely approved, rates of tuition fixed for non-resident pupils and the attendance of those pupils approved.

At the present time there are 18 or 20 men attending these courses from surrounding towns and then tuition will be paid according to law by towns in which they reside.

The attendance at the other evening schools still remains at a high level, nearly 50 per cent greater than last year at the corresponding time. Ivan G. Smith, sub-master at the High school is acting as principal of the Industrial evening school in that building as well as of the other classes held there.

The High school cooking room has just been equipped with a new gas range, of the latest model and a new outfit of gas plates, thereby giving almost double the facilities that were previously available. The drawing room has also been provided with a large number of machine parts and some small machines, loaned by the different establishments in town to be used in the classes in mechanical drawing and machine design. Three rooms are now used for drawing, two for wood working and three for domestic science for girls, eight all told. The number of pupils in these departments has increased handsomely within recent years, as three years ago, only two rooms were in constant use for work of this type.

NORFOLK COUNTY TEACHERS CONVENTION.

Programs have been received for the Norfolk County Teachers Convention, which the teachers of Quincy attend. The speakers are to be Philander P. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education, Superintendent George I. Aldrich of Brookline, formerly of Quincy, in "Lest We Forget," and Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York city on "Ideals and Idealists." Music will be furnished by the Harvard quartette, the Wellesley High school chorus and others. Former Master James D. Howlett of the Quincy High school is president of the association. Miss Jennie N. Wheeler is one of the Councillors and Henry L. Upton a member of the committee on resolutions. The session will be held in Ford hall, Friday, Nov. 1.

WILLARD SCHOOL.

The standing of the Willard school dodge ball league is as follows:

Dartmouth	4	0	1000
Harvard	2	2	.500
Yale	2	3	.400
Princeton	1	4	.200

The Willard School class pin is well described by Edward Flaherty, grade eight:

Mr. Dorrety, the classpin manufacturer, is rejoicing over the fact that he is the first person who has ever received an order for classpins from the Willard School.

The pin is to be in the form of a seal with the monogram W. S. in raised letters in the center. Around the monogram is a circular band of crimson, which has been chosen as the class color. The words Willard Grammar School are to be inscribed on the crimson enamel with 1913 at the base.

Three grades of pins are offered, sterling silver, gold plated and solid gold, the two latter having safety clasps, and the owner's initials on the back. The design will be the same each year, but the color may be changed."

JOHN HANCOCK AND LINCOLN.

Saturday, the boys of the eighth grades and football teams took a trip to Boston, taking in the various points of interest, Old State House, Fanuel Hall and the market, and finished by going to the Harvard-Amherst game at the Stadium. An opportunity was given to see the edison electric clock illuminated and the decorations of the Electrical Show lighted.

MASS. FIELDS SCHOOL.

The next regular meeting of the Parents' and Teachers' Association will be held Thursday evening, Nov. 7. Mr. Charles H. Johnson of Quincy will give his Illustrated lecture—"Washington, the Great American."

The pupils of grade VIII will be the guests of the association and will give the "Salute to the Flag." There will be vocal solos by Charles Bishop.

The boys of grades VII and VIII have been contesting a world series in relay ball,—representing the Giants and the Red Sox. The Giants won 4-3. The boys of grade VI are contesting the supremacy of the Red Sox in straddle ball.

LIBRARY BRANCH DEDICATED

Reading Room at Atlantic Opened with Appropriate Exercises

The trustees of the library opened a branch reading room at Atlantic, on Wednesday afternoon with appropriate exercises. Mayor Eugene Stone, was present, also most of the members of the board of trustees, and the Atlantic Councilmen. Mr. Safford, chairman of the board of trustees, had charge of the exercises.

Mayor Stone said that Quincy had one branch library and he was glad that another was now ready for use. He intended to have one more each year, for three years, one in Quincy Point, Wollaston and Houghs Neck.

Mr. Smith, secretary of the board of trustees, expressed the wish that everyone present bring in three more people. His thoughts could be expressed in two words, "Use it."

Councilman Herbert Beeman, spoke of the advantage in having good books and magazines, rather than Sunday papers and referred to Mrs. Redman who was instrumental in bringing in the first delivery basket.

Lyndon T. Gurney spoke of the early days when the delivery basket was first sent to Thomas Gurney's store, over 31 years ago.

Rev. Rufus Tobey, a member of the Board of Trustees spoke of what a grand good thing the little reading room would be. He told of a similar one in another town, where the reading room had done excellent work.

Rev. Charles P. Marshall offered the prayer.

Mrs. Ward Whitcher, president of the Atlantic Shakespeare Society, presented the Atlantic branch with a set of Shakespeare's works, in 40 volumes, in behalf of the society.

At the close of the exercises, Charles Safford presented the key of the reading room to Miss White, the librarian, who expressed the very great pleasure afforded by the opening of the second branch reading room. She said that she hoped that sufficient money would be given by the city next year, to keep the reading rooms open 12 months, instead of three months, like this year.

The reading rooms are well furnished, with reading tables, and chairs, a newspaper rack, book cases, and an assistant librarian's desk. The wall paper is of a dark brown, harmonizing with the furnishings, and woodwork. Besides these furnishings, several little things have been given by Atlantic people. Mrs. Charles Safford presented the reading room with a large picture of the Roman Forum, Erle Richardson, of Botolph street, a small picture of Shakespere, which he bought at the Shakesperian home in England, last summer, Ward Whitcher a large globe of the world, Mrs. Whitcher a fern, and a begonia. Mrs. Alfred Gelenick several large bouquets of chrysanthemums.

The library opened with a deposit of 500 volumes, which are to be exchanged monthly, a gift of 94 volumes from Edmond R. Wade of Wollaston, formerly of Atlantic; 45 reference books, a subscription list of 15 magazines, and the daily papers.

The rooms were filled with young people as soon as the doors were thrown open to the public, in the evening. Miss Catherine Saville, assistant librarian, Miss Eleanor Whittemore, and Miss Shine, were kept busy making registrations. Most of those who registered have not been taking advantage of the Quincy library or the delivery basket. The many enthusiastic people who came to the opening last night, in spite of the stormy weather, make the committee, who have charge of the Atlantic reading room, feel that it will be a great success.

WOODS FIRES THREATENING

House of Charles W. Young in Path of the Flames

RAIN OFFERS RELIEF

Wednesday afternoon the Central station apparatus was called out again on a still alarm for the woods fire off Quincy avenue. The fire was getting dangerously near the residence of George W. Young and the apparatus was called to extinguish it. The patients at the Mt. Pleasant tuberculosis hospital complain that Tuesday night the smoke from the fire on Quincy avenue was so thick that they were obliged to close all windows and that when they went out of doors the air was so oppressive as to be almost stifling.

It has been very dry of late and grass and woods fires have given the firemen lots of work. The heavy rain showers Wednesday night however wet things down so that they will get a rest from this class of fires for a few days.

Thieves Extend Operations to Interior of Store

MILK CANS MISSING

A break at the Clapp variety store in the Rogers block, 1053 Hancock street was discovered about four o'clock Wednesday morning by patrolman J. Joseph Avery as he was making a tour of the property. During the past week several large cans of milk have been taken from the front door.

The Tuesday night affair demonstrated that the thieves had become emboldened by their milk successes and decided to extend their field of operations.

Entrance was obtained by removing a pane of glass in a cellar window. The intruders then went up a flight of stairs where they opened a door into the store by cutting a hole in the panel and then turning the key in the lock on the inside.

An examination of the property was made but no one was in the building at that time. It is not known whether anything was taken.

McDONALD'S GOLF ANNIVERSARY

Marked By a Gathering of Old Timers at Montclair

THE SCORES AND WINNERS

About 60 veteran golfers of Boston and vicinity, were at the Wollaston links Wednesday the guests of Geo. Wright, at the annual old-timers' golf tournament. It was an all-day affair with a dinner served at noon. Just about one-half of the party arrived at the links early in the morning, and many at once started out over the course, while others waited for the arrival of the noon train and the other half of the veterans and dinner before going out upon their round.

When dinner was served at noon, 11 had completed the round of the course and their cards were posted upon the bulletin board. Some of the scores returned were excellent, while in other cases the liberal handicap allowances helped out a lot. Silver souvenirs go to the winners of the first and second places. The morning scores were as follows:

Edward Hastings	87	17	70
G. P. Johnson	91	19	72
G. R. Gray	90	18	72

BECKER'S FATE LEFT TO JURY

Arguments In Famous Murder Trial Are Completed

ACQUITTAL IS NOT EXPECTED

Opinions of Thoughtful Men Who Heard Summing Up of Both Sides Unanimous That Disagreement Is Best Defense Can Hope For—McIntyre Pictures Accused Man as Brave Officer In Peril of Slimy Crew and Attacks District Attorney—Rebuked by Moss, Whose Address Is Restrained and Courteous

New York, Oct. 24.—The best and the worst for Lieutenant Becker has all been said. The jurors went to their hotel last night to sleep over Mr. McIntyre's furious denunciation of the informers and of District Attorney Whitman, and oyer Assistant District Attorney Moss' calm analysis of the defense's own evidence as proof that Becker's was the reckless and indomitable will behind the murder of Herman Rosenthal.

The charge to the jury will be delivered by Justice Goff today. It is probable the court will occupy an hour or more in explaining to the jury the points of law they must follow in weighing the evidence.

The twelve men who have listened for three weeks to all sides of a story of cunning and greed and wickedness, of cynical betrayal of duty and of unmatched contempt for decency and law will then go to their room to make up their minds whether Becker was the master or the victim of murderers.

On the eve of this decision, Becker himself professed to be confident that "no New York jury would send a man to the chair on the lies of a lot of crooks."

He reared his tall figure at the rail of the court as the jurors filed soberly out, and summoned a careless smile to a face that is deeply chiselled with new lines.

Becker Appears Unmovetd

He had heard himself characterized by John F. McIntyre, his chief counsel, as the victim of a conspiracy plotted by Jack Rose, "the hell of the assassins," and by Assistant District Attorney Moss as the "brains behind the gunmen, with a tremendous motive for murder." What emotions he may have felt were masked by perfect control of his features.

His lawyers said they would not accept a verdict of murder in the second degree—it had to be complete guilt or complete innocence.

The jury can return the verdict of any degree of murder it pleases.

The opinions of intelligent and thoughtful men who were a part of the audience which listened to McIntyre's summing up and Moss' review were interesting in that there was practically a unanimous belief that the best the defense could hope for was a disagreement.

Juries have many times before shattered by their verdicts such unanimity of prediction, but the lawyers and judges and men of affairs who heard both sides in the eight hours of closing argument agreed that the state had presented and bound together the essential units of direct and circumstantial evidence that go to make a strong case.

McIntyre's Argument

Entirely aside from the merits of strength of their case or their arguments, the method of attack and defense employed by the opposing counsel were unusually interesting. McIntyre, a master of invective and of insinuation, adept in befogging bad points and illuminating good ones, given to sentimentality and appeals to the emotions, spent most of his force attacking Becker's accusers and in attributing to them motives of the most villainous sort.

He laid Becker's prosecution to the cravenness off frightened murderers and to the ambitious designs of the district attorney, whom he charged with fathering a conspiracy.

He pictured the accused lieutenant as a brave and noble officer in peril of a slimy crew. Often he inverted or abbreviated testimony so as to put before the jury only such parts as appeared to favor the defendant. His analysis of testimony was largely a charge that the main state's witnesses were perjurers.

Moss Keeps His Temper

Mr. Moss, whose manner was not unlike that of a Sunday school superintendent addressing his class, but whose address was that of a well trained and able lawyer, was at all times restrained, courteous and fair. When he quoted testimony, he quoted all that bore on the point in question, inverting nothing, suppressing nothing.

His argument was as keen and uncolored as a surgeon's scalpel. Often interrupted by McIntyre, who at one time shook his fist in the face of his opponent, although he had himself restrained from interrupting, Moss kept his temper and held himself within the dignity of the court.

For the most part his summing up was a calm condensation of the main evidence produced by the state and a shrewd dissection of the weakness of the defense's evidence.

Rebuking McIntyre for the insinuation that the district attorney was, too, a conspirator for ambition's sake, Moss told the jury that if Rose and Webber and Vallon had not been accepted as state witnesses, ten men instead of three would have gone unpunished.

If the chief witness against Becker was bad it must be remembered that Becker was a man of bad associations and Becker must stand or fall by the stories of such men.

Testimony Dissected

Mr. Moss, taking up the testimony bit by bit, argued that the state, by direct and circumstantial evidence, had shown that the motive for the murder was Becker's fear that his grafting and his dishonor as a policeman would be exposed by Rosenthal.

He analyzed the testimony for the defense and told the jury that Becker's main witness as had convicted themselves out of their own mouths of lying.

"If Becker did not have a motive for the murder, why did he want to get an affidavit from Rose two days after Rosenthal was dead?" Moss asked. "The truth is Becker did not know how things would go. He saw the possibility that Rose might be a witness against him and he got an affidavit from Rose to silence him. He got Rose to swear his own life away, so that he couldn't testify against him in this case."

Sam Schepps, Moss conceded, was an accessory after the fact, but had come forward to testify because Becker had thrown "his pal, Rose, to the dogs."

Mr. Moss declared the defense had dwelt throughout the trial upon an alleged conspiracy to murder Rosenthal, "founded on the hatred of the underworld" as its explanation for the murder, but had not introduced a shred of proof that any such conspiracy had existed.

Answering McIntyre's declaration that the four gunmen yet to be tried might go free, even if Becker were convicted, Moss said:

"Have no fear that you will ever meet these four men on Broadway. We have not disclosed our entire case against them yet, and you needn't be afraid of meeting Rose, Webber and Vallon there, either, after this trial is over. 'Their friends,' the gunmen of the underworld, will take care of that."

He closed by telling the jury that their duty was to protect civilization against such men as Becker.

TRAFFIC HELD UP BY OPERA STARS

Turkey Trot and Grizzly Bear Prove Very Fascinating

St. Paul, Oct. 24.—Transcontinental traffic, even the United States mail, was delayed for five minutes in the Union station because Miss Alice Neilsen and Mlle. Jeska Swartz, stars of the Boston Grand Opera company, chose to dance the turkey trot, the grizzly bear and the gaby glide on the station platform.

The conductor, with his right hand raised to give the "high ball" sign, stood rigid, the fireman let his steam go down, and porters dropped suit cases and all stared and smiled while the two song-birds tripped daintily through a maze of baggage trucks and mail bags.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

DELICIOUS TOMATO SOUPS.

WHEN in a hurry a delicious soup may be made with tomatoes. Tomato soup may be made with stock or with milk.

Tomatoes which are too old or otherwise unavailable to serve fresh may be made into soup or puree. They should be strained after they are cooked.

The soup may be served with bread croutons or with crackers.

Some Simple Recipes.

Spiced Tomato Soup.—Take a quart can of tomatoes. Add to them one pint of hot water, one tablespoonful of sugar, one teaspoonful of salt, six cloves, a saltspoonful of pepper and bring to a boil. Put one tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan. When it melts add one tablespoonful of minced onions and one tablespoonful of parsley. Fry five minutes. Add one tablespoonful of cornstarch dissolved in two tablespoonfuls of cold water. Stir into the hot tomato soup. Strain and serve with boiled rice.

Puree of Tomatoes.—For this you may use either canned or fresh tomatoes. If you take the latter allow one tomato to each person. Scald them, peel the skin off and mash through a sieve or take some tomato sauce—about a dessertspoonful per person—and stir in brown butter in which you have previously fried some chopped onions. Cook for two or three minutes or more without burning. Pour boiling water on to this and add a tablespoonful of taploca per plate of soup, salt and pepper. When done it will be ready to serve with fried dice of bread.

Wholesome Fare.

Bisque of Tomatoes.—Take a half can of tomatoes, a teaspoonful of minced onions, a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper and of paprika, a tablespoonful each of flour and butter, two cupfuls of milk, a cupful of water or stock, and a teaspoonful of sugar. Put the tomatoes, onions, salt, pepper, paprika and sugar in the water or stock to boil twenty minutes. Strain, add to the milk, which should be boiling in the top of a double boiler. Add the butter and flour, which should have been rubbed together. Boil for five minutes. Serve with four or five croutons.

Plain Tomato Soup.—Take a quart of stewed tomatoes, add a teacupful of hot water and rub through a sieve Season with salt, pepper and a tablespoonful of butter. When boiling add a quart of milk and thicken with cornstarch to the consistency of thin cream. Serve with hot, crisp crackers.

HALLOWEEN CAKES.

FOR the Halloween festivity nut cakes are the most suitable. They may, of course, be of any kind you prefer, but they should be frosted and decorated to suit the demands of the season.

Appropriate ornaments for the cakes are the tiny cats, pumpkins, miniature vegetables, etc., that can be purchased at the confectioner's. A toy witch with her broomstick or a goddess holding up a horn of plenty will make a striking centerpiece for a cake.

For the Halloween Feast.

Mixed Nut Cakes.—Take three-fourths cupful of butter and cream it with one and a half cupfuls of brown sugar. Beat in with this the yolks of three eggs. Add one cupful of chopped walnut meats, one cupful of chopped cocoanut, one teaspoonful of powdered cinnamon, a half teaspoonful of powdered cloves and one and one-half cupful of seedless raisins. Dissolve one-half teaspoonful of soda in one-half cupful of warm water. Sift three cupfuls of flour and one teaspoonful baking powder together. Add water and flour alternately to butter and sugar. Stir in the well beaten whites of three eggs. Drop by spoonfuls several inches apart on to a greased pan. Bake in a quick oven.

Hickory Nut Cake.—Take one and one-half cupfuls of sugar, one-half cupful of butter, one-half cupful of water, one and a half cupfuls of sifted flour, one-half cupful of cornstarch, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and the whites of six eggs or three whole eggs. Flavor with lemon. Bake in layers. For the filling use two cupfuls of light brown sugar to one-half cupful of water. Boil until it threads and stir in the whites of two eggs. Add one cupful of chopped nut meats.

Novel Cakes.

Hazelnut Cake.—Mince two ounces of hazelnut meats and half an ounce of sweet almonds together. Add three ounces of powdered and sifted sugar, the white of an egg beaten to a froth and as much flour as will bind them together. Roll the paste out until it is a quarter of an inch thick, stamp out into small cakes, place on well buttered tins and bake in a slow oven for twenty minutes.

Walnut Roll.—Take a pound and a quarter of English walnuts and two ounces of Brazil nuts. Chop these together after they have been shelled and skinned. Put one pound of icing sugar into a basin, part of the white of one egg, a little water and stir thoroughly. Put in part of the nuts, then more eggs and so on until the ingredients are well mixed. Stir in half a teaspoonful of almond flavoring and turn the mixture, which should be like a dry paste, out on a marble slab. Knead it well and shape into a roll about three inches thick. Set aside for twenty-four hours till thoroughly dry, then cut in slices.

MURDER OF ROSE BUNNIS

May Have Some Connection With Chicago Vice Crusade

Bridgeport, Conn., Oct. 24.—After a day of investigation, the police are unable to fix definitely the motive for which Rose Bunnis of Bridgeport, lately of Chicago, was shot to death by Joe Bunano, after she had been taken near to Putney cemetery in an automobile, in which were four other men.

Bunano has confessed to killing the woman, who was his common-law wife, but the police say the only reason he gives in his alleged confession is that he was drunk and did not know what he was doing.

Meanwhile, the police still cling to the theory that the woman was killed because she had revealed the inner workings of the white slave traffic in Chicago.

Bunano, together with Joseph Mattio and Frank Pizzichenni, are being held without bonds pending a hearing. The two men in the party who disappeared after the tragedy have not been captured.

GOING INTO THE FRAY

Roosevelt Will Soon Be Again In the Political Arena

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Oct. 24.—Colonel Roosevelt shows so much improvement that Dr. Terrell expressed the opinion that the Progressive presidential candidate would be able to take a leading part in the wind-up of the campaign. He said that all indications pointed to this, if the patient would obey the orders of his physician and thus avoid any setback.

The colonel suffers no pain from his wound. The fretfulness that characterized his stay in the Mercy hospital in Chicago during the week following his being shot by John Schrank has not asserted itself during the confinement at home.

The Progressive leader feels now that patience and absolute rest and quiet are what he needs, and he has reconciled himself to the doctor's orders in this regard.

PULLS OUT SPIKES WITH BARE FINGERS

Witness Backs Assertion Made at Coroner's Inquest

New York, Oct. 24.—Rotten railroad ties, it is charged, were the cause of the wreck on the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, near Westport, on Oct. 3, in which seven persons were killed.

By pulling out spikes with his bare fingers, George E. Everett, a former employe of the road, demonstrated at the scene of the wreck the truth of his statement, made by him at the inquest under Coroner Phelan.

The demonstration took place in the presence of Coroner Phelan, a number of newspaper men and several officials of the road, including Vice President Buckland.

While the spectators watched in amazement, Everett emphasized his assertions that the rotten condition of the ties had permitted the rails to spread by tearing away literally handfuls of the decayed wood.

With an axe he attacked one of the ties and laid it open to the centre to show that the life of the wood was completely gone.

ALLIES PUSHING BACK TURKEY

Headway Is Being Made by the Balkan Armies

HEAVY FIGHTING IN PROGRESS

Turkish Cause Could Hardly Recover From Blow Should Adrianople Be Lost—Greeks Driving Turks Before Them In the South—Lemnos Occupied by Landing Force

London, Oct. 24.—That there is heavy fighting on the Adrianople-Kirk-Kilsse line of fortifications seems certain, according to the latest dispatches, but at just what point the Bulgarian army is directing its attack it is difficult to discover.

Adrianople is the obvious objective. It is the pivot of Turkish military power in European Turkey. Its fall would so inspire the Slav people of eastern Europe that it would be doubtful if they would submit to any restraint by the powers. Even as it is, Turkey's disposition of its military resources is governed, not only by the attack of the Balkan allies, but by the menace of Russian aggression in Asia Minor.

The whole Ottoman army in Asia cannot be transferred to Europe lest the two Russian army corps at Kars and Ardeghan cross the Turkish frontier.

There are not wanting those who believe that so perilous is the Turkish situation because of the menace of Russia that no place in European Turkey will be seriously defended, but rather the Turks will gradually retire across the Bosphorous, preferring to safeguard Asia Minor than the shadowy control of Macedonia.

But while Adrianople is the natural and sentimental point of attack, there are evidences that Kirk-Kilsse may be the real Balkan objective at the present moment. Kresna Pass has been taken and there are persistent reports of fierce fighting before the city.

Kirk-Kilsse possesses only three permanent forts, but during the last few months a number of field works have been thrown up under German guidance, forming a circle twelve miles in circumference and equipped with 120 guns. Its garrison is estimated at 10,000. With Kirk-Kilsse in their hands the Bulgarians might strike straight for Constantinople.

This move, if properly executed in sufficient numbers, would have the effect of isolating Adrianople and the shutting up therein of a large force or compelling its evacuation. The last contingency seems unlikely. Indeed, if Turkey loses Adrianople her cause would receive a blow from which she could hardly recover.

In the meantime the Servian army appears to be making headway in its journey into Macedonia. Prestina has been taken and also positions in the immediate vicinity of Uskup. The important Turkish town of Novipazar, in the district of the same name, was captured by the Servians yesterday after severe fighting. The troops suffered heavy losses.

Most of the Servian successes have been won over mixed forces of Albanian tribesmen and Turkish irregulars. They will not come into contact with the trained Turkish troops until they reach Uskup.

On the west the Montenegrins are bombarding Tarabosch, a fortified mountain on the southeastern shore of Lake Scutari. A Montenegrin column is within a few miles of the city of Scutari.

On the south the Greek army appears to be driving the Turks before them, and in an action reported yesterday seems to have dislodged them from the Elassona-Servia road, expediting their retirement on the latter city.

Lemnos has been occupied by a landing force under the guns of the Greek fleets and Greece now commands the approaches to the Dardanelles.

WOULD BAR CONSUMPTIVE

Town Council Asked to Keep One Out of Public Institution

Warwick, R. I., Oct. 24.—For the first time in the history of the state a request has been received by a town council to refuse admittance to a public institution to a man suffering from consumption.

The request is made by Wallace Hatch, secretary of the Rhode Island Anti-Tuberculosis association, of the town council of Warwick, on the ground that the man is suffering from an infectious disease and that his admittance to a public institution would be a menace to public health.

TO CUT DOWN FIRE LOSS

Fire Prevention Day Proclamation Issued by Governor Foss

Boston, Oct. 24.—Governor Foss issued the following proclamation yesterday:

"To the end that we may lessen the serious destruction of property, and the risk and loss of many lives, now caused by preventable fires, I hereby designate and set apart Saturday, Nov. 9, as Fire Prevention Day, that being the fortieth anniversary of the great Boston fire, which, in 1872, destroyed a large part of the city of Boston and involved a loss of $80,000,000.

"I urge that on Fire Prevention Day all property owners give particular heed to the inspection of their buildings and grounds. Defective chimneys and flues should be remedied; inflamable rubbish should be disposed of, and all needless fire risks removed.

"School authorities should redouble their efforts against the dangers of fire. Owners of stores, factories and mills should cause a special examination to be made of their premises."

The governor says our fire losses per capita are stated to be eight times as great as the average in European countries.

RETURNED $57,000

Beveridge Sent Back Checks Contributed to Campaign Fund

Washington, Oct. 24.—That Senator Beveridge returned campaign contributions amounting to $57,000, sent to him by George W. Perkins, Edward L. McLean and Gifford Pinchot, was the testimony of three witnesses examined by the senate campaign contributions committee.

While Perkins, when examined by the committee, declared he could remember sending only $10,000 to Beveridge, which was returned, yesterday's testimony was to the effect that Beveridge received and returned three checks for drafts, each for $10,000. Besides, $25,000 was received and returned to McLean, and either $2500 or $3000 was returned to Pinchot.

ADMITS CHOKING HIS MOTHER TO DEATH

Crime of Man Who Wanted Money to Purchase Liquor

Boston, Oct. 24.—Refusal to permit her son to withdraw savings from a bank in order to purchase liquor caused a quarrel that resulted in the death of Mrs. Ellen Donahue in a tenement in the basement of the rear of 1293 Washington street.

Cornelius Donahue, the son, who is 30 years old, is under arrest on a charge of murder and admitted to the police and others that he choked his mother. Mrs. Donahue was 60 years old and a cripple.

Other inmates of the house declare the son, who is a laborer, has been drinking heavily for several days. They also said Mrs. Donahue's husband is away from home.

ONLY ONE "BEST"

Quincy People Give Credit Where Credit is Due.

People of Quincy who suffer with sick kidneys and bad backs want a kidney remedy that can be depended upon. The best is Doan's Kidney Pills, a medicine for the kidneys only, made from pure roots and herbs, and the only one that is backed by willing testimony of Quincy people. Here's a case:

Charles J. Somers, barber, 17 Newcomb street, Quincy, Mass., says: "It is a pleasure for me to tell of my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills, for the benefit of other kidney sufferers. This remedy worked wonders in my case. Lame back and weak kidneys bothered me for ten years and nothing helped me until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills. The promptness with which this remedy cured me was astonishing. My strength and energy was restored and my health improved one hundred per cent. I shall always endorse Doan's Kidney Pills when I have the opportunity." (Statement given September 2nd 1908.)

LATER ENDORSEMENT.

Several years later Mr. Somers was interviewed and he said: "I am only too pleased to verify my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills. I still take this remedy occasionally and it keeps me in good health."

POLITICAL SOCIAL

put in the Democrats? Do you want to see Martin Lomasney speaker of the House, Timilty president of the Senate and the machinery in control of the Democrats? Let each consider well before he casts his vote at the polls."

Owing to the non arrival of the Progressive's speaker John H. Johnson who was in the hall was called upon. He was greeted with loud applause.

"It is a tough proposition," said Mr. Johnson, "to be called from the back of the hall at a moments notice to take your party's part. If it were not a pretty good party I would have to duck it. Mention has been made of the progress of the nation under the Republican party. This is a nation full of resources and I claim that the advance has been made not on account of but in spite of the Republican party.

"The Republicans and Democrats agree upon one fundamental difference—The tariff. They have disagreed on this for over half a century and are no nearer a conclusion than when they started. Tariff for revenue or profection is simply a farce. The money has got to be raised in some way and it will not make any great difference to the industries. Contributions toward both sides of the tariff come pretty much from the same channels and whichever way it goes the same interests are liable to be protected.

"It is the policy of the Progressive party to take the tariff out of politics and place it with a board of scientific experts with as much power as the interstate railroad commission. We have been under the regime of the Republican party for 50 years and I do not recognize many millionaries in this audience."

The speaker declared the beef trust stood pretty close to the head of the nation. "I do not say one word against the president—his honesty his integrity, his good intentions; but he is surrounded by a villianous crowd and is not strong enough to break through.

"This country does not need a ruler but a man strong enough to restrain the invisible rulers of the country." At this point Mr. Johnson was interrupted by the arrival of James B. Connolly, the scheduled Progressive speaker.

Mr. Connolly was warmly greeted. He pointed out a number of incidents demonstrating how American made goods could be purchased cheaper abroad than at home simply on account of the tariff. He declared the real mission of the Progressive party was to help the people out. He instanced the proposed improvement in labor, conditions, old age pensions and other aims of the Progressives.

Long extracts were read from the constitution of Massachusetts, the Declaration of Independence and other documents in justification of the stand taken by the Progressive party. His mention of Roosevelt was greeted with an ovation.

Mr. Connolly ridiculed the drink charge made against the ex-president. He spoke of the enormous amount of work Roosevelt accomplished for one 54 years of age. The combined broad output of physical, mental and moral strain, the speaker declared to be greater than any other man living.

"Roosevelt did not want to go in the running last winter, but the numbers who came to Oyster Bay in groups and singly and the hordes of letters he received on the question forced him to do it. If Roosevelt had started earlier, he would have got the nomination at Chicago. When he did enter the game it was a 100 to 1 shot."

The personality of the man was mentioned, the speaker declaring him to be a born gentleman. He was one of the tidiest and best hearted men in the country. His home life was mentioned.

"Roosevelt was not in the game for himself. He already has every honor the world could give him. The very street Arab in Athens knows him as 'Teddy.' He wants to help the people. That is the reason for his going in this terrific campaign."

A straw vote was taken with the following result:

Roosevelt	71
Taft	34
Wilson	18
Debs	3

The result was a signal for a great burst of enthusiasm from the many Progressives present and the meeting adjourned.

HOME WEDDING AT S. BRAINTREE

Harry G. Annis Wedded to Miss Beatrice Loring

There was a pretty home wedding at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Loring, 21 Franklin street, South Braintree, Wednesday evening, when their daughter Beatrice became the bride of Harry Gardner Annis of Mattapan, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Gardner Annis. The bridal party entered the room to the strains of the wedding march from Lohengrin played by the groom's sister, Miss Helen G. Annis and the ceremony was performed beneath a bower of green with chrysanthemums, the officiating clergyman being Rev. Tyler E. Gale, pastor of the South Congregational church.

The groom was attended by Clair H. Stevenson of Braintree and the maid of honor was the bride's sister, Miss Dorothy Loring looking very sweet in her gown of blue panier silk and carrying white chrysanthemums. The ushers were Ralph L. Wiggin, Mrs. Ralph L. Wiggin and Miss Olive Kibble.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father was gowned in a beautiful creation of white embroidered silk crepe over messaline with velvet and pearl trimmings and carried a shower bouquet of roses. There was a reception after the marriage from 8.30 to 9 o'clock and the happy couple was assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Loring and Mr. and Mrs. E. Gardner Annis.

Mr. and Mrs. Annis received a large number of handsome wedding gifts, among them a check from his employer while Mrs. Annis received from her employer a beautiful picture. There were numerous other gifts of cut glass, silver, paintings, etc. After the reception they left by automobile closely pursued by other cars (containing friends) with the best wishes of their many friends for a long and happy married life.

Guests were present from the Braintrees, Campello, Woods Hole, Bridgewater, Brookline, Taunton, Hyde Park, Dedham, Natick, Somerville, Mattapan and the Cape.

After a wedding trip of two weeks, during which they will visit various places of interest, Mr. and Mrs. Annis reside in East Dedham.

HUNTER SPIT ON THE FLOOR

Had Only $4 So Court Adjusted Fine to His Finances

Paul Kribbs, janitor of Music hall has been having considerable trouble with young men who persist in spitting on the floor. Many of these young men without the least sense of decency, attend public performances and chew tobacco during the show. A close watch is kept on them to see that this rule of the Board of Health is not violated but when the hall is darkened, while moving pictures are being shown, it is almost impossible to catch them and a puddle of tobacco juice is found on the floor later. Wednesday night however Officer Malone who was on duty at the hall with janitor Kribbs caught a fellow red handed. He was immediately placed under arrest and spent the night at the police station. He gave his name as Robert Hunter. In this case it was not tobacco but catarrah sputem. In court this morning a fine of $5 was imposed. All Hunter could scrape up was $4 and after reading him a lecture the court made the fine to fit the man's pocketbook.

EXPRESS FIRM OUT OF BUSINESS

Long Established Abbott & Miller Firm Extinct

AFTER 35 YEARS RUN

Many business men were surprised this morning to learn that Abbott & Millers express had stopped business at the close of Wednesday's operations. The firm of Abbott & Miller is one that has been familiar with Quincy for many years, and in fact it may be said to be the oldest express company in the city. It was about 35 years ago that the company was started by Gilbert M. Miller under the firm name of Abbott & Miller, the name Abbott being in the nature of a clever ruse in order that the name of this express might head the list in the Expressman's Guide.

Associated with Mr. Miller in business were his two sons, Charles W. Miller and J. G. Miller. At the start one trip a day was made between Quincy and Boston, the motive power being horses. Some few years ago, with the advent of gasoline motor cars this firm was the first to adopt this method of transportation of its express packages.

This meant more rapid delivery of goods and better service and so rapidly did the business grow that it was soon necessary to add other motor trucks until several were employed and three or more trips were made daily between Quincy and Boston.

Some months ago Gilbert M. Miller, the founder of the business retired from the firm and a few weeks ago, J. G. Miller, one of the sons, who for years had been the Boston messenger of the firm retired and started business under his own name. This left Charles W. Miller, who has long been the manager, in charge and as he stated this morning he decided to retire.

Mr. Miller declined to give any reason for going out of business other than to say that it was the fault of the business men, which might be interpreted to mean that it was lack of sufficient support. The firm has not turned its business over to any other company leaving the field open.

LIBRARY TRUSTEE RESIGNED.

Rev. Charles P. Marshall of the Washington Street Congregational church, who has accepted a call to the Pilgrim church at Plymouth, tendered his resignation to Mayor Stone this morning, as a member of the trustees of the Thomas Crane Public Library. The resignation was accepted by the Mayor, who immediately announced the appointment of Rev. Rufus B. Tobey of Wollaston to fill the vacancy.

CANDIDATES TO SPEAK.

The next meeting of Norfolk Lodge A. O. U. W. will be held in Poland hall Monday evening. Candidates for the Legislature have been invited to address the gathering. Workmen not allied with the above society are invited to come at 9 o'clock and hear the candidates speak. Light refreshments will be served.

DISTRICT COURT.

Robert Hunter was fined $4 for violation of the rules of the Board of Health.

Peter Meuchi was arraigned for alleged assault at Quincy. Case continued until Oct. 28.

Angelo Cronomi was fined $50 and $15 costs for violation of the liquor law at Weymouth.

Damenico Guerstello was fined $50 and $13.25 costs for violation of the liquor law at Quincy.

ERICSON UNDECIDED.

Councilman Charles A. Ericson, when interviewed this morning regarding his candidacy for re-election said that he had not decided whether he would circulate papers for renomination and the pressure of business duties demanded more time than he has been able to give since assuming the office.

MURRAY THE SPEAKER.

Councilman Albert N. Murray will be the principal speaker at the next of the series of good citizenship meetings at the Wollaston Unitarian church, Sunday noon, when the subject "What's the matter with Quincy?" will be further discussed.

WANDERING LAWRENCE BOY

Whom Parents Have Searched For in Vain

LOCATED HERE

The effects of the Lawrence strike echoed in Quincy Wednesday when the police took into custody Salvatore Pisparlo, a 15 year old mill employee who left that city after losing his berth because of the labor trouble.

During the strike the boy left Lawrence and has been travelling around from place to place, working now and then when he could secure it and being obliged to reach many places by walking.

After several months of this kind of life he landed in Quincy and was given an opportunity to rake leaves and do chores for a Wollaston family.

In a burst of confidence he told of his predicament, how the city of Lawrence was in an uproar after the start of the strike and how impossible it was to secure employment. He said his parents were dead and that no relations were in the United States.

The Quincy branch of the Associated Board of Charities was advised of his presence in Quincy and they notified the Lawrence branch.

On investigation they learned that his parents were alive and that they were conducting a search for the boy.

Marshall Sullivan of Lawrence communicated with Chief Burrell and asked him to secure the boy pending a trip of the parents to Quincy. They will probably arrive today and take the boy home.

The Lawrence Branch of the Associated Board of Charities will keep a watchful eye on him and are ready to lend all assistance toward his starting life anew.

OPENING COURT IN LONDON

Picturesque Ceremony That Accompanies a Criminal Trial.

The setting of a criminal trial in London is in striking contrast with that of any similar scene in an American court room. The opening of court in the morning and after luncheon is a curious ceremony, according to T. Leaming's "A Philadelphia Lawyer In the London Courts." The bar and audience rise and through a door corresponding to the one by which the visitor has reached the dias enter the two sheriffs, gowned in flowing dark blue robes trimmed with fur.

Then comes the undersheriff, in very smart black velvet knee breeches, white ruffled shirt, white stockings, silver buckled shoes, cocked hat under arm and sword at side. The sheriffs bow in ushering to his seat the judge, who is arrayed in wig and robe, which in the case of the lord chief justice or one of the judges of the high court, is of brilliant scarlet, with a dark blue sash over one shoulder, or in the case of the common sergeant is of somber black.

The judge having seated himself in a chair—so cumbersome as to require a little track to roll it forward sufficiently close to the desk—the sheriffs dispose themselves in the seats not occupied by the judge or his guest, and later they quietly withdraw. They have no part in the proceedings. Their only function is to usher the judges in and out and to entertain them at luncheon, for the judges are by custom their guests.

At luncheon time the sheriffs escort the judges from their seats, and all the judges, sheriffs and undersheriffs and any guests they may invite assemble in the dining room of the courthouse for an excellent substantial luncheon served by butler and footman in blue liveries with brass buttons, knee breeches and white stockings.

The luncheon table looks odd with the varied costumes, the rich blues, the bright scarlets and the wigs of the party, who, no longer on duty, relax into jolly sociability. Indeed, the visitor cannot escape the impression that he has in some way joined a group of "supes" from the opera who are snatching a light supper between the choruses.

DIRECT SERVICE NOW POSSIBLE

On the Electric Express Between This Section and Boston

The work of construction of the new Electric Express and Freight terminal warehouse in Boston has been rapidly pushed along in the past few weeks and it is now practically completed and it is announced by the Bay State Street Railway Co., management that it will be opened Monday. This will mean a great improvement in the electric express and freight service over the territory served by this company.

The new terminal is at 552 Harrison avenue, Boston. Its construction embodies the latest ideas in the building of such warehouses. The foundation is of reinforced concrete. The framework is of steel and the walls and roof are of corrugated iron. It is absolutely fireproof so far as modern ingenuity can make it so and it is planned with the idea in mind all the time that it is for the purpose of handling express and freight matter and handling it as swiftly and with as few movements and lost motion as possible, also paying due regard to safety and care in handling.

Since the service between the points on the Bay State companys lines to the South and Boston was started, the handling of matter has been done under a handicap. Beginning Monday the cars will make four round trips a day between this section and Boston will run direct into and out of the terminal.

The work of shifting over from the India Wharf headquarters to the new terminal is already under way. This will take several days although everything will be ready for the start Monday. With the immense amount of business which is now being handled this is a somewhat complicated task.

It will take but a few days, however to make all the necessary shifts and then the officials of the company state that they will be able to provide a service that will be vastly more efficient even than that of the past year which has proven very satisfactory to the shippers of this vicinity.

TAFT AT PORTSMOUTH

Business Is Suspended and He Talks to Twenty Thousand People

Portsmouth, N. H., Oct. 24.—Wednesday was Taft day in this city and Portsmouth enjoyed the first visit of the nation's chief executive since the days of President Arthur.

There were elaborate decorations in all parts of the city, business was generally suspended and thousands of school children greeted the president on the public playground, where he spoke to 20,000 people.

There's a bright side to these hard times. A nickel will buy just as big a bag of peanuts as it ever did.

REVOLT AT VERA CRUZ IS ENDED

Felix Diaz and Whole of His Staff Are Captured

ALL THE REBELS DISARMED

Government Forces Occupy City With Little Opposition, the Casualties Being Insignificant—Boats In Harbor Have on Board More Than Five Thousand Foreign Refugees

Vera Cruz, Mex., Oct. 24.—Felix Diaz, with the whole of his staff, was captured here, and all the rebels disarmed. The casualities were insignificant.

Fighting was begun by the federal forces when General Beltran led his troops in the advance on the city. The rebel defenders were very nearly equal in numbers to their opponents, and the struggle, it appeared, was likely to lead to bloodshed.

The government forces occupied the city with little opposition. General Valdez and Colonel Castro, with their respective columns of federal troops, were the first to enter the place. They met with only slight resistance.

Colonel Ordaz of the Twenty-first infantry, who joined Diaz with his troops when he first proclaimed the revolution, has not yet been captured. He is a cousin of Felix Diaz.

The federal forces began their advance on Vera Cruz at noon Tuesday. The rebels under General Diaz, who occupied the city, calmly awaited their approach. General Beltran had previously informed the city council that the battle was about to begin. He declined to allow more time for the removal of non-combatants to the neutral zone.

The boats in the harbor have on board more than 5000 foreign refugees and 10,000 Mexicans. The United States cruiser Des Moines is lying about 500 yards from the American consulate. The space between is neutral and many of the refugee craft have taken up positions there.

Only thirty-two Americans remain within the town. The foreign consuls have gone aboard the boats. The American consul, William W. Canada, has assumed the leadership of the situation.

Promiscuous firing seemed to indicate that the battle had started. It was a false alarm, however, as Beltran sent an emissary offering a truce until daybreak. The troops under General Diaz were sent back to barracks and conditions became quiet until the federals entered the city yesterday.

MUST PAY DEATH PENALTY

Diaz, His Officers, and Every Tenth Soldier to Be Executed

Mexico City, Oct. 24.—General Diaz, Colonel Ordaz and all the officers of the rebellious troops and marines who surrendered at Vera Cruz will be haled immediately before a court-martial and will doubtless suffer the death penalty.

General Diaz, although not now a member of the army, is amenable in such court under the law which provides for such trial of any civilian under like circumstances.

The soldiers of the rebellious troops will be decimated—one in ten being executed. They will be chosen by lot to pay the penalty for all.

This information was imparted officially last night.

SHORTAGE IS $73,567

Sum Reported Lost by New Bedford Banks by Defalcation

New Bedford, Mass., Oct. 24.—Shortages aggregating $73,567 in the funds of the New Bedford and Acushnet Co-operative banks have been found by Bank Examiner Levi, according to his testimony at the hearing of former Treasurer Edgar Lord, who is charged with embezzlement.

Judge Milliken declined to reduce the bail, as the shortage testified to was nearly double the amount previously indicated. He held Lord for the superior court under $25,000 bonds.

The shortage, Levi said, was divided as follows: New Bedford bank $23,053, Acushnet $50,514.

MISS FISH AS MENTAL REBOUND NECESSARY TO HUNT'S WELFARE

Minister's Wife Claims He Declared Work Beneath His Dignity

Miss Thomas Said He Borrowed Money and Did Not Return It

"My husband said it was necessary for his mental rebound that he should go out with Miss Fish as frequently as he did," testified Mrs. Lilla M. Hunt before Judge Hardy in the Divorce Court Thursday.

Mrs. Hunt was suing for a divorce from her husband, Ernest W., who she testified had been pastor of the Unitarian Church at Wollaston and had previously been an Episcopal minister for several years. The friendship between the libelee and Miss Fish, according to the testimony of Mrs. Hunt had caused a scandal in the parish, as a result of which her husband was compelled to resign the pastorate.

Mrs.Hunt is a stately-looking woman,who testified that she is 40 years of age, that also being the age of her husband. "We were married in Ontario, in June, 1891," testified the libelant. "Later we lived in Southampton, Can., at Detroit and Lansing, Mich. and came to Massachusetts about eight years ago. My husband was an Episcopal minister in Bangor, and later came to Boston.

"About 16 years ago he insisted on going home, and said that he was as dead to me as though he had never existed. We never lived happily after that. He was pastor of the Unitarian Church in Wollaston, and he was asked to resign. There was considerable talk about himself and this girl, Miss Fish. He received a salary of $1500 there.

"We came from Wollaston to Huntington avenue and he started a dressmaking establishment. This girl did some of the dressmaking, which continued for about months, when we were put out of the house for nonpayment of rent. He did not do any work because he said he could get nothing befitting his dignity. I suffered badly for want of clothing and for shoes. We then took two suites on Hemenway street and I had to take in roomers and boarders. I left him finally 2 1-2 years ago. We were ejected from the Hemenway street house because he failed to pay the rent.

"I was absolutely destitute. I had to borrow money to get clothing in order to get a position. He had an ungovernable temper. He threatened several times that he would put me in an insane asylum. I was very nervous, and was under treatment by a physician for three months. I don't think I ever spent a day without being in tears.

"He kept this young woman in the family, and I protested. He said he had made a mistake in marrying me, and that it was my duty to keep the home together. I have provided for the children since he left the ministry. There are two, 20 and 16 years of age. I am now superintendent of the Old Ladies' Home."

"Where did your husband go?"

"He went to a suite of three rooms on Boylston street with this young woman, and he is there now. They carry on dressmaking. He went to the theatre at least once a week with this young lady, and when I remonstrated with him he said it was necessary for his mental rebound that he should go out with her."

A caretaker of the property on Hemenway street in which the Hunt family had lived, testified that the libelee had owed $250 for rent, and when it was demanded of him he went into insolvency. The witness said that

TRULY, RURAL RUSTICS

Overalls for the farm hands with wrappers and tires for the maids were the prevailing costumes at the "Masqueraid Danse" of the Manet Encampment, I. O. O. F., at Alpha hall, Thursday evening. Straw hats were also resurrected for the occasion and all the varieties from the tea matting shape to the dinky dicer of the college boy were worn. Glowing ties of red, probably sunburnt from exposure adorned the piccadilly collars of the bashful farmer and the girls wore them in their hair which was braided and hung down the back.

A shipping tag giving all directions was presented at the door and the "dancers" were on one side and on the other were suggestions as to conduct and "etiket."

The first whirl was a waltz,, Good "Evn' Primrose" and the last turn was Good, "Morning Glory."

Th' girl's fellers took them to the lunch cart in the shed below where the usual farm luncheon was set. Bill Wilson's Stringville Okestra played at the "danse."

Hung on the side of the hall were original water color posters depicting rural life which have been on exhibition in different parts of the city, of which W. A. Richards was the artist. Produce, mostly squashes, and one of them about two feet through were set on the stage and a card stated they were "Comps. of Jim MacConnell's farm at Germantown.

HOSPITAL THERMOMETER IS ABOVE ONE-THIRD MARK

Below the Average Set, But Workers Are Optimistic in Their Views

Automobile Campaign Adds to Efficiency of Operations

That thermometer in City Square registered $13,525.75 Thursday night, which is a few points below normal or a healthy average of what it should be. This of course means only more determined work on the part of the teams during the remaining days of the campaign. Chairman George E. Pfaffmann and Fred B. Rice called attention to the fact at the meeting in the Y. M. C. A., Thursday night that the receipts while good, are a trifle below the average and it behooved all on the job to get busy for the balance of the time and swell the fund so that there would be no lack of the $35,000 when the final temperature is taken Monday night.

The interest and enthusiasm maintained by the team members may be judged from the fact that there was little decrease in the attendance although the rain was coming down in torrents at the time the party assembled. There was very little difference in the average attendance.

Immediately every one got busy, compared notes and decided upon another mode of assault for today.

It was pointed out that one of the two teams are short handed. This is more particularly noticeable in the ward three team captained by Mr. Marsh, which has only three members, but a new and valuable recruit was pressed into service Thursday night.

After all had gathered in the building the way was taken to the dining hall on the floor above where the appetizing odors of a genuine Dutch supper were borne on the air with inviting persistence. And it was Dutch supper in every sense of the word, although there were about two delinquencies noted by some of the more critical brothers.

There was an abundance however, and everyone was satisfied. This part of the program was ably attended to by Mrs. George E. Pfaffmann, assisted by Mrs. Charles E. Price, Mrs. Paul R. Blackmur, Mrs. Russell A. Sears, Mrs. James Slade, Mrs. Luther W. Glover and Miss Gertrude King.

The cravings of the inner man having been satisfied, Chairman Pfaffmann called the assembly to order and the roll call of teams showed collections of $3750.25 above the preceding evening. Team No. 6 had certain-

FRIEDA TO TAKE HER DIP INTO OCEAN HOME SATURDAY

Everything in Readiness for an Elaborate Launching of Ship

New York Party to Make Trip on Special Train

The bulk cargo steamer Frieda built for the Union Sulphur Co., at the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. plant will be launched at 11 o'clock Saturday. The ship is from designs by George Simpson, naval architect of New York.

The vessel is named for Mrs. Henry T. Whiton, a daughter of Herman Frasch, President of the company and she will be christened by Mrs. Whiton.

The launching is expected to equal in elaborateness the launch of the steamer Herman Frasch which took place December 11, 1909, and will be witnessed by a special party of the Sulphur Co., who will come from New York on a special train which will be run over the company's private track to the Fore River yards landing the party within a few feet of the launching stand.

This vessel is 315 feet in length and of 5,000 tons deadweight on a moderate draft. The Frieda has been designed especially for the transport of bulk cargoes of low density and for this reason there has been incorporated in her hull, topside and also athwartship ballast tanks, on the Simpson principle, making the holds selftrimming on all four sides, thereby more than doubling her ballast capacity and reducing her tonnage 20 per cent.

The hull has been built to the highest class in Lloyds Register, on what is known as modified transverse framing.

The vessel is of the single deck, poop, bridge and forecastle type with propelling machinery installed aft and is rigged with 3 pole masts, the fore and main having derricks and cargo discharging gear.

The accomodations comprise separate state rooms for the Captain and Navigating officers together with two guests rooms in the bridge house amidships. The engineers are quartered in a commodious Liverpool house on the poop deck and the petty officers, seamen, wipers, etc. in wing houses at the forward end of the poop deck. These accomodatins will be exceptinally comfortable and go far to establish the superiority of the quarters allotted to American seamen.

The auxiliary machinery comprises a Hyde windlass and steam capstan, Lidgerwood winches and steam steering gear with telemotor control.

The equipment of the Frieda is up-to date in every resypect, aid consists in addition to the usual articles, a submarine signal, wireless telegraph installation, Morse night signal and a porhydrometer for the automatic weighing of the cargo.

The propelling machinery consists of a 22 1-2 triple expansion engine with two large single ended Scotch boilers with Howden's forced draft and fitted for buring liquid fuel.

There have been installed in the engine room duplicate sets of 10 kilowatt generators; also two half ton capacity ice machines to take care of the crews consumable stores.

Altogether the vessel will prove a noteworthy addition to the owner's fleet, and it is hoped that it will maintain the high tradition of her builders as exemplified in the S|S "HERMAN FRASCH" constructed at the Fore River Shipbuilding Co.'s yards over two years ago for the same owners.

ADAMS SCHOOL DISCUSSED

Question About Heating Raised at Association Meeting

At a meeting of the Parents and Teachers' association of the Adams school Thursday evening Charles H. Johnson delivered his lecture on Historic Quincy to about 125 people. Because of the lateness of the hour several questions which have been agitating the members were not discussed but will be taken up at a meeting of the executive committee Wdnesday evening.

President Robert E. Foy read a communication from Mayor Stone relative to the starting of the new Adams school and advised the association that work would be rushed so that the building would be completed as soon as possible.

The communication also stated that the heating contract had not been awarded. The placing of this contract called for considerable discussion at a recent meeting because it was claimed a sufficient amount of radiation was not allowed for the building. A committee conferred with Mayor Stone on this question .

During the evening Miss Alice Barry rendered several solos and she was accompanied by Mrs. Tupper Miller.

ONE BRIDGE SUFFICIENT

Mayor Stone Opposes Second Structure Over Neponset

HEARING MONDAY

An important hearing is to be held at the state house Monday on the proposition of acquiring more land for Metropolitan Park purposes. It is understood that the scheme is to build another bridge across the Neponset river to connect with the Quincy Shore boulevard. Mayor Stone believes that the New bridge across the river to take the place of the present structure and thence to the boulevard by Hancock street is sufficient for all purposes and that to acquire more land and build a new bridge would be a useless expense. He therefore has appointed a committee to oppose the project consisting of President Hobbs of the City Council, Herbert T. Whitman Councilman John R. Richards and Charles C. Hearn president of the Board of Trade. A meeting of this committee will be held in the office of the Mayor Saturday evening to formulate plans for opposing the proposed legislation.

PROGRESSIVE RALLY.

The Progressive Party will hold a rally tonight in Evan's block on Copeland street and if the crowd is too large for the place they will conduct an open air rally on Lincoln park which is directly opposite.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The dice did not fall so well for the younger Diaz as they did for his older namesake.

Jack Johnson says he is human or words to that effect and there is a good ideal of truth in what the "Big Ace" says. Still knowing his limitations he should not have flown in the face of Providence.

The Greeks appear to have a strangle hold on the Turks today. With a toe hold they will make their victory complete.

Gov. Foss has appointed a "Fire Prevention Day." Like the contest against tuberculosis, that means 365 out of the year with an extra one thrown in for good measure leap year.

After the million expended on the Metropolitan docks a few years ago, they do not meet present requirements but as there has been no tremendous shifting of traffic to Boston it would be difficult to fathom where the requirements appear but the port directors have to show something for their salary.

It will only be a few years when Atlantic terminals will be nearer Europe than Boston and freight and passengers transferred to cars at the very docks.

The politicians are still stirring up the mud. Thank goodness there is only a few more days and then a rest from such clatter for a few months.

A continuance of this weather and all may well laugh at the coal barons. Such weather conditions are really a boon to the poor.

Only three more days for that $35,000 fund. If you have not been interviewed be sure you are not given the go by.

Beveridge deserves a monument. He returned campaign contributions.

The signal of distress was displayed at Wollaston and then the relief expedition was met with the rebuff that they were animated by idle curiosity.

Thousands of cars used for the transportations of automobiles and not a single car for coal.

Some newspapers in their zeal are inciting fanatics to murder with regard to Jack Johnson. Some of them are slopping over one way or the other all the time like a full pail in unsteady hands.

All the nice things which the "biased press" are saying about Col. Roosevelt must be some compensation for the slight inconvenience he now suffers.

This Russell will case is come to somewhat of a chestnut. Take it all in all more newspaper space have been given to it than matters of National importance.

The old timers framed up well on the Montclair golf links. They all hit it off in good style.

The usual thing happened, the fighters are tooted as being in the best posible condition, the battle the best ever, and the day after the affair it is mildly sugested that one did not fight and the other did not want to. All of which leads to the idea that the rake comes before rather than after the battle.

A few places in Boston have had their licenses suspended for violations. About the whole lot would be permanently closed if they were made to live up to their licenses.

Peanut politicians should not complain if they get well roasted.

Mrs. Russell's Sages statement that she finds her money a burden to her will evidently bring forward a host of thoughtful people perfectly willing to relieve her.

THOSE KIND WORDS.

On every hand kind words are being passed along to Irving L. Shaw for his able and fearless presentation of local conditions and at the same time the Ledger is being commended on every hand for the courage it has displayed in affording Mr. Shaw an adequate outlet for his views.

Citizens of all classes, all political shades and every one in general is endorsing the Ledger's independence in this matter. On every hand it is pointed out that the paper is performing a great public service.

It is not often that newspaper courage of this kind is manifested. In passing it is not out of order to say and in no sense hedging the responsibility or forward movement to point out that this condition has existed for years and will continue just so long as the voters are supine in their civic pride and lax in the exercise of their franchise. More independent action on the part of the voters in this direction would lead to inmprovement in all city departments.

From now on let the citizens of Quincy be more active and discriminating in their selection of public officials. Demand of candidates their principles and policies. If they are worthy of consideration, elect them and give them a chance. If they fail in one instance drop them and try some one else. Reforms of a sweeping character cannot be accomplished in a moment. Vigilance, continued vigilance is needed and then the citizens and the community will reap the reward.

SPEEDY TRIALS.

Two cases which have given ample evidence of the speedy application of justice have developed within the present year, one in Massachusetts and one in New York. While not as quick in their action as the disposition of the Crippen case in the English courts, they afford ample illustration that an advancement in the handling of such cases beneficial to all.

It is only justice to defendants that they should have as speedy a trial as the exegesis of the case demand. No bias is entertained in this motion towards a long needed reform.

The outcome of the case is of secondary consideration when compared with the rights of all parties cncerned. In both of those cases public sentiment demanded speedy trials. The call of public sentiment was heeded.

Justice Goff in New York and Justice Quinn of Massachusetts both gave splendid examples of able handling of difficult cases. Without being unduly arbitrary, they insisted that time should not be frittered away by useless questions of wrangling. Both Massachusetts and New York should feel proud of the examples in which those judges have set to the justices of courts in other sections of the country

DRAWING TO A CLOSE.

Only a few more days, three in fact counting Sunday for you Mr. Citizen to add your portion to that $35,000 hospital fund. Do not hesitate because your contribution may not look as large as that of some one else. Give according to your means and that fact will be fully appreciated. It is the spirit of giving which counts a great deal and possibly later on, you may feel that you can add to the amount and it will help along.

That the citizens, and some who are not residents of the city are responding loyally is acknowledged. However no stone will be left unturned to bring the figures up to and above the $35,000. This is a united effort in which all are operating in common. You must remember that the gentlemen of the various teams are devoting valuable time to the undertaking. Taking it out of themselves and their business. Yet they are doing it without a murmur, because they feel they are doing a good work. They have a great many people to see and this should also be considered.

Tonight and Saturday night automobiles will be pressed into service so that much more ground can be covered. The enthusiasm is catching. It takes hold of every one who has anything to do with this movement and the result will prove creditable to Quincy and her citizens.

WHO IS THE GIANT?

Editor Daily Ledger:—

What is the everlasting truth concerning the story which appeared in a certain local weekly a few days ago to the effect that a "financial giant" was favored in the matter of assessment in disregard of advice given at the State House? It is too grave an accusation to ignore. Let us have a square denial from the assessors if the story is untrue, and an explanation if it is true.

By the way, your correspondent, Mr. Shaw is doing valiant service for the people of Quincy and the Ledger is cooperating valiantly with him.

CITY UNDER SAME CONTROL

No Matter Which Party is Exercising Power

SAYS MR. POLAND

At a meeting of the Norfolk Downs Improvement Association in Poland hall, Thursday evening the question of tenement houses and "three deckers" was discussed. No action was taken and the matter was laid over until the next meeting.

William A. Mann, president of the Wollaston Congregational club was among those present and spoke of the proposed congress of mens clubs to be held in the near future and explained the object and possibilities.

The matter of the Tyler street appropriation and the charge made for steam roller services, when no machine apparently had been at work on the street, were discussed.

John E. Poland claimed the city government had been under the same control for the past six or seven years regardless of which party was elected.

He declared that in a few years a mayor would come along that would dare to tell the city's true indebtedness and then the tax rate would jump to thirty dollars.

Eight new memebrs were admitted and other applications received. In the absence of President Dunmore, John E. Poland presided.

ILLUSTRATED CRADLE SONG

Feature of the Wollaston Alliance Sociable

A program of music and reflecoscope pictures was enjoyed at the monthly church sociable in the Wollaston Unitarian Vestry Thursday evening, by the Ladies Aid Alliance. An illustrated "Cradle song" was delightfully sung by Mrs. Frank A. Page, accompanied by Mrs. Chandler W. Smith

Rev. Carl G. Horst gave a short lecture of his last European trip, many interesting views being cast upon the screen. Next came a guessing contest of old photographs and tin-types showing many of the parish in their childhood days.

The evening closed with a variety of other views and the singing of "America" by those present, views depicting each verse being shown.

AFTER SEVERAL DAYS' FIGHTING

Bulgarians Have Key to Adrianople Fortification

THE FALL OF KIRK-KILISSE

It Gives Bulgarian Forces Choice of Several Moves—Reports From Other War Centres Are Contradictory—Turkey May Make No Serious Attempt to Defend Macedonia

London, Oct. 25.—Kirk-Kilisse has been captured by the Bulgarian army after several days of fighting and the way is opened for a flanking movement on the main position at Adrianople.

Half a dozen roads meet at Kirk-Kilisse and the Bulgarians have the choice, according to their strength and the conditions that confront them, of several moves. They may swing west and south on to the branch of the Salonica-Constantinople railroad which passes through Adrianople to Sofia and isolate Adrianople, or they may strike southeast and forming a junction with the Bulgarian column moving down the coast of the Black sea threaten Constantinople. Again they may elect just to hammer Adrianople until it falls.

It may be that the Turkish army has been holding the line between Adrianople and Kirk-Kilisse with a covering force say of 70,000 men and that the main Ottoman army is not yet on the scene. The Bulgarian army had the advantage of occupying rising ground at Kirk-Kilisse, and the Turks should have had their full force in order to dislodge them.

The difficulty of the strategy of the operations is increased by obviously exaggerated reports of the situation sent out. Strategy by press report is a part of modern warfare. For this reason stories of victory or defeat sent out from the capitals of the different Balkan states involved in the present conflict must be carefully considered.

If Sofia, Belgrade, Cettinje and Athens are listened to, the advance of the Balkan armies is one unbroken series of victories, some dearly won, but victories nevertheless. From Constantinople come denials of some of these claims, but the underlying tone of news from the Turkish capital is not very optimistic.

There is evidence that much of the fighting done on the Servian, Montenegrin and Greek frontiers has been by Turkish irregulars, tribesmen and Albanians.

It is not impossible, as already hinted, that Turkey will make no serious attempt to defend Macedonia, devoting her attention to saving Constantinople and watching the Russian army on her Asian frontier, and trusting Great Britian and the other powers to restore her rule in her European provinces when the war is over.

Anoher fierce encounter is in progress around Kumanova, on the way to Uskup, where both Servians and Turks claim victory. Other indications than the Turkish report show that the Servians have suffered severely.

A call was issued yesterday at Belgrade for all retired and reserve officers as well as military employes, lawyers and engineers, to join the Seventh Servian regiment, the crack corps of Belgrade, within forty-eight hours. Some doubts are expressed in Belgrade whether the cartridge factories in Servia will be able to issue cartridges fast enough to supply the needs of the hard fighting troops.

There has also been some severe fighting in the Struma valley, where again both sides claim the victory. For the time being, operations have slackened in the Novipazar district, where the Servians and Montenegrins are attempting to advance.

The capture of the town of Novipazar by the Servian troops advances this object considerably, but the troops who have passed through a terrific battle must be allowed some rest.

The Greeks also for the moment appear to be satisfied with the capture of the Turkish town of Servia, although their cavalry is pursuing the retiring Turks through the valley of Alasakmon.

The Montenegrins who have been waiting for some time are apparently prepared now to make a great effort to secure possession of the Turkish stronghold of Scutari. While General Martinovitch is bombarding Tarakosch Princes Danilo and Mirsky are putting their armies in order for a general advance.

HEALTH OF SCHOOL CHILDREN.

Of the 20,000,000 school children in this country, not less than 75 per cent "need attention today for physical defects which are prejudicial to health and which are partially or completely remediable." This is the finding of Dr. Thomas D. Wood, professor of physical education in the Teachers College, Columbia University, New York, and published for free distribution by the United States Bureau of Education.

"Careful study of statistics and estimation of all conditions leads to the following personal conclusions," writes Dr. Wood:

"From 1 1-2 to 2 per cent, or 400,000, of these have organic heart disease.

"Probably 5 per cent, 1,000,000 at least, have now or have had tuberculous disease of the lungs.

"About 5 per cent, or 1,000,000 have spinal curvature, flat foot, or some other moderate deformity serious enough to interfere to some degree with health.

"Over 5 per cent, or 1,000,000 have defective hearing.

"About 25 per cent, or 5,000,000 have defective vision.

"About 25 per cent, or 5,000,00 are suffering from mal-nutrition, in many cases due in part at least to one or more of the other defects enumerated.

"Over 30 per cent, or 6,000,000, have enlarged tonsils, adenoids, or enlarged cervical glands which need attention.

"Over 50 per cent, or 10,000,000 (in some schools as high as 98 per cent), have defective teeth which are interfering with health.

"Several millions of the children possess, each, two or more of the handicapping defects.

"About 100 cities in the United States have as many different kinds of organizations for the care of health in the schools.

"The most important of all our national resources is the health of the people. The most valuable asset in our capital of national vitality is the health of the children.

"Public education is the logical, the strategic, and the responsible agency of the Nation, of each State, and of each community for the conservation and enhancement of child health.

"To become an effective instrument for the protection and promotion of child health, it is essential that the school should not only be a sanitary, healthful place for children, but that the various agencies in public education should be so organized that each pupil may be given the best possible opportunity to escape weakness and disease and far more to realize the attainable best in growth, in development of biologic, intellectual, moral, social, and economic power."

RECREATION CENTERS VS. THE DANCE HALL AND SALOON.

"It is difficult for many of our people to appreciate the obligations of the State to protect our youth outside of school hours from the contaminating influences of the street and other places through the agency of the public schools. The experiences of New York City and Doctor Maxwell's recommendation in this matter should be of very great interest to all patriotic citizens.

"Wherever recreation centers have been established they prove formidable rivals to the private dance halls, always dangerous and often diisreputable, with which our city is too abundantly supplied. To suppress them and other resorts even more vicious for the young seems impossible. The only way to meet the evil is to provide counter attractions of irreproachable character. These may most easily be furnished in the school buildings: Seeing that young people must have amusement, that they will seek it in unwholesome, in they can not obtain it in wholesome places, I recommend that our activities outside of school hours be extended in the following directions:

"1. A much larger number of recreation centres should be opened. We should have over one hundred instead of forty-three.

"2. Moving picture apparatus should be installed and moving picture shows of educational value should be given in the recreation centers.

"3. Not only should the folk dancing and the mixed dancing classes be extended, but arrangements should be made by which any reputable club of young men and women might have, at stated intervals, and always under supervision, the use of an indoor school playground for dancing and social purposes.

"4. Our playgrounds should be open, under supervision, to the children of the school neighborhoods throughout the year.

"5. Our system of vacation schools should be at least doubled next year. Recreative work is quite as important as play for all classes of children.

"All of these extensions will cost money, and it has always been difficult to obtain appropriations for such purposes. There is no money, however, that is expended by the city for purposes of recreation that is so economically administered and that dispenses so manifold blessings, as the money expended under the direction of the Board of Education."

DENIES TIES WERE ROTTEN

New Haven Road Says Track at Westport Was In Good Condition

New Haven, Oct. 25.—Denial of allegations that rotten ties caused the wreck at Westport on Oct. 3, in which several lives were lost, is given in a statement issued here by the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad. The statement says:

"The track was inspected by the inspector of safety appliances of the interstate commerce commission and by the engineer of the public utilities commission of the state of Connecticut immediately after the wreck and pronounced in good condition.

"The renewal of the ties for the season was in progress and had been nearly completed, and but few ties marked for replacement remained in the track at the time of the wreck, and none of these was in the crossover traversed by the wrecked train.

"This is the normal condition obtaining on the best maintained railroads in the United States, and the existence of such ties in the track did not and could not affect the safety of operation."

Jackson, Mich., Oct. 25.—Fire, believed to have been set by convicts, started at the prison early last night. Flames appeared first in the big binder twine warehouse.

The convicts looked out between the bars of their cells in fiendish glee at the flames as they enveloped the warehouse.

The total loss to the state will be about $50,000.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE IN BOSTON AND VICINITY

PLYMOUTH THEATRE.

Not in a great many years have the theatregoers of Boston been treated to such an artistic performance as that being given by George Arliss in "Disraeli," which begins the third week of its engagement at the Plymouth Theatre, Boston, Monday night. The play, which was generously received on its opening night, has repeated its New York success, and Mr. Arliss in the title role triumphs as he never did before. To quote the New York World: "Not since the curtain was drawn on the careers of Henry Irving and Richard Mansfield has a New York audience seen a performance Of the company Otis Harlan and Gertrude Bryan carry off first honors, the former being a host in himself and never failing to keep his audiences in good humor while he is on the stage. Miss Bryan makes a daintily pretty "Boy Blue," sings well, and has a charming personality that cannot be denied. Eva Fallon, Maude Odell, Katheryn Stevenson, John Dunsmure, Victor Kahn and the other members of the cast take good care that there shall be never a dull moment.

The chorus is an exceptionally large one, the girls being pretty and costumed most attractively. Especially captivating do they appear in their Scotch kilts and bare knees.

GEORGE ARLISS AS DISRAELI,
Plymouth Theatre, Boston.

that could approach it." The play is a strange medley of comedy, romance and melodrama, but all these elements combine to make it appeal to all classes of playgoers. Mr. Arliss's impersonation of the brilliant English statesman is extremely fascinating. The wit, gallantry, magnetism and forcefulness of the versatile prime minister are portrayed in a most vivid manner. In other words Mr. Arliss makes "Disraeli" worthy of aceptance as one of the most artistic treats that has been provided by the theatre for many seasons. The matinees at the Plymouth are Thursdays and Saturdays.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

Jesse L. Lasky's newest and most pretentious musical production, "The Trained Nurses," with Gladys Clark and Henry Bergman, heads one of the best vaudeville bills seen at B. F. Keith's Theatre in several months. Aside from "The Trained Nurses," the week will be notable for the number of new acts on the list, practically every one of them being new to Boston audiences. In "The Trained Nurses," Mr. Lasky has surpassed all his previous efforts as a productioner. He has been especially fortunate in the selection of his cast, with Clark and Bergman in the two principal roles. This well known team, which last season scored one of the biggest hits of the year in vaudeville, appear respectively in the roles of "Sammy Sloane," a patient in a private sanitarium in New York City, and "Susan Grey," the new nurse to whom falls the care of Sammy." A large company of comedians appear in the production as well as a big chorus of dainty and demure trained nurses. Seven catchy musical numbers are introduced in the course of the act, and the fun is fast and furious from start to finish. Other big features will be Brown and Blyer, the song writers; Furbor Sisters, a troupe of clever girl entertainers; Maxime and Babby in an original specialty; Edwina Barry & Co., in a funny character stunt; The Barons, two skilful musicians; Watson and Santes, singing comedians; and the Eugene Trio, a new act from Germany.

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

Henry W. Savage's joyful offering. "Little Boy Blue," began the third week of its mirthful regime at the Majestic Theatre last Monday evening before a crowded house. While "Little Boy Blue" possesses Scotch atmosphere to a degree, a rather Frenchified view of it is taken and the whole production is refulgent with light and glitter. It is a massive presentation, taxing to the fullest capacity the stage of the Majestic, and there is evidence that Manager Savage has been at pains not to omit a single thing that might add to its attractiveness. The orchestra is a large one including all the instruments usually to be found in grand opera productions.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE

It will be a genuine first night at the Castle Square on Monday, for "Butterfly Baronet" will then receive its first presentation in Boston, and its first performance before a metropolitan audience. This new play is the work of Robert Keith Snow,, a Boston author, and some of its incidents and characters are taken from a novel by Mary Cholmondeley, entitled "Sir Charles Danvers." Into it, however, he has put much that is original, especially in the way of brilliant and sparkling dialogue. The plot of "Butterfly Baronet" combines comedy, emotion and sentiment. Its scenes are laid in the English country, and its plot involves the love of Sir Charles Rivers for Ruth Harcourt, who has bethrothed herself to another man. How this worked out in an ingenious manner remains for the play to tell, and it is sufficient to say that added to it is an abundance of dramatic incident that involves other characters, notably a scape-brother of Ruth Harcourt.

There will be an especial interest in the production of "Butterfly Baronet," for John Craig will return to the Castle Square stage after an absence of several weeks. He will be cordially welcomed back. The role of Ruth Harcourt will be taken by Mary Young, Wilson Melrose will be seen in the title role of Sir Charles Rivers, and the entire strength of Mr. Craig's company will be drawn upon for the remainder of the cast.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE

But one more week remains for theatregoers of Boston and suburbs to see "Coming Home to Roost" the new play of American life by Edgar Selwyn at the Hollis Street Theatre, which has scored an emphatic hit. From a Fifth avenue mansion to a chicken farm is what Martin Boldt, a millionaire broker does to cure his wife of a nervous sickness which is caused by her inactivity to participate any more in her husband's affairs. This simple though novel little story is worked out with abundant humorous complications that naturally would follow a colossal lie like Boldt has told his wife to get her to move from the mansion to the farm. The fun is quiet and wholesome and the story is presented by a cast of excellence.

William Courtleigh and Grace Elliston carry the principal roles of the drama; he as the husband, who has been busy amassing the fortune and she as the wife, whose simple tastes and habits were unable to stand the pace that usually accompanies sudden wealth. There will be the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

CANDIDATES ALL INVITED

To Political Love Feast of Squantum Citizens

MAY BE QUIZZED

Candidates for Mayors, Councilmen at-large and councilmen of Ward 6, have been invited to attend a big nonpartisan rally at Lee's Inn, Squantum, Wednesday evening, October 30 at 8 o'clock. The affair is under the auspices of the Squantum Improvement association.

By unanimous vote the association decided that before the city election it should have a look at the candidates of all parties and hear what they say about city government before the time came for voting. Members of the Squantum association have followed closely Mr. Shaw's letters in the Ledger and are in unanimous accord with his plea that the business man and not the politicians be elected to run the city's affairs. The members of the association believe that in inviting the candidates to speak they can pick out the men competent to handle the city affairs from the men who hand out nothing but "political taffy" and plunge the city into debt so that the tax rate has become almost prohibitive.

The meeting will be called promptly at 8 o'clock. Each candidate will be given from 5 to 10 minutes to have his say. Several Squantum residents will give the candidates themselves a few things to think about as to how they expect of their representatives in the City Council.

A luncheon will be served at 10 o'clock. The candidates for office mentioned above are invited without further notice to attend this meeting although an effort to deliver a personal invitation will be made so far as the candidates are known.

—A much needed law for the protection of the lives of passengers on steamers went into effect October 1. The law requires increased lifeboat equipment on all steamers sailing from ports in the United States, and will be rigidly enforced by the steamboat inspectors. Steamers will be required to carry sufficient lifeboats to accommodate every person on board, crew as well as passengers. Another very essential law along the life saving line went into effect on the same date, that of requiring every passenger steamer to carry two wirless operators.—Athol Chronicle.

QUINCY CO-OPERATIVE BANK.

On the first Wednesday of November the Quincy Co-operative Bank will issue its 48th series of shares. This simple statement has a good deal of meaning to many people of Quincy, while others not conversant with co-operative methods may take no special notice of it. The simple workings of the co-operative system, however, are pretty sure to interest any one who will look into them a little A few of the ground principles are as follows:—

A co-operative shareholder is one who pays into the bank each month one dollar for each share that he owns, and he may own from one to twenty-five shares. The shares are said to "mature" when each one comes to be worth $200, this sum including the amount of monthly deposits and accrued dividends, and when this amount of $200 is reached it is paid over to the shareholder by the bank.

The time required for shares to mature is about 12 years, or 144 months In this period the shareholder has, of course, paid in $144 for each share and at the end he draws $200, a gain of $56. His first deposit will have been on interest 12 years, and the last only a month, an average of six years for the $144 dollars. Now a gain of $56 in six years is at the rate of $9.33 a year, or $6.48 on a hundred.

In case a shareholder prefers not to continue his payments through the 12 years he is at liberty to "withdraw" his shares at any time upon a month's notice, and with aloss of one-quarter of the accrued interest. Even in this case his interest will be a little more than savings bank rates.

An excellent feature of the co-operative system is that a shareholder may at any time borrow the money that he has on deposite for such time as he wishes by paying interest; and by keeping up his monthly payments, and paying back the loan when convenient, he retains his standing as a shareholder all the time.

The kind of business that the bank prefers is that of aiding young home-builders—men who have laid by a little money and propose to invest it in a home, in conjunction with a loan from the bank. The bank steadily declines partnership with promoters in taking speculative risks.

Perhaps the most valuable feature of the co-operative bank is the encouragement it gives to systematic and periodic saving. The average man breaks good resolutions pretty easily, and if he can deposite his money at one time as well as another he is rather likely to spend it before it reaches the bank. But if he is carrying along five co-operative shares he will soon get in the habit of reserving his little $5 for that inevitable Wednesday as a matter of course.

There is a small penalty of two cents a share per month, marked up against him if he does not pay up on the dot—a little bit of gentle compulsion which works admirably.

It will now be understood that an old series of shares—the 24th—is maturing, in the Quincy Co-operative Bank, just as a new series is issuing, and that shareholdres in the 24th are receiving $200 in cash, or its equivalent in a cancelled mortgage, for each of their shares. This event usually brings out a good many satisfied smiles from persevering shareholders, and it is a common thing for some of them to remark that they never would have saved so much money in the world if they had not got started in the Co-operative Bank.

Now, Mr. Prospective Homebuilder, here is something worth thinking about, and if you are at all interested you had better call at the bank in the Adams building, where the genial secretary, Mr. Frank A. Reed, will be glad to explain all the pariculars.

BRIEFS

The recent rains served to give the dead grass a good wetting down as well as to quench the numerous wood fires, and the firemen will get a little rest.

The rain has laid the dust and as the mud will only be of short duration we can stand it without grumbling. Only let the snow and cold keep off as a rebuke to the coal barons and every one will be satisfied.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Winship of 161 Quincy avenue, are receiving congratulations upon the arrival of a young son. The little fellow made his appearance, Wednesday and mother and child are doing well and the father, well the father is all smiles and easily touchable for the cigars about this time.

STAG PARTY.

Allen J. Daw entertained a stag party at his home on Quincy street Thursday evening. The party was held in order to form a club of young men, ten of whom were present Thursday evening. Games of various kinds were played and refreshments were served. A very enjoyable evening was had by all.

WOMEN CLEAN OUT BUTCHERS' STALLS

Berlin Housewives Object to the High Prices of Meat

Berlin, Oct. 25.—The "dear food riots" increased in violence when some 2000 women raided a butcher shop in the Wedding district, which is entirely inhabited by working people, demolished the premises and stole the meat. The manager was seriously injured. All the other butcher shops in the district have been closed and barricaded.

The police have been ordered out in strong force, as the district, which is in the north of Berlin, has on previous occasions been the scene of violent disturbances and it is feared these may be repeated.

Hundreds of Berlin housewives had previously joined in a riot because the butchers in the municipal markets refused to handle meat imported so as to reduce the cost of living. They stormed the butchers' stalls, seized all the native-raised meat, trampled it on the ground and fought with the butchers.

MISS FISH AS MENTAL REBOUND

it was quite apparent to him that Mrs. Hunt had been the mainstay of the family.

Gladys Hunt, a daughter of the parties, 20 years old, testified that there had been more or less scandal in the parish because of the relations between her father and the Fish woman, and also because Mr. Hunt's views were different from those of the congregation and he refused to give them up. He was therefore asked to resign.

"When we urged him to get some work to do," said the witness, "he said we were insulting him, that it was below his dignity to work, and that he could not find anything to suit him."

"He and I never got along," replied Miss Hunt. "He used to say to me why didn't I get out and work, and one day I told him I would, and I did. That was four years ago. I was then 16."

Miss Mary R. Thomas testified that she is assistant director of practice in the Boston public schools and was acquainted with the Hunt family and frequently visited them. She stated that Mr. Hunt had borrowed money from her, but had never repaid it, and that she was aware of the cause of the trouble in the Hunt household.

A decree nisi was granted.

Mr. Hunt is a native of Milton and after entering the ministry came from that place to the pastorate of the Unitarian church at Wollaston. It is claimed that his retirement from this pastorate was in no way due to his friendship for Miss Fish, but because he preached a different doctrine from that which his parishioners accepted.

DEATH PENALTY AWAITS BECKER

First Degree Murder Is the Verdict Returned by Jury

DEFENDANT DOES NOT FLINCH

Will Be Sentenced by Justice Goff on Oct. 30—Doubt Expressed In Justices' Charge to Jury That Rose Could Have Invented Story He Told Against Former Police Lieutenant—Refuses to Link Schepps With Undoubted Accomplices In the Slaying of Rosenthal

New York, Oct. 25.—Former Police Lieutenant Charles Becker was found guilty of murder in the first degree by the jury which has been trying him for instigating the death of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler.

The verdict was pronounced at 12:02 o'clock this morning after nine hours' deliberation by the jury. The penalty is death.

Becker did not flinch when he heard the verdict pronounced by Harold B. Skinner, foreman of the jury. Mrs. Becker, sitting outside the door of the courtroom, fell in a swoon when the verdict was announced.

Becker was remanded for sentence to the Tombs by Justice Goff until Oct. 30.

John F. McIntyre, Becker's chief counsel, announced that he would take an immediate appeal, but added that beyond this he had nothing to say.

Defense Receives a Shock

Justice Goff's charge was a shock to the defense. In effect it expressed a doubt that Jack Rose could have invented such a story as he told against Becker, and that there was no evidence to show that Sam Schepps was an accomplice. The justice was particular in instructing the jury that Becker was not called upon to prove his innocence, and that if there was a reasonable doubt of his guilt the verdict must be acquittal.

But the features of his long address were his statement that the jury must take into consideration whether or not Rose was capable of weaving such a story as would withstand seven hours of cross-examination and the statement that there was so much of a doubt in his mind as to whether or not Schepps was an accomplice that he would refuse to link Schepps with Rose, Vallon and Webber, the undoubted accomplices.

About Rose and Schepps

In dwelling on these main points of the case, Goff said concerning Rose: "To a large extent you will depend in your rendering of a verdict on the truth or falsity of Rose's testimony. You must use your own personal impressions as to whether he should be given full credence or not. You must also take into consideration his demeanor—whether it was friendly or hostile, consider his frankness or suppression, the consistency of his narrative and his ability to withstand the rigid and thorough cross-examination.

"Then, too, you must consider his surroundings, his life, his companions and his business, and you have the right to ask yourselves whether his story in this case is true; you must consider whether his mental faculty is capable of weaving such a story. If you do not believe the testimony of Rose, if you do not accept it as the truth, you must acquit the defendant."

On the connection with Schepps, Goff had this to say:

"There is a question about Schepps being an accomplice. I must say that I am in doubt. I decline, as a matter of law, to instruct you that he was an accomplice. I don't find any testimony that would justify a judge, as a matter of law, in saying that Schepps was a co-conspirator. Being an accessory after the fact cannot make him a principal in the crime."

Charge Is Denounced

Becker and his lawyers furiously denounced the charge as unfair and as a virtual direction to the jury to convict the defendant. After the justice and the jury left the courtroom, Becker stood up in court and said loudly:

"That charge was absolutely unfair. It was one-sided. It was not a charge but a summing up for the state. He might as well have told the jury to find me guilty."

Mrs. Becker was so upset by the charge that her composure was shaken. She told her friends, "What could any fair-minded person say about such a charge? Why, the judge scarcely mentioned the witnesses for the defense, but he spent hours trying to make Rose and the whole vile set out as honest men. It was not justice."

John F. McIntyre, Becker's counsel, was bitterly disappointed. He had hardly expected that Goff would charge that Schepps was an accomplice, but he was unprepared for the emphatic statement by the court that there was no evidence to show Schepps was an accomplice. And the

CHARLES BECKER

Police Lieutenant Is Convicted of Murder

justice's instructions concerning Rose aroused McIntyre's ire still more.

"Why, the charge was practically instructions to find Becker guilty," said McIntyre. "No man could make anything else out of it."

McIntyre Gives Up Hope

After the charge, McIntyre gave up hope of gaining a verdict of acquittal. He had builded largely upon his efforts to show that Schepps was as much a murderer as Rose or the other informers and that Rose had told a series of clever lies. McIntyre believed that the charge went for toward destroying whatever impressions of that sort he had been able to instill in the minds of the jurors. When the jury retired, McIntyre was hardly looking for them to come back with any more favorable answer than an announcement that they could not agree.

Justice Goff's comments as to Rose—Rose's long and uninterrupted appearance on the witness stand, the inability of the witness to get time to reframe or reconstruct or patch up his story, his withstanding of severe cross-examination—were fiercely objected to by the counsel for the defense.

McIntyre's Expectations

To this part of Goff's charge McIntyre excepted, as he did many other parts. He kept the stenographer busy putting exceptions in the record. The exceptions were made of course for the purpose of an appeal in case the jury convicted his client.

Another strong point for the state in Goff's charge was that the jury need not consider by whose hand Rosenthal was killed if it believed that the murder was the result of instructions given by Becker. And the justice's course in pointing out that corroboration could consist of a number of unconnected circumstances all tending to show the connection of Becker with the crime was still another aid to the state and a blow to the defense.

Justice Goff told the jury also that they could diregard the testimony as to Becker's good reputation, since a good reputation was no defense in a criminal case.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

THE SUCCULENT SPARERIB.

PORK will soon be at its best, and spareribs are available at most butchers. Well browned and served with fried potatoes or fried mush, spareribs are delicious.

Spareribs are usually roasted or sauted.

A Decorative Effect.

Spareribs With Spinach.—Take a half dozen spareribs. If they have been salted, soak in cold water for half an hour. Then drain them and place in a saucepan. Add two carrots cut into pieces, an onion with a couple of cloves stuck in it and a tiny bit of garlic. Cover the spareribs and vegetables with water, season with a half teaspoonful of salt and a half teaspoonful of white pepper. Cover the pan and let it boil for three-quarters of an hour. Then add six raw potatoes of uniform size. Let these boil for half an hour. Place some boiled spinach on a hot plate, arrange the spareribs on this and use the potatoes and other vegetables as a border.

Broiled In Oil.

Devilled Spareribs.—Take six fresh spareribs, rub them with a little olive oil and season with salt and pepper. Lay on the broiler and broil slowly on each side. Take off the fire, dip them in a half ounce of melted butter mixed well with two saltspoonfuls of ground mustard, a teaspoonful of white wine vinegar, a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce, a saltspoonful of salt, a half saltspoonful of cayenne pepper and the yolk of one egg. Then roll in bread or cracker crumbs and broil again for a couple of minutes. Serve on a hot dish.

With Boiled Cabbage.

Spareribs With Cabbage.—Soak the spareribs in cold water for half an hour if they are the salted ones. Select a nice white cabbage, take off the outer leaves and quarter it, removing the stalk; place in a saucepan, cover with hot water, season with salt and pepper and boil slowly for three-quarters of an hour. Then add the spareribs, covering the pan again and boil a little longer. Put in six peeled potatoes of uniform size and boil until done. Arrange the cabbage on a hot dish with the potatoes as a border. Lay the spareribs on top and serve.

TOOTHSOME RELISHES.

IN spite of the fact that one may buy in the shops all sorts of pickles, jams, jellies and preserves, there are many housewives who prefer to make their own. They are thus assured of pure food carefully prepared.

To Whet the Appetite.

Chili Sauce.—Take a dozen large chopped tomatoes, two medium sized onions and three green peppers chopped fine, two tablespoonfuls of salt, three cupfuls of vinegar, one tablespoonful of mustard, one teaspoonful each of cinnamon and nutmeg, two tablespoonfuls of sugar. Cook until of the right consistency or about one and one-half hours, then bottle for use.

Chutney.—Take four pounds of firm ripe tomatoes which have been chopped, one pound of tart minced apples, one cupful seeded raisins, six small onions and one and one-half pints pure cider vinegar. Let simmer a few minutes before adding one pound of brown sugar, four ounces of salt, two saltspoonfuls of cayenne pepper, one ounce crushed mustard seed and one-half ounce powdered ginger. Cook gently an hour or more until quite soft, then put through a sieve and set aside to cool. For several days stir daily, then seal in jars.

Excellent Condiments.

Tomato Relish.—Take a peck of ripe tomatoes, chop fine and add to them one cupful each of grated horseradish, white mustard seed, chopped onion, brown sugar, chopped nasturtium seed, three stalks of chopped celery, two red peppers, one-half cupful of salt, one tablespoonful each of ground black pepper and cinnamon and one teaspoonful of powdered cloves. Stir well; add a quart of vinegar; mix together and bottle without cooking.

Winter Relish.—Take two quarts of white onions, two heads of cabbage, six green peppers, six heads of celery, two heads of cauliflower, two quarts of green tomatoes, six red peppers and one ounce of celery seed. Sprinkle with salt and let stand overnight. In the morning drain and cook until tender in a sauce made by mixing two cupfuls of flour with three pounds of brown sugar, an ounce of mustard seed and a gallon of vinegar. The flour must form no lumps.

VICTIMS OF EPIDEMIC

Mysterious Disease Is Killing California Game Ducks by Thousands

San Francisco, Oct. 25.—California game ducks are dying by thousands of a disease new to sportsmen and scientists. After examination of several ducks, dead of the disease at Vista lake, Kern county, the United States bureau of health here is unable to make a diagonosis, but finds that the symptoms resemble those of an epidemic on the Great Salt lake, in which it is estimated that a million ducks died.

In the last stages of the disease the birds seem starved. They do not eat, and become so weak that they can barely move.

PAID PENALTY WITH HER LIFE

Woman Had Evidence Against Chicago White Slavers

WAS A SPY IN THEIR CAMP

Lured to Tragic Fate by Band Supposed to Have Conducted Bridgeport Station of "Underground Railway" Which Transported Unfortunate Women

Bridgeport, Conn., Oct. 25.—An "underground railway" for transporting white slaves about the country, organized on the same plan as the "underground railway" which in the fifties transported black slaves from the southern states to Canada, is revealed, it was declared today, by police investigation into the shooting of a girl known as Rose White, and by other names, near here two days ago. A "station" in Bridgeport and another in Chicago are indicated. Jack Johnson's Cafe de Champion has been mentioned in the case.

But while the original underground railway took the slaves from servitude to freedom, this organization carried them from freedom to hideous servitude.

Joseph Bunomo, one of the men arrested in connection with the killing, has confessed, the police say, to shooting the woman, because she refused to return to Chicago with him.

The girl came from Chicago. Bunomo had also come from Chicago within a day or two. Letters discovered in the dead woman's trunk indicate that she was engaged in getting evidence against the white slavers—that she was a spy in their camp, and that when she was discovered she was killed.

Here are the circumstances which connect the slain woman with the white slave traffic, especially in Chicago:

Joseph Bunomo, under arrest, was a frequenter of Jack Johnson's Cafe de Champion, up to two weeks ago.

He was sometimes known as Tony Brune, and a woman known as Rose Brune often accompanied him.

Bunomo—or Brune—and the slain woman, arrived in Bridgeport from Chicago Tuesday.

Salavatore Renardo opened, six months ago, the restaurant from which the woman was taken to her death. He is under arrest and the police say evidence indicates his restaurant was actually a station in the "underground railway" for white slaves.

James Matteo, one of the men under arrest in connection with the woman's death, was a lieutenant of Dominick Cesare, leader of a band of white slavers broken up fourteen months ago when Cesare got a five-year prison term for a vicious attack upon one of his victims.

Bunomo, confessed murderer, is in a state of mental and physical collapse. Bunomo and the two men arrested as accomplices in the crime—Frank Pelizana and James Matteo, will be arraigned either today or Saturday. The authorities hope in the meantime to get trace of the two other occupants of the car who escaped and are still at large.

Joseph Bunomo is believed by the police to have been in command of the gang of murderers. According to the chauffeur, George Hall, of whom they hired their auto, and who drove them about, the men engaged him to drive to the restaurant where the woman was picked up, ordered him to drive out in to the country, alighted with the woman at a lonely spot, began to quarrel with her, (without, apparently, frightening her in the least), then ordered him to drive on alone.

A moment later he heard shots, and sped back to find the woman dead on the ground. He raced for town and brought the police.

Bunomo was captured in Bridgeport. Frank Pelizana and James Matteo were surrounded in a swamp near the scene of the killing. The other two men, Jimmie Lewis, alias "Hartford Charlie," and Andrew Campello, alias "Big Andrew," are being sought by the police.

Matteo worked at the restaurant from which the woman was taken, ostensibly as a waiter. He and Pelizana, the police believe, were associated in running the Bridgeport end of the "railroad" which led to Chicago and other big cities of the country, and across which the slaves were sent.

Had Furnished Information

Chicago, Oct. 25.—Charity workers say that the woman killed at Stratford had appealed to them for protection and had asked help to establish herself in better surroundings. Information she gave the charity workers is in possession of government agents of the department of justice, who gained therefrom knowledge concerning traffic in women.

Joe Bunomo, with whom she lived here, was named in her story. It was disclosed that in a fight over her, Nick Sarari, a resident of the restricted district, was killed last July 4.

VISCOUNT PEEL DEAD

Noted For His Power When Speaker of House of Commons

London, Oct. 25.—Viscount Peel, who was speaker of the house of commons from 1884 to 1895, died at the age of 83. He was created viscount on his retirement from the speakership. He was chairman of the British commission to the St. Louis exposition.

Viscount Peel, in his day, was hardly less eminent than his great father, Sir Robert Peel, and like the latter the viscount was closely associated with Gladstone. Peel was noted for his remarkable power over factions and members of parliament never got beyond his control.

After his retirement, Peel devoted himself to the work of social betterment, chiefly that of temperance, and accomplished not a little. Since then he had lived quietly at home in Bedfordshire—a quiet ending to the stormy career of the first commoner.

FIRST POLITICAL SPEECH

Dr. Eliot Takes the Platform In Behalf of Candidate Wilson

Boston, Oct. 25.—In the first political speech of his life, President Emeritus Eliot of Harvard University, in his 78th year, advocated the election of Woodrow Wilson for president before a gathering of 3000 men and women in Tremont Temple.

It was a noon-day rally, held under the auspises of the Wilson League of College Clubs. In addition to Dr. Eliot were other prominent speakers. Former Secretary of State Olney presided.

Dr. Eliot referred to the burden of the tariff from the Republican side and the proposals to change the form of government from the Progressive side, and reasoned that in the extremity the Democratic party is best capable of governmental management.

DETECTIVE AND SOLDIER TESTIFY

Tell of Doings on Day of Lopizzo Murder

Salem, Mass., Oct. 25.—Thomas J. Codey of Lynn, captain of company D, eighth regiment, the first militiaman to testify during the trial of Ettor, Giovannitti and Caruso, testified that shots were fired at the militia directly after the murder of Anna Lopizzo on the evening of Jan. 29.

He further stated that the militia did not discharge any weapons, although several of them were armed with revolvers and guns. He told how other shots were fired at Union and Garden streets, where the murder took place.

One of the government's star witnesses, Charles Bencordo, an Italian detective, translated a circular which was given out at one of the meetings Giovannitti addressed, and also told of Giovannitti's firery speech on the common on the morning of the murder, in which he told the crowds to go home and sleep by day and act like wild animals at night.

SEVEN-YEAR ENLISTMENT

First Four Years In Army to Be Spent In Regular Service

Washington, Oct. 25.—Adjutant General Andrews of the army informed recruiting officers that after Nov. 1 all enlistments must be for a period of seven instead of four years. This is the first application to the recruiting service of the long-term provision of the new law.

While the full enlistment term will be seven years hereafter, only the first four years will be for actual military service. After that the soldier who does not care to re-enlist will be transferred to the army reserve, without pay or allowance, but subject to recall at a moment's notice.

SHAWMUT TAKES ELIOT

National Bank of Boston Is Going Out of Existence

Boston, Oct. 25.—The National Shawmut bank is to absorb the Eliot National bank. The resources of the former are more than $100,000,000 and of the latter more than $13,000,000.

The details of the merger are not made known by the officers of the banks involved, but the news of the plan has become quite generally known among banking men.

The Eliot has a capital of $1,000,000, a surplus of the same amount and undivided profits of $35,000.

PLEADS NOT GUILTY

Murder Charge Against Boston Man Who Killed His Mother

Boston, Oct. 25.—Cornelius N. Donahue, charged with causing the death of his mother by choking her in their tenement in the rear of 1293 Washington street, was arraigned in the municipal court.

When formally charged with murder he entered a plea of not guilty and then the police asked for a continuance which was granted until next Thursday. He is held without bail.

HEART ON RIGHT SIDE

Boy Would Have Been Killed but For Misplaced Organ

New York, Oct. 25.—Because his heart is on the right side, David Krunish left the Fordham hospital yesterday afternoon well on the road to recovery. If his heart had been normal the physician says he probably would have been carried out in a coffin.

David, who is 11 years old, fell on a picket fence last Monday and one of the spikes penetrated his breast three inches directly over the place where his heart should be.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

FLAG FLYING UPSIDE DOWN

Distress Signal at Sailors Home Promptly Withdrawn

A city official noticed Thursday morning as he was passing the National Sailors' Home that the flag was flying upside down and when he reached city square he communicated with Miss M. Lizzie Furnald, a member of the Women's Relief Corps of this city.

Miss Furnald immediately notified Mrs. Mary E. Powers, president of the corp and she advised the home that the flag was not flying properly and it was changed.

It was explained that the inmates raised the flag every morning, and that it was not unusual to place it upside down since they were mostly old men and hardly capable of assuming any responsibility and that an eye is kept to see that the position of the standard is not contrary to rules and regulations but sometimes it happens that it is not noticed for a little while.

Quincy A. A. After Another Chelsea Y. M. C. A. Scalp

A hard fought contest is scheduled at Merrymount park Saturday afternoon when the Quincy A. A. and the Chelsea Y. M. C. A. meet in their annual football game. Last year the local boys defeated the Chelsea team at Chelsea in one of the finest games ever seen on their field.

Columbus Day at Milton, Chelsea and Cunningham gym played a tie game up to four minutes of quitting time but the game ended with one of the visitors slugging the referre and a general melee followed.

Manager Flynn stated Thursday evening that it would be definitely understood before the game that fighting was out of the question, but he said we are going to give them one of the hardest games they ever played in and the laurels will no doubt be on the Quincy A. A. end.

SOCCER FOOTBALL.

The Willard and Coddington school soccer team did not score on each other Thursday afternoon at the ward three playground. The game was exciting although the field was wet and the ball heavy.

GATHERING FOR PIPER

Friends Meet with Mayor Stone to Work for His Re-election

Upwards of 50 well known citizens attended the neighborhood meeting at the home of Mayor Stone Thursday evening. While the meeting was a political one it had nothing to do with municipal affairs but was simply to boom the candidacy of Walter E. Piper for re-election as Representative from the Fifth district. Many prominent Republicans from Wards One, Two and Three were present and committees were appointed in the different wards to see to it that everything possible was done to get the regular Republican nominees elected at the election, Nov. 5.

The meeting was an entirely informal one but nevertheless enthusiastic and the committee appointed will see to it that no stone is left unturned to further the election of Mr. Piper.

THE PLAYERS.

Bliss Carman.

We are the players of a play
As old as earth,
Between the wings of night and day,
With tears and mirth.

There is no record of the land
From whence it came.
No legend of the playwright's hand,
No bruited fame.

Of those who for the piece were cast
In the first night,
When God drew up his curtain vast
And there was light.

Before our eyes as we come on,
From age to age,
Flare up the footlights of the dawn
On this round stage.

In front, unknown, beyond the glare
Vague shadows loom;
And sounds like muttering winds are there,
Foreboding doom.

Yet wistfully we keep the boards;
And as we mend
The blundering, forgotten words,
Hope to the end.

To hear the stormbeat of applause
Fills our desire,
Then the dark Prompter gives us pause
And we retire.

It is just this month's tantalizing way to make everybody regret that the vacation season is over.

SULLIVAN'S CLEAN BILL

Of No Receipts and No Expense Filed According to Law

Michael T. Sullivan, candidate for representative from the Fifth Norfolk district, on the Democratic ticket, takes exceptions to the announcement that certain candidates had failed to file with the secretary of state, their schedule of campaign expenses.

Mr. Sullivan stated that he filed his statement, Monday and that it contained the information that he had incurred no expense and had no receipts.

Mr. Sullivan said that the story in the Ledger, to the effect that representative candidates had failed to file any statment, was hardly correct so far as he was concerned and he had no doubt that the other candidates had compiled with the law in the same respect.

In compliance with the law requiring a candidate for office to file a return with the office of the Secretary of State itemizing the expenditures during a campaign, Charles J. McGilvray, Democratic candidate for representative in the fifth Norfolk district has filed a statement which shows that no money was received or expended.

William J. Leslie who is a candidate for re-election in the fifth district has also filed a similar return.

STAMPING A LETTER.

A Swindler's Way of Doing It Brought Him to Grief.

"Whether a man is a criminal or a law abiding citizen, he ought to take the pains to stick his postage stamps on exactly straight," an old detective said. "If he is straight he won't lose anything by it, and if he is crooked he will gain. When I was in the government service the first thing I found out about a man under suspicion was the way he stuck on his stamps. One of the cleverest swindlers I ever landed was tracked through his postage stamps.

"After you put a stamp on a certain way for a little while it becomes second nature, and you stick it on that way unconsciously. That was what that man did. All his stamps were stuck on diagonally, leaving a little triangle of a certain size at the corner of the envelope. He was a slippery fellow and had eluded vigilance for months.

"One day I happened to be loitering around a postoffice of a country town, where I had gone on another trail. The mail came in, and through the little window I watched the postmaster sort it. Presently I spotted an envelope with the stamp stuck on in that triangular fashion. I got the postmark, hiked back to that town and nabbed my man. If he had put his stamps on straight probably he never would have been caught."—New York Times.

Man Eating Sharks.

The sailor says that the most ferocious creature that swims in the sea is the shark. By that he does not mean every shark, but what is called the man eater, just as a certain species of tiger in India is called the man eater because it hunts human beings for its prey, preferring them to animals. The man eating shark is not the largest of this species of fish, but is noted for its strength, also the rapidity with which it swims. It goes through the water so rapidly that few fish exceed it in swiftness, and it is thus able to catch food of that kind. This is especially true in the waters—such as the Indian and south Atlantic oceans, the Pacific ocean and the waters tributary to them—that are deep enough for the shark to swim in.—Chambers' Journal.

NEW YORK FASHIONS.

Clever Dressing In New York, Styles That Help To Stretch The Allowance.

One can spend a fortune on clothes or dress well on a very limited sum according to the way the thing is managed, but it is safe to say that the woman who accomplishes wonders at small outlay makes a study of clothes, and keeps herself informed on the latest style wrinkles.

WOOL EMBROIDERIES.

She knows, for instance, that wool embroideries in Oriental colorings, are just now faddish and uses a little of this sort of trimming when refurbishing a black satin dress. Because brocades are reckoned smart, she uses a bit that she has saved up for the crown of a hat, or a cuirasse vest that freshens up last year's suit wonderfuly, or lends an air of difference to a ready made purchase that needs an individual touch.

SHE STUDIES LINES.

Lines must be studied if one is to look one's best.The silhouette or outline varies from year to year and it is by observing this that one follows the trend of style successfully. This year with draperies and pleats and gathers, the severely plain outline so characteristic of former seasons is giving way to more graceful effects, yet skirts are small at the foot, and lines are designed to add slenderness to the figure.

THE NEW CORSETS.

Corset models must change constantly to keep pace with dress lines. Just now one should look supple and willowy if possible and the new corset models brought out September 9th by the Warner Co. are attracting attention all over the country. These show correct lines for an infinite variety of figures, at a wide range of prices. Whatever the grade, however the styles are the same, it is the difference in materials and trimmings only that accounts for the difference in cost. Not only shape and style, but comfort and wear are guaranteed to American women for whom these corsets are especialy designed.

FASHIONABLE MATERIALS.

Taupe and brown next to black and white are favored tints this season. All white costumes of satin, serge, silk muslin and chiffon cloth, are trimmed with bands of fur and this same touch of fur is used on handsome extra blouses. Duck blue and the darker Cyclamen reds are combined with taupe and brown. Yellows also are much used for the touch of contrast that makes any frock more attractive.

While rough surfaced goods are modish, the wools with a velvet finish known as "velours de Laine" and by many other names, are especially desirable, and while the first cost of these is high, their wearing qualities are unexcelled, and they have the "warmth without weight" which is such an excellent feature, especially for street attire.

Satins particularly those with dull finish are still in excellent vogue and last year's tailormade can be easily brought up-to-date with a little fur, plush or velvet trimming also broadcloths are once more gaining a footing especially in the fashionable combination with velvet or corduroy.

WASHINGTON'S HUMOR.

A Dinner Invitation That Showed the General's Genial Side.

In spite of the general opinion to the contrary, Washington was not an especially grave and austere man. He had a sense of humor and could make or enjoy a joke as well as any one. From Professor C. F. Holliday's "Wit and Humor of Colonial Days" is taken this letter, written to invite a friend, with the ladies of his family, to dine with the general. There is no date, but there is some reason to think that the note may have been written from Valley Forge. It shows the grave and burdened soldier in a pleasantly genial light:

"Since our arrival at this happy spot we have had a ham, sometimes a shoulder of bacon, to grace the head of the table, a piece of roast beef adorns the foot, and a dish of beans or greens, almost imperceptible, decorates the center.

"When the cook has a mind to cut a figure, which I presume will be the case tomorrow, we have two beefsteak pies or dishes of crabs in addition, one on each side of the center dish, dividing the space and reducing the distance between dish and dish to about six feet, which without them would be near twelve feet apart. Of late he has had the surprising sagacity to discover that apples will make pies, and it is a question if in the violence of his efforts we do not get one of apples instead of having both of beefsteaks.

"If the ladies can put up with such entertainment and will submit to partake of it on plates once tin, but now iron (not become so by the labor of scouring), I shall be happy to see them."

EXCESS OF MEN IN THE UNITED STATES.

Census Shows 106 Males to 100 Females—Due to Extensive Immigration.

The population of the United States (exclusive of Alaska, Hawaii, Porto Rico and other noncontiguous possessions) comprised in 1910, according to the last federal census, 47,332,277 males and 44,639,989 females, or 106 male to every 100 females. In 1900 there were 104.4 males to every 100 females. These figures are contained in a statement issued by Director Durand of the bureau of the census, department of commerce and labor, and are based upon a tabulation prepared under the direction of William C. Hunt, chief statistician for population in the census bureau. The figures are preliminary and subject to revision.

The excess of males in the United States is mainly due to the extensive immigration, a much larger proportion of the immigrants being males than females. In the foreign born white population there are 129.2 males to 100 females. But the native white population also has a slight excess of males, the ratio being 102.7 to 100.

In the negro population the males are outnumbered by females in a ratio of 98.9 to 100. Among the Chinese in this country males outnumber females by more than 14 to 1, and among the Japanese by about 7 to 1. The Indians show a small excess of males, 103.5 to 100 females.

The preponderance of males in the aggregate population of the United States is most marked in the Pacific and mountain divisions (far western states), with ratios in 1910 of, respectively, 129.5 and 127.9 males to 100 females. The proportion of males is lowest in New England, this being the only geographic division in which there is a slight excess of females over males. There are only five states in which females outnumber males—namely, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Maryland, North Carolina and South Carolina.

Of the fifty cities having over 100,000 inhabitants there are twenty-eight in which the males outnumber the females. In thirty-nine of the cities the proportion of males was greater in 1910 than in 1900, and in eleven it was less. The number of males per 100 females was greatest in Seattle (136.2) and only slightly less in Portland, Ore. (134.5). Nashville shows the smallest proportion of males, with a ratio of 89.6 to 100 females. Of the eight cities having 500,000 or more inhabitants, Baltimore has the lowest number of males per 100 females (92.4), and Cleveland the highest (106.6), but the ratio is almost as high in Chicago, where there are 106.3 males to 100 females. New York city's population is almost evenly divided by sex; in Philadelphia the females outnumber the males.

PRINTS PARCELS POST MAPS

United States Geological Survey Gets the Postoffice Department Contract.

Postmaster General Hitchcock has awarded the contract for printing 125,000 parcels post maps of the United States to the geological survey, which submitted the lowest bid. Mr. Hitchcock is thus able to take advantage of the resources of the government to furnish these maps and rely thoroughly upon their accuracy.

The parcels post system must be in operation on Jan. 1. Mr. Hitchcock announced that the maps will be in the hands of the postmasters long before that time.

On the maps the whole area of the United States is divided into quadrangles, measuring thirty minutes on each side. These quadrangles are known as units of area. In the lower left hand corner of the map will appear a table of rates and brief instructions for its use.

A WOMAN COMPTROLLER.

Miss Bessie H. Townsend Appointed to That Office In Atlantic City.

The appointment of Miss Bessie H. Townsend as city comptroller is announced by the city commission of Atlantic City, N. J. She has been bookkeeper in the office for several years and will be the first woman, so far as known, to hold the position of city comptroller in this country.

Miss Townsend succeeds City Comptroller Barrett, who, with the city solicitor, Wootton, was removed from office.

STOMACH IN HIS THORAX.

English Boy Dies—Doctors Were Unable to Diagnose Case.

What is believed to have been a unique surgical experience was related at an inquest in London over the body of a boy four years of age who was run over by a cart some time ago, but was apparently not seriously hurt. The boy was kept in a hospital for a week and then sent home apparently fully recovered. He died suddenly three weeks later.

The autopsy showed that the boy's stomach was missing from its regular place, and there was a hole about one and one-half inches in diameter in the diaphragm. An examination of the thorax showed that the stomach was there. It was greatly dilated, being as large as that of a man. There was a large vacant space on the left side of the chest, and the left lung had completely collapsed. The pressure of the stomach displaced the heart, causing death from syncope.

The child did not complain of pain and played around as usual.

Man and the Bird

Man's conquest of space by heavier-than-air machines and his difficulties in controlling his mechanisms in varying currents and eddies have naturally aroused interest in the doings of his most easily-studied prototypes—the birds. Although a bird is far better equipped than a man, even in the most perfect and powerful flying machine yet invented, to cope with swirling gusts and sudden blasts, few feathered creatures care to fly during a storm.

Drexel says: "The aeroplane has its limitations, and they are so far very narrow ones." If this be true of the mechanical power, what of the guiding intelligence behind it? writes Richard Kearton in The Sphere. Man has to conceive a situation and communicate his will through his limbs to his mechanism, whereas a bird instinctively throws its will into its wings and tail, which is a much shorter path to results.

Now let us glance for a moment at the relative speeds of mental perception in a man and a bird. For a long series of years I have undergone a severe training in quick mental perception and at the crucial moment setting rapidly-answering mechanical contrivances in motion, and have no hesitation in stating that the powers of the most alert human being when compared with those of a bird are as the speed of a snail to that of a Derby winner. Some idea of a bird's marvelous rapidity of perception and resultant action may be gained when I state that I have exposed dozens of photographic plates with my focal-plane index showing that I was working at a speed of the 200th part of a second before I secured a picture of a crested tit on a branch near its nesting hole. Even in such a short space of time the bird was able to conceive the sound and set its wings in motion before the shutter of the camera closed.

No Flights in Rough Weather.

Now if such a wonderfully-equipped creature as a bird finds a difficulty in flying in strong currents and eddies, how much greater must these same difficulties be for the airman. Everybody has seen large flocks of starlings going through their astonishing aerial evolutions before retiring to rest for the night and marveled at the skill with which they avoided colliding with each other whilst wheeling, twisting and swooping. This illustrates the extreme rapidity of their mental perception and its translation into action, but in spite of these very useful qualifications the birds do not risk such exhibition displays of flight during very stormy weather. Members of a pack of grouse flushed during a gale of wind have been known to collide and kill each other in mid-air.

I remember on one occasion putting a grouse up near to a stone wall during very gusty weather. The bird had not proceeded far before it was caught by a terrific side blast and hurled against the wall. Falling to the ground it rose again, but instead of attempting to continue its flight parallel with the fence, took a course at right angles to it, and by a series of vigorous wing beats forced its way straight up into the eye of the wind, and then, turning right around, sailed away over the wall on outstretched wings. Grouse, like seagulls, apppear to be able to read the signs of a coming storm, and frequently seek shelter before the breaking of the blast. I have known them to leave the exposed hilltops and descend even to the meadows right at the bottom of a Yorkshire dale before the oncoming of an exceptionally heavy gale accompanied by hail and rain.

Island Birds in a Hurricane.

Some years ago whilst in the outer Hebrides I noticed thousands of seagulls of different species sitting quite still in a pasture close to the Atlantic. Every head was turned toward the sea, from which a moderate breeze was blowing. By the middle of the afternoon the wind had increased to such hurricane force that pieces of foam as large as a man's head were being carried from the beach a quarter of a mile inland, and not a bird of any kind was to be seen on the wing. Anxious to see how my feathered friends were faring during such exceptional weather I struggled forth, sometimes progressing on my feet, and at others, in exposed places, on my hands and knees. I found common terns sheltering behind boulders at a considerable distance from the shore. Arriving at a vertical hole some 70 feet in diameter and 50 feet in depth in the roof of a long sea cave, I was astonished to discover a peregrine falcon sitting in the company of about 40 rock doves. The storm had actually made the lion lie down with the lambs. There was a great clatter of wings as the terrified birds rose from their place of shelter. The peregrine was carried down wind like a piece of paper and soon disappeared from sight, but the pigeons battled on their strong wings until I had retreated a little way, and all dived into the hole once more.

How much birds' dislike windy weather may be gathered from their silence and lack of activity during a rough day in June. Whilst no bird likes to fly in a strong following wind on account of the liability of have its feathers ruffled, heavy-bodied short-winged species, such as ducks, appreciate a strong breeze in which to rise from the ground or water because of the increased resistance it affords.

Mr. Shaw Earnestly Advocates Smaller City Council

Editor of the Ledger:—There is one other matter in relation to our form of city government which may be profitable for us to consider pretty carefully, and that is the size of the present City Council. Judging from the opinions expressed by a considerable number of citizens with whom I have discussed the matter, there seems to be quite a general feeling that the Council as now constituted is too large and unwieldy a body to handle the city business with the thoroughness and dispatch which is desirable.

Perhaps it is not generally known that the City Council of 1911 appointed a Committee to consider revision of the City Charter, and that this Committee reported to the Council among other things a proposition to reduce the size of the Council to nine members; one councilman to be elected each year from each ward and three Councilmen elected at large for a term of three years, one to be elected each year.

The Committee made this report to the Council December 18, 1911 but upon a minority report of one member of the Committee at a later meeting, the Council voted "that no action be taken at the present time."

Now this Committee did some pretty good work, and gave the matter very careful consideration according to their viewpoint, but it is hardly reasonable to expect the City Council as a whole to vote themselves out of a job. Their virtual acceptance of the minority report of one member of the Committee pretty clearly indicates their leanings in the matter.

So any proposition to reduce the membership in this body must be at the instigation of the people and not the Councilmen themselves; although there were a few of the members who were able to take a sufficiently broad and unselfish view of the matter to submerge self-interest and champion a cause they felt was for the best interests of the city.

Anyone who has visited the Council Chamber during their meetings and heard some of the long and tiresome discussions of trivial matters such as the granting of a victualer's license to John Doe or a junk-dealer's license to Richard Roe, and then observed the ease and apparent lack of interest with which an order is passed calling for the appropriation of a large sum of money for some more or less desirable purpose, cannot but be impressed with the disappropriateness of the proceedings as a whole.

Perhaps one remedy for this waste of time would be to remove the granting of licenses from the City Council and place these matters in the hands of the Mayor.

But side by side with the question of reducing the size of the Council, comes another question which it seems to me is of quite as much importance from a practical point of view.

Those who read my letter dealing with the City Council and its problems will recall what was said about the unfortunate practice which has become so common among its members of trading votes.

I believe a considerable amount of the wastefulness and extravagance of our city government is traceable to this practice. This is the way it works:—The constituents of a member from one ward are importuning him to secure the expenditure of a considerable sum of money to rebuild and beautify some street for instance, in his neighborhood. While he may, and often does, feel that it is a matter the city can ill afford to take up just at the time, he also feels the necessity of quieting the clamor of his constituents, some of whom will oftentimes even go so far as to threaten withdrawal of their support for his re-election unless they get what they are after—and so, feeling as he does, that there is little hope of inducing his fellow Councilmen to pass the order on its merits, he finds it necessary to agree to support the order of some other Councilman who is also endeavoring to get something for his constituents, in order to secure the improvement called for regardless of the financial condition of the city.

Now, I don't mean to lay all the blame upon the Councilman, although I firmly believe that every thoughtful citizen would uphold him if he took a firm stand and told the people plainly just how the financial condition of the city stood, and showed them how a Councilman cannot be a good man for his ward without being a good man for the whole city at the same time.

He would of course, lose the support of the selfish shortsighted citizens, who want THEIR improvements, no matter what the consequence to the rest of the city. But I cannot believe it is posible that this class of citizens controls the election of anyone.

If the Councilmen were a little more independent and a little less anxious to please EVERYBODY, they would give better service. A Councilman who succeeded in pleasing everyone, would be so busy exercising his tact that he would have little time for business. A man in public life who makes no enemies is usually a rascal, and often a man's best recommendations are the enemies he has made.

What is the remedy for this practice of trading—or "log-rolling" as this practice is known in legislative parlance?

It seems that the only effective remedy that could be applied is the removal of the CAUSE. The Progressive physician today does not treat the SYMPTON; but, recognizing a certain cause as manifested by the symptom, he goes straight to the treatment of the CAUSE.

So it seems to me we must do with this extravagant and wasteful practice of "log-rolling," If we want relief we must REMOVE THE CAUSE.

And, clearly, the cause of it all is the "WARD SYSTEM" OF ELECTING OUR COUNCILMEN.

Now, there isn't the least objection to every ward having its representation in the Council. On the contrary it is desirable. But having Councilmen elected by the WARD VOTE ONLY, tends to narrow the view and stultify the outlook of an official so elected, so that he is too apt to magnify the importance of improvements in his own ward and not give proper weight to the welfare of the whole city; especially if he is not a broad-minded, far-sighted man.

If, on the contrary, our Council was composed of nine or perhaps seven members, ALL ELECTED AT LARGE; then every man would have the whole electorate of the City to reckon with, and would be bound to give more attention to the general effect of his actions.

ANOTHER SHIP LAUNCHED SUCCESSFULLY AT FORE RIVER

Steamer Frieda Sent Into Water Amid the Cheers of Merry Party

Surrounding the Sponser, Miss Adeline H. Snider

Another vessel was added to the fleet of the Fore River Ship Building Company this noon when the steel steamer "Frieda" built by the company for the Union Sulphur Co., of New York was given her maiden dip in the waters of Weymouth Fore River.

The launch was a private one, and was witnessed by a party of about fifty officials and guests of the Union Sulphur Co. from New York and the officers of the United States and Argentine navies stationed at the Fore River yard.

The New York party came to the yard in a special train fram New York which was run over the Fore River Co. private track from East Braintree landing the guests within a few feet of the gaily decorated launching stand that had been erected about the bow of the vessel. One of the first to alight from the train was Miss Adeline H. Snider, of New York, a student of the Wheaton Seminary, Norton, Mass., and Mrs. W. H. Frieda Whiton, daughter of Herman Frasch, President of the Union Sulphur Co., and for whom the vessel was named.

The guests were received by President Bowles of the Fore River Co., and other officers and escorted to the launching platform.

The vessel was bedecked from stem to stern with flags of the international code together with the American and Fore River flags while the private flag of the Union Sulphur Co a red devil on a yellow field occupied a prominent place.

Standing near the bow of the vessel where his eye could see all that was going on below was President Bowles. Near him was the sponsor Miss Snider. In her right hand she held a bottle of Mumm's Extra Dry champagne which was encased in a steel mesh to keep the broken glass from flying. This was suspended from the bow of the vessel by a streamer of tri colored ribbon. The sponser and her attendants and her mother Mrs. Snider carried immense bouquets of roses and yellow chrysanthemums, tied with broad yellow ribbons.

Surrounding Miss Snider, were her attendants, three classmates at Wheaton Seminary, Miss Buelah Pinks, Miss Lucille Becker and Miss Edith Becker.

President Bowles raised his hand and immediately the sound of the saws was heard, tearing their way through the sole pieces. Then came a snapping sound as these soul pieces were rent apart. Slowly the big mass of steel begun to move. "Now" said President Bowles to Miss Snider ,and the next instant the bottle of wine went smash against the steel bow, and Miss Snider said "I christen thee Frieda."

The launch was followed by the screaming of whistles.

Tugs took the steamer to the fitting out dock where she will be completed and it is expected that she will go into commission late in November.

The fair sponser was showered with congratulations on the successful manner in which she had performed her part of the ceremony.

The launching party was then escorted to the main office building where a lunch was served, gaily decorated with flags of all nations, the private flag of the Union Sulphur Co., playing an important part in the decoration. The table was laid in the form of the letter N, and presented a handsome appearance with its beautiful floral decorations.

Toasts were drunk to the sponser, Miss Snider, The Union Sulphur Co.,

THERMOMETER NEAR $20,000 IN HOSPITAL CAMPAIGN FUND

No Abatement of Interest and Enthusiasm on the Part of Workers

Football Squad Selected For the Last Grand Rally

After four days of actual work, the Hospital fund reached a total of $19,774 very close to the $20,000 and with the work that the collectors will put in from now until the close, Monday night it is believed the full amount $35,000 will be secured. The meeting Thursday night was as enthusiastic as its predecessors.

The treasurer announced donations of $3,000. Dr. John F. Welch, announced subscriptions of $1000 from Col. W. B. White and $100 from J. H. Stedman of Braintree. Team No. 6 kept up their good work, came forward with $522.60, made their report and immediately left the hall in a body to get busy with their prospective customers.

The stormy weather of Thursday and Friday affected the operations somewhat and likewise the attendance at the committee meetings. Still there were nearly 50 on hand Friday night. After a splendid supper under the direction of Mrs. E. Granville Pratt, assited by Mrs. Laurance H. Sturtevant, Mrs. George S. Keyes, Mrs. Roderick McLellan, Mrs. W. F. Hodgkinson, Mrs. Frank Gilbert and Miss Eliza Sheahan.

The reports of the financial condition, to date are as follows:

Chairman Pfaffmann announced that they now proposed to organize a real old fashioned football to buck the centre for the balance of the period, the team to be made up as follows; Marsh, le, Curran, lr, Parker, lg., Shea, c., Freeman, rg., Cummings, rt., Clark, re., Pfaffmann, qb., Dasha lb., Bailey, rhb., Sedgwick full back.

Henry M. Faxon, on being called said it was essential that the hospital should be in the community. It was doing a good work. He had opportunity to see what it was doing, being a neighbor and seeing the people brought in there in ill health. It was necessary to raise this money to relieve the handicap under which the hospital suffered. All should put their shoulder to the wheel and raise the amount in the next two days.

Fred Rice, said that the statement that the hospital was in a poor way, financially and had been poorly conducted was refuted by the fact that the plant represented a value of $200,000 with only about $15,000 incumberance. Tonight the members of the City Council will be guests of the committee.

The supper will be under the direction of Mrs. George F. Keyes, assisted by Mrs. E. Granville Pratt, Mrs. A. H. Gilson, Mrs. L. H. Sturtevant, Mrs. George F. Keyes, Jr., Miss Abbie Wood and Miss E. M. Fottler.

NOTICE.

The Ledger is receiving a great many communications these days, the more the better, and is glad to give publicity to the thoughts therein expressed, especially when they are for the good of the city as a whole, believing too much publicity cannot be given under the circumstances. We will accept anything for publication that is honest criticism without malice or personal grudge, provided the communication is sent in with the writer's name and address. It would seem as though it was not necessary for us to again reiterate that we do not accept or use anonymous communications but as we receive unsigned letters most every day whose fate is the waste basket the statement seems necessary. A very timely letter was received today but of course cannot be published. Why not follow the rule of this and other newspapers?

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

They made quick work of the young er Diaz in Mexico. It is said he fell into a well laid plot.

Boston is to have two big steamers of the European fleet, may be Quincy will get a look in of the increased commercialism being handed out.

Mr. Walker says Gov. Foss was not so keenly sincere on some of his measures. Probably he may be right.

Let every one get busy and close the week in a blaze of glory for the Hospital.

Candidate Abele has a good legislative and business record.

The Californians will have to be reintroduced to their governor on his return to the state in which he holds office. Does his salary go on just the same?

Another drawn battle in Boston in which the people who paid the freight had little to say as to how the affair should be conducted.

A Missouri woman visiting in Kansas City was taken to the theater in a carriage and given a bunch of flowers by an attentive relative. Those evidences of extravagances were sufficient for the grandfather to forget both of them in his will.

Another miser who died leaving a fortune in Detroit never knew how much fun he missed in this world with his money until he started for the other side and found he could not carry the money with him.

Jack Johnson now claims he is the "Fall Guy," for many whites who could not reap a harvest from his popularity and some of the evidence at hand points that way.

The youthful orator can always be discovered by his ability to dive into the dead ashes of the past. As post mortem propositions they are the limit.

Another woman who wants to keep in the limelight says we owe a debt to Greece. That may be, but we owe much more to the people right here at home and while busy-bodying about other people's affairs, home needs are liable to be neglected, hence present day conditions.

Gov. Foss rather put it over the Progressives on that latter day appeal for direct Senator elections.

City Council candidates have been notified that the Norfolk Downs Association will hear their evidence next week.

No wonder the Government is washing and ironing its bills, after all that talk of tainted money.

One of the Bantu tribesmen of South Africa, is 35 years old and has 46 wives. Huh, Solomon had him lashed to the mast.

Becker has been found guilty by a jury of his peers. He has not however given up hope of avoiding the electric chair.

So those base ball stories were not written by the players. How much further did the newspapers aid in fooling the public on this base ball subject.

Only a few days more and the wise ones will be telling just how it all happened and why so and so was elected and the others were not. Here is in other towns just now, politics is an all absorbing topic and a very few words in praise or blame of any candidate for office is sufficient just now to start a very animated discussion on the vital topics of the campaign.

CLEAR CASE OF BUNCOMBE.

From the stories which appear in the very papers which were parties to it, it appears that the big papers of New York and Boston connived at a most unpardonable piece of brazen buncombe.

An arrangement was entered into by which some writer from the respective offices was to write up an impression of the game which was to be credited as the literary product of some popular player of either the New York or Boston teams. But the parties to the affair overreached themselves. When players on the same team were credited with criticising their team mates the plan did not work so well. There was manifest dissatisfaction from many sources. The players were accordng to the agreement, paid so much for the use of their names. Some of the writers fell into the groove assigned them and wrote very pretty things, of the team as a whole and the supposed writer assumed the proud position of a well established press bureau. But there were other writers, not so diplomatic and so the cat was easliy out of the bag.

And now in the columns of those very papers appear alleged bright references to this whole sale effort to deceive the public. If some of those writers are given latitude enough they may unfold some other tales which will be worth reading on the part of the public and open the public eyes to some other affairs which might be interesting.

CALLS FOR ACTION.

A case which was somewhat aired in the District court, Friday, and continued for further consideration by the judge because of the peculiarity surrounding circumstances has attracted considerable attention in official circles. There is no occasion for delving too deeply into the affair. It speaks for itself. It is one of those strange incidents which crops out curiously enough at times.

That it will result in an official investigation appears assured. The result can be conjectured, and the quicker the episode is closed the better it will be for all concerned.

ANOTHER TRIUMPH.

The Fore River Shipbuilding Co., added another to its many triumphs in marine architecture, today, when the big steamer Frieda, gracefully swept down the greased ways and was received into the bosom of the home which will be her's for many years, if all expectations are fulfilled. The launching was successful and attended by appropriate festivities. May the voyages of the new craft be ever successful and contribute by her achievements to the already splendid accomplishments of the builders.

POLITICAL RIOT IN HAVANA

Concervatives Start Row and Twenty-Five Persons Are Shot

Havana, Oct. 26.—Twenty-five persons were shot, five perhaps fatally, in a terrific fight here between Conservatives and Liberals. The outbreak was begun by young Conservatives, who, following a big outdoor meeting of Liberals, tried to drive groups of the latter from the sidewalk in front of the Hotel Inglaterra.

Shooting ensued and for a time the battle raged all along the Prado. Over 400 shots were fired. Order was restored after a hard fight. More than 100 arrests were made.

SHOES WILL BE HIGHER

Tanners Say There Is a Scarcity of Hides on the Market

Chicago, Oct. 26.—Another increase in the price of shoes owing to scarcity of leather was predicted at the fourth annual conference of the American Association of Tanners here, unless more cattle are raised by farmers.

John E. Wilder of Chicago, elected president yesterday, said the price of leather and leather findings has advanced owing to scarcity of hides.

—One man in ten thousand, it is said, earns his own living at the age of 70 years. But up to that time suggests the Indianapolis News, he probably is busy earning the living of several others.

MR. SHAW'S LETTER

would also militate strongly toward electing weightier, abler men. All the wards would want representation so it would necessitate each ward putting up for election the best man possible in order to get a large share of the votes of the other wards. The weak, inconsequential candidate who depends upon the "friendship vote" would fall by the wayside; the abler, better known candidate would come to the front by a process of natural selection; and the city would thereby benefit by having more capable, efficient Councilmen, with the whole city to serve and no particular section to favor.

The system would be further improved by adopting the suggestion in the last letter of electing the Councilmen for a two year term of service: five one year, and four the next.

This would still further shorten the ballot and insure the election of stronger candidates. As a rule, the shorter the ballot—that is, the fewer men to elect,—the better the calibre of those selected. The shortening of the ballot is one of the chief aims of the commission form of government

In fact, all of the suggestions contained in this and the previous letter on the subject of change of form are prominent features of the more modern commission models and constitute some of the chief recommendations of commission government.

It may be argued that if all the Councilmen were elected at large, some ward would get no representation and some wards two or more representatives. But the sense of fairness, together with the voting strength of each ward, could pretty safely be depended upon to give each ward at least one member.

And if this or that ward did get two or even three members, it would be by reason of the confidence of the voters of the whole city in the men accorded the election: confidence in their breadth of view, strength of character, ability and public-spiritedness.

So it seems to me these matters are worthy of the careful and thoughtful consideration of every citizen.

Of course, our present exigency is the nomination and election of the right men to manage the affairs of our city in its present distressing condition, and every voter should carefully consider the qualifications and political origin of the candidates for his support.

First of all Quincy needs a Mayor, who is absolutely free from the influence of "ring politics," who is familiar with the game and the method of its playing and so cannot easily be led astray and who will give Quincy, a thoughtful, intelligent, economical business administration, free from special privilege, and free from political intrigue and "re-election tactics."

Oftentimes a man is best "sized up" by the company he keeps. Notice the endorsement of the different candidates and see if among the constituency can be found many who have "an axe to grind" for one reason or another.

In the meantime let us give a little thought and consideration to our form of government, and see if there are not a few particulars in which we can strengthen it.

Another letter Wednesday.

Irving L. Shaw.

ADRIANOPLE IS LIKELY TO FALL

Turks In Great Danger Through Fall of Kirk-Kilisse

FIERCE FIGHTING IN STREETS

Every Foot of Ground Obstinately Contested—Bulgarians Secure Guns, Ammunition and Food—Determined Assault on Scutari by Montenegrins Fails—New Attack Being Pushed

London, Oct. 26.—Dispatches from Constantinople, both official and from Ashmead Bartlett to the London Telegraph, stating in effect that Turkey did not hold Kirk-Kilisse strongly because she preferred a line further south, are considered as being merely for outside consumption, for if Turkey had really intended to fight hard for Macedonia and could muster the necessary military strength, she would have defended Kirk-Kilisse to the last ditch.

Kirk-Kilisse is a stepping stone to the capture of Adrianople. Located about thirty-five miles to the east of Adrianople and built on the headwaters of several small tributaries of the Ergene river along the western slope of the Isranja Dagh, its strategic importance is due largely on account of its position at the southern end of the Fakhi defile. Through this pass runs the shortest route from Shumia, a fortified town in Bulgaria, to Constantinople.

The Bulgarians secured a lot of guns, ammunition and food at Kirk-Kilisse, but particulars on this point as well as of the number of the prisoners of war have not yet been given out.

Even after the fortress was overcome by the fire of the Bulgarian artillery fierce fighting took place in the streets of the town, into which the Bulgarians affected their entry from the lower part. A special dispatch from Stara Zagora says the battle was waged from street to street, every foot of the ground being obstinately contested.

The Bulgarian and Greek armies have now carried out successfully their part of the first stage of the war, Bulgaria by taking Kirk-Kilisse, and Greece by capturing the Turkish base in the town of Servia. Their allies, Montenegro and Servia, are now working desperately to do their share by overcoming the Turkish hosts at Scutari and Kumanova, which latter is the key to Uskup.

Scutari has long beeen called the key to North Albania, as whoever holds it holds the country, and that accounts for the eagerness which King Nicholas shows to get possession of it.

The city itself possesses neither walls nor fortifications. Its narrow streets debouch on the plain in narrow lanes, which in turn dwindle away into tracks. But as a place for street fighting Scutari is unsurpassed, for its narrow lanes are shut in by cobblestone walls of the gardens, which stand ten or twelve feet high and have loopholed gateways in them wherever there is an entrance to a house. There are also wide open spaces, especially in the Mahometan quarter, which are commanded by the walls around them.

If the Turks choose to fight in the streets, Scutari will prove a hard nut to crack, but the Montenegrins have many sympathizers in the city, and probably the merchants would prefer a governor from Cettinje to a pasha from Constantinople.

Thursday's determined assault on Scutari, however, failed, both armies suffering heavy losses.

The Servian army claims to have taken the Turkish town of Kumanova, but it is evident that obstinate fighting is still in progress near that place. In the district of Novipazar the Montenegrin and Servian troops are within a few miles of each other, and will soon join forces.

A dispatch to Lloyds from Burgas, the Bulgarian port on the Black sea, says the Turkish fleet is blockading the bay. The crown prince of Greece has formally entered the town of Servia, from which his army drove the Turks, and that city is getting ready to welcome the king of Greece, who is on his way there.

Navigation on the Osage.

One of the very crookednest streams anywhere is the Osage river in Missouri. In that region they tell of a farmer living on the banks of that river who had a small flatboat, which, one day, he loaded with produce and floated down to market, six miles away. He exchanged the produce for goods at one of the stores and loaded his goods in the flatboat.

"How are you going to get your stuff home, Bill?" asked a friend. "Got a steamboat to tow you back?"

"I am going to float it back," was the response.

"How are you going to do that? I don't understand."

"I guess you don't know much about this river. It doubles on itself just below here and runs back to within less than a quarter of a mile of my place. I've got a landing on both banks, and a team of horses that can drag the boat over from one landing to the other."

ABELE'S PAPERS BEING SIGNED

Friends Active For His Nomination by Republicans

HIS OFFICIAL RECORD

Friends of Councilman George W. Abele are circulating papers in his behalf for the Republican nomination for Mayor and the papers are being quite generally signed.

He was born in Boston, educated in the public schools of that city, and prepared for college in the Roxbury Latin school, graduated from Harvard in 1897 and the Harvard Law school in 1900. On being admitted to the bar, he became associated with the late William Jenness, and since the death of the latter has continued in the legal profession with offices in Quincy and Boston. He is also associated with United States District Attorney Asa P. French. He is a member of the Board of Trade, Masonic fraternity, Boston and American Bar associations and the Granite City club. He was elected to the City Council in 1908, 1909, and again the present year.

During his term of service he has served on many important committees and his service has been of a public-spirited character, one that would stand investigation. Mr. Abele was the instigator of the present street ordinance which provides that all streets accepted by the city shall be under the betterment act. He took the stand that appropriations for street repairs or rebuilding should come out of budget for current expenses and was strong in opposition to borrowing for current expenses. As a member of the finance investigation committee he is recorded on the $50,000 fund for temporary loan; for the publication in the City book of the list of real and personal taxes; increase in the sewer assessment; a new ordinance relating to the auditing department. Mr. Abele has brought to the attention of the Council that the city was selling its water below cost to some concerns. In looking over his record he is found to have the city's interest always at heart.

His friends are working hard for his nomination and if he secures that will then hustle for election. Councilman Abele did not enter the contest of his own desire, but at the solicitation of his friends which also augurs well for a clean business-like administration should he be the choice of the people.

BALLOTED BUT THREE TIMES

Becker Jury Differed In Regard to Degree of Crime

HAD NO DOUBT OF HIS GUILT

Convicted Man Still Hopeful, His Chief Concern Appearing to Be About His Wife's Condition—Gunmen Reported to Be Anxious to Confess to Save Themselves From Electric Chair

New York, Oct. 26.—It has been learned that there was never any doubt in the minds of the jury of Police Lieutenant Becker's guilt. The only question was that of degree. But three formal ballots were taken, it is said, the first resulting eight for conviction in the first degree to four for conviction in the second degree.

In his cell in the Tombs, Becker, now a convicted murderer, awaiting the imposition of the death penalty, had recovered a semblance of the iron nerve which sustained him during the long, hard days of the trial. He is still hopeful. His lawyers told him that the verdict returned to Justice Goff could not stand. They explained to him as the case progressed each point, which, they said, meant reversible error as the result of the decisions of Goff, and Chief Counsel McIntyre, when Goff ended his charge to the jury, had entered an exception to the whole of the address and had explained to Becker that no adverse verdict, predicated on such instructions, could stand.

So Becker, still hopeful, although realizing full well that there were many weary months ahead of him in Sing Sing prison, seemed concerned mostly over the condition of his wife. The fact that she had fallen into a death-like swoon when she first heard the verdict, and that after he had passed from sight across the bridge of sighs she had again collapsed, had been kept from him.

His memory of the brave little woman whose plaintiff, appealing cry of "My Charlie" is as innocent as a baby" still rung in the ears of those who had heard it when she realized that the verdict had gone against the man she loved, was of a blue-clad form standing below the Bridge of Sighs, blowing with both hands kisses of love and affection as, with a guard on each side, he had gone back to the cell which he will occupy until taken to the prison death-house "up the river."

Reports were current at the Tombs that "Gyp the Blood," "Lefty Louie," "Whitey" Lewis and "Dago Frank," now under indictment for murder in the first degree, had already sent word to District Attorney Whitman that they were willing to confess and plead guilty to second degree murder.

This communication to the district attorney was not made by counsel for the four accused gunmen, but made its way to the office of the district attorney in the subterranean fashion used by prisoners in the Tombs. Such information often reaches the district attorney before it oes the prisoners own counsel.

There was every indication, however, that Mr. Whitman would refuse to receive second degree pleas of guilty from any of the gunmen.

In any case, however, none of the gunmen will be brought to trial immediately. "Boston Red Phil" Davidson, the East Side gangman who shot and killed "Big Jack" Zelig, will be brought to the bar next. He will face Justice Goff on the same day that the latter will sentence Becker—Oct. 30.

The trial of the gunmen separately, since they have asked for separate trials, and under the law must be granted that privilege, will follow quickly upon the disposal of the Davidson case. The latter is not expected to occupy the special term under Goff very long, since there are eyewitnesses of the shooting of Zelig, and Davidson can easily be identified.

"All the gunmen under indictment will be brought to trial as rapidly as possible," declared Whitman.

Of the four gunmen "Dago Frank" and "Lefty Louie" were the hardest hit by the Becker verdict.

THINK JOHNSON IS MENACE TO WOMEN

Women's Clubs Prepare to Make War on the Pugilist

Chicago, Oct. 26.—A gigantic movement against Jack Johnson by the women of the country has been set on foot here. Women's clubs all over the country will be urged to take vigorous action against Johnson "as a menace to the women, not only of the white, but his own race as well."

Mrs. Sarah W. Helm of this city is the negro pugilist's new enemy, and her efforts promise to result in moves against Johnson by both the Chicago Women's clubs and the Federation of Women's clubs.

A woman of mystery, who is said to possess the most important evidence yet obtained against Johnson in the "white slave" investigation being conducted by the federal grand jury, is to testify before the probers. She possesses the key on which the case against the negro pugilist turns, it is said.

SHOOTS AT HIS MOTHER

Shoemaker Then Wounds Deputy Sheriff and Defies Posse

Farmington, N. H., Oct. 26.—After shooting at his mother during a quarrel, Winifred Glidden, a shoemaker, aged 22, shot and seriously wounded Deputy Sheriff Herman J. Pike, who tried to arrest him.

He then barricaded himself in his home, and for several hours held at bay a posse of sheriffs and citizens, wounding a boy with a revolver shot. He was captured after he had fallen asleep, tired of the warfare.

Pike may die of his wound, a bullet from Glidden's revolver having penetrated his head just above the left eye. He was removed to the Massachusetts General hospital at Boston.

THE DEMOCRATIC FUND

53,303 Individuals Have Contributed $678,364 Thus Far

New York, Oct. 26.—The Democratic national campaign fund, up to Oct. 24, amounted to $678,364, contributed by 53,303 individuals, according to an official statement by Henry Morgenthau, chairman of the finance committee, given out at Democratic headquarters here.

In a personal statement to newspaper men when the report was made public, Morgenthau said Thomas F. Ryan and August Belmont, who have testified at Washington as to their large contributions to previous Democratic campaigns, had not been asked for funds this year, and had contributed nothing.

CRANE BREAKS A RECORD

Senator Makes a Speech at a Conference of Republican Leaders

Boston, Oct. 26.—About 250 Republicans had a lunch and conference in Young's hotel yesterday, and Senator Crane made his first political speech. Here it is in full:

"I think there is a very good chance of electing the whole ticket, national and state, and I hope everyone will see to it that the whole ticket is voted."

Not for many years has Crane said half as much as this in any public way. It was generally admitted that he had broken all records by making a real speech.

Hope in the Middle Ages

The description of the Middle Ages as "the modern world in embryo" was never more true than when applied to the sphere of industrial life, but even here it cannot be accepted entirely without reservation, the London Globe remarks. Workmen were combining in order to obtain higher wages and better conditions of work, or to settle disagreements between masters and men, in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, although, of course, their associations were on a much smaller scale than those of the workmen of the present day. Insignificant as their disputes seem, compared to our own, they possess a considerable interest for us, because, while the action of the men in the two periods exhibits a remarkable continuity of aims and methods, the efforts to end the troubles made by both the masters and by the arbitrators called in to judge between them and their employes illustrate the extraordinary difference between medieval and modern views of the rights of labor and show how enormously the position of the workman has improved.

Curb Placed Upon Combinations.

The black death, which desolated England in 1348-49, was especially virulent among the poor and carried off large numbers of laborers, those who survived, realizing their own value, perhaps for the first time, refused to work unless they received much higher wages than they had been receiving. The government responded by passing the statute of laborers, which forbade any one to take higher wages than he had received before the outbreak of the plague, and both "givers" and "takers" of excess wages were punished.

The very year that the statute was passed there was trouble among the shearmen of London; the masters complained that if a dispute arose between one of them and his man the servant went to his fellow workmen and "by covin and conspiracy between them" they ordered that none among them should work until the said master and his servant had come to an agreement. To put a stop to this state of affairs they made an ordinance, with the sanction of the mayor and aldermen, that in the future disputes should be settled by the wardens of the company and that servants refusing to submit to them should be handed over to the mayor for punishment. Later regulations required all members of the craft to take a stringent oath of obedience to the wardens and forbade any shearman to give work to a servant at variance with his master.

A Strike in the Year 1397.

In 1387 the Journeymen Cordwainers were charged before the mayor of London with forming an illegal fraternity and with assaulting one of the trade who would not join it. The ringleaders did not deny the accusation and also admitted that a Dominican friar had agreed to petition the pope for a confirmation of the fraternity, so that no man, on pain of excommunication, would dare to interfere with it, a deed which the mayor declared would weaken the liberties of the city and the power of its officers. He consequently committed them to Newgate, to remain there until he should be better advised what to do with them, and his final decision is not recorded.

The letter books of the city of London contain accounts of the suppression of workmen's associations in three trades—the saddlers', the tailors' and the bakers'. They are all very much alike, and it will suffice to quote one of them. The master saddlers asserted that the serving men, or "yeomen," oftentimes held meetings, and that they demanded double the wages they used to have. The mayor, to whom the complaint was made, ordered the representatives of the two parties to confer together and report the result to him.

Meetings Were Prohibited.

On the appointed day they returned, and the serving men assured him that they had not tried to raise wages, and begged to be allowed to continue their meetings, but all to no purpose. He decreed that they should henceforth be under the rule of the Masters of the Guild, and that they should no longer have a fraternity of their own or hold meetings. At the same time, however, he enjoined the masters to govern them properly, and promised to afford them speedy justice if grievances were unduly inflicted upon them, and this is the only indication in all the cases we have considered of any sympathy whatever being shown with the men's point of view. Submission to the rule of the masters or wardens must have been peculiarly irksome, when, as happened in some guilds, the journeymen were debarred from any share in electing them.

Labor Troubles in English Towns.

London was by no means the only place which suffered from labor troubles. The fullers of Bristol ordained that if servants rebelled and would not work they should be brought before the mayor, to be dealt with according to law and reason. The journeymen weavers of Coventry formed a guild three times, but each time it was put down. On one occasion they not only refused to work themselves, but also prevented others working. Sometimes the corporation, strong as it was, could not cope with the journeymen, and was obliged to apply to the crown for assistance.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Harvard's Horn Glasses Are Dropped by Their Original Wearers—A Fad that Has Become Detestably Vulgar Doncherknow—Teach Housekeepers to Keep House is Massachusetts Education Board's Novel Plan—Married Women Study Cooking and Sewing—Also Boston School Board Uses Movies to Show How to Take Care of Baby—Daddies Likewise Will Have Instructive Motion Pictures, as of World's Series—Yet Fine Arts Not Neglected at Hub, as Witness Laurence Binyon's Lectures.

Harvard's own pet, private fad of wearing horn or tortoise-shell rimmed glasses in the various vertical oval, horizontal oval or round shape styles is expiring from overwork, and the fact that these glasses have become too common, not to say detestably vulgar, doncher know. The style, which certainly could not be recommended as adding to anyone's beauty, appears to have originated at Harvard. For some time a wearer of that sort of glasses was promptly identified as a Harvard man, of the class who "you can always tell on the street, but you cannot tell him much." The Honorable Mayor of Boston, however, adopted the habit, and now "everybody" is wearing them. Harvard never does what the rude unlettered "townies" do. Hence the sudden demise and disappearance of the grotesque eyeglasses and spectacles at the university over the river. For this much a few conservative citizens who dislike making monkeys of themselves are duly thankful, and trust the general public will be as quick to follow up the dropping of the fad as it was to copy it.

Bostonians who follow the lectures at the Lowell Institute are particularly fortunate this winter in the opportunity to hear a series of illustrated talks by Laurence Binyon, the English poet, dramatist, editor, author, art critic and lecturer, and incidentally assistant keeper of the print department of the British Museum. Mr Binyon's course will include a wide range of artistic subjects, in all branches of which he is a distinguished critic and connoisseur, but will bear especially on Chinese and Japanese art, in which many Bostonians are particulary interested. Mr. Binyon's visit will at the same time give the local collectors the satisfaction of introducing him for the first time to the immense collection of Japanese prints at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, one numbering over 60,000 specimens. This collection surpasses anything that even the British Museum can produce, and doubtless may open the English savant's eyes to the fact that art hums in Boston, too.

A novel plan for teaching housewives to keep house has been put into operation by the Massachusetts board of education. Courses in domestic engineering, as it might be called, have been established in several industrial centres of the state, with the purposes of increasing the efficiency of the housewives in those cities and thus raising the standards of living among the industrial classes. There are schools for instruction in cooking and dressmaking, sewing, laundering and kindred operations already open in eight cities, and others will soon be opened. Women of every position and standing in life are invited to attend the classes and it is expected by the state board that the response will be large. If the plan works out satisfactorily it will doubtless be put into effect in other states.

Free motion picture shows for mothers is the latest innovation of the school committee. The first shows of this kind were recently given in the high schools of two suburban towns, the undertaking being financed from the funds set aside for the extended use of schools. The picture show, instructive and amusing at once, had for its subject a real live baby, the film showing how it should properly be nursed, fed, bathed, clothed, soothed and aired. The motion pictures will be varied by interesting talks and lectures and by dances given by the school children. In order that all mothers possible may attend they are allowed to bring their children with them, when they cannot be left at home. Motion pictures for men are planned for one evening each week at the different schools. It is not reported whether these will begin with reproductions of the late world's baseball series. Marked interest has been expressed by both fathers and mothers in this effort of the school committee to extend the use of the school buildings and furnish wholesome and instructive entertainment to children and parents.

Bostonians have become so accustomed to the brilliance of their great white way in the vicinity of the Electric Show that they foresee the end of the display as the return of the dark ages. Some frequenters of the neighborhood of the Mechanics Building are said to have gone so far as to supply themselves with pocket flashlights in readiness for the return to the normal street illumination; incidentally the modern Diogenes finds these useful in his search through the city streets. The clusters of rose and green globes gleaming at frequent intervals would be welcomed as permanent additions to this important thoroughfare, but it is understood that it would require some new device of graft to finance them.

RUSSIA'S ROYAL MYSTERY

Czarevitch Said to Have Been Stabbed In Groin by Nihilist

Odessa, Oct. 27.—Further strengthening the report that the czarevitch has been the victim of a Nihilist attack, the Odetsky Listoko publishes what it allege are inside details of the attack, the culmination of an oath of vengeance registered at the birth of the heir to the Russian throne.

The czarevitch was wounded, according to this story, by a Nihilist named Wassiliew, who was bayoneted in the left groin during a fight with the troops incidental to the savage suppression of one of the uprisings shortly after Alexis' birth.

Wassiliew swore revenge on the czarevitch, and after several years he secured a position through forged recommendations as gardener on the palace grounds at Spala, caught the czarevitch during an unguarded moment in the garden and stabbed him exactly as he himself was stabbed eight years previously. Wassiliew was captured, according to the Odetsky Listoko's account.

CARUSO AT MURDER SCENE

Stood Behind Officer Who Was Stabbed, According to Witness

Salem, Mass., Oct. 26.—That Joseph Caruso was standing directly back of Officer Benoit immediately before he was stabbed on the night of Jan. 28, and just before Anna Lopizzo was shot, was the opinion of Patrolman Marshall of Lawrence which he gave on the stand.

He also stated positively that Salvatore Scaitti was standing beside Caruso.

He saw no militia at the scene of the murder until after the shooting.

Bewildering Names.

Women who do only a small amount of buying are likely to feel oppressed, when they do undertake to make some modest purchases, by their ignorance of the names of the various articles of merchandise shown to them. It is only necessary, however, to know something of the origins of the complicated nomenclature of trade to be convinced that an inability to master it need not be taken as a sign of mental weakness. The Upholsterer tells of a modernized oriental rug which was named by putting a lot of fanciful names into a hat and then drawing one from the collection. Another rug has acquired a name with a particularly nice oriental sound; but it is the name of a people that has not longer any distinctive existence, and had nothing whatever to do with either the making or designing of the rug. When names are so easy to get it is not strange that every material, color and mode has numbers of them sufficient to create utter bewilderment in the minds of the initiated.

Wages No Object.

"Can't you get any work?" asked a woman of the tramp who had applied at the back door for food.

"Yes, ma'am," he replied. "I was offered a steady job by the man who lives down the road in that big white house."

"That's Mr. Oatseed? What was the work?"

"He wanted me to get up at four in the morning, milk 17 cows, feed, water and rub down four horses, clean the stables and then chop wood until it was time to begin the day's work."

"What did he want to pay?"

"I dunno. I did'nt stop to ask."—Youth's Companion.

Got His Answer.

When the Rev. John McNeil was holding revival services at Cardiff a young man one night, thinking to perplex the preacher, sent up a note to the platform with the request that the following question be publicly answered:

"Dear Mr. McNeil: If you are seeking to enlighten young men kindly tell me who was Cain's wife."

Mr. McNeil read the note, and then, amid breathless silence, said:

"I love young men—inquirers for truth especially—and should like to give this young man a word of advice. It is this: Don't lose your soul's salvation looking after other people's wives."

CHARGED WITH INTEMPERANCE

Roosevelt Resents Article Printed In Michigan Paper

FILES $10,000 SUIT FOR LIBEL

Culmination of "Insidious Campaign of Slander," According to Statement Issued by Progressive National Committee—Colonel Does Not Seek Money

Marquette, Mich., Oct. 26.—Suit for $10,000 for libel was filed here by a Detroit attorney, acting for Theodore Roosevelt, against George A. Newett, editor of the Iron Ore of Ishpeming, Mich.

The praecipe alleges libel in that Newett printed an article in his paper charging that Roosevelt was intemperate in the use of language and liquor.

Slander Plot Charged

New York, Oct. 26.—That the charges over which the Michigan suit was filed constituted the culmination of "an insidious campaign of slander" against Colonel Roosevelt is the declaration of the Progressive national committee in a statement last night.

"Knowing the cruel falsity of this charge," the statement says, "those who have been interested in circulating it have proceeded under cover and in the dark. No respectable person of responsibility, so far as is known to Roosevelt and his friends, had dared to make this charge in an open and responsible way until Mr. Newett made it in his newspaper.

"On Monday, Oct. 14, the day he was shot, Roosevelt was in Chicago preparing to go to Milwaukee, when a copy of the paper was put in his hands. Upon reading the article Roosevelt gave directions to proceed against Newett at once.

"Colonel Roosevelt, however, in taking this action is not seeking to recover money damages, and the amount asked in the suit is therefore fixed at a nominal sum."

The statement adds that the action was begun because, by the publication in question, "Newett has furnished the first opportunity that Roosevelt or his friends have been able to find" for the "prompt and authoritative disproof" of the charges.

AGAIN IN THE HARNESS

Active Work of the Campaign Is Taken Up by Roosevelt

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Oct. 26.—Colonel Roosevelt took up the active work of the campaign yesterday for the first time since he was shot. John McGrath, his secretary, came from New York, and as soon as Roosevelt had had breakfast he began his work.

The colonel dictated a number of letters to Progressives leaders, then took up the preparations of the speech which he expects to deliver in New York next week.

DIAZ OFFICERS SHOT

Leader of Ill-Fated Revolt May Meet a Similar Fate

Vera Cruz, Mex., Oct. 26.—Two of the captured officers of the staff of Felix Diaz were shot by the federal troops after being sentenced to death by summary court-martial. The execution was carried out with secrecy. Their names were Major Zarate and Major Cuesta.

Major Zarate and Major Villas are pleading in behalf of Diaz, who, according to military law, is liable to imprisonment for a term of three to eight years.

Public opinion against Diaz, however, is so strong that it is thought a sentence of death may be pronounced on him as well as on all the officers and government officials who joined his cause and were captured.

END OF ELIOT BANK

Its Business Formally Taken Over by the Shawmut National

Boston, Oct. 26.—There was posted on the door of the Eliot National bank a card informing all who called at its former rooms that the Eliot's business had been transferred to the National Shawmut bank as a result of the purchase by the Shawmut of the good will and business at a premium of approximately $400,000.

There was considerable surprise shown by some of the visitors, who had not known of the arrangement until they read it in the newspapers.

GRAND JURY INDICTS DOW

Sum of $290,000 Said to Be Involved In Illegal Transactions

Boston, Oct. 26.—Stephen R. Dow, the State street broker who recently made an assignment and who was soon afterwards arrested on a lower court warrant on a charge of larceny, was yesterday indicted by the grand jury.

Dow will have to answer to charges of larceny, receiving stolen goods, conversion by an officer of a corporation and obtaing money by wrongfully pledging credit of a corporation for his own use, all of which are set forth in different forms in ninety counts and based upon twenty-five separate transactions aggregating a total of $290,000.

Yesterday a cash bail of $25,000 was accepted in lieu of sureties with $50,000.

Dow pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Judge Aiken. No date has been set for trial.

WAGES ARE INCREASED

Street Railway Employes Are Favored by Arbitration Board

Boston, Oct. 26.—John W. Coughlin of Fall River, William P. Hayes of Springfield and Francis H. Dewey of Worcester have recommended as an arbitration board that the wages of the employes of the Springfield and Worcester street railway companies be increased. This is the first time that wages have been adjusted by an arbitration of this character.

The proposition that the findings of the board be accepted by both parties for the term of three years was agreed to.

The wage increases are from 10 to 40 cents a day on day work and 4 cents on time work.

The board was created as a result of a demand for more wages on the plea of increased cost of living.

STARVES AS SISTER KEEPS DOOR LOCKED

Fate of Aged Woman Who Cared For Insane Relative

Boston, Oct. 26.—Starved to death, while her insane sister, to whose care she had devoted herself for years, kept the door of their apartment locked, was the fate of Miss Martha Sylvester, 86 years old, at her home at 5 Bickwell avenue, Roxbury.

She had been dead only a short time when the police officers broke in the door of her apartment by order of Medical Examiner Leary.

After an autopsy, he declared the death of the aged recluse due to starvation and neglect.

Miss Frances M. Sylvester, 71 years old, and adjudged insane, whose guardian had entrusted her to the care of her elder sister, tried to keep out patrolmen as they entered.

Miss Frances was declared insane some time ago. She posessed a modest income and her sister offered to care for her.

For ninteen years they lived at 5 Bicknell avenue. According to neighbors, they have not been seen outside the house more than twice in a year.

CHILD SLAYER CONVICTED

Jury Loses No Time In Returning a Verdict Against McKenna

New York, Oct. 26.—It took a jury only a little over an hour to find a verdict of murder in the first degree against Joseph J. McKenna, army deserter and ne'er-do-well, for strangling 6-year-old Sigrid Eckstrom to death last June.

The little girl's body was found in the basement of an apartment house near her home in the Bronx. McKenna, who lived in the neighborhood, confessed the crime, shortly after he was arrested, but at his trial he repudiated the confession.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

HALLOWEEN CANDIES.

SIMPLE candies for the children's Halloween feast may be prepared a day or two in advance unless the children are old enough to enjoy the fun of compounding them.

In either case these recipes for simple confections that any boy or girl can make may not be amiss.

The candies should be served in fancy dishes. If they are put into plain platters give a dainty appearance to these by placing the candy on paper doilies.

Taffies or toffies, as the English call them, are favorites at Halloween. They are a coarse kind of candy made with sugar or molasses and cooled in shallow pans in which nut meats may be placed if you wish.

Simple Confections.

Pulled Taffy.—Take two cupfuls of molasses, one cupful of brown sugar, butter the size of an egg, one tablespoonful of vinegar and a pinch of soda. Put all in a kettle, adding the soda last, and boil twenty minutes. Cool in shallow pans and pull till white.

Russian Taffy.—Take two pounds of sugar, two ounces of butter and put them into a pan with a small can of condensed milk and a gill of fresh milk. Boil these together very slowly till thick, keeping them stirred. Drop a little into cold water and, if it hardens at once, add a spoonful of essense of vanilla and pour it off into buttered pans.

Vanilla Taffy.—Take a pound of sifted sugar and one cupful of water. Dissolve the sugar in the water and then add a quarter of a pound of butter beaten to a cream. Stir constantly over a quick fire until done. Just before taking from the fire add vanilla or some other flavoring. Pour into buttered pans.

Nut Sweetmeats.

Almond Taffy.—Take a pound of granulated sugar, four ounces of butter and half a pound of blanched almonds. Melt the butter in a saucepan and add the sugar. Boil to the "soft ball" stage, add the blanched almonds and continue boiling until the sugar will snap when tested. Pour into a buttered shallow tin. To test, drop a little of the mixture into a cupful of cold water.

Peanut Taffy.—Put a pint of molasses into a saucepan and boil for twenty minutes. Beat in a quarter of a teaspoonful of baking soda and boil for fifteen minutes more or until a drop put into iced water is brittle. Stir constantly while cooking. When done, stir in a teaspoonful of vinegar and turn into buttered pans in which have been strewn peanut meats.

FOR HALLOWEEN PARTIES.

THE good old customs of Halloween must be observed if there are youngsters in the family, and so at this season parties are popular.

The Halloween feast should be featured with fruits, nuts and vegetables. Without the traditional jack-o'-lantern cut from a pumpkin no Halloween party is complete. Amusing souvenirs may be fashioned with turnips, parsnips and carrots.

Suitable Decorations.

Autumn leaves and berries, plenty of candles and heaping dishes of nuts and fruits are about all that is necessary to put on the Halloween table, although the feast may include cakes, candies and anything else that you choose.

If the party is to be a more elaborate one the following suggestions may be useful:

For Drinking Healths.

Witches Punch.—Take the juice of a dozen ripe oranges, a half dozen lemons, a pineapple and extract the juice from these and strain. Add to this one-half cupful of ginger, one pound of sugar dissolved in a cup of water and a cup of strong tea. Mix and set away ready to use. Get an old fashioned kettle or caldron, set it on three cross sticks, arranged gypsy fashion, pour the punch over a block of ice set in a bowl that will just fit inside the kettle. Place the bowl in the kettle and dress the latter with autumn leaves and berries.

Pie and Cake.

Goblin Pies.—Bake small individual pumpkin pies. Use dried currants or cranberries for eyes, nose and mouth. Place a frill of paper around the pie dish to look like a cap.

Jack-o'-lantern Ice Cream.—Make a plain ice cream and color it orange. Freeze and shape in molds to look like pumpkins. Outline features with melted chocolate to form a jack-o'-lantern.

Witch Cat Cake.—Bake an ordinary spice cake, to which add finely chopped raisins and citron and place a ring, a thimble and dime in the batter. When baked cover with plain white icing and decorate the top with a witch hat, a row of toy black cats and chocolate icing.

MRS. SICKLES AGAIN AIDS HER HUSBAND

War Veteran Continues to Be Harassed by Debts

New York, Oct. 26.—For the second time within a month, the estranged wife of General Daniel E. Sickles, the war veteran and former ambassador to Spain, has come to his aid in his financial difficulties.

Mrs. Sickles made a plea against a sale of personal effects of the general to Sheriff Harburger, who agreed to a postponement of the threatened sale when Mrs. Sickles promised to pay about Nov. 10 money necessary to satisfy a new judgment against her husband.

On the other occasion Mrs. Sickles pawned jewelry that was her property when a belle in the court of Spain when Sickles knew her there, to aid the general.

The new judgment which Mrs. Sickles now offers to satisfy is one obtained by the Bank of the Metropolis.

SLEW GIRL CRUSADER

Man Who Used Pistol In Connecticut Says "It Must Be So"

Bridgeport, Conn., Oct. 26.—A mass of evidence regarded as of vital importance to the countrywide crusade against white slavery, of which Chicago is now the centre, is in possession of the state police here as a result of their investigation of the murder of Jennie Cavalieri, supposed agent of Chicago vice crusaders, who was shot to death by a party of automobilists Tuesday night.

The evidence was found in a trunk brought here it is claimed, by Joseph Bunomo and Jennie Cavalieri.

Bunomo's latest admission—and he has made several that are conflicting—is that if his four supposed accomplices, and there are two under arrest, continue to insist that he shot the woman, it must be so.

THE BARRAJA RECITAL.

Friday evening, despite the inclement weather, a brilliant audience gathered in New Colonial hall to enjoy the recital by Enrico Barraja. The concert was a great success, both socially and musically.

Mr. Barraja was assisted by Miss Eleanor E. Farrar, mezzo soprano; Mrs. T. Ray Blanchard, violin; Mr. Leone Stroppiana, tenor; Mr. Barraja-Frauenfelder, bass; and Mr. Olindo Taddei, 'cello.

The following program was presented: Pas des Amphores, op 37, Chaminade
Notte Azzurra, op 30, No. 2 E. Barraja
Pagina d'Album, op. 16 E. Barraja
Flower Song from "Faust" Gounod
Miss Farrar.
Burlesque Rinaldi
3d Melody Martucci
Polonaise, op 26, No. 1 Chopin
Impromptu, op. 6, No. 2 E. Barraja
Scherzo, op 7 E. Barraja
Mr. Barraja
Two Roses Hallett Gilberte
A Bandit's Ballad, op 35 E. Barraja
Mr. Barraja—Fraunenfelder
Adagio from 7th Sonata Handel
Serenade Pierne
Mrs. Blanchard.
The Pines Berthold Neuer
Canto d'Aprile, op. 36, No. 1 E. Barraja
Romanzo from the Opera "La Vendetta" E. Barraja
Mr. Stroppiana
Romanza L' d'Ambrosio
Melodia, op. 18 E. Barraja
Madrigale, op. 15, No. 2 E. Barraja
Mr. Taddei.
Solo and duet from 1st act of "Faust" Gounod
Mr. Stroppiana Mr. Barraja-Frauenfelder.

This was a notable program:—the interpretations of the various numbers being of the highest order of excellence. The fact that a considerable proportion of the compositions were by Mr. Barraja himself. added greatly to the interest.

Miss Farrar has a beautiful voice, sympathetic in quality, thoroughly trained and of great range.

Mrs. Blanchard was delightful in her solos and ensemble playing:— she has a sure and delicate touch.

Mr. Ttaddei's rendering of his various numbers revealed the finished musician his quality of tone is fine, his execution leaves nothing to be desired.

Mr. Barraja-Frauenfelder was in exceptionally good voice. He showed great appreciation of the differing values of his numbers, in his rendering of them.

Mr. Stroppiana delighted the audience with his thorough musical sympathy, his dramatic instinct, and his splendid voice.

The solo and duet from Faust aroused the greatest enthusiasm.

Mr. Barraja appeared as a many-sided musician. He showed his versatality in the ensemble playing in the varied accompaniments and last but not least, in the group of solos. As a pianist he is a master of technique and an interpreter of rare ability.

The wide range of Mr. Barraja's compositions, presented, showed how comprehensive is his talent. The beauty of "Notte Azura" the virility of "A Bandit's Ballad" the lovely "Canto D'Aprile," the "Scherzo" played by Mr. Barraja and the Madrigale" so charmingly given by Mr. Taddei all showed Mr. Barraja to be a composer of decided merit.

All the selections were received with great delight by the audiences and encores were enthusiastically given and responded to .

The high standard of this concert, the originality of the music rendered and the talent of the participants, all make one earnestly hope for a repetition of this delightful evening.

AVIATOR'S SICKNESS.

Sensations That Come With Flights Into High Altitudes.

Mountain climbers are subject to what is called "the mountain sickness," due to the rarefaction of the air and the muscular work done by climbers. Then there is the balloon disease, with analogous symptoms, but which does not appear except at very high altitudes.

Newer than either of these is aeroplane or aviator's sickness. Its effects are due to the rapidity with which the maximum height is reached and the still greater speed at the descent, involving the passing from a low air pressure to a higher one. Aeroplanes sometimes reach altitudes of 10,000 feet in an hour, and here the effects on the ear, such as humming or cracking noise, are about the same as in a balloon, but the effect on the respiratory organs is different. The pilot is sooner out of breath and he feels a special kind of uneasiness.

During the descent the heart beats are of greater amplitude, but without accelerating. A quick descent in a sailing flight at a speed of 1,000 or 1,200 feet a minute or even more—since Morane descended at Havre from 8,000 feet in six minutes—causes a feeling of a special kind or uneasiness, accompanied with humming in the ears.

Burning in the face is also felt and a severe headache; also great tendency to sleep. The movements of the body are sluggish and unskillful. These symptoms continue for some time after the landing, and the tension in the arteries is noticed to be higher than the normal.—Chicago News.

A Convincing Demonstration.

"Now, Mr. Freshe," said the professor, "can you demonstrate that X equals 0?"

"Sure," said Mr. Freshe. "I write home asking the governor for an X and get nothing—Q. E. D."

"Excellent," returned the professor "I'll give you the same for your mark."—Harper's.

Mr., and Mrs. C. I. Dimmock, 321 Washington street celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding last Monday evening. Relatives and friends from Braintree, Ashmont, Dorchester, Mansfield, Plymouth and West Roxbury were present. The youngest guest was Master Lewis Gould, seven months old, of South Braintree and seemed to enjoy the festivities of the evening, consisting of musical selections, whist and dancing. Refreshments were served. Mrs. Lila (Dimmock) Powers, made and presented the wedding cake. Numerous gifts of silver, cut glass and flowers were presented. In departing the guests all expressed a wish to be present at the golden wedding and assured the host and hostess they had passed an enjoyable evening.

—It is reported from Washington that considerable less money has been sent abroad this year than last year, the reason given by the government authorities being that a goodly amount of the money hitherto sent to the old country is now being deposited in the recently established postal savings banks. This is an encouraging feature for the new method of savings but it may be doubted if this is the only reason for the falling of in foreign remittances. One very plausible reason would seem to be that, because of the serious and widespread disturbances in the labor world the earnings have been materially decreased and the surplus available for sending home has been wiped out.—Milford Gazette.

BETTER POLICE PROTECTION.

A committee from the Norfolk Downs Improvement association waited on Chief Burrell, Friday and demanded better police protection. After hearing the case Chief Burrell agreed their request should be granted and in stating his position said that the growing section of Norfolk Downs and Atlantic should be better protected. He recommended taking it up with the City Council.

Quincy, Oct. 26, 1912.

Editor of the Ledger:— In the middle of the present great three-cornered struggle in the nation for Presidential honors, it is still the duty of the people of Quincy to remember their own more immediate political problem; that is, the control of the city during the coming year.

There is little fear, of course, that this local contest is forgotten, or neglected, by the active few to whom politics are an end, rather than simply a means for improving municipal conditions. Hardly. And therein always lies the danger to sound and competent and honest city administration,—on the one hand the activity of the pernicious professional politician and, on the other hand, the inact-

PIPER AND LESLIE ENDORSED

Good Record Last Year at the State House

It has been customary in Quincy to give our Representatives in the General Court a three-year term, and there are good reasons this year why the precedent should be continued. Both Walter E. Piper and William J. Leslie are familiar with public affairs, have served with credit in the City Council, and have strived diligently to work for the best interests of the State and the city at the State House.

Appropriation of $100,000 for extension of Metropolitan parkway from the Quincy Shore reservation toward Hancock street near High school.

Appropriation of $35,000 for land takings for Old Colony boulevard which will connect the boulevard at Atlantic with the Columbia road parkway in Dorchester.

Appropriation of $6,000 for dredging of the chanel near the clubhouses of the Wollaston and Squantum Yacht clubs.

Appropriation of $25,000 for dredging Town River. An act permitting the City Council to provide for the payment of certain temporary loans

A redistricting bill which takes Quincy out of a Boston Congressional district.

An Act providing that the Chief of the Quincy Fire Department be placed under Civil Service. Referendum attached.

Appropriation of $1,000 at suggestion of Squantum gentleman, for experiments by State Board of Health on extermination of mosquitoes.

Passage of Act to allow Quincy Firemen's Relief Association to amend its by-laws.

An Act providing for an additional court officer at the District Court at Quincy.

Commission to investigate condition of dependent widows and orphans. (Quincy woman appointed on commission.)

It should not be expected that any representative will vote on every measure just as each one of us might, but Messrs. Piper and Leslie have done such good work that it overshadows any votes that may not please.

BIG CROWD IN CITY SQUARE

Heard Mrs. Crowley and Miss Foley Arraign Wolcott

Over 500 men, women and children gathered around the Woman Suffrage auto in Quincy square Saturday evening and heard Mrs. Theresa H. Crowley and Miss Margaret L. Foley deliver another volley in the political battle they are waging against the record of Roger Wolcott.

Mrs. Crowley was the first speaker and after a complete summary of the legislation record of Mr. Wolcott, she said that she did not feel that his opposition was a conscious effort to defeat the will of the people but that it was the result of environment, temperment, a absurd knowledge of actual working conditions, an aristocratic following, and that a man whose conscience is so elastic and judgement so poor should not be returned to Beacon Hill.

In closing she said "remember, if you do not want corporation rule, vote for anybody else; don't vote at all, but don't vote for Roger Wolcott.

Miss Foley said "you can fool some of the people, all of the time; all of the people some of the time but you can't fool all the people all the time. That's us! Mr. Wolcott does not represent you and does not pretend to do it because he told me he was sent to represent himself, if I wished to use the expression, I said, "you feel you represent Mr. Wolcott" and he replied "if I saw fit to do so and I am returned by the voters every year, whether I represent them or myself."

"We have been fooled long enough. I advise you to get out and vote and defeat the man who is not fit to represent you or your wives, daughters, mother or sisters.

"He voted against the Federal Income Tax, Direct Election of United States Senators, the Preferential Presidential Primary bill, the bill to

INDIFFERENCE MAIN CAUSE

For Present Day Conditions Says Councilman Murray

MANY OTHER SPEAKERS

Indifference was the principal cause advanced, in answer to the question "What's the matter with Quincy?" by Councilman A. N. Murray the chief speaker at the second meeting on this subject held at the Wollaston Unitarian church, Sunday noon. Nearly 80 men and a dozen women attended.

The speakers were Horace W. Richmond, Henry Faxon, Chandler W. Smith, Nathan G. Nickerson, Arthur W. Rohn, Edward J. Cummings, R. B. Locks, Irving L. Shaw, Frank A. Page and Walter F. Nichols.

"One great cause of our present condition," said Councilman Murray," comes from the indifference of the average citizen in civic affairs. I would like to feel that everyone here was present from a deep interest in what he might do individually but I am afraid some are present because their pocketbooks have been touched.

"A great many here have been touched by the tax rate. While perhaps that is necessary to stir people up it is not a good indication when something of that kind is needed to arouse interest.

"The citizen should have an interest beyond his own yard. He should have an interest in his neighborhood extending along the whole street and beyond it to the community and city. The present tax rate has aroused a number of people but when next year comes around with its $23 or $24 tax rate we will all be on our feet."

Mr. Murray declared that citizens didn't give the assessors the assistance they ought, "We have the situation in our own hands and if everyone gave their personal information Quincy would not be hard up for money. This is one point in civic life upon which we think we have a right to keep quiet.

"If we have a man in our business, we would not employ him on Jan. 1st and not look in on him again until Dec. 1st. It is not the right view if we shift responsibility."

Mr. Murray spoke of the disinclination of the right kind of men to take even the smallest part in the city's affairs.

"IIf you are taking an interest, you should be stirred up by this time. Things are going the same way this year. Everyone who wants to go to the council nominates himself and gets himself elected.

"How many citizens were interested last year in what was going on. How many could tell how the councilmen from this district stood on important measures?"

Mr. Murray said that he had only been approached once last year and that was on a selfish matter. "If you want to find public sentiment you have to hunt hard for it and even then you can't always find it."

The speaker declared that some questionable matters had gone through the council this year that would not have gone had public sentiment been on its job. He declared the lack of interest was shown by the small number of city reports that were put in circulation.

"Some people say that Mr. Shaw is bearing down on Quincy and we will all be pessimists. That we will either get out or give up in despair. There is nothing in the city to be blue over, There is nothing that cannot be straightened out.

"Suggestions will not straighten themselves out. With interest we can improve, as soon as we get the right line on civic matters things will adjust themselves."

Walter F. Nichols was of the opinion that too much talk and action was in the abstract. He inquired what some of the objectionable matters were that had gone through the council.

Councilman Murray replied that a certain matter regarding the fire department had been crowded through. The garbage question was another where the better element had absolutely the right stand but were purposely put in the wrong light before

THERMOMETER NEAR $24,000 BY SATURDAY NIGHT RETURNS

Committees Optimistic That the Desired Goal Will Be Reached Tonight

Team Members Working With Consistent Enthusiasm All the Time

The campaign ends tonight. All those who have not contributed or have not been seen should make it a point to get busy and send in their portion to help swell the Hospital fund and be sure that it reaches the desired $35,000 mark when polls close tonight.

The meeting of the collecting teams at the Y. M. C. A. Saturday evening was another manifestation of enthusiasm all round. Mayor Stone was present representing the City Council.

On being called upon to speak, Mayor Stone said it gave him pleasure to be present on this occasion and add his evidence to that of others of the good work which is being done by the hospital. He said the hospital was a great institution and doing a splendid work. While the city had been doing something toward its maintenance he felt sure that the city would be prepared to do better by the hospital in the future.

Dr. Nathaniel S. Hunting, spoke briefly upon the good work of the hospital its need in the community and the support of which it was most deserving.

Fred B. Rice also spoke and urged upon the teams the necessity of doing their best in the short time permitted to secure the amount required. He stated that every one was busy and doing their part and he expected good returns from some letters which had been sent out to former residents of Quincy. He announced that Tubular Rivet and Stud Co., had contributed $1000. He also had another $1000 contribution and one for $250.

These amounts with the amounts received from the teams, showed a total of $3755.65 for the evening, making a grand total of $23,478.05 up to Saturday night.

The thermometer Friday night, registered $19,722.40. The receipts Saturday evening were as follows:

TWO MEN DROWNED WITH AID ALMOST WITHIN THEIR REACH

James W. Stetson Fell Overboard from Powerboat, Lally from Row Boat

Latter Dead When Hauled Out of Neponset River by Young Men

Two men, James W. Stetson, and Michael Lalley, were drowned in this vicinity, Sunday. Stetson fell overboard from a power boat in Weymouth Bay, while Lally met his death in the Neponset river on the overturning of his row boat.

Michael Lally for the past three years a resident of 44 Water street, Atlantic was drowned in the Neponset river Sunday, just as friends came to his rescue. He was out in a small boat to pick up drift wood. He was seen to go up the river by several young men and in a few minutes was out of sight. A little later these same young men saw the empty dingey drifting down the stream. Jumping into a power launch the young men started to the rescue. Rounding a bend in the river they saw Lally struggling in the water, in what is known as Davenports creek, about 300 yards from where Lally lived.

The young men in the boat, Walter Johnson, William Pitts, and Albert Hughes, all of Neponset rushed their power boat at all speed toward the spot where the drowning man was frantically struggling. Just as they arrived Lally sank unconscious but when he came up Hughes grabbed him, but on account of his weight was unable to hold him until Johnson and Pitts came to his aid. Lally was then hauled into the power boat and rushed to the shore where first aid was applied but the man succumbed in his struggle. Medical Leahy who viewed the body pronounced death due to accidental drowning.

While no one saw the accident it is supposed that Lally had stepped out of the boat into the creek thinking it was not deep water. Finding the water too deep, and unable to swim he evidently made frantic efforts to reach the shore only a short distance away. The water was as quiet as a mill pond and it is not known how long the unfortunate man had been struggling alone. The spot was so situated that it could not have been seen from the bridge and his cries could not be heard.

Mr. Lally came to this country from Ireland about 25 years ago and has resided in Atlantic for the past three years. He has been employed for a year at an iron foundry at Commercial point. He leaves a widow and ten children. John, Edward, James Mary, Catherine, Esther, Helen, George Rose and Gertrude.

James Whitman Stetson, 40 years old, a painter, who boarded at 209 Adams street, East Braintree, fell from his power boat in Weymouth Bay a mile off Wessagussett, about six o'clock Sunday afternoon and was drowned.

Stetson owned a 22-foot power boat, the Daisy, and was returning to Weymouth from Boston. With him were Mrs. Mary Pace of Braintree, with whom he boarded; Frank I. Sherman of Weymouth Landing, for whom he worked as foreman; Mrs. Sherman, and Mr. and Mrs. Philip Granier of Worcester. Mrs. Pace was at the wheel. The boat was towing a tender.

Just before 6 o'clock Stetson went to the bow of the boat to hang up a lighted lantern. The wind blew the lantern out several times and Stetson relighted it. The last time he tried to do so the boat swerved slightly and he was thrown into the water.

His companions heard the splash and heard him cry. "For God's sake, help me," but before they could reach him he sank. He could swim, and it is supposed that either the power boat or the tender struck his head and made him helpless.

The water at that point is deep and the tide is swift, and his body has not yet been recovered.

Stetson formerly lived on Mayflower park, Braintree. About two years ago his brother was drowned by falling from a boat in Weymouth Pond.

An effort will be made today by the police to locate the body.

NOTICE.

The Ledger is receiving a great many communications these days, the more the better, and is glad to give publicity to the thoughts therein expressed, especially when they are for the good of the city as a whole, believing too much publicity cannot be given under the circumstances. We will accept anything for publication that is honest criticism without malice or personal grudge, provided the communication is sent in with the writer's name and address. It would seem as though it was not necessary for us to again reiterate that we do not accept or use anonymous communications but as we receive unsigned letters most every day whose fate is the waste basket the statement seems necessary. Why not follow the rule of this and other newspapers?

ALL SEAS LEAD TO BOSTON.

The old adage, "It never rains but it pours," appears particularly applicable to Boston at this time. No sooner had the Hamburg-American line announced its intentions of making Boston its western terminal than a glad note of approval was heard from other lines who desired to likewise enter the Hub of the Universe.

New York has about reached the limits prescribed by its water frontage and naturally the big steamship lines turn in other directions for accomodation. Boston with its fine harbor, and the splendid channel, with the dock improvements contemplated cannot but offer an inviting haven of refuge which they are quick to note and accept.

The growing splendor af Boston as a port cannot but reflect upon her smaller sister cities. So Quincy unites in the rejoicing that diverts much of the world's commerce to the port of Boston, believing that all within a radius of several miles will reap the benefits in a few years.

SOME SHIFTING.

With only one more week of the campaign to round up all the issues at stake and put them in an intelligent form before the voters, many party leaders in this state are attempting to make a rather farcial ending of a serious matter. The Progressives, having it put up to them that their attitude is liable to land John F. Fitzgerald in the senatorial seat and Martin Lomasney in the speaker's chair, have become alarmed and are putting the "voice of the people" stunt up to Governor Foss at rather a late day and the Governor and his lieutenanth are not slow to appreciate the situation, dodging the issue with splendid agility.

Mr. Lawson has taken a hand in the matter. Some time ago he offered himself as a sacrifice upon the senatorial altar but his post card support could not have been very encouraging. The Progressives seemed to have missed a real live campaign issue. In other words their forethought came afterwards, and now at the last minute the yare caling for a special session of the legislature. Even if the special session is called at an expense of $50,000 there is no assurance that the legislature will change its mind. At any rate, it is rather late in the day to commence this political juggling.

If Gov. Foss should call a special session, the body could not get into action upon the matter and give a deciding vote before election day. If the Republicans are successful in the election, the legislature would assume such a result an endorsement of their previous action and the state would have the expense of a special session for nothing .

ATTITUDE REASONABLE.

If the attitude of Lieut. Gov. Luce in refusing to permit that body of striking car men from entering the State House a few months ago is the only argument advanced for his retirement from office, it seems hardly a reasonable grounds upon which to retire an efficient and faithful public official.

Mr. Luce has offered a very reasonable explanation of his position on that occasion. There was a hearing before the State Board of arbitration. It would have been a physical impossibility for the entire body which presented itself for admission to have found places in the committee room, even if they were laid end to end, flat on the floor and packed in like sardines in a box. As Mr. Luce explains he did not object to a committee, as many as could be accommodated being admitted and probably would have provided for the body being represented in relays, if those first and successively in attendance agreed to retire from time to time. But to permit a crowd of 3000 people to invade the State House was a more serious proposition.

Mr. Luce makes no contention that he desired to exclude any one from visiting the state house, at any time when it was open, but there are times when some judgment and discretion should be exercised even in granting constitutional rights.

Gov. Foss was not in the city. The responsibility naturally shifted to the shoulders of the Lieutenant Governor.

It was a period fraught with vast importance. It was a moment which called for quick and good judgment. However orderly a large body of people may be, and it is not claimed that those men were anything but orderly on this occasion, there is always danger of excitement getting the better of some stray individuals when brought into cramped quarters. Their intentions might have been the best in the world. But there was a danger of something happening. A happy and merry crowd, without any intention to such an end could produce some injury which would be irreparable.

No doubt this consideration presented itself to the mind of Mr. Luce. He was willing to permit the passage of a committee. He refused the same permission to the body as a whole.

He has been straightforward and manly enough to come out boldly even at this time, on the eve of an election, and say that he has no regrets for his course and would act in a similar manner under just the same circumstances. This establishes the independence, honesty and sincerity of the man to any observant person.

What the average voter has to determine at this time, is just what he would do in case he was placed in the same position in which Mr. Luce found himself. There can be no doubt as to just what the average citizen would do. He would do just as Mr. Luce did and in view of that state of mind should govern himself accordingly.

A WORD ABOUT SUSPENSION

Tobin Forced Law Suit to Vindicate His Good Name

Quincy, October 25, 1912.

Editor of the Ledger:—

There appeared in recent issues of the Quincy and Boston papers an article concerning injunction proceedings against the undersigned by the Squantum Yacht Club.

I have been a member of the club for nearly ten years and have always tried to be a gentleman, and believe not without success. I do not know the taste of intoxicants and have no other bad habits, unless my zeal in protecting the club against immoral conduct and flagrant violation of club rules may be so construed.

I have been suspended and expelled but never been confronted by my accusers.

I have no desire to retain membership in the club, but I am forcing legal action to protect my good name and to preserve the rights of respectable members against any similar methods being practised by a group of new members, some of whom seek to make it apear that the offences with which I am charged, viz.—tying a boat to the float contrary to rules and conduct unbecoming a gentleman in having called a member of the house committe a four-flusher, who took it upon himself to notify me that "he" suspended me, while such a privilege belongs only to the committee—are serious ones.

I welcome these court proceedings and visited the club, at great inconvenience to myself, for the purpose of securing a square deal at law, if possible. I am willing to be judged by the final result.

J. Charles Tobin.

—Now that the state has regained control of its own big pier at South Boston and will begin at once to prepare it for occupancy, the modern development of the port of Boston has actually begun. The Commonwealth pier and the new fish pier adjoining will make a good starter.—Medford Mercury.

The Treasurer reports to the Corporation that to, and including Sept. 16, 1912 he has received the sum of $1405 and that he has expended to same date $644.08, leaving a balance of $760.92 to credit of said Corporation.

It is further stated that the General Secretary Miss Jennie M. Purchase began her duties and received compensation therefor from April 1st, 1912.

Rupert F. Claflin, Treasurer.

This year 1911-1912 has been for the Associated Charities of Quincy, one of achievement. At the meeting one year ago it was announced that in the two weeks financial compaign just closed over $1200 had been pledged for the salary of a General Secretary and for office expenses. Then came the important business of selecting the right person and so difficult was the task that we were unable to secure her until April 1, when Miss Jennie M. Purchase began work. A reception was given by the Philanthropic Committee at the Women's Club House, March 19 to welcome Miss Purchase and the fitting of the office, the use of which was given by the Quincy Women's Club was begun by the gift of a typewriter by Mr. Rufus Tobey who sent a roll top desk. Mr. Howlett gave a gas log and Miss Purchase selected file boxes and attended to other necessary furnishings. Miss Purchase also had the assistance of two volunteers one for 4 days and the other for 2 days a week. The association early joined the National A. C. and secured the benefits of this transportation agreement. In June we were obliged to accept the resignation of our President Mr. Howlett who was leaving the city and were fortunate to secure Mr. Thomas Fenno in his place. The Association voted to co-operate with the Quincy Bulletin for an outing for poor people. It was an enjoyable time for those who went and the balance of $17.50 was turned over to the Association. The work of the office has included many and various family problems in which our secretary has received the co-operation of various organizations and individual which has been gratifying. The work has been presented by speaking before many societies and the interest aroused has been seen by contributions of money and service. Our director Mr. Fred H. Smith resigning, his place was filled most acceptably by Mr. Thomas B. Pollard. Conference is held each Wednesday at the office and an Executive Committee meeting of the Board of Directors is held each month. A second financial campaign to secure pledges for the coming year has met with gratifying response. Although it is impossible to tell at this date just how much has been pledged. Delegates have been appointed to the State Conference to be held at Haverhill, Oct. 23rd to 25th. Altogether the Association is to be congratulated for the amount accomplished yet it presses on hoping for better things in the future.

The General Secretary's report for five month's work has already been published, and it only remains to state that for six months there are more than 160 families known to the office. An increasing number of difficult problems are presented monthly for help in their solution as the worth and character of our work is felt in this community.

BOARDED WRONG CAR

Husband and Wife Jumped, Latter Slightly Injured

WHEN SHE FELL

Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Albinese of 98 Front street East Braintree met with a peculiar accident at South Braintree, Sunday evening. By mistake they boarded a car for Brockton instead of the car for Braintree. As soon as they discovered their error they attempted to jump off. Mr. Albinese landed all right but Mrs. Albinese fell, striking on her head and was rendered unconscious. She was taken into a drug store where she was attended by Dr. C. A. Sullivan and later taken to her home.

WOMAN APPEALS FOR SIDEWALK

And Improved Conditions on Washington Street

Editor Daily Ledger:—I have a question I would like to ask our City Council through your paper, and you may say, that if I have anything to say to the Council I had better go up to one of their meetings and say it here. But, being a woman I feel a little timid about addressing such an august body. I have lived in Quincy for the past 19 years and have always paid a good tax. My home has been on the left hand side of Washington street coming from City Square to the Point.

A short time ago I sold my home and am at present living on the right hand side of the same street and should I desire to walk out in either direction, either east or west. I must either plough through dead leaves to the depth of my boots to say nothing of the weeds which are a foot or more high or I can walk in the car track or I can stand and watch my chance of getting across to the other side, without being run down by automobiles which are allowed to go through our street at the rate of a mile a minute if they like, killing any one who is not fortunate enough to get out of their way.

Now Washington street being our main thoroughfare from City square to the Point it seemed to me to be deserving of a side walk on each side of the street. One day this week as I was ploughing my way home, having been up street, I espied the old gentleman who has the care of streets in our ward, and as he was gathering the leaves which had collected in the gutter on the opposite side and burning them up I said to him, "You could have a grand bon fire were you to come over this side," "Oh," said he," I am not allowed to go over that side of the street, the car folks are supposed to attend to that.

Well, I thought to myself, I guess I shall have to live here 19 years longer to see that done.

It seems to me a queer state of affairs when there is so much money appropriated to keep our streets in repair, why, if we cannot have a first class side walk why we cannot have a little care taken of what we have got.

TAFT AT HIS DESK

Will Start Work on Message to Congress After Election

Washington, Oct. 28.—President Taft got back to Washington Sunday after an absence of nearly two months.

With the exception of engagements in New York and Newark and one in Cincinnati the president has nothing in prospect to take him away from the capital.

It is probable that he will spend much of his time here after election writing his annual message to congress and dealing with problems that have arisen since he left for Beverly late in August.

The president has not kept in close touch with political developments until the last few weeks, but it is known that many reports which have been made to him lately were encouraging, and that he takes an optimistic view of the outcome of the election.

MUSIC, EATS AND POLITICS

Will Form an Interesting Salad at Park and Downs Church

Mayor Stone has accepted an invitation to speak before the Men's Club of the Park and Downs church Tuesday evening on the subject: "Why taxes have increased in Quincy?" Councilman Gilliatt will speak on legislature by the City Council in general. A supper will be served at 6.30 and there will be an orchestra and musical program.

DOBLE DEFENDS MAYOR

tivity, or lukewarmness, of the great body of decent voters who regard their civic duty as done when they have cast their ballots at the primary, and later on election day.

It was only to be expected, therefore, that such a small, but energetic minority, seeking emolument and favor at the general expense, should now want to end the political career of Mayor Eugene R. Stone, and, in order to achieve that end, to magnify every imagined weakness of the present administration and, additionally, to make charges not based on facts; and in this year of discontent everywhere, when the most reckless accusations are finding quick credence, honest, decent voters of this city are listening who, in more normal times, would cast the aspersions back into the teeth of the accusers.

Reference might be made to the clique in our City Council who from the beginning of Mayor Stone's term of office have thwarted his constant efforts for the welfare of Quincy. Particular stress is laid on the fact that the tax rate has risen during the present year to $22.

When Eugene R. Stone was a mayoralty candidate last fall there was not an intelligent man in Quincy who did not realize the inevitability of the increase, and none better than the tiny group of malcontents who keep twanging this single string. And the reason was not far to seek.

Ever since Quincy became a city twenty-four years ago she has, to use a figure of speech, resembled a man with a young and growing family, with an increasing outgo and practically a stationary income. Here were the four separate communities of which the new young city was composed clamoring for the improvements which they had a right to expect in a municipality. The cost of the sewerage and water systems under normal conditions would have been great, to say nothing of the other improvements which are familiar to our citizenship; but in this instance the cost was abnormally great, because Quincy covered such an unusually large territory. The costs piled up and the city met the expenses as best she could, or let the city debt increase proportionately, each new administration, after a manner quite human, wishing to defer to the next administration the increase in the tax rate which was the only method, short of a shower of money from Carnegie or out of the high heavens, by which the cost of these public necessities could be met.

And so things went along until it came time for Eugene R. Stone to come a candidate for mayor of Quincy. Like all other men he knew the inevitability of the increase of taxes. The breaking point had been reached, and he knew, as did his present critics, that the time was come for the increase, and that regardless of whether he or one of his opponents was elected mayor of Quincy.

And yet now we find a little group of critics, trying to make political capital out of a condition of affairs which began a quarter of a century ago and for which Mr. Stone is no more to blame than the man from Mars. These critics might with equal justice blame Mr. Stone for the present unfortunate situation in Lawrence, simply because it happened during his term of office.

It will be a sad day when a public official may not be criticized; otherwise democratic institutions are not safe. But criticism should be fair, reasonable, in some sort of harmonious relation to the facts in the case. Mayor Stone cannot expect immunity from criticism, and he does not expect it; but he cannot properly be blamed for a condition of things for which he is not and necessarily could not be responsible.

He can properly be criticized with regard to his appointments, for that is a matter coming within his control. But that probably explains the persistence with which his opponents harp on the increased tax rate; for Mayor Stone's appointments are so admirable, take them altogether and average them, that it would indeed take a courageous man to do it.

The first of such appointees that comes to one's mind is Commissioner of Public Works Frederick E. Tupper. Here is a man fitted for his work, whose high standing in the community is unquestioned by either Democrats or Republicans. In City Treasurer Henry F. Tilden we have a retired business man, always of this city, whose past experience in the economic world amply fits him for his duties. City Clerk Emery L. Crane is too well-known and favorably known to need commendation here. Everybody sings the praises of Collector Herbert S. Child, even though his was the disagreeable duty of separating citizens from their money. The present Collector Sandberg is untried, but a man of good repute.

If we may employ slang, we may say now that, as in higher official relations, somebody must be the "goat," and Mayor Stone's critics seem to have picked on City Solicitor John W. McAnarney, who manages to smile amiably through it all and keep his normal mental equilibrium. Mr. McAnarney's standing, not alone in Quincy where he is president of the local Bar Association, but throughout the Commonwealth, and even beyond its borders, is too secure for him to be particularly annoyed by these assaults. Enough for him to know that he brings to the solution of the city's legal problem the same close care, reasoning and attention which has made him such a commanding figure at the bar of Norfolk and Surfolk counties.

And so on down the line of appointees. Always has Mayor Stone chosen that man who, under all the circumstances, seemed to him to be best suited for the particular position to be filled. Naturally the great majority of these appointees are Republicans whose party integrity is undoubted, but the mayor has not refused to appoint worthy Democrats, like Overseer of the Poor Elcock and the late Dr. Hallowell, when the public good required it.

In short, Mayor Stone has conducted the business of the municipal corporation of Quincy, insofar as it was within his power, in just the same efficient manner as he would conduct any private business, as, in fact, he has so successfully conducted the business of the important Boston heating concern the Stone-Underhill Corporation. And fortunate it is that Quincy is able to secure the official services of a man of Mayor Stone's calibre. Nobody claims that the salary that goes with the mayoralty is a consideration with Mayor Stone.

Mayor Stone, no doubt feels that he is entitled to more leisure, for he would not now be a candidate were it not for the importunity of others, not alone of personal friends, but of many who felt that he is needed at the wheel again for another year. He has had the honor of the position, and another term will hardly add to it; but he naturally feels that if he is needed his own personal wishes should not interfere.

It would be highly regrettable, therefore, if Mayor Stone is not renominated by the Republican party in this city in November. This is a year of strange political possibilities, with wise men hardly daring even to predict, and we feel that were it not for that, this little Republican cabal would hardly dare to attempt thus to thwart the real will of the Republican electorate of this city.

Furniture That is Too Cheap Is Too Dear To Buy

When a man buys a cheap article, he feels good when he pays for it, and then feels disgusted while he's using it. BUT when he buys a quality article, he feels good every time he uses it, and he thinks about quality a long time after he forgets the price.

A South Quincy woman talking to the writer this week said, "When I went to housekeeping 20 years ago I bought my furniture from Mr. Kincaide who was then just starting in business. I don't remember just how much I paid, but everything is good as ever yet except my parlor suite which needs reupholstering."—And she came to the right place to have that rightly done.

The gift was much appreciated. It is a fine way to dispose of old magazines to send them to the sailors.

On Thursday afternoon and evening of this week the Parish Fair will be held at the Rectory under the auspices of the Woman's Guild. On the tables will be found many useful and attractive articles for sale at reasonable prices. The committees in charge of the tables have done faithful work for this end.

The list of tables include the Remembrance Table, the Children's Amusements Table, the Miscellaneous Table, the Baby Table, the Apron Table and Lemonade, Ice Cream and Candy Tables.

The members of the Junior Auxiliary have contributed some of the decorations. For several meetings they have been at work on them.

Supper:—The menu will include ham, scalloped oysters, chicken patties, mashed potatoes, home made pies, rolls and coffee. The price of a supper is 35 cents and a supper ticket admits to the Fair free of additional charge.

G. F. S. Activity:—The members of the Parish branch, G. F. S., are busily engaged on Friday evenings doing mailing and addressing work for Weeks & Doten Co. of Boston. After expenses are deducted there is still quite a respectable surplus in the amount which the Company allows for this work, and this surplus is devoted to increasing the Parish House fund. The members are getting an insight into the kind of work many girls are doing every day and this experience is valuable while the Society is enabled to be working for the Parish House.

Laymen's Club. The Club is making slow but steady progress in attendance and membership. At the last meeting, Harry Nicholson was elected Secretary, vice Mr. Byron Miller resigned. A study class on Social Service to meet once a month will begin Monday evening. The leader will be E. D. Smith of Cambridge. Mr. Smith has been Social Service Secretary in Harvard University and has studied social service work abroad besides having had much practical experience himself. This great movement is doing much to improve conditions of living and should be encouraged among us, particularly as it is the aim of the Club to promote the social interests of the City. Opportunity will be given for questions and full discussion. The class is open to all men. Not less than 30 should attend, as that attendance is guaranteed the leader.

Junior Auxiliary. All the girls in Sunday School will find most interesting affairs every Tuesday afternoon at the meetings of the Juniors. A judicious blending of fascinating work and pleasant entertainment is provided by Mrs. Turtle, who is the leader this year. All our girls are cordially welcome. The average attendance is 50, and numbers are inspiring.

Galahad Club. This club has been organized to include the former members of the Boys' Club. Following the plans of the Order of Sir Galahad, boys from 11 to 13 are called Pages—their motto is Obedience. Boys from 13 to 17 are called Esquires—their motto being Truth. Membership is limited to regular members of the Sunday School. Boys wishing to become members should see the President Stanley Ross.

Women's Guild. An all day work meeting will be held in the Rectory Thursday, beginning at half-past ten in the morning and ending at half-past four in the afternoon. Every member of the Guild and also every woman in our parish is invited to come. Please bring your lunch, as we shall have a picnic lunch together. An enthusiastic meeting is looked for.

Mrs. Griswold is the chairman of the Children's Table, as Mrs. Allan Walker felt obliged to resign. All articles for this table should therefore go to Mrs. Griswold, 3 Graham Terrace. The time for the Fair is rapidly approaching. Everyone ought to contribute. Articles ought to be made for the following tables: Fancy, Mrs. Brewer; Household, Mrs. Emery; Handkerchief, Mrs. Sidney Hardwick; Stocks and Belts Mrs. William L. Thomas; Candy Mrs. Burke; Children's, Mrs. Griswold; Tea Room, Mrs. Torrey; Mrs. Claflin has charge of the entertainment.

St. Margaret's Guild. The annual play given by this Guild will be announced very soon. Rehearsals are in progress. The business meeting Friday night is of special importance and the president, Miss Ford, requests the attendance of every member.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN CHURCH.

A large congregation listened to a stirring sermon on the fourth corner stone of our Republic—"The Sunday" from the text "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy"—Exodus 20, 8. He said: "The origin of one day's rest in seven is not known. That it did not originate with the Jews is evident from the fact that it antedates the days of Moses. Recent discoveries point to the Akkadians as the people from whom the Jews undoubtedly obtained their custom of keeping the seventh day as a rest day. In the Old Testament two reasons are given for keeping the Sabbath —1 because on that day the Lord rested (Exodus 20, 10) and 2 because "thou shalt remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, Therefore Jehovah commanded thee to keep the Sabbath day." The weekly Sabbath was thus made to celebrate the emancipation from the toils of slavery. But it is not the Jewish Sabbath that we are keeping. How then came this transfer of the seventh to the first day of the week? The Christian church was in the beginning made up of Jewish converts and it was natural that these converts should carry their customs with them into christianity. But as an increasing number of Romans and Greeks became christians they objected to being bound by Jewish traditions and gradually substituted the first day of the week, because on Sunday morning after the crucifixion Jesus was seen alive. Whatever the origin of the day, whether christian, Jewish or pagan, it matters little. Enough for us to know that it meets a deeply felt need of man. Man cannot spare it without injury to himself. The Sabbath law of rest and refreshment is written in the needs of the human race. Webster tells us that the republic will not survive the loss of the American Sunday one century. Some of our fellow citizens devote their Sundays to automobiling, golfing dinners, social pleasures and general dissipation. They do everything to make the fourth commandment of no effect. They are doing all they can to secularize Sunday, and they are doing this at a time when the day as a religious institution was never so much needed as it is today. Playing golf Sunday mornings during the hour of worship is a mighty poor way of using one's influence for good. Gladstone, busy as he was, always had time to attend divine service. He said that no event had ever occurred of sufficient importance to keep him away from the house of God. The best way to use Sunday is to make it a day of rest from the weekly work and routine; a day devoted to self-improvement; a day devoted to home and the family; a day for worship with others in the house of God. Therefore let us remember to keep Sunday holy."

There was a large attendance at the Kindergarten and the Sunday School. The Sunday School follows a regular curriculum covering twelve years and nothing is alowed to interfere with the class work.

A large number from our parish are planning to attend the Conference in Milton next Thursday.

The Social Service Committee meets at the home of Frank A. Page, 103 Grand View avenue, this evening at 7.30 o'clock.

The regular meeting of the Ladies' Aid Alliance will be held in the vestry Wednesday, at 10 A. M. Members may bring their own work for the coming fair, some work being provided by the committe. Box luncheon at noon. Tea and coffee will be served by the committee in charge. At 2.30 the business meeting will be opened and reports given by the delegates to the New England Alliance meeting at Concord, N. H. Mrs. Chandler W. Smith will make the members acquainted with the new Alliance Manual, which will prove of interest to all. A large attendance is desired that plans for the December Sale may be discussed.

The second annual meeting of the Junior Lend-a-Hand Club will be held at the home of Lorna Weston, 208 Safford street, Tuesday, at 4 P. M. Officers for the ensuing year will be elected and other business transacted.

A Food Sale for the benefit of the church's enterprises will be held Wednesday afternoon, at the home of home of Mrs. Ernest G. Carr, 311 Safford street.

The autumn session of the Norfolk Conference of Unitarian Churches will be held Thursday, at 10 A. M. with the First Parish in Milton. Every one connected with our parish is urged to attend this session.

Judging from the large attendance at the Good Citizenship Forum meetings held in the church auditorium Sundays at 12 o'clock we feel that the citizens of this community are wide awake to their civic duties and responsibilities. Some of the most public spirited citizens will lead the discussions. Watch the columns of this paper.

The regular Vespers will be resumed the second Sunday in December at 4:30 o'clock. Frederick H. Bishop has consented to take charge of the music at these services for this his fourth season.

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL.

A large congregation listened to a sermon upon "A Practical Bible" by Dr. Sneath. This sermon was preached by way of preparation for a Men's Bible Class, for which he made a strong plea.

The text "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path" was taken from Psalm 119, every verse of which has some reference to the word of God.

The Bible is conceded to be the most studied book of the present time, despite the fact that certain so-called higher criticism may have led to some indifference. Reasoning away as baseless any ground for such indifference Dr. Sneath proved forcefully and conclusively that the word of God is a practical guide book in the realm of christian character. This is preeminently an age of guide books in every department of living. There are many offered on religious subjects but among them all, the Bible stands supreme. 1600 years in preparation it has stood the test of the ages since.

It fits into every emergency of life. Dr. Sneath referred to the day as one set apart for special mention of the work for relief of tuberculosis and the work of Prison Reform, highly commending both.

Attention was called to the Installation of Dr. Sneath, to take place on November 12.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Association will occur in Park street church, Boston, Wednesday.

The semi-annual business meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society with election of officers and committees will be held Wednesday evening in the vestry. The business meeting will be followed by a social.

Several members of the Y. P. S. C. E. attended the State Convention at Brockton last week.

Wednesday evening, Nov. 6, Mrs. Ida Vose Woodbury will gixe a missionary lecture under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society. All who have ever heard Mrs. Woodbury speak will welcome the opportunity to hear her again.

BETHANY CHURCH.

The Brotherhood of Bethany church is already doing practical service. One branch of its work for boys and young men, the Knights of King Arthur, has been started under a competent committee of which Richard Wetherall is leader, with Chester Sabian and other young men. To assist in this work a ladies auxiliary has been formed from the Ladies Circle, Mrs. Wetherall chairman.

The banquet on Friday is the opening of the boys' work, speaker Ernest P. Conlon, county secretary of Y. M. C. A. Parents are invited to hear the speakers at 7.30.

The next meeting of the Brotherhood will be Nov. 13 and Rev. Allen Hudson will be the speaker. All men are welcome.

The music under the drection of Mrs. Moore, is very inspiring both morning and evening and the chorus of the Junior C. E. who sing the response under the direction of Mrs. Charles Sampson, is greatly enjoyed by all the people.

UNITARIAN MEETING.

The autuhn meeting of the Norfolk Conference of Unitarian and other Christian churches will be held with the First Parish church of Milton on Thursday. There will be morning and afternoon sessions in the church at the Center, and luncheon will be served at the Town hall.

The conference session will open at ten o'clock, and Edwin J. Lewis, Jr., the president, will preside. Following the reports of officers and committees and other business there will be addresses by Rev. Henry Wilder Foote, field secretary of the American Unitarian Association, on "The New Edition of Our Hymn Book;" Hon. C. L. Carr on "The Relation of the Church and Parish," and Rev. Thomas Van Ness of Brookline on "Congregationalism; What it Ought to Mean." The morning meeting will close with a devotional service led by Rev. Albert J. Coleman of Randolph.

After luncheon the conference will reconvene at 2 o'clock, and there will be a business session, the roll call of churches and the nomination and election of officers. The paper of the afternoon meeting will be on "Liberty and Reverence," and will be presented by Rev. Arthur W. Littlefield of Needham. The general discussion to follow will be led by Rev. Howard N. Brown of King's Chapel, Boston, and Mrs. Frank L. Young of Dorchester.

KING'S DAUGHTERS.

The annual autumn meeting, of the King's Daughters, representing all the churches of the city, was held in Bethany vestry Saturday afternoon and evening. In the afternoon the meeting opened with greetings extended to members and guests by Mrs. George L. Badger, Mrs. W. G. Shaw responding. After devotional exercises, a short business session was held resulting in Mrs. Harry A. Stevens of Wollaston of Whatsoever Circle, being elected president of the city union, and Miss Alice S. Hatch, secretary and treasurer.

Miss Jennie Purchase spoke upon associated charities, Miss McEwin, the district nurse, upon her work in the different homes she visited and Mrs. Dora Cushing of East Weymouth spoke of Pond Home. These exercises were interspersed with appropriate selections by the King's Daughters quartet.

A bountiful and appetizing supper was served at six o'clock, consisting of baked beans, pumpkin pies, coffee and rolls, and other dainty confections. The decorations were in commemoration of Hallowe'en. The committee in charge of the supper and decorations Mrs. Charles Hayden, Miss Addie J. Park, Mrs. C. W. Guy, ably assisted by others of the King's Daughters circle, are to be congratulated on the fine effect.

The evening services commenced at 7.30 with singing, by Mr. Hayden and Mrs. Moore with Miss Sheppard, organist at the piano. Devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. Harry A. Stevens after which Mrs. Badger introduced, Rev. Mr. Willmott, who took for his subject, "The King and His Kingdom."

Mr. Willmott said in part: "I esteem it a high honor to be invited to address the King's Daughters. I feel that I am a relative, being a king's son myself, and having married a king's daughter. In this organized work of the King's Daughters, which represents all churches and that is well, as we are following the example of Jesus, whose attitude was to spread abroad the kingdom of God. You as a body of philanthropic women have received the inspiration to consecrated efforts and worthy achievements, but back of and underlying this, is the great fundamental principle, the principle, the church. For instance, there are the idle rich, who tiring of society and frivolity, turn to the slums. I was engaged in settlement work in London, and came in contact with this class, having no religious faith, they make a religion of philanthropy, and they would say to me, "why, Mr. Willmott, I have not yet seen an interesting case," and I saw them grow weary and drop out. But men and women who are inspired by religious faith, understand the practical part of Christianity and do this work not for pleasure but to further the kingdom of God thereby keeping in mind the privilege and joy of bearing each others burden and so fulfilling the law of Christ.

"Let us not fall away from perfect faith in God's purpose, let us ask ourselves as did the old Scotsman, to a man who was trying to do charitable work without religious faith, 'Man, what is the impelling power of your work?' Without religion the philanthropic worker will degenerate to a clod, the fad will die. So unless you are in touch with the Christian church, drop it.

"My experience teaches me that back of poverty, are sin and evil, drunkenness and immorality. So this is the work of the King's Sons and Daughters, by the gentleness and sweetness of our lives brighten and strengthen the lives of those whom we meet, let the gospel of Jesus prevail in our hearts, and use our influence to reform the drunkard and make of him a good and useful citizen, make of the degenerate woman a kind and loving mother.

"When the good Samaritan found the man who had fallen among thieves and bound up his wounds, it would have been more practical to have found the robbers, then we should have no wounds to heal.

"It is the will of our King that we bring the kingdom here. It is the will of our King that proverty and oppression cease, and in His own good time it will be brought about.

"Keep in personal touch with God's poor, a smile, a kind word, are often better than money. Do everything from a religious motive. All that I am is the King's and the King will bless His Daughter's work, His work of effective beneficence in doing the will of the king on earth as it is done in Heaven. Then we shall continually grow into the likeness of the king whose mission it is to fill the world with joyousness and peace."

MRS. ERIKSON A SUICIDE

Drowns Herself After Having Killed Her Little Daughter

North Easton, Mass., Oct. 28.—A double tragedy was revealed here Sunday when the body of Mrs. Olga Erikson, who had been missing from Brockton since Friday, was taken from the water of Langwater pond, where she committed suicide after killing her 5-year-old daughter, Gladys.

The body of Mrs. Erikson was recovered within 150 yards from where the body of her daughter was found Saturday.

Assistant Medical Examiner McGraw believes that the woman killed her daughter by a blow with a stone while temporarily insane, and after throwing the body into the pond, plunged in herself.

the public, a matter concerning the police department was another.

Among the good things accomplished was the compulsory reduction of the city's indebtedness of $15,000 a year. Proper sewer assessments was another. Several matters of legislation had been put through that would make for better conditions.

Horace W. Richmond said that proper valuations should be apportioned and assessors who know valuations secured.

Mr. Murray contended that people had no right to complain of conditions until they had complied with the law. It is the exceptional cases that are heard of. There are a lot keeping quiet in regard to their property.

Chandler W. Smith paid a tribute to Irving L. Shaw for bringing matters to public attention. It should be one of two things. We should either try to change conditions or see if Boston would take us.

Arthur W. Rohn spoke for concerted action as the only way to accomplish anything. We could talk but all the while the "ring" would be at work and "we would go like so many sheep to vote. We should start some action through the men's clubs and the congress of men's clubs on city affairs."

Henry Faxon favored action by the men's clubs. "We should also make service in the city council more attractive to our best citizens," he declared. "With the present conditions the number of the council, the ward rivalry, the trading of votes, nothing can be accomplished. At the best, assuming all the members are high-minded, time is wasted. The reduction in the number of the council is the first step in the regeneration of this city."

Edward J. Cummings urged that more representative citizens attend the council meetings.

Nathan G. Nickerson spoke strongly in favor of the old time caucus so that one could meet the candidates and talk them over.

R. B. Locke mentioned the Wollaston Congregational club and the part it was playing in public questions.

Frank A. Page asked what steps could be taken to change conditions.

Irving L. Shaw stated that a bill should be introduced in the legislature before the January session if we wanted it to operate before the second year.

Walter F. Nichols advised making haste slowly in regard to charter revision. Regarding the council he was of the opinion that the quality and not the size was the trouble.

The meeting adjourned to next Sunday.

Thousands of Dollars' Worth Are Spirited From Boston Store

Boston, Oct. 28.—Smith, Patterson & Co., jewelry dealers, lost thousands of dollars worth of diamonds and jewelry, according to a circular sent out by Superintendent Pierce of the Boston police department. Police of Lynn also have been asked to hunt for $4000 worth of the gems, said to be hidden in pawnshops of that city.

The information given to the police departments of other cities did not say how the diamonds and jewelry had been spirited away from the Smith, Patterson store.

Diaz Is Sentenced to Death by Mexican Court Martial

MANY OTHERS ARE PUNISHED

Three Officers Condemned to Be Shot, Five Get Terms of Imprisonment While Others Are Allowed to Go Free—Conflict Between Civil and Military Courts

Vera Cruz, Oct. 28.—General Felix Diaz, leader of the recent revolt here, and Major Zerate, Colonel Antonio Migoni and Lieutenant Lima, officers under Diaz in his attempt to overthrow the government, were condemned to death by court martial.

Lieutenant Camacho, Captain Mayen of the rural guard, and Captain Hermilio Martinez, were sentenced to ten years' imprisonment, and Gabriel Ramos, customs collector, and Hernan Arcstegui, censor of telegrams, were sentenced to two years' imprisonment.

Nine other officers and civilians were allowed to go free.

The court martial, which was presided over by General Davila, sat in secret session from 2 o'clock Saturday morning until 3:15 o'clock Sunday morning.

The sentences caused a sensation. A great crowd, including relatives and many friends of the accused men, gathered outside the building where the court sat and waited for hours for the findings, notwithstanding a heavy rain storm.

General Davila refused to acknowledge the orders of the district judge to suspend the proceedings in the case of General Diaz and Major Zarate.

General Beltran, military commander of the zone, however, accepted a writ of habeas corpus, and suspended the executions, leaving the prisoners temporarily at the disposition of the district court.

It is thought probable that Migoni and Lima will be shot without much more ado. The proceedings of the military court have been criticised generally as being very deficient. Public opinion has been strongly against a military trial for Diaz.

Wilson Urges Democrats to Capture Majority In the Senate

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 28.—Governor Wilson would like to see a Democratic majority in the United States senate as well as in the house of representatives.

To further that end he issued a statement last night calling upon the voters in the several states where United States senators are to be chosen to vote for the Democratic legislative tickets.

The nominee said the states he had in mind were New Jersey, Colorado, Illinois, Idaho, Iowa, Montana, Delaware, West Virginia, Wyoming and Nevada.

Chicago, Oct. 28.—More than a thousand babies disappear in Chicago each year was one of the disclosures made in the reports read at the annual meeting of the Juvenile Protective association.

Mrs. Gertrude H. Britton, superintendent of the league, declared that hundreds of babies are murdered every year. "A shawl to carry the baby away in is all that any one needs to get a baby from some hospitals," she said, in urging more stringent registration of births as a measure of protection to babies.

Allies Rout Turks In Fierce Fighting—Adrianople In Flames and Cut Off From Supplies—Turks In West In Still More Desperate Plight by Evacuation of Uskup

London, Oct. 28.—In flames, cut off from supplies and sheltering thousands of wounded, the city of Adrianople is reported to be in desperate plight and her troubles are about to be increased by the running out of the twenty-four hour ultimatum of the Balkan states allies, whose armies ring around the apparently doomed city.

The Bulgarians, confident and bold from their repeated successes, yesterday trained their field guns in a terrific bombardment of the ancient fortress. Their confidence was increased by the knowledge that they were in complete possession of Turkish documents outlining the proposed Ottoman campaign. These fell into their hands at the capture of Kirk-Kilisse.

The last link was forged in the chain about Adrianople by the dispatch of a column against the city from the west, and now from every point of the compass the Balkan soldiers watch the conflagrations in many parts of the city. A Turkish aeroplane is said to be throwing bombs among the Bulgarian troops with deadly effect. The Turks, however, have lost 10,000 or more, killed or wounded, in meeting the Bulgarian attacks.

The fire of the Turkish artillery is said to be ineffectual, while the city is falling in ruins before the well directed guns of the Bulgarians. But the circle of twenty-five Turkish forts still holds, even if the city itself is reduced to a mass of debris. Military experts say, however, that the city cannot stand an investment of more than a month.

While the Bulgarians continue to astonish Europe by their successes in the Adrianople section of Thrace, the Turks in the west are in still more desperate plight.

Having lost the important battle of Kumanova and then having been forced to evacuate the keystone city of Uskup, they have withdrawn to the heights south of that place to await the further advance of the allies. Their condition is said to be serious and it is not thought they will put up much of a defense when the allies decide to penetrate further into Turkish territory.

The hopelessness of Turkish success in this quarter is shown by the fact that the fall of Uskup is officially admitted in Constantinople, where every ruse is usually used to keep reverses from the inhabitants and buoy up their spirits to the last moment.

The city of Scutari is hemmed in more closely than ever by the line of steel of Montenegrin bayonets and field guns, while in Macedonia the Greeks have thrown back the stubborn Turkish defenders repeatedly and are now apparently in complete control of the situation there.

But the larger aspects of the Balkan success are now overshadowing the interesting campaigns being waged in the eyes of Europe. It is said that the four invaders have already entered into a compact which will knit them as closely as the kingdoms of Germany are bound and will form a new empire, a new European power; if not of the first magnitude, then formidable enough to make it a serious matter for any other power to attack her. Who will take the territory the Balkan arms are conquering from the victors?

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

STEWED BEEFSTEAK.

WHEN a steak is not as tender as it should be one way of making it eatable is to stew it. Stewed steak is both tender and palatable.

Various ways of preparing it are given here.

Plain Stewed Beefsteak.—Take about a pound of steak cut into pieces and put it into a frying pan in which a little butter has been heated and brown well on both sides. Season with salt and pepper and add a little stock or water. Simmer this for a couple of hours, adding water occasionally as it is needed. Ten minutes before it is to be used thicken with flour.

Savory Beef.

Beefsteak Smothered With Onions.—Cut six onions up fine. Put them in a saucepan with two cupfuls of hot water, about two ounces of good butter and a dash of salt and pepper. Dredge with flour. Let it stew until the onions are soft. Then have the steak broiled and put into the saucepan with the onions. Simmer about ten minutes and send to the table hot.

Plain Stewed Steak.—Put the steak into a stewpan, with a lump of butter, over a slow fire and turn it until the butter has become a fine white gravy. Then pour it into a bowl and put more butter to the steak. When the steak is nicely done take it out, return all the gravy to the stewpan and fry the steak. Then add it to the gravy in the stewpan, with a tablespoonful of ketchup and a finely sliced onion. Stew it for ten minutes and serve. Or fry the steak merely at first, then put it into half a pint of water with an onion sliced, a spoonful of walnut ketchup, pepper and salt. Thicken with flour and butter and serve it very hot.

Steak With Shellfish.

Stewed Beefsteak and Oysters.—Take two pounds of steak, a pint of oysters, a tablespoonful each of lemon juice and flour, three tablespoonfuls of butter, one cupful of water and salt and pepper to taste. Wash the oysters in the water. Strain into a saucepan and put this liquor on to boil. Then skim and set on the back of the stove. Put on the frying pan, melt the butter in it and put in the steak. Cook the meat for ten minutes, sprinkling it with a teaspoonful of salt. Take out the steak and drop the flour into the butter, stirring it until it is dark brown. Then add the oyster liquor and boil it for about a minute. Season with a dash of salt and pepper. Put the steak back, cover the frying pan and let it simmer for a half hour. Then drop in the oysters and lemon juice. Simmer for a minute or more. Serve on a hot dish with small squares of toast.

FISH ON TOAST.

FOR delicate stomachs the dishes mentioned here will be just what is needed. They will be useful for Friday's luncheon or supper in families where meat is dispensed with on that day. Moreover, they are so delicious that they will be appreciated by any lover of good fish daintily served.

A Tasty Toast.

Oyster Toast.—Take a cupful of oyster liquor. Scald it and strain it, then set aside to cool, add half a cupful of cream or milk with a tablespoonful of butter and salt and pepper to taste. Heat to the scalding point and pour over slices of toasted bread. Place in the oven five minutes and then cover with oysters broiled a crisp brown on a hot griddle well greased with bacon fat. Serve hot.

Caviar Toast.—Put a tablespoonful of butter and a minced onion into a saucepan on the fire. Stir until the whole is well heated, then turn in a little pot of Russian caviar. When this is hot add half a cupful of strained tomato sauce with a few drops of strained lemon juice. When very hot serve on slices of buttered toast.

Inexpensive Dishes.

Mock Crab Toast.—Take one pound of grated cheese, a small spoonful of anchovy sauce, of made mustard and of vinegar, a pinch of pepper, a little salt, the yolks of two eggs, a tablespoonful of butter. Mix thoroughly and serve cold on squares of brown bread or else pour the mixture on buttered toast and bake for eight minutes till it is all nicely colored.

Fish Toast.—Use for this any white fish that you prefer. Remove the skin and bones and pound it to a paste in a mortar. When it is quite smooth add a few drops of anchovy sauce, a little curry powder, a small quantity of lemon juice and a dust of celery salt. If the fish is inclined to be stingy the mixtures should be rubbed through a wire sieve. Heat it in a saucepan with a little lump of butter and when it is quite hot spread it on rounds of toast. Serve hot.

Brought Relief to "Shut-In"

PROMISES OF ASSASSINATION

Received by Participants In the Trial of Becker

GOFF AND WHITMAN GUARDED

McIntyre and Witnesses Also Warned to Be Prepared For Death—District Attorney Rejects Offer of Gunmen to Confess and Save Themselves From Electric Chair

New York, Oct. 28.—Danger of death by dynamite, bullets or poison dogs the footsteps of every man connected with the Rosenthal case since the conviction of Charles Becker for murder. Threats of assassination have been received not only by District Attorney Whitman and John F. McIntyre, the leaders of the prosecution and defense, but by Justice Goff of the supreme court, and even the most insignificant witnesses. Skull-decorated letters, intimidating telegrams, loudly voiced threats over the telephone and even villainous looks on the streets are of daily occurence.

The second important development is the movement by all four of the gunmen, "Dago Frank," "Lefty Louie," "Gyp the Blood" and "Whitey Lewis," to reach the district attorney with offers to turn state's evidence if they are promised no more than ten years imprisonment on a manslaughter charge. Each is striving to convince Whitman that it is to his interest to have their complete stories.

They will tell, they say, who hired them, and whom they were given to understand was behind the assissination. If they name Becker, it is certain that Becker will never evade the electric chair. Their testimony would be conclusive on a second trial. But Whitman will not accept a confession from any one except Shapiro, the driver of the murder car, who did not use a pistol and was intimidated into aiding the escape.

Just before the jury returned its verdict of death, Justice Goff received the most pointed threats over his private telephone, the number of which is revealed to but few.

The justice made light of the incident and of several letters, asserting his life would not last long if Becker was convicted. He even would have walked unguarded to and from the courtroom if his attendants had not insisted upon precautions. Now, whenever he leaves his home, an armed guard, or his assistant secretary, Thomas Kearney, who can also be depended upon to give a good account of himself in a fight, is by his side.

Mr. Whitman has received word that he will never live to prosecute another case and Detective Thomas is always near him when the chief prosecutor is not in his private office or in his home. Mr. McIntyre always goes armed.

The four informers have received messages, even in the west side prison, that they might as well make their wills. Shapiro, the murder chauffeur, and his counsel, Aaron J. Levy, have both been put under ban of death also, since it became known that Shapiro would become a witness for the state. Even friends of the jurors have been in receipt of anonymous letters and telephone calls of an alarming nature. A crime more atrocious than the murder of Rosenthal is feared.

"The Rosenthal case is bigger than Becker," said an informant. "Whitman is after the men higher up, who divided the gambling graft with Becker. Suppose Becker made up his mind to tell who was in with him on the graft?"

The story which Becker says he wanted to tell on the stand at his trial was related in detail Sunday by Becker from his cell in the Tombs.

"Had he been allowed to tell this story, he claims, the verdict of the jury would have been different. Becker talked for two hours.

He denied Jack Rose, the state's chief witness, was his graft collector, declaring Rose was his stool pigeon who furnished evidence on which he made scores of raids. He gave an account of his finances in an effort, he said, to show that he had not hoarded gambler's tribute.

Becker said Rose never asked him for money for his services. Eventually he learned why, when Rose told him that he and Rosenthal were going into gambling partnership, Rose reminding the lieutenant of the gratuitous services he had given and asking immunity from raids.

"I said I would not molest the place any more than I would any other gambling house," said Becker. "I said I would not make special effort to get evidence against Rosenthal unless specially directed."

A note of agreement will be signed today by William Shapiro and Whitman which will be virtually a death warrant for the four gunmen.

In this document Shapiro will agree in return for his own freedom, to identify absolutely the men who shot down Rosenthal.

WHITE SLAVE SLAYERS

Four Parties Seek Two Missing Men In Murder Band

Bridgeport, Conn., Oct. 28.—If the search for "Big Andrew" Copone and "Hartford Jimmie" Lewis, two of the five men who, it is alleged, took Jennie Cavalieri to a lonely spot in the suburbs of this city and shot her to death, proves successful, the police assert they will have in custody a quintet of men who form the basis of a great white slave system, operating between New York and Chicago.

The opinion of the police is expressed in a circular which they have sent broadcast giving descriptions of the missing men.

Despite the confession of Joseph Buonomo, one of the three men under arrest charged with the crime, who says he alone did the shooting, four separate searching parties are still at work in the hope that Capone and Lewis have not yet been able to get beyond the reach of the local police.

The men were in the smoking room last night, when they stole into the sun parlor adjoining, pried off the grating of the window and in some way fastened their improvised rope to the coping on top of the 17-foot stone wall of the yard and escaped.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

CHELSEA WON AT LAST MOMENT

Quincy A. A. Failed to Keep Up the Regular Pace

IN FOOTBALL GAME

With five seconds to go in the third period, White of Chelsea kicked a goal from the 40 yard line and beat Quincy A. A. 3 to 0 at Merrymount Park Saturday afternoon.

Except for a flash of fighting spirit in the latter part of the second period, Quincy was played off its feet. McDonald's punts were blocked and the only sign of live strength was shown by Harkins who was in every play.

Captain Woods was not able to play and watched the game from the sidelines. Hunter, whose end playing is peerless was used in the backfield and did good work. His playing out of his usual position demonstrated what a loss he is when not on the end.

Boyle bounded around like a rubber ball, and aside from ground gaining he was there with the tackles. On the first rush Haracker started to tackle him and Boyle run low and the visitor went down and out.

Flemming of Chelsea was removed for talking back to the referee in the second period but resumed his position in the third. Hebert relieved Morton in the third period and on the first rush received a wrenched shoulder and retired.

The reason for Quincy's poor showing was the pursuit of happiness Friday night which extended into the hours of the morn and although McDonald tried to infuse a winning feeling the boys as a whole did not respond.

WATCH THIEF IS LOCATED

Man Who Operated Confidence Game in Pettengill's Store

IN TOILS AT LAWRENCE

Inspector Goodhue is a constant reader of the daily papers and to this fact he has succeeded in locating the sneak thief who obtained three gold watches from a clerk at C. F. Pettengill's store.

A few weeks ago a young man entered Mr. Pettengill's store to look at some watches claiming that he lived in Bigelow park and desired to present one of the watches to a relative. On the pretence of showing the party the watches that they might make a selection he succeeded in getting out of the store with three watches valued at $150.

Wednesday night in looking over a Boston paper Inspector Goodhue saw an item about the arrest of a mysterious thief in Lowell. This party visited an automobile repair shop, where he represented himself as a son of a wealthy mill owner and succeeded in getting three tires. He made a slip however with the result that he was arrested and in court the following day was held in $1200 bonds until today for a hearing. The young man gave his name as George W. Alexander aged 21 years but refuses to give any further information about himself.

Inspector Goodhue got in touch with the Lowell police by telephone and from the description they gave of the fellow he made up his mind that he was the same party who pulled off the trick in Quincy. The Lowell police said that the young man's friends were raising money to put up cash bail and they believed that the fellow intended to skip if released.

Sunday Inspector Goodhue accompanied by H. D. Cole the clerk at Pettengill's store, paid a visit to the Lowell jail. Fifteen prisoners were lined up in a row. All had on prison uniform and there was nothing to distinguish one from another. Without hesitancy Mr. Cole immediately picked out Alexander as the fellow who got the watches.

While they were at the jail a Lawrence officer appeared with three warrants against the young man and some of his friends appeared with cash to bail him out. On learning that there were at least half a dozen more warrants against the fellow they decided not to bail him out knowing that he would have been immediately arrested on one of the other warrants.

This morning Inspector Goodhue swore out two warrants against Alexander. One charged him with the larceny of three watches valued at $150 from C. F. Pettengill and the second charged him with attempt at larceny from T. L. Williams.

It appears that on the evening he obtained the watches from Mr. Pettengill's store he visited the store of T. L. Williams. Here he said that he was a draughtsman employed at the Fore River and that some of the other draughtsmen were to give a gold watch to one of their fellow workers and he wanted to take some watches to show them. Mr. Williams did not bite however and the fellow did not get the watches. This was about ten minutes before he visited the store of Mr. Pettengill.

Alexander will be brought to Quincy some day this week and arraigned in this court.

LAWRENCE PARADE CHECKED BY POLICE

Plans of I. W. W. For Funeral Demonstration Are Blocked

Lawrence, Mass., Oct. 28.—The police put a stop to the attempt of I. W. W. leaders, in defiance of the authorities, to have a funeral parade for John Smalsky, who died as the result of injury sustained by an assault.

Instead of escorting the hearse to the church and then to the cemetery, headed by a band, the I. W. W. members and their friends were crowded onto the sidewalks and deprived of their music.

About 1000 followed in this manner, while three squads of a dozen policemen each marched among them to see that instructions were not violated. The affair passed off without untoward incident, although the situation looked squally when fifty patrolmen broke up the parade that was forming in front of 96 Lawrence street, where Smalsky lived.

Smalsky was assaulted following a barroom row between two groups of patrons, who were ejected. Smalsky was knocked down, sustaining a fracture of the skull.

Father Haitinger's record for twelve months, 156 marriages, exceeds the former mark of 63 performed by the priests of the St. Nicholas Roman Catholic church.

$7,500,000 Loan For Car Line

Hankow, China, Oct. 28.—The contract for a loan of $7,500,000 has been completed by the Robert Dollar company of Shanghai for the construction of the new Hankow electric car lines.

Why the Deaf Are Grateful.

A pleasant contrast to the sad fate of Beethoven is furnished by Dr. Thirlwall, the radical bishop of St. David's, who wrote the history of Greece that held the field before the arrival of Grote. In his old age he became stone deaf, but, so far from fretting, declared that the infirmity was really a blessing, because it relieved him from the futile conversation of bores. One day a friend, forgetting the bishop's deafness, greeted him with the usual remark about the weather. "Eh?" queried the bishop. "It is a fine day!" bellowed the friend repeatedly into the prelate's ear. When Thirlwall finally grasped the meaning of the remark he quietly philosophized: "Dear me! How little a man loses by being deaf!"—London Chronicle.

A Dish of Potted Roses.

There was a time when Englishmen could celebrate St. George's day by feasting on roses as well as wearing them. Old cookery books abound in recipes into which rose leaves enter.

One writer tells how to make potted roses. "I first pound some of the most fragrant roses in a mortar. Then I take the brains of birds and pigs well boiled and stripped of every particle of meat. I then add the yolks of some eggs, some oil, a little cordial, some pepper and some wine. After having beaten and mixed it well together I place it over a slow fire. When this dish is brought to table the most delicious fragrance issues forth, covering the guests with delight." Every good housewife in the seventeenth century made rosewater, which was used for flavoring food.

Involved.

"Pop, is patience a virtue?"

"Yes, my son."

"And virtue is its own reward?"

"So we are told."

"And do all things come to those who know how to wait?"

"See here, my son, never attempt to monkey with the proverbial buzzsaw" Puck.

—A woman in New York captured a six-foot burglar and marched him five blocks to a police station at the point of a harmless toy pistol. Another in a New Hampshire town, on being denied damages to her property by the officials' action, placed attachments on the city hall, and tied up the entire municipal machinery for two hours, when the town surrendered. Still another in Chicago caused her husband to desert her by following him to his business office to caress him. The limelight has certainly acquired the feminine habit.—Franklin Sentinel.

HOSPITAL FUND $27,880.25 AFTER LIVELY CAMPAIGN

Firm Belief That $35,000 Mark Will Be Reached Before April

Many Appeals Sent Out On Which Returns Are Expected

The Hospital campaigners gathered at the Y. M. C. A., Monday evening for the last time as an organization to make reports on the amounts secured.

It was planned to raise $35,000. The solicitors fell short of this amount by $7119.75. In other words the actual amount collected and accounted for is $27,880.25.

There are many pledges which have not been redeemed. Many of the collectors and members of the Hospital trustees have sent out letters from which no returns have been received up to the present time but there is every reason to believe that considerable money will be realized from those appeals.

The collectors were busy all day Sunday and made good collections. Capt. Marsh of Team Two stated that he and his team mates had interviewed upwards of 60 people in the Cranch district and only five people had refused to respond to the request. He believed that there were many sections of the city, which if subjected to such a thorough covering would make appreciable returns.

At the usual hour the members of the teams gathered and compared notes and then repaired to the banquet hall, where a bountiful supper was provided by Fred B. Rice of the Board of Trustees of the hospital.

It was quite evident from the demeanor of all present that the $35,000 mark had not been reached. Still no one was cast down by the results. Every one felt satisfied that before the first of April the trustees would be able to report that the entire amount had been raised.

After supper, Chairman George E. Pfaffmann called for reports from the team captains, with the following results:

Previously acknowledged		$23,478.05
No. 1,	William T. Shea	1,191.00
No. 2,	Edward B. Marsh	265.00
No. 3,	Joseph A. Dasha	1,268.00
No. 4,	Charles W. Bailey	250.00
No. 5,	Richard R. Freeman	374.25
No. 6,	Joseph A. Sedgwick	716.75
No. 7,	W. F. Cummings	102.00
No. 8,	Alexander Clark	97.80
No. 9,	George B. Curran	61.00
No. 10,	Herbert S. Barker	74.40
Total		$4402.20
Grand total		$27,880.25

Capt. Sedgwick of team six reported that he and his committee had interviewed 115 people since Saturday night.

A vote of thanks was extended to Fred B. Rice for providing the supper on this occasion.

A rising vote of thanks was also extended to the ladies and others who had so valiantly assisted in the campaign.

Mr. Chase suggested a concerted movement, a canvas of the city by streets, so that no one should be omitted. He felt certain that probably a good many people had been overlooked. As an illustration of this, a lady came to his house Sunday night and left $10. No one had seen her with regard to a subscription. He believed that if some one was employed and paid for their services they could collect anywhere from $500 to $1000.

Joseph A. Sedgwick, said he sent out 300 letters, at an expense of $15 and the returns on them were $29, so that as a producing quality letter writing was not very good. Fred B. Rice said that Mr. Chase's idea appealed to him. The campaign had been conducted in a manner, which should have resulted in the raising of the entire amount. It had been given abundant publicity. He understood there were a great many pledges which had not been accounted for. While the campaign committee had performed its work faithfully and well, he felt that the returns to date really assured the raising of the entire amount before April 1. The executive committee would keep in touch with all people who had been interviewed. The campaign could be called a success. It would be up to all the follow up the pledges so every possible cent could be turned into the hospital.

He wished to express his appreciation of the work performed by the committees and at the next meeting of the Trustees of the hospital, proper recognition of the splendid service would be shown. All the team captains had a good word to say for their helpers. Chairman Pfaffmann in closing the campaign thanked the collectors, the ladies, the team captains, the press, the Y. M. C. A. Secretary A. F. Bromley and in fact every one who had aided in the work of the campaign. He felt certain that before the books were closed that the entire amount would be raised.

All present shared this optimistic view of the chairman.

The supper Monday night was in charge of Mrs. George S. Keyes, assisted by Mrs. J. F. Welch, Mrs. C. A. Price, Mrs. L. H. Sturtevant, Mrs. E. Granville Pratt, Mrs. A. H. Bushnell, Mrs. George S. Keyes, Jr., Mrs. A. G. Olney and Mrs. George E. Pfaffmann.

Thence the party went to the store of Thomas Gurney in Atlantic and from there to Poland's hall at Norfolk Downs where they attended the anniversary of Norfolk lodge A. O. U. W. where all the speakers were invited to say a word on insurance.

Miss Margaret Foley and several of the suffragettes were hot on the trail of Roger Wolcott during the evening but in every case they missed connections, either being just ahead of him or arriving after he had departed so that the two did not meet.

The Laymen's Club of Christ Episcopal church held their first lecture in the parish house last evening with an attendance of 35 members and guests. At the close of the lecture Mr. Root was given a rising vote of thanks, mingled with loud applause. The remainder of the evening was social in nature, Harry Nicholson officiating at the piano.

LEGISLATIVE CANDIDATES

Express Their Views On So-Called Mobile Bill

BEFORE WORKMEN

At a meeting of Norfolk Lodge, 178, A. O. U. W. held in Poland hall Monday evening nearly al the candidates for the state legislature were present and spoke regarding their position on the so-called Mobile bill which affects fraternal organizations.

Representative William J. Leslie was the first speaker and told of his sympathy for the repeal of the bill. Representative John H. Sherburne of Brookline spoke briefly.

John J. McDevitt, democratic nominee for senator was in favor of repeal after seeing the insurance commissioner. John Evans, progressive candidate for representative spoke in the same strain. Charles McGilvray democratic nominee for representative spoke at length telling from personal experience of the benefits derived from fraternal orders. In his opinion the bill under consideration was unconstitutional and should be repealed or amended.

Michael T. Sullivan, democratic nominee spoke for the peaceful existence of both straight life and fraternal insurance and expressed himself for the repeal of the bill.

At this point the meeting was interrupted by the entrance of Miss Margaret T. Foley and a band of women suffragists on the trail of Roger Wolcott, republican candidate for senator who was at that moment addressing a rally on Elm avenue, Wollaston.

Not finding their quarry the group departed, refusing to address the meeting. Following a few fitting remarks by Ex-Councilman Parlee those present adjourned to the banquet hall where light refreshments and cigars were passed.

Roger Wolcott related how the Mobile bill was passed and stated his position. He was followed by Ex-Representative Louis F. R. Langelier who spoke on general lines.

Brother Flanagan spoke briefly and was followed by Jeremiah Donovan who urged support of the socialist candidate who he declared would work for the repeal of the bill.

Following a piano recital by Brother Cahill the meeting adjourned.

A large number of local Republicans attended the rally held at the residence of Edward O. Woodward of Elm avenue, Wollaston.

In addition to Representative Sherburne of Brookline, Dr. Everett M. Bowker, Senator Roger Wolcott, Congressman Harris and Representative William J. Leslie several local speakers were heard including Councilman Charles W. Bailey, Arthur W. Rohn and George A. Vibert, Edward O. Woodward presided.

MAYORALTY CANDIDATES

Not Numerous. Two in the Republican Field, Up to Date

The time for filing nomination papers for the municipal caucuses expires Thursday evening at 7.30 at which time the papers will be publicly opened by the Republican and Democratic committees. The Republican candidates are well known the fight in the caucus at the present time being between Mayor Stone and Councilman George W. Abele.. It was supposed that John L. Miller would take out papers but none had been issued in his favor up to Monday night. There is a possibility however that he may become the Bull Moose candidate for Mayor. As for the Democrats up to Monday night no papers had been taken out for Mayor and but very few for either Ward Councilman or Councilmen at Large.

SOCIALISTS OPEN AIR RALLY

Candidate McCarty Condemned Republicans, Democrats and Progressives

The Socialist party candidates for state offices held a meeting in Quincy Square last night to a gathering of about 500 people. The speakers were John McCarty candidate for Congress in the new 14th district, Caleb F. Howard candidate for Representative in the fifth Norfolk district and Abraham Wright candidate for Representative in the Sixth district. Candidate John McCarty said in part: "The Republican party stands at all times for the trusts and the big capitalists. The Democratic party oscillates between representing the little capitalists and the big. When Bryan ran originally as its candidate, it stood for the little capitalists as against the trusts, but later the magnates captured its majority of delegates by force of money and it stood for the big

SHOWER OF USEFUL GIFTS

On Rev. and Mrs. Marshall On Their Departure

AT CHURCH RECEPTION

Nearly all of the members of the Washington street Congregational church attended the farewell reception and presentation to Rev. and Mrs. C. P. Marshall in the vestry Monday evening.

T. B. Pollard, in behalf of the members presented a handsome clock to Mrs. Marshall, an oak desk and chair to the retiring pastor and a "barrel" of money to both.

The speakers were Rev. A. M. Thompson of the United Presbyterian church who represented the Ministers Association, Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott of the Bethany Congregational church and a fellow student with Rev. Mr. Marshall, President Mrs. P. H. Holman of the Ladies Aid Society, Deacon Charles W. Sherburne and Mayor Eugene R. Stone. President John Hendry of the Men's club presided.

All the speakers spoke in a light pleasant vein, relating their experience in church work and concluded by paying a tribute to the sincerity of purpose and wealth of ideals of Rev. Mr. Marshall.

In making the presentation, Mr. Pollard told of the benefit Mr. Marshall's work has been to the Point district. He reviewed the interest which was stimulated directly after Mr. Marshall assumed the pastorate and in trying to express the belief of the church in Mr. Marshall's efforts he broke down. Regaining his self control he formally made the presentation.

Rev. Mr. Marshall stepped to the platform amid a din of handclapping. He said that he was sorry not to be able to postpone the day of departure; that he had put off bidding his friends goodbye on Sunday and that he felt as though he would again like to defer it; that he had tried his best not to preach a farewell sermon since always in his heart would remain the gentle influences wielded by his associations and that he and Mrs. Marshall felt the value of the friendship of the members more than he could express.

Continuing, he said that if he had been of any assistance to the Point, it had also been of some assistance to him. It had helped him in his preaching, been of aid to his experience in community life and that when one thinks that our church is the only church in the district one feels in watching the growing attendance that we have done and are doing our share in cultivating the religious enthusiasm of the residents.

He said, mere words could not express his or Mrs. Marshalls thanks for the generous remembrance and closed by wishing all a happy, devout continuation of the influence of the Washington street Congregational church.

Mayor Stone spoke on the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall and after a review of his 14 years membership in the church he concluded by saying that by leaving Quincy "the friend" of the business man would be missed because his influence was not alone felt in Quincy Point but throughout the city.

At the close of the speaking the personal farewells were accorded Rev. and Mrs. Marshall and all joined in adding their mite of encouragement toward a successful pastorate at Plymouth.

Rev. C. P. Marshall has but recently resigned from the church to accept a call to the Church of the Pilgrimage. He will take up his new duties Sunday.

A rally of the Progressive party will be held in Brazee hall Tuesday evening. Among the speakers will be Roger D. Sherman, president of the National Association of Travelling men, Wendel Phillip Thore and Leonard Martin. The local candidates include Lester P. Winchenbaugh for senator and Joseph P. NOTICE.

The Ledger is receiving a great many communications these days, the more the better, and is glad to give publicity to the thoughts therein expressed, especially when they are for the good of the city as a whole, believing too much publicity cannot be given under the circumstances. We will accept anything for publication that is honest criticism without malice or personal grudge, provided the communication is sent in with the writer's name and address. It would seem as though it was not necessary for us to again reiterate that we do not accept or use anonymous communications but as we receive unsigned letters most every day whose fate is the waste basket the statement seems necessary. Why not follow the rule of this and other newspapers?

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Only one more week and then we will know who is to be the next president.

Many people contend they know now, but some few thousands of those dead sure ones will have another guess, after Nov. 5.

It looks like a bad Thanksgiving for Turkey.

Joe O'Connell has demanded Mayor Fitzgerald to withdraw from the senatorial fight. Joe evidently does not understand Mr. Fitz.

Lawson is getting some fun out of his money, every once in a while, when he enters the political arena. He has the price and can usually go the limit.

Many Greeks are going home to fight. Others are going to other parts of the country, to get a better job.

A Dorchester clergyman condemns the state for the condition of the state prison. Some people would have jails fitted up like a first class hotel and taxis furnished the inmates for joy riding nights.

It will be some little time before Massachusetts shifts the method of observing the Sabbath.

Col. Roosevelt and Ex-Gov. Long were born on the same date but that did not tend to create any greater harmony in their official relations.

Becker is trying to shift the responsibility to Rose. No doubt Rose would like the policeman to shift his bank roll at the same time.

Gov. Wilson wants the senate too. Perhaps he better wait and make sure of his won success. There was a man who was so sure of election that he said he felt it in the air. The people said that would be a good place to keep him and the next day elected his opponent.

Mrs. Charles S. Bird is right when she says interest in affairs makes better women.

The young people will have their usual fun and frolics, Wednesday night. Here's hoping none of them will fall down the cellar stairs.

Another cry for help goes up now that the price of lobster has taken a skyward tendency.

Dr. Cook is a Progressive. Col. Roosevelt should not be blamed for that.

If we desire to keep pace with the Eastern war we must all brush up our geography a bit.

Every one is talking much about the lowered cost of living because of abundant crops next year. All very well, but just think of the many who are here today who will not be on hand a year hence to reap some of this benefit.

Just now there is some lively shaking up in the base ball managers jobs.

ONLY A WEEK.

Only just another week and the great campaign will be over. Several presidential candidates will be thrust into the discard and, one will be happy, perhaps, with the thought that he will occupy the White house for four years, Providence permitting.

The inability of Col. Roosevelt to do any active campaigning for near two weeks, is variously figured upon, with regard to his ultimate standing in the race. It is doubtful, however if his enforced retirement, has been of injury to his personal candidacy. Some figure that the incident rather added to his personal following. Undoubtedly the Progressive organization, as a party has lost some by the forced inactivity of the Colonel.

Taken as a whole it has been a very quiet presidential contest. With Col. Roosevelt laid up towards the close of the campaign, Candidate Wilson, declining to speak while his opponent was flat on his back and President Taft, only periodically sending forth messages of good cheer to the faithful the spellbinders of the parties have had easy sledding. The people will record their verdict one week from today. Some people predict what that verdict will be. Many others are in doubt.

A GOOD INVENTION.

William H. Hingston of Quincy will deserve consideration from future generations if his life raft comes up to his fond expectations. There is no reason at the present time to doubt its fine qualities. Steamship men have examined it closely and given it the stamp of their approval. The government patent office has done well by issuing a patent on the device, so all that seems necessary now is to manufacture the article and place it on the market.

The rail raft serves the dual purpose of a rail for the ship to guard against people falling overboard and a life preserver in case they should fall overboard or disaster should overtake the vessel. The cost of course is somewhat in excess of what the usual rail would be, but when the saving in the cost of libeboats, rafts and space is concerned it will really prove a money saver for the steamship companies. The quicker the new rails are installed on all vessels and the efficiency demonstrated, the better pleased will be the public.

MISPLACED SENTIMENT.

The expected has happened. Women have made themselves conspicuous and ridiculous by their treatment of Lieut. Becker, the New York policeman convicted of murder. Flowers, fruit and confectionary and sympathetic and in some case loving epistles have found their way to the cell of the condemned man. Sympathy for a fellow being in distress, is commendable, an effort to cheer up a person weighted down by conscience, guilt or adverse circumstances should not be discouraged, but when the exhibition reaches the silly stage such as some of those women have it changes the situation and the public becomes disgusted with the exhibition. It does not matter how low or degraded the individual may be, or how cruel or horrible his crime, there have always been found a certain class of women who seem to be just waiting for such an occasion to show their silliness. Their position is incomprehensible.

Even in cases where the victim has been a women, there have been others of the sex who have delighted in manifesting interest in the murderer and extending sympathy in various forms. The convicted murderer of a New Hampshire girl, one of the worst crimes in the history of the state was sent the most disgustingly loving messages and tokens by women from all over the country.

SUNDAY BASE BALL.

It is hardly to be supposed that a majority of people share the view held by Rev. Charles Fleisher, that ""Sunday base ball would fill the day with joy for many a toiler." On every hand is heard the demand of somebody for greater diversion, greater periods of recreation and many other things for the toiler. Usually the toiler has not been consulted in the matter at all and naturally looks upon this lively interest in his welfare with something akin to distruct. The average toiler of the present day has much more leisure time than the laborer of a few decades back. Sunday base ball would only be the opening wedge for other diversions, which might prove more harmful. The New England Sabbath is a sacred institution. It should not be desecrated by innovations which cannot be of any material benefit. The people have beautiful parks, beaches, car rides and other means of passing a quiet Sunday without the tumult and excitment of base ball. Just at present New England people are not keen for casting down the barriers which would lessen the respectful and devotional observance of the Sabbath day.

ABLE, FEARLESS MEN WANTED

In the Conduct of City Affairs Claims Mr. Nichols

VIGILANCE NECESSARY

Editor Daily Ledger:

Just at this time as is the annual custom there is much agitation with reference to our municipal affairs, our tax bills have been presented and we find a very considerable increase both in the assessments and in the tax rate without my perceptible corresponding benefit either to the property holders or to the rank and file of our citizens at large. The atmosphere is surcharged with inquiry "What is the matter with Quincy?"

Irving L. Shaw with evident expenditure of much time and thought has recently in a very painstaking and disinterested spirit presented for the inspection and the enlightenment of our people, twelve letters which have been published in the public press exposing in detail conditions in no sense new to many of us who have been in touch with city affairs and who have had the opportunity at close range to observe "inside methods—cause and effect—resultant chaos confusion and the general unhealthy showing." Mr. Shaw has after careful investigation made an exhibit which is clean cut, easy of comprehension to the average intelligent citizen so that now all of our voters who know the facts as presented (and they have not so far, and cannot be successfully controverted) must feel the weight of responsibility each individually as a part of the whole for conditions alike deplorable and unnecessary.

There can be no excuse for any citizen with local pride having a true interest in the welfare of our community for failure to put his shoulder to the wheel this year, next year, and each succeeding year to eliminate the causes which have brought about existing conditions. This is a self evident proposition, oft repeated and ever present. To sum up briefly the real trouble with Quincy is the lack of a sufficient number of determined intelligent public spirited disinterested citizens who know how to organize a clean and efficient city government and who have interest and determination enough to stick to it until this is accomplished.

There has been no consistent concentration of effort. We hear of a dozen or more little gatherings here and there of persons with good intentions but what do they amount to as against the well organized political machine and its allies of office seekers,— patronage hunters private scheme promoters and politically ambitious gentlemen.

The moment there is organization for reform this whole combination joins and with pious protestations of loyalty to the cause porceeds at once to honeycomb and neutralize its usefulness. This is the history of the past and it is said history repeats it's self. What then is the solution of the problem? The answer is simple to every intelligent mind, if not easy of attainment. It took a Moses to lead the children of Israel out of bondage. It will under a charter like that of Quincy, take a mayor who is large enough for the job surrounded and supported by public sentiment and a city council of capable conservative, honest business men to straighten out the affairs of Quincy; a mayor and councilman who are familiar with city business and have a record that commends them to public confidence and support.

Men who are able and fearless and who are known to have no allegiance to or alliance with any of the elements which are responsible for the corrupt incompetent unbusiness like administration of our municipal government; men who have the time and who are willing to devote active faithful service to the city business—To the city's high tax rate—poor roads favoritism in the assessing of valuations and in the collection of taxes—mismanagement in the conduct of the sewer and water departments—the ever increasing heavy interest bearing permanent debt—the borrowing of money for current expenses—failure to safeguard the city's interests in the matter of the abolition of grade crossings—the apportioning of metropolitan improvements, in some proportion to the annual assessments which the city has for years been paying to the state etc. etc.

The conduct of our municipal affairs cannot safely be intrusted to irresponsible selfish—selfseeking politicians and their allies. The citizens of Quincy should by this time know when this fits. If not a little thoughtful investigations will enlighten them. To quote an ancient axiom never more forceful than today. "Eternal vigilence is the price of liberty." This is a government of the people who is to blame for its ills and shortcomings?

COMMUNITY MOVEMENT

Sectional Claims Condemned By Correspondent

BOARD OF TRADE ACTIVE

Editor Daily Ledger:

What Quincy needs above all things to make it a successful city is a deep and all pervading sense among its citizens of the community spirit. We are not citizens of West Quincy or Wollaston or Atlantic, but citizens of Quincy. Some matters are peculiarly connected with a section of our city, but first of all we are citizens of Quincy, and we should always keep this fact in mind.

We need to feel that we must get outside of our particular section of the city and make our presence felt in the general matters of the entire city.

If Atlantic has some advantages which its citizens enjoy and of which it may be proud, the citizens of that portion of the town should let all know about them and try to induce other sections to adopt them and to even improve upon them. It has always been to our disadvantage that our several centres have considered themselves as being apart from the rest of the city and sufficient unto themselves. This spirit of exclusiveness should be set aside and a spirit of unison take its place.

The remark is so often heard expressed, "I don't know much about what is going on in the centre. I don't get down to the centre once a year and know no more what is going on down town than as if I didn't live in Quincy." This spirit does not argue well for the best interests of the city. The Quincy Board of Trade is trying to so unite these several sections as to make the city a unit, and therefore desires to be in touch with all associations in our borders, that we may all work together for the common good.

For this reasn the Board of Trade should have the support of all citizens, thus making it a strong institution able to deal with all questions of public interest. By reason of the activity of the Board, Quincy is at the present time playing an important part in business matters of the County, the State and the Nation and is constantly keeping Quincy at the front in all matters of public weal.

We have in our midst some of the most active and capable business men in any community and we should centralize the efforts of these men that they may assist in the improvement of our vast possibilities and not allow those possibilities to go to waste because our efforts are scattered.

The obligation rests on each one of us to get outside of our own private affairs occasionally and do what we can for the common good. To do this no better opportunity offers than through the Board of Trade. Let us heartily support this organization and increase the opportunities for good work so successfully begun.

One who sees the possibilities of Quincy.

QUINCY PEOPLE IN AUTO CRASH

Machines Considerably Damaged Occupants Slightly Injured

An automobile owned and operated by Arthur W. Woodward of 21 Robertson street, West Quincy collided head on with another machine on the Revere Beach boulevard, near the Malden-Everett line Sunday evening. Mrs. George F. Nichols of 165 Church street was thrown from the machine owned and operated by Henry B. Fernald of Everett. Mr. Fernald and George F. Nichols were cut by glass from the wind shield and bruised.

All the occupants were shaken up and the heads of both machines were damaged. In the car with Woodward were his wife, and mother and Mrs. John McKenney of Washington. Mr. Fernald, his two children, Ida and Donald, and Mr. and Mrs. Nichols were in the other machine.

The accident occured when Woodward tried to pass a machine going in the same direction. He did not see the Fernald automobile which was approaching him.

NON-PARTISAN ENDORSEMENT

Action of Lieut. Gov. Luce Approved by Many Citizens

The following has been sent out under the captain, "Non-Partisan Endorsement:"

Every citizen of the Commonwealth irrespective of party should vote for the reelection of Lieutenant Governor Robert Luce.

The most consistent friends of the labor cause—those who favor the rapid accomplishment of its legitimate aims admire the courage he displayed at the State House on the 2nd of July last when in the capacity of Acting-Governor he declined to permit the invasion en masse of the State Capitol by a body of some three thousand men who had marched there in connection with the Boston Elevated Railway strike.

His action on that occasion was in performance of his plain duty and without prejudice toward either interest involved, but in fulfilment of his conviction that the State Capitol represents in the mind of the entire people the Sacred Temple of Liberty, Law and Order.

Acting-Governor Luce was entirely willing that a sufficient number to fill the largest committee room should enter but said that as such room would not accommodate more than three hundred persons he could not consent to the entrance of ten times that number.

His action did not in the slightest degree prejudice the rights of the men, but on the contrary gave them full opportunity to place their case before the State Board of Arbitration then in session.

Lieutenant Governor Luce should receive a vote so large as to show conclusively that the people as a whole will uphold any public servant who does his duty fearlessly, even when he knows that his action is likely to be misconstrued and misrepresented.

Men of his sterling character, broad sympathies, unusual intelligence, masterly eloquence and progressive public record (in the progressive movement he has been a pioneer,) should be encouraged in every way to devote their talents to the public service.

TURN ON LIGHT FROM TURNER

Mr. Doble Called Upon to Come Out and Name 'Em

THINGS ARE MOVING

Editor Quincy Daily Ledger:

I was somewhat interested in a letter given considerable prominence in your issue of Oct. 28th, signed by William H. Doble, containing a rhapsodic apotheosis of Mayor Stone and his official family.

While Mr. Doble deals fluently in glittering generalities and hints darkly at Mayor Stone"s being the victim of "reckless accusations—not based on facts;" he does not state what the accusations are to which he alludes, nor what the facts really are in regard to which the public are being misled.

Believing that the time has arrived when the voters of Quincy need light, more light, and still more light, I should like to call upon Mr. Doble to be a little more specific. We do not enjoy being humbugged,—the great Menagerie Man to the contrary notwithstanding,—and if our Mayor has been unjustly accused of anything, we most certainly wish the matters to be set right.

There is another point which excited my curiosity, and upon which I am sure the voters deserve to be further enlightened. Mr. Doble says:—"Reference might be made to the clique in our City Council, who from the beginning of Mayor Stone's term of office have thwarted his constant efforts for the welfare of Quincy."

Now, if there is such a "clique" in the City Council as this, to the existence of which Mr. Doble has hinted, then I believe the voters should be told in plain English, who they are.

And also the salutary measures for the welfare of Quincy which this "clique" has "thwarted," should be set forth for the enlightenment of all concerned. If some good orders or ordinances have failed of passage by reason of the opposition of a "group of malcontents," then the public should be told what these ordinances were, and who the "malcontents" are, and we should not be left to imagine or guess in general terms.

I trust that Mr. Doble will give us all the benefit of the details of these matters.

High Tide May Have Carried It Out to Sea

Although the police searched all day Monday for the body of James W. Stetson, who was drowned off North Weymouth, Sunday night they were unable to find any trace of it. HELD SECRET OF BUONOMO

Jennie Cavalierl Was Spy In Camp of White Slavers

ONCE WIFE OF A NOBLEMAN

Remained Faithful to Him In His Time of Adversity, Marrying Him When He Was About to Die—Drawn Into Toils After Husband's Death, She Tried to Escape

New York, Oct. 29.—"Jennie Cavalieri," who was decoyed to a lonely spot on the outskirts of Bridgeport, Conn., and brutally slain by the agents of a band of "white slavers," was the wife of an Italian nobleman.

Following the clues found among the dead woman's baggage, Detective Virelli of the Connecticut state police discovered that she had been married in this city on Sept. 24, 1911, to Cavalier Archillo Rotondo. He also unearthed facts regarding her career that inject into the sordid story of her death and life immediately preceding it, a strongly romantic element.

Jennie Germellima (this was the girl's maiden name) and Rotondo had been playmates together in Seffa, a small town in the province of Caserta in the southern part of Italy.

His family boasted of descent from the nobility who came to Caserta in the latter part of the last century. Hers could boast of nothing but a lineage of honest peasant folk.

In his native land a cavalier of the king could not soil his hands with labor, as he would have to do to support a wife when deprived of his patrimony, as Archillo knew he would be when he had accomplished his determination to make the girl his bride.

In America he foresaw the opportunity he sought. He was encouraged in his plans by his sweetheart, and when the steamer sailed from the bay of Naples, they renewed their plighted troth. She promised through her tears of farewell to come to him at his bidding.

For two years she awaited his call. Finally came the summons to join him in the new country, where men were free to work and love.

At the time of her arrival at Ellis island Archillo began to show symptoms of tuberculosis, the dread disease that ended his hopes and his life.

When he could no longer work, she divided with him her small earnings, as waitress in a lunchroom. At last, when the day came that he knew that the end was but a matter of hours, he was the one who insisted upon calling in Father Scipio Tofini, of the Catholic Church of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, that they might be united. Soon after the marriage he passed away.

Detective Virelli learned yesterday that nearly $500, all that the young couple had saved between them for their home, was expended by the widow that her husband might have a funeral as near suitable to his rank as she could provide.

Several days passed, during which she occasionally entered a coffee house kept by one Amadio Buonomo. Although she conducted herself at all times becomingly, she attracted the attention of Joseph Buonomo, a brother of the proprietor.

Joseph Buonomo was one of the group of men of the deepest degradation who exist by the sale of the unfortunates they are able by intimidation to control. There was nothing in his outward apparence, however, to reveal his calling. So that when Mrs. Rotondo met him, she felt doubtless she had found a friend and adviser among the strangers who surrounded her.

It was his promise to show her how she might quickly amass the funds necessary to support herself. No one but Jennie and the villainous Buonomo probably know the hideous means resorted to by him to get her to go to Chicago.

She had a terrible awakening. It did not need much urging to enlist her as a silent crusader, a spy in the camp of the "white slavers," whom the Law and Order league was trying to bring to justice.

"Chicago Joe" was the name by which Buonomo was known in his haunts of the Chicago underworld, and she had learned his reputation of quick vengeance with knife or pistol for any real or fancied wrong.

Valuable information pointing to Buonomo as the slayer of "Nick, the Bum," could have been given to the police by Jennie Cavalleri. No one knew this better than Buonomo. It had become a matter of his life or that of Jennie Cavalieri. The decision was made. She must die.

Perhaps as she stood in the shadow of the lonely woods near Stratford awaiting the bullet of Buonomo and his fellow-assassins, who had lured her to the spot, there was a smile upon her face, and the death which they thought was a penalty was a requiem to the wearied "slave" whose shackles had at last been removed.

ADRIANOPLE IS NOW ISOLATED

Turk's Line of Retreat to Constantinople Cut Off

BULGARIANS' BRILLIANT MOVE

Cannot Be Overcome Unless Turks Show Great Military Strength and Efficiency—Servians, Montenegrins and Greeks Help Place Common Enemy In Serious Position

London, Oct 29.—By a daring and brilliant move a Bulgarian column has dashed into the rear of the Adrianople position and severed its line of communication and retreat to Constantinople—Macedonia's main base of supplies.

It seems scarcely believable, yet it comes in a straight statement from Sofia that, following the capture of Eski Baba, the Bulgarian troops captured a military train carrying troops and supplies from Constantinople to Adrianople.

Whether the Bulgarians are in sufficient force to do more than destroy a section of the railroad and then retire is not reported. Firmly established astride this railroad, which not only supplies Adrianople, but also Salonica and the rest of Macedonia, the Turks would be in a serious situation.

The Bulgarians have been pushing forward, according to the latest Bulgarian reports, from the eastern side in the hope of entirely destroying the Turkish army defeated at Kirk-Kilisse. At the same time the Bulgarian armies are carrying out a wide-sweeping movement reaching almost to the shores of the Black sea and still other Bulgarian columns are completing the circle around Adrianople. One column is moving down the Bosphorus road, its apparent objective being Lule-Burgas, the second line of Turkish defense.

All of these operations contribute a turning movement against Adrianople and if carried out in sufficient force mean the sealing of the fate of that stronghold. If the forces are not sufficient they are open to counter attack and annihilation.

In view of the big events in the eastern region of the theatre of war the achievments oft he Servian army have been somewhat lost sight of. The Servians, from whom Europe did not expect much, are now in possession of virtually the whole of Old Servia and in conjunction with the Montenegrins hold the best part of the district of Novipazar.

The Servian columns have obtained possession of the Turkish railroad from Mitrovitza, its northern terminus, down to Uskup and they are following the defeated Turkish army to Veles, farther to the south.

The Bulgarian column, co-operating with the Servian army in the western part of the peninsula, has occupied Istib, the Adrianople of Macedonia, and threatens to cut off the retreat of the Turks to the south.

The capture of Uskup is likely to have a greater moral effect than the fall of Kirk-Kilisse, as it will have a depressing effect not only on Turkish troops, but on the whole Moslem population in northern Macedonia, while it will produce unbounded exultation in Servia and nerve the Servian army to fresh endeavors.

The Greek army, too, is making steady headway. Its capture of Pentepigedia is considered of the utmost importance, for with Pentepigedia in Greek hands the whole country to the north is easily accessible to the advance of the Greek army and the way is also left open to Janina, the Turkish base in the far western region.

The Montenegrins, hampered by rain and the stubborn resistance of the Turks, are still hammering away at Tarakosh and Scutari. The Bulgarians, Servians and Montenegrins have taken a total of 10,000 prisoners and 250 field guns, according to carefully tabulated estimates.

All the invaders of Turkish territory are establishing civil administrations in the towns captured by them, which is taken as further evidence that they have no intention of giving up any of the conquered territory without a struggle. It is still impossible for any correspondents or military attaches to get near the fighting line on the Turkish side.

Brought Relief to "Shut-In"

When Hannaford was recovering from his automobile accident which kept him in bed a couple of months, he found great comfort in the telephone.

He had an extension telephone set beside his bed, and not only kept in touch with his business, but had daily chats with his friends.

PLEA OF CONVICT SAVES BOY ROBBER

Has Tender Heart For One He Had Led Astray

Chicago, Oct. 29.—The plea of an old convict saved Charles Broadbent, 18 years old, from a penitentiary sentence.

"I am an old convict," he said, "I've been in the 'pen', so let me go back there again. It can't hurt me any more than it has. But this boy was led astray by me. It was my fault, not his. Don't ruin him by sending him to the 'pen.' I know how it blasts a man's life."

This plea of Magnus Nelson, who, with Broadbent, held up four men in a park, got the younger prisoner sent to a reform school instead of to prison. Judge Cooper sent Nelson back to the penitentiary.

TO AID PROSECUTION OF JACK JOHNSON

Lucille Cameron Has Decided to Renounce Negro

Chicago, Oct. 29.—In the army of witnesses that crowded the corridors of the Federal building to testify in the Jack Johnson investigation was the white girl whose love Johnson boasts belongs to him alone—Lucille Cameron.

Moreover, the girl announced that she was ready to do everything in her power to assist the government in its prosecution of the negro pugilist.

The dayss she has spent in a cell at the Rockford jail have given her an opportunity to think, she says, with the result that she has renounced the negro, to return to her mother.

The federal grand jury resumed its investigation of Johnson's affairs with a long list of witnesses to be heard.

The investigation has been broadened to include testimony concerning other girls of Johnson's acquaintance than Miss Cameron.

HUNTING FOR FUGITIVES

Men Who Escaped From Bridgewater Not Yet Captured

Buzzards Bay, Mass., Oct. 29.—A squad of state farm guards, assisted by local officers, beat through the woods in this vicinity yesterday in a search for the three insane men who escaped Sunday from the infimary at Bridgewater.

Shortly after dusk the searchers abandoned the hunt, but resumed it again early this morning.

Louis B. Rogers, whose home is in Harwich, was seen near here yesterday afternoon. Alfred Girard and William Sullivan, who escaped with him, were not sighted, but it is believed they all are together.

CARS ARE TIED UP

Motormen and Conductors In Jacksonville Are on Strike

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 29.—The strike of 150 of the 175 motormen and conductors employed by the local street car company, resulted in an almost complete tie-up.

The employes struck, they asserted, because the company refused to reinstate twenty-five men discharged for figuring in the organization of a union.

The Case Book of a Private Detective

True Narratives of Interesting Cases by a Former Operative of the William J. Burns Detective Agency

By DAVID CORNELL

(Copyright by the International Press Bureau.)

MY FIRST CASE

"Getting" the Man Who Hung a Jury

Up to the day that the manager of the New York office of the Burns Detective Agency handed me an order for $50 expense money and started me up the Hudson river on my first manhunt, I had never done anything in my life that might have been suspected of even remotely resembling detective work. I probably knew as little about the business as anybody in the country, and I had never had any yearning or intention to become a detective. But I was 36 years old, out of work, almost broke—in New York!—had a family to support and, most important of all, I happened to have met the celebrated detective who is the head of the agency by which I came to be employed, the largest reputable private detective agency in the country. That was why I became, and am, a private detective.

One morning I found myself at 42d street and Broadway, looking at the newspaper bulletins and wondering how long my money would last and where in the world I should turn for a job. One of the bulletins read:

"Detective Burns Nabs More Bribers."

That bulletin did the trick.

"He may remember me," I thought, "and he may know of a job to fit me."

I went straight down town to the office of the agency of which the big man is the head and asked if he was in.

"What do you want of him?" asked the office manager.

I was desperate. I said: "I know him, and I want a job."

He looked me over, went into an inner office for a while, and reappeared, bearing an application blank. The office, and everything in it, was just as it would be in an up-to-date business office. The business of the place might as well have been selling insurance as hunting criminals. The application blank had all the conventional questions of such a paper, and in addition these:

"Were you ever connected with any police force, or any detective agency? Are you acquainted with any police officials, or any one employed by detective agencies?

"Were you ever employed by any railroad?

"Do you know anything about the newspaper business?

"Have you a large number of acquaintances, and can you keep your occupation from your friends and acquaintances?"

"Fill that out," said the office manager. He had not even asked me if I wanted to become a detective, and but for the last questions on the blank I would not have known that he was considering me as an applicant for such a position.

"I've never done any detective work in my life," I said.

"Good," he said. "If you had, we wouldn't have you. Fill out the blank."

When it was filled out he took it and disappeared again. He was back in three minutes.

"All right," he said, sitting down at his desk and picking up some papers. "There's a man up in Peeksville (a small town on the Hudson river near New York), who hung the jury in a damage suit. Want you to go up and get him. Here's the dope."

He began to read from the papers in his hand. The gist of it was that one Kellner, a New York contractor, had done $100,000 worth of work on the water supply system of the town of Peeksville. When the time came for him to render his bill he had been approached by one of the town's political powers, Bruley by name, and commissioner of public works, who let it be known that if he would make out a bill for $130,000, it would be allowed in full without protest or question, and that $5,000 of the $30,000 overcharge would go to him as a reward for placing certain officials in the way of fingering $25,000 of the people's money.

Kellner had refused. When he rendered his rightful bill for $100,000 the powers in the city hall calmly cut it to $85,000, claiming that portions of the work were poorly done; that parts of the contract had been awarded illegally, but in reality merely getting even with Kellner for refusing to assist them to some easy graft.

Kellner promptly sued. He had a case so strong, and public opinion was so strongly aroused over the exposed scandal, that recovery of his $15,000 seemed a foregone conclusion. But the would-be grafters had managed to place the nigger in the woodpile in the shape of one of their clan on the jury. Eleven of the jurymen on the first ballot had voted for a full judgment for Kellner. The twelfth man had voted "no" on that ballot, and on the second, and the third, and on every ballot for the next twenty-four hours. He had hung the jury, and the case was a mis-trial. The man's name was Harry Donlin, a real estate agent.

"That's the man you've got to get," said the office manager. "He did the trick, and he's been spending money ever since. We've got to have a full confession from him that we can use as evidence, and it's got to be in writing and sworn to, or told in the hearing of at least two people: who gave him the bribe, when, and what for. And we've got to get it in a hurry, too because the new trial is coming on in less than a month. Have you got any money?"

I didn't have enough to be worth mentioning. He drew a pink pad to him, wrote out an order on the cashier for $50 and handed it to me.

"Get up there right away," he said "You can get a train every hour on the even hour. Here are some report forms. Write a full report of your doings every day and mail it every evening. Don't forget to make your report cover all your time."

That was how I entered this business. I had been accustomed to seeing things move with businesslike expediency in other offices, but this beat all records. Thirty minutes before I had entered the office inquiring for the chief. I had not seen the chief, had not been questioned; but here I was handed $50, sent out on what seemed to me like a complicated case of detective work, and being calmly told to get a full confession from a man I knew no more about than about Adam.

"They are just trying me out to see how I act," I thought, as I took the money order. So I said: "All right. When shall I report here again?"

"We will let you know," was the answer.

I caught a three o'clock train on the New York Central and took a seat in the smoking car. Across the aisle lolled a tall, lanky, good-natured young fellow whose ticket, stuck in the seat in front of him, showed that he was going to Peeksville, my destination. On the chance that he lived in the town, or knew something about it, I took out my pipe, stuffed it, and began to search, ostentatiously, for the matches I pretended not to have. I drew his attention first, then said: "You don't happen to have an extra match, do you?"

"Sure," he said, and began to dig. I crossed over and sat down beside him. As I accepted the match and prepared to light my pipe I stuck my ticket in the seat before us, where he could not fail to see it.

"Going to Peeksville, too?" he said, genially.

"Yes," I said, puffing away. "You going there?"

"Yep," he said. "I live there. You don't live there, do you?"

"No," I answered.

"Thought not," said my friend. "I know everybody there. Peeksville is a mighty nice little place." He looked me over. I was prosperous looking.

"Say," he said, "if you're thinking of buying a place up there you want to see Donlin by all means. He's the agent for the best real estate bargains in town. I'm a friend of his, and I know he's right."

Donlin was the man I was after. I pretended to misunderstand the name. "Who? 'Donaldson'?"

"Donlin," he corrected. "Harry Donlin. I'll introduce you to him if you wish when we get up there."

I did my best to get on a friendly basis with my good natured young friend, and by the time we neared our destination I knew that his name was Daley, he knew that mine was Cornell, and we were getting along so well that when we stepped from the train we walked straight across the street to have a friendly glass of beer.

In the barroom we ran into a short, heavy set man, with a nervous, twitching mouth, and restless eyes. He was one of the most worried looking men I have ever seen.

"Ah, hello, Harry!" bawled Daley. "Say, Harry, I want to introduce you to an old friend of mine from Chicago. Mr. Cornell, like to have you meet Mr. Donlin. Mr. Donlin's an old pal of mine, too."

Mr. Donlin's expression relaxed a little when he heard that I was "an old friend of Daley's." It was obviously a relief to him to hear that I was known by one of his "pals," and he showed it by greeting me in a hearty manner, and by insisting on buying drinks. I told him that I might be interested in a house in Peeksville, and he began to treat me with considerable deference. When I left him for the evening we had made an appointment for ten o'clock next morning to make a tour of inspection of the desirable houses for sale in Peeksville.

We drove through the town and looked at half a dozen little houses. I was not particularly impressed with any of them, or at least pretended not to be. There was one that I told Donlin might do—if I decided that the town was to my liking.

For the next two days he spent about half of his time and some of his money proving to me that he was a good fellow, and that the town was full of good fellows. On the second day he was calling me by my first name, and I was reciprocating. He was an easy-going, not over-brilliant Irishman, who apparently was afraid ever to become entirely sober, and who never wanted to be without a congenial companion to talk to. He was plainly living under a great strain.

On the third day a letter from the office directed me to come in to the New York office that evening.

"Go in and see the chief," said the office manager when I reported. The chief was in his private office with my reports on his desk before him.

"Well," he said, without troubling about a greeting, "you're showing considerable speed for a big fellow. I guess you'd better begin to do the crook stall right away. You're from Chicago. You got into a little trouble out there and you had to leave. You are keeping out of sight of the Chicago authorities, and you picked out Peeksville as a likely place to hide in. You understand, don't you?"

"I'm to pose as a crook?"

"Certainly. This man Donlin is a natural blabber, who'll talk if you get close to him. You have got a good start by pretending to be looking for a house. Now, tomorrow you stall about being afraid of going out so much; keep under cover. Stay in your room a lot. Begin to fight shy of the house proposition. Let your man know that you're a little afraid of him. Keep away from him. Make him come to you. Then let him pump it out of you that you're hiding, and that you cleaned up big on a crooked deal in Chicago. We'll have a letter written to you from the Chicago office. Lose this letter where your man will find and read it, and your stall as a crook will make good. And if he begins to show any inclination to tell you his own secrets, at first tell him you don't want to hear them; that you've got troubles enough of your own. Understand? And the next time you come into the office cover your tracks by going through some building with two entrances before coming here."

I went back to Peeksville, and the next day I stayed in my room. I had my meals sent up and sent a boy out for some magazines to read. I went out for a walk at night, keeping entirely to the dark side streets. The clerk eyed me rather strangely as I returned, and I knew that soon Donlin would hear about my strange conduct.

The next day I did the same thing. In the evening there was a knock at my door.

"Who is it?" I demanded, sharply.

"Donlin," came the answer. "What's the matter, old man? Feeling sick?"

After delaying a moment I opened the door a little, looked out, as if to assure myself that it was Donlin, and let him in. He looked at me curiously.

"You aren't sick, are you?" he said.

"No," I said. "I just stayed in my room, that's all."

He kept looking at me steadily. "Anything gone wrong?" he said.

"Oh, no," I said. "No, I just got tired of showing myself—of running around so much."

I had never had any experience in acting before, but let me say here that such success as I have had as a detective has been due more to the fact that I possess a certain natural talent for playing parts in a way to win the confidence of the man I am after, than anything else. Before Donlin left me that evening he had fully drawn the conclusion that I was in some sort of trouble, and that I was in Peeksville for the purpose of keeping out of sight. The last words he said were:

"Don't worry, old man. We're your friends. The bunch here is right."

Two days later the fake letter came to me from the Chicago office. It was mailed in a plain envelope and professed to come from my brother. It read:

"Dear Dave:

"I have been talking with Mr. Grimmer, and you are mistaken in believing that he only wants to hurt you; all that he cares about is getting his money back. I told him that he could take his choice, either go on and stir up a lot of noise and discredit you here forever, and get no money back, or else get his money and keep quiet. He said: 'Give me my money; that's all I care about.' I then told him that he was mistaken when he said the amount you had got was $38,000. I said that you had got less than $25,000, and that in moving around the country you had spent $3,000, so all you had was about $22,000. He didn't believe it, but he is so greedy for money that he agreed to drop everything, and sign a paper clearing you if he gets back $22,000.

"Now, I think that was a pretty fine piece of business on my part, and that it is the best thing you can do. Even if you go into court and fight him and show him up for what he is, he is going to show you up, and you'll be ruined if he does. If you return $22,000 you clean up $16,000; which will help some. My advice is that you do this. At all events let me know at once what you are going to do.

"Don't forget to burn this.

"Your brother,

"FRED."

Donlin took me buggy riding to look at another house that afternoon. We were chums by this time. When I left him I managed to slip the letter, without the envelope, into the seat where I had been sitting without being observed.

I never saw or heard of that letter again, but Donlin found it and read it and it did its work, as I discovered later. One day just three weeks after I came to Peeksville, he came up to my room slightly more under the influence of liquor than usual, and told me that he had quarrelled with his wife. And through that I "got" my man. I had won his confidence; he trusted me even before his wife.

"That's been my whole trouble all the time," he said. "My wife won't let me alone. First it's one thing she's nagging about, then another. I'd never been in any trouble if it hadn't been for her. She's always hollering about me not giving her enough money. Well, here a short time ago I had a chance to put one over, and I did—$2,500 worth. And now she starts asking me where I got the money I'm giving her and begins to bawl me out. I quit. I just walked out, and she'll whistle another tune before I go back."

The truth was that his wife was disgusted over his drinking.

"Skip out for a couple days and let her cool down," I suggested. "I tell you what, let's do; let's take a night boat up to Albany and hang around there for a couple of days. I'm getting kind of tired of this place myself. What do you say?"

"I'll go you," he said. "I don't care where I go. Damn it. A fellow can get into more trouble when things aren't right at home than he knows how to handle. If she was the kind of woman you could tell things to—"

"Don't talk to me about that, Harry," I interrupted. "I'm the one who knows what that means. To be frank, that's why I left Chicago, because things weren't right at home."

"Yes, but take my case here," he protested. "I—"

"I don't want to hear your troubles," I said. "I've got all I can do to hold down my own. Let's go down to New York on the next train and hang around there today and go up the river on the night boat."

"Come on," he said.

Had I given him a chance to talk he might have spouted out his whole story on the train going down to the city. That was all that was troubling him; he needed somebody to whom he could tell the story of his crime. But I kept interrupting and leading the conversation away to other subjects. As soon as we reached New York I made a pretext of calling up to find at what time the boats left, and called up the office and told the whole situation.

"Well," said the manager in a casual sort of way, "we ought to get him tonight on the boat. I'll reserve a stateroom for you on the C. W. Morse, of the Hudson Line. You just hold your man off until you get him in there, and then get him to talk. That's all you need to trouble about. We'll do the rest. You get your boat at 6:30 at One Hundred and Twenty-ninth street, and when you enter your stateroom take off your hat and wipe your forehead so our men will have a spot down. Well, there's one satisfaction: I'll take some of 'em with me when I go down."

"How much did you get out of it?" demanded Donlin suddenly.

I looked at him and knew he had read the letter.

"I'll come through with about $16,000," I said. "But I wouldn't go through this worry again for ten times that much."

"Hell," he growled. "And you're kicking! What would you say to taking a measly little twenty-five hundred from a dirty bunch of rich crooks and going around with everybody suspecting you of having done it?"

"Say, Cornell," he said, striking the side of his chair. "You think you've been steered up against it and thrown down, but let me tell you that you don't know what a raw deal is. Here now, listen to me. I want to tell you this; you've got to listen. Why, darn it, man, you've got to listen. I'll go crazy if I don't tell somebody."

He loosened his collar and went on.

"Here a little over a month ago old man Smythe, our mayor, and Bruley, the commissioner of public works, and the rest of that bunch of high-binders that runs things in Peeksville, got into a mess. They'd tried to get a contractor named Kellner to help them sting the city for $30,000. He turned on 'em and wouldn't give 'em a chance, and to get even with him they cut down his charge for work on the waterworks contract $15,000. Well, he comes out and sues them. He's got a cinch case, see, and the best they can hope for is to pack the jury and get a disagreement.

"Old Smythe says, 'Donlin, you're drawn on the venire for the jury that is going to try this case. We want you on there, you understand; we want to have one of our friends on that jury. We're glad of the chance to have you on because we know you're one of us and we all want to stick together. We will see that you get on that jury—don't worry about that—and there'll be a little envelope slipped into your pocket as you leave here, and—the worst we want is a disagreement. Understand?'"

"How long ago was this?"

"Only a little more than a month ago," he said. "Just three days before the trial—the night of May 23rd. Well, as I was saying, I went out, and when I got home I felt in my pocket and there was the envelope—with $2,500 in it."

"Didn't you see them slip the envelope to you?" I asked.

"Sure," he said. "Bruley slipped it into my pocket and winked and slapped me on the shoulder when he did it. Well, they got me accepted for the jury all right. Then Bruley comes to me and says: 'Say, Donlin, don't forget you're one of us now. You've got to deliver the goods.'

"Well, I delivered the goods, all right. The other eleven men wanted to kill me, but I hung out. 'No judgment,' I said, 'or I'll stay out until Christmas.' I earned that $2,500 all right—we disagreed. And the other day Mrs. Smythe gives a lawn party and never a word about inviting Mrs. Donlin. Oh, yes, I was one of them all right—when they needed me."

"Pshaw!" I said. "You hung a jury for 'em for twenty-five hundred and now they're turning cold to you?"

"Yes. That's the kind they are."

"Pshaw!" I said. "Now let's go and get something to eat. I'm desperately hungry."

I haven't given Donlin's complete conversation here, but only the gist of his confession. But Donlin himself had a complete typewritten report of his talk in the stateroom handed to him in the hotel in Albany two days later. The Chief and the office manager called on him unexpectedly in his room and, handing him a carbon copy of his conversation, asked him if there were any inaccuracies to be corrected in it.

"I guess that's about right," said the Chief casually. "We knew all the time that the reason you hung that jury was to save those fellows, and we knew you weren't doing it for your health; but we wanted to get you to tell us all about it yourself, so we got it when you were talking to your friend on the boat the other night. Now, Donlin, we've got the goods on you," said Burns. "You've got two chances. One is to make us put you in prison for accepting a bribe; the other is to go with us and help us to make those crooks, who paid you, pay our client his $15,000 without any more lawsuits. What are you going to do; go to jail, or come on our side?"

Donlin was staring at the report in dazed fashion. There it was, every word that he had said, every question that I had asked, down in carbon; and we had been in a locked stateroom while we were talking, and he had been with me ever since. He was dumbfounded for a while. Then he expressed the universal curiosity over detective work. He looked up in amazement at the Chief and said:

"Well! How in the devil did you ever do it?"

But it was not the Chief's disposition to give away the tricks of the trade. It was not until several days later, when Donlin's confession had frightened the politicians at Peeksville into acknowledging Contractor Kellner's bill in full, that I knew that in each of the stateroums adjoining ours there had been a stenographer with his ear to a dictagraph all the way up the river, and that Donlin literally had made his confession in the hearing of three people.

"That was just a piece of bull-headed luck, wasn't it?" I asked Chief Burns.

"Oh, no," he said. "We had tried five other men on him before you; we were sure to get somebody he would take to and blab his head off. It was only a question of time. Most detective work is."

ROOSEVELT WILL SPEAK IN GOTHAM

May Make Other Addresses Before Election Day

Oyster Bay, Oct. 29.—"I don't feel a bit as though I had been shot," said Colonel Roosevelt last night.

The colonel was so much better that his physicians gave him permission to re-establish communication, through the correspondents at Oyster Bay, with the outside world.

"This seems like being alive again," said Roosevelt, as he entered his library. "It seems good to get back into the old channels once more."

He walked with a brisk, vigorous step and his face had lost none of its color.

Colonel Roosevelt said he felt well enough to make his speech in New York, Wednesday night, and that if he found he suffered no serious effects from the trip he might make a few other speeches before election day. The hardest problem, he said, was to keep out of the crowds, for he is in no condition to get into the struggling masses of people.

Vice President Sherman Is Very Near to Death

REPORTED AS SINKING RAPIDLY

Has Been Sick All Summer From Complication of Diseases—Republican Party May Be Forced to Go to Polls With but One Candidate on Its National Ticket

Utica, N. Y., Oct. 29.—Vice President James S. Sherman is in a critical condition at his home and the outcome of his sickness cannot be forecasted. His physician, Dr. Peck, admits this fact.

He denied that he considered the condition of the vice president hopeless, but made no attempt to minimize the situation. Sherman is suffering from a complication of ailments which have induced weakness in heart action, and he has suffered great difficulty in breathing.

With the national election just one week away, Sherman may not live to know if he is reindorsed by the nation.

Through this situation the possibility arises that for the first time in the history of the country one of the leading parties may be forced to go to the polls with but one national candidate. While it is thought possible that he may live until next Tuesday, no hope is given that he could again take the oath of office as the second highest officer of the country.

Dr. Peck last night authorized this statement regarding Sherman's illness and his present condition:

"Mr. Sherman has been sick all this year, due to condition of the kidneys, hardening of the arteries and softening of the muscles of the heart, which is somewhat stretched. Mr. Sherman had an attack in the Adirondacks, at Big Moose, to be exact, in June and I expected him to die. He got out of Big Moose safely and improved steadily and very satisfactory until the latter part of August. Since then his condition has been aggravated and he has been steadily failing.

"For the last three weeks, since he came back from Connecticut, where he went to rest, he has been dressed only once and that was a week ago Friday when, against my protest, he went out to the polls to register.

"Mr. Sherman is now in the condition which that sort of trouble leads to and is very seriously ill, but there is, I believe, no immediate danger of death."

After a day of discouraging symptoms, Sherman rallied at nightfall and continued to show improvement during the evening. This is due in no small measure to the powerful medicines. Whether he can much longer successfully combat the attack of kidney trouble and complications, first apparent more than a year ago, is a matter of grave doubt.

The members of his family are with him constantly and his intimate friends have been notified that he has been failing steadily.

TAFT IN NEW YORK

Washington, Oct. 29.—President Taft, after a two-day stay in Washington, left at noon today for New York, to be present at the launching tomorrow of the New York—the largest American dreadnaught—at the New York navy yard.

The president, with Secretary Meyer, will board the dreadnaught on the ways at the navy yard and after the launching will take lunch at the yard. He will return to Washington on the midnight train.

BOLD DAYLIGHT ROBBERY

Girl Bound and Gagged and Safe Looted by Three Robbers

New York, Oct. 29.—Three men gained admission to the branch office of the Prudential Life Insurance company at 248 Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn, by pretending to be employes of the New York Telephone company.

They got within reach of the open safe, tied and gagged Miss Alice Brenneis, a cashier, and then ran away with loot aggregating between $300 and $400.

DYNAMITE WAS HARMLESS

Stuff Found on Railway Right of Way Could Do No Harm

Salem, Mass., Oct. 29.—A board of experts demonstrated here that the twenty-five pounds of dynamite which William Norris, a driller, says he found buried on the right of way of the Bay State street railway near Middleton, is harmless.

The application of a detonator to each stick separately failed to explode any one of them.

Three Convicts Escape

Joliet, Ill., Oct. 29.—By scaling the prison wall, three convicts working on a coal conveyer escaped from the Illinois state penitentiary.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

FRUIT WITH A CEREAL.

DESSERTS which are delicious and easy to digest may be made with fresh fruits combined with a cereal. Rice is a favorite for this purpose, but farina, tapioca, cornstarch and sago also make nice desserts.

Berries, sliced bananas or peaches, figs or dates cut into pieces, oranges or grapes are excellent combined with any of the cereals.

Most of these desserts taste better served with milk or cream and sugar.

Desserts With Rice.

Peaches and Rice.—Boil some rice in milk for an hour and when it becomes quite firm add sugar to taste, some essence of vanilla and two yolks of eggs. Stir on the fire until the eggs are set and then fill a border mold. Stew some peaches for a few minutes. Turn out the rice, dish up the peaches on it and decorate with candied cherries and blanched almonds. Serve either hot or cold.

Baked Apple With Rice.—Take some firm ripe apples, cut off a thin slice from the top and scoop out each, leaving a shell about one-half inch thick. Half fill with cooked rice. Make a sirup by boiling the scooped out apples with just enough water to prevent scorching, a little cinnamon and for a dozen apples half a cupful of maple sugar. Fill each apple with the sirup. Place in a pan in the oven and bake.

Attractive In Appearance.

Plums With Rice.—Cook the rice in milk until it is tender and dry. Add a pinch of salt while it is cooking; also sugar enough to make it sweet. Pour into a border mold to set. When ready to serve turn it out carefully and fill the center with plums, canned or fresh. The fruit must be stewed. Pour a little of the sirup over the rice and heap whipped cream over the plums. The stones should be removed from the fruit and the kernels simmered ten minutes in a little thin sirup and then mixed with the fruit.

Peaches With Tapioca.—Take a half dozen good sized peaches, peel, stone and slice these. Heat one and a half cupfuls of water in a double boiler, add salt and stir in a quarter cupful of tapioca. Boil until clear, then pour the peaches with juice into a well buttered baking dish. Sprinkle with four tablespoonfuls of sugar, then pour on the hot tapioca. Bake for about twenty-five minutes, but do not let the top brown. This will keep for several days. If baked in too small a quantity it does not do as well.

CELERY AND CHEESE.

As a substitute for meat, cheese cooked with vegetables may be used in many an emergency. Celery, a vegetable which many housewives content themselves with serving with salt or as a salad, may be cooked with cheese in a variety of ways that will be appreciated.

Nutritious Foods.

Scalloped Celery with Cheese.—Boil some celery in water to which a little salt has been added. Drain, cut into small pieces. Put alternate layers of the celery and grated cheese, cracker crumbs seasoned with salt, pepper and butter, into a baking dish. When the dish is full add a cupful of white sauce and cover with cracker crumbs well buttered. Bake until crumbs are brown.

Celery Cheese Sticks.—Take crisp celery sticks and two ounces of cream cheese with which minced olives or pimentos have been mixed. Cut the celery into four inch lengths and fill the cavity with cheese. These sticks are used in place of wafers.

Nice Luncheon Dishes.

Celery and Cheese au Gratin.—Cook the stalks of white celery until tender in boiling salted water. Mix with a good cream sauce and some parmesan cheese. Fill patty shells or individual ramekins with this and cover with fine buttered crumbs and brown in a hot oven.

Celery Tips and Cream Cheese.—A neufchatel cheese, a tablespoonful of finely chopped pecans, a teaspoonful of chopped parsley, salt and pepper to taste are required for this. Of the celery take the small centers or the deep grooved pieces that are short. Mix the cheese with the nuts, salt and pepper. If it is dry add a little cold milk. Fill into the grooves in the celery and sprinkle with the chopped parsley. Serve on a cheese plate around crackers.

Celery and Cheese.—Stew celery until tender and cut into inch pieces. Take one cup of the celery water and add it to a rich white sauce. Stir into this sauce enough grated cheese to make it yellow in color. Put the prepared celery into a baking dish, pour the sauce over it and cover with breadcrumbs that have been browned in melted butter. Heat in the oven a few minutes.

Increased Use of Whisky, Beer, Cigrets and Cigars in United States

Washington, Oct. 29.—The American people are drinking more whisky and beer and smoking more cigars and cigarets than ever before in history, according to Royal E. Cabell, commissioner of internal revenue.

From July 1 to Oct. 1, 1912, more than 3,800,000,000 cigarets were smoked, an increase of 1,000,000,000. The nation consumed 33,150,000 gallons of whisky, an increase of 450,000 gallons. Nearly 1,950,000,000 cigars were smoked. A total of 19,800,000 barrels of beer were consumed during the three months.

SOCIALIST RALLY

capitalists. The "reform" parties of all brands are alternates for the capitalists, whenever the latter see a majority getting tired of the old political parties. As for the "Progressives" they are even more reactionary than the other parties, in that they seek to break up centralized industries and restore the obsolete period of competition. All of these parties approve of the fundamentals of the present order. Workers of America have you not been cajoled and deceived long enough? Is it not time you awoke in your might and threw off the shackles. The Capitalists are few and you are many, but by paper titles backed by the armed power of government, they hold the industries of the country and keep you in bondage. Nothing stands between you and complete economic freedom but enlightenment. Think and act!"

Caleb F. Howard spoke in favor of the Industrial Union and pointed out the necessity for the workers to be united on the economic as well as the political field. He advised all workingmen to join the Industrial workers of the world and the Socialist party.

From now on things in the municipal political line will doubtless be lively. It is some years since the voters have become so stirred up as they are this year and it should result in getting some good material in the council.

Helping Father.

It was Sunday afternoon, and the curate, calling unexpectedly to visit a member of his flock, found him out—in two senses.

The gentleman's young son came to the door and announced his father's absence. "He's gone to the golf club," said he casually, and then, reading perhaps some shade of disapproval in the parson's eyes, he extenuated thus: "He's not gone to play golf, you know, not on a Sunday; only to drink beer and have a game of cards."

Having thus cleared his father's character, he shut the door on the dumfounded cleric.—London Answers.

"HOPE KNOCKED DEAD"

Becker Now Expects Electric Chair Will Be His Fate

New York, Oct. 29.—Charles Becker, the deposed police lieutenant, recently convicted of the murder of Herman Rosenthal, spoke again yesterday before his counsel got word to him that he was hurting his case by breaking his silence. Then he lapsed back into silence.

He prefaced his remarks with a word of his own despair. He does not believe that his lawyers will be able to get a new trial or a reversal of the verdict which may send him to the chair. His lawyers meantime are working up their case for the court of appeals.

"Advice to be hopeful is fine," he said. "But what I have been through knocks hope dead. I was positive that I would not be found guilty."

"UNDER HYPNOTIC SPELL'

Man Who Robbed Wealthy New Yorkers Is Sent to Sing Sing

New York, Oct. 29.—John Bernauer, the youthful Bavarian who robbed the residences of J. P. Morgan, Jr., and other wealthy persons of thousands of dollars' worth of jewelry, freely related in court the story of his burglaries, but declared that he was under the hypnotic spell of an old "pal" of his at the time.

Bernauer entered a plea of guilty, however, and was sentenced to from five to ten years in Sing Sing prison.

He boasted in court of how he stole into the very room where Mr. Morgan was asleep and ransacked the financier's dresser.

THE KILLING OF SMALSKY

Lineman Is Charged With Being Principal In Fight

Dover, N. H., Oct. 29.—Charles Veterlein, aged 32, of Lawrence, was arrested here for the police of that city on a charge of being the principal in a street fight Oct. 19 which resulted in the death of John Smalsky.

Two alleged accessories have been under arrest in Lawrence for several days. Veterlein is a lineman and has a wife and three children in Lawrence.

KING OF FRUITS.

To Eat a Durian You Must First Overcome Your Sense of Smell.

The east furnishes in the durian one of the strangest of fruits. It has been called "the king of fruits, as the orange is the queen," but there are many who entertain no liking for it.

There is this difficulty about the durian. Its consumption presents the same obstacle to enjoyment as a ripe cheese. To eat a durian one must first overcome one's sense of smell. The odor of the durian suggests limburger cheese, onion sauce, brown sherry and other incongruities. It has also been compared to the smell of a limekiln in full operation.

The Malays are excessively fond of the fruit, and those Europeans whose sense of smell is not overdelicate contend that the durian is like rich buttery custard flavored with almonds.

A British officer at Penang once dined a member of parliament about to leave for home. Among other delicacies an overripe durian was placed upon the table. The guest, on being pressed to partake of it, declined, with this remark:

"It may have been very good last season, but if you will excuse me I would rather not venture on it now."

The durian is as large as a man's head and is covered with sharp spines It grows upon a large tree, somewhat similar to the walnut. When ripe it falls, and if it should strike any one the chances are that it would inflict damage. The natives, knowing the danger of a blow from a falling durian, stretch nets under the trees in populous places so that the fruit may be caught as it falls.—New York Sun.

Central Vermont Freight Wrecked

South Vernon, Vt., Oct. 29.—A Montreal express on the Central Vermont railway struck the rear of a freight train in a thick fog here, wrecking eight freight cars. The express train was not derailed. C. H. Davidson, freight engineer, was the only person injured.

Aged Man Dies In Fire

Springfield, Mass., Oct. 29.—Milton Bruce, 81 years old, was suffocated in a fire in the Enos Penny building. The man was a piano tuner and was employed in the Penny piano store. His body was not found until the fire, which did little damage, had been extinguished.

Land Office Men Removed

Washington, Oct. 29.—President Taft has removed Edward L. Barnes, register of the land office at Great Falls, Mont., and accepted the resignation of Receiver Wilson of the same office following an investigation.

The Highest Railway.

For thirty-nine years the highest railway in the world was the Oroya line in Peru, which at one place reaches an altitude of 4.834 meters above sea level. Passengers who wish to avoid the risk of mountain sickness in its most aggravated form have to make two or three stops of a day or two on the way up. Since July this line has taken second place, as the new Bolivian railway which connects Potosi with Rio Mulati reaches an altitude of 4.880 meters. It is not considered likely that this record will ever be surpassed unless Tibet is opened to civilization.

PLUG SLIPPED ALARM RUNG

Police Rushed to Bank Fully Prepared For Worst

The ringing of the burglar alarm on the Granite Trust Co. about 3.55 Monday afternoon drew a large crowd and the police auto with all available policemen dashed up the entrance about one minute after the alarm sounded at the station.

When they entered the bank they were greeted by the happy smiles of the officials and clerks and departed after it was explained that one of the plugs had slipped out and formed a circuit as they were closing the vault for the day.

DIVORCE SUIT POSTPONED

Talk of Reconciliation Between Millionaire Plant and His Wife

Boston, Oct. 29.—The divorce suit of Mrs. Caroline Plant, Boston society leader, against Thomas G. Plant, was postponed indefinitely in the Suffolk county divorce court.

The indefinite postponment again gave rise to the reported reconciliation of the millionaire shoe manufacturer and his wife. None of the lawyers in the case would discuss it. Friends of the couple point to the fact that Mrs. Plant's attachments on Plant's property have gradually been released, as proof of the reported reconciliation.

"HUMAN OSTRICH" INDEED

Miniature Junkshop Found In Abdomen of Luke Parsons

Pittsfield, Mass., Oct. 29.—One hundred and thrty-two nails, two keys and a piece of crude iron were the indigestible articles taken from the abdomen of Luke Parsons, aged 40, known as the "human ostrich," in an operation performed upon him at the House of Mercy in this city.

The operation revealed that one of the nails had punctured the wall of the abdomen, resulting in peritonitis. The man's cast-iron constitution leads to the belief that Luke will be able to weather the present storm, though the doctors will make no prediction.

BEFORE THE CAMERA.

The Best Pose, as a Rule, Is For the Three-quarter Face.

How very few people really know how to sit for a photograph! Every face has its weak points, and these, unfortunately, have a way of cropping up in a picture and ruining the effect. Of course a photograph should be absolutely lifelike, but at the same time one naturally prefers to look one's best.

Scarcely one face in a hundred has features perfect enough to promise a satisfactory photograph in profile, for this pose brings any little defect into the foreground.

For a full face picture a sitter must possess fine eyes, above all things. If they are good the pose will be a success, even if the other features are lacking in comeliness.

If one has any pronounced defects to hide, the three-quarter face is really the happiest way to be photographed This position enhances the charms of the beautiful and tones down the irregularities of the plain face.

It is never well to be photographed in a hat distinctly modern style, for in a year or so the picture is ruined by the old fashioned headgear. But a picture hat—such as those worn by the Gainsborough women—makes a most picturesque setting for a beautiful face, and this, of course, is never out of fashion.—London Answers.

They Tell a Different Story.

There are peculiarities of our English language which no other language exhibits. Did you ever notice how many English words are formed by simply dropping the first letters—for example, wheat, heat, eat, at; sham, ham, am; wheel, heel, eel; whale, hale, ale, and scores of others?

Again, we have in our mother tongue two words which joined together, make a distinct word of an entirely different meaning, just as a single word disjointed does. Take the words "since" and "rely" or the separate word "sincerely." To illustrate:

Your letter came in words that tempt me dearly.
You wrote them, sweet, most truly and sincerely.
For praise like that heroes might gladly die.
But on another's love you since rely.

"Uncle George" from Bristol and the venerable Doctor Bowditch will do the honors in distributing the dance orders which are themselves of a most unique character.

THE WAG OF DOGGIE'S TAIL.

A. G. Riddoch.

When our gilden castles totter
And our sky grows strangely dark,
When the glow of hope has dwindled
To a feeble, flickering spark,
When our faith in self is shattered
And our earnest efforts fail,
We may still find inspiration
In the wag of doggie's tail.

When the tots who loved to meet us
With sweet kisses at the gate,
And who used to beg for stories
When the hour was getting late,
Have all grown to men and women
And from home have taken sail,
We may find unlooked-for comfort
In the wag of doggie's tail.

When the friends we loved and trusted
Have forgotten to be kind
And have shown us to our sorrow
That our foolish love was blind,
And have hastened from our presence
At the first cold shower of hail,
There's a saving friend who's mirrored
In the wag of doggie's tail.

Trouble comes to every mortal
Struggling through the mires below,
And o'er every heart's warm surface
Icy breezes soon may blow;
Yet when vexing cares and sorrows
Strike our hearts and make them quail,
We will still find consolation
In the wag of doggie's tail.

—A Nebraska paper, whose editor isn't emulating the late George Washington, says that one day a short time since, a farmer went out after a load of straw. Having no pole with which to bind his load he took his axe and commenced to chop down a stalk of corn for the purpose. He had it nearly cut in two when one of the ears of corn became detached and fell crushing him to the ground. It broke his neck and one of his legs in seven pieces. He would have died but for the health giving properties of the Nebraska climate, which made a well man of him before he had walked half way to the house.

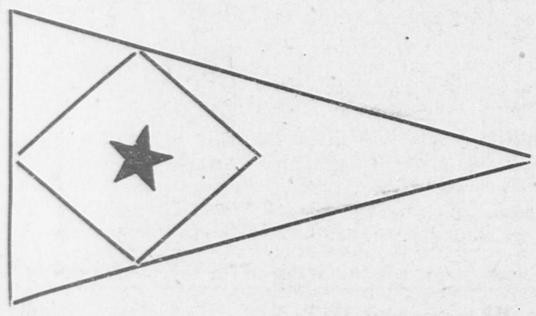
TOWN RIVER YACHT CLUB BURNS $1,000 MORTGAGE

Incident Conducted With Much Ceremony By Officers and Members

Mrs. Mellen Presented Cup and Pennant to Winner

A little wreath of smoke, a tiny blue flame and the mortgage for $1,000 which has been hanging over the Town River yacht club for a year was destroyed and the club was free from debt. The interesting event took place Tuesday evening at the club home at the foot of Edison park. It was a two fold celebration, first the burning of the mortgage and lastly the presentation of the Mellen trophy and other prizes won by the club's boats, during its first season.



The club has over 100 members and appearances indicated that all were present, as well as the 15 gentlemen whose names were posted on the bulletin board for membership and a few guests including Mayor Stone, the first Commodore of the club, Commodore Ira M. Whittemore of the Quincy yacht club, Commodore E. A. Bean of the Wollaston yacht club, Representative Walter E. Piper, Dock and Water Front Commissioner, Frank F. Crane, Councilman Stephen L. Devaney and others.

The evening started off with an appetizing supper consisting of cold meats, escalloped oysters, potato salad, rolls, coffee, pies of various kinds. Before starting in with the good things to eat however, Commodore Thompson B. Crane, who presided called upon Mayor Stone the first Commodore of the club.

His Honor said that he was greatly pleased to be present and perform the most pleasing duty; which he had been called upon to do since he became Mayor. A little over a year ago he said a few gentlemen met at different houses and talked of forming a yacht club. Then the number becoming too large for homes they met in his stable and lastly it was voted to buy the present property. The prize was $1,500 but all the money the club had at that time was $500. This was paid and a mortgage given for the balance $1,000. "Now after a year of phenomonal success we stand here tonight with a building, furnishings and float free from debt and a full fledged yacht club." It was therefore a great pleasure for him to burn the mortgage. He then read the mortgage after which it was placed in a platter, a little alcohol poured on, a lighted match applied and as the blue flame crept skyward the party stood up and cheered and drank a toast to the future success of the club.

Supper was then in order after which Elijah P. Barrows was introduced to speak on the past, present and future of the club. He spoke briefly of the early days and the struggle for existence. He would as soon try and race a wheelbarrow as a power boat in the river. The club was of course handicapped in its races by the flats in the river but designs had been made for a special class for the club. It was a special designed sailing skiff, 14 feet long, 6-6 beam and 5 inches draft. It would be cat rigged and carry one square sail of 137 feet. Such a boat could

Present Administration Not to Blame For the Accumulations of Years

Mayor Stone Gives His Views on City's Financial Situation

With the largest attendance in its history and Mayor Stone as the leading speaker the Men's club of the Park and Downs church observed its opening meeting and ladies' night, Tuesday evening.

Music and readings together with remarks from Councilmen Murray and Bailey made up an evening of unusual interest.

A straw vote for Presidential preference taken among the men resulted as follows

Roosevelt	52
Taft	10
Wilson	10

The women vote stood:

Roosevelt	83
Taft	3
Wilson	4

Messrs Watts, Robinnson and Cochrane were appointed a civic legislative committee to keep in touch with the city council and report back to the club. The committee was also instructed to do all in its power to prevent the further erection of "three deckers" in Wollaston. About 175 sat down to an excellent repast served by the ladies.

At the head table were Mayor Eugene R. Stone, Rev. William B. Ayers, President MacMulkin, Dr. J. A. Zwicker, William Kershaw, Lieutenant James D. Wilson, Mr. Watts, Walter H. Cobb, J. Harry Hooper, Frank C. Blake, Alonzo Bissett, and Frank Knowlton.

During the meal the church orchestra, Miss Henrietta C. Gram, Miss Emily Bjorkman, Miss Louise Stephens, Ernest Pletsch and Charles A. Richardson, rendered selections.

Readings "The Jiners" and "Signing the pledge" by Mrs. Fred B. Robinson were loudly applauded as were "Goodbye Sweet Day" and "Come to Me," solos by Arthur F. Capen.

Mayor Stone spoke in part as follows:

Mayor Stone said:—

"Before I go into details this evening, I want to take a few moments of your time and say a word about the City of Quincy. Quincy, as you know, has an area of about 16 square miles, and about 100 miles of accepted streets, the largest in the Metropolitan District outside of Boston. The phenominal growth of the City in the past ten years has made it almost impossible, with our small valuation, to furnish the needed improvements such as schools, streets, lights, water, sewer and other improvements. The need of these things has caused the City to borrow heavily, and therefore our debt.

MAYOR EUGENE R. STONE.

"While I admit that our debt is a bad thing, and should be paid, and I will later explain to you how I have made a beginning towards paying that debt; I believe that more real harm is being done the City by holding up to ridicule the financial condition, which, when you consider our assets, is not very bad, I assure you, not so bad in fact but what the brokers are willing to get our bonds and pay as good a premium as they will for any city bonds.

"I believe in investigation of all trust funds, but it is poor policy to make that investigation public, especially when it is found that the funds are in good condition. The order which Councilman Abele succeeded in geting through in 1908 or 1909 was a great blow to the Woodward Fund, as some of its best borrowers refused to longer use the funds, as they did

Mr. Shaw Deplores Inactivity of Citizens In This Department

Views Of Candidates On Various Public Enterprises Desired

Editor of the Ledger:

It was hoped that some of the matters touched upon in this series of letters would sufficiently arouse public opinion to call forth a public expression of views upon some of our municipal problems. That so few have exhibited enough interest to address the public through the medium of the press and set forth their views upon these matters which seem to be so vital to us all is not, I sincerely hope and believe, because of any lack of interest, but rather through lack of initiative.

The most discouraging sign of the absence of a strong, healthy, civic interest in our city's affairs at the present writing is the fact that so few men have come into the field as candidates for the City Council of 1913. After a week of opportunity there are still lacking several candidates for the Council. Many of the candidates have found it necessary to procure their own nomination papers, and the papers of most of the candidates for office have been procured by some member of the present City Government.

It was fondly hoped that one of the results which might accrue through the publication of these letters would be the sufficient awakening of the people to ensure the instillation of some new blood into the Council of 1913, but at present the situation does not look very encouraging in this regard. That about the same old candidates will go on the ballot again seems to be indicated by the nomination papers that have been taken out up to the present time.

Well,—if this is what the people desire,—so be it.

But in any event I am sure we should all appreciate hearing from the various candidates as to their position upon some of the various problems which confront our city; and I am going to take the liberty to invite a statement, or expression of views, through the medium of the press of the city, upon a few of the matters which are likely to come before the City Government of 1913.

I am sure the newspapers will welcome such statements, and open their columns to so worthy a purpose; and I trust that the candidates for Mayor and also the candidates for the Council-at-large will discuss publicly the matters in which we are all so deeply interested in order that we may know where they stand upon these matters.

The matter of the tax-rate is touching us all in an intimate way, and it is largely owing to the rates in recent years being lower than they should properly have been made, that the present rate is so high. If we are ever going to get back on a firm financial foundation, someone has got to begin pretty soon to straighten out this situation and put all current expenses into the tax-rate. I think we should all be glad to read the views of the candidates for Mayor upon this matter.

Then there is the matter of the collection of taxes,— which has been so lax in the past. Are we going to go right along two, three, five, ten years and more behind in these collections, so that we shall have some more "temporary" loans that have to be made "permanent?" Let's have the views of the candidates whether Quincy can afford to finance our land operators' business ventures or not.

Then, again, in our Public Works department, are we going to plod along in the same old rut, spending two dollars to get 75 cents worth of construction work done, or are we going to get a little closer to business methods in this department? Tell us what you are going to do if elected, Messrs. Candidates.

And, of course, it is understood that we don't hire any more titles examined by outside attorneys at $400 per 16, so long as we are paying a City Solicitor to do such work. Or do we? Perhaps there is some good reason why we should?

Also, how about the Water Department? Are we going to have a thorough and scientific overhauling here, and fixx our water rates on scientific principles? Are we going to sell any more water at less than cost, or are we going to fix our rates on a business-like basis?

Tell us what it is proposed to do in relation to that little matter of seventy odd per centum of leakage or waste shown by last year's figures.

Again, are we going to have a careful adjustment of the affairs of the Sewer Department, and, if we can't find out what became of the $50,000 deficit, are we going to provide to square the books, collect outstanding

NOTICE.

The Ledger is receiving a great many communications these days, the more the better, and is glad to give publicity to the thoughts therein expressed, especially when they are for the good of the city as a whole, believing too much publicity cannot be given under the circumstances. We will accept anything for publication that is honest criticism without malice or personal grudge, provided the communication is sent in with the writer's name and address. It would seem as though it was not necessary for us to again reiterate that we do not accept or use anonymous communications but as we receive unsigned letters most every day whose fate is the waste basket the statement seems necessary. Why not follow the rule of this and other newspapers?

MASSACHUSETTS PRISONS.

However strong, or even overdrawn, may be the statements of the Dorchester clergyman who so positively condemns conditions existing in the prisons of this state, notice must be taken of it, to learn the exact state of affairs. If reforms are needed they should be studied with a view to producing the best possible results. It is a matter which can be more wisely settled by careful and slow action than by slipshod hasty and inadequate methods advocated and put into operation on the spur of the moment.

The care of criminals in any community is a grave problem. As much harm can be accomplished by misfit philanthrophy as by actually poor conditions. Prisons likeother institutions have their average quota of peculiar people. Some can be reformed and led to the pursuit of a better life. Others seem unequal to lifting themselves outside the criminal circle no matter how much is done to aid them. It would be more charitable in the end to keep this latter class, constantly under restraint, to minimize their power and opportunity to perform evil. On the other hand there are cases where a genuine reform can be secured and for this class every chance for betterment and reform should be afforded. It is difficult however without some study of the various patients, to tell just what would fit each individual case, but such a course cannot be reached except by a careful study of the subject. Therefore before indulging in any great reforms in prison conditions, it would be well to make haste slowly.

AN ANXIOUS MOMENT.

People who heard the alarm sound from the bank in City Square, Monday afternoon where thrilled at the possibilities which might attend such an incident. Every one who heard the signal was on the anxious seat for a few minutes. Visions of bold day light robbers, with black masks, armed with revolvers and threatening the lives of bank officials and any one else who happened in their path loomed up big to the imaginative mind. Many timid ones, while filled with curiousity were fearful of personal consequences if they hastened to the danger zone, so they wisely remained away, gave the Square a wide berth and were content to await developments and glean their knowledge of the robbery and possible tragedy later from others more venturesome.

The police were quickly on the scene prepared to meet any emergency which presented itself. Fortunately there was no occasion for their services. The alarm was a false one and no one was sorry that it proved false and was merely the result of a simple accident. The efficiency of the alarm, the promptitude and willingness of the police to take their chances in the event of robbery were however demonstrated and it will undoubtedly serve as a warning to any who may have been casting burglarious eyes upon the local banks. Burglars would have a poor chance with that alarm in good working order to get any kind of a haul and succeed in making their escape. For all of which the public should be grateful.

THE VICE PRESIDENT.

It is with genuine regret, that men in all walks of life learn of the serious condition of the health of the vice president. The position is not one that affords much opportunity for development or political activity. But it is an honorable place, with always the possibility of rising to the greater position, and the man has to in a measure frame up to the greater position which he may some time fill, when placed in the former. James S. Sherman, has in his four years in Washington gained the respect of all parties. He has become a well known figure at the capital and is popular with all parties. He has mixed with men of all political shades in a true gentlemanly manner. He has not lost anything of dignity or prestige, simply because he held the nominally empty place of Vice President.

His illness coming at this time, rather complicates matters especially where it is pointed out that his ailment is serious and one from little hope of recovery is held out. He must be a very sick man at this time judging from the announcements which his physicians and family have made. The country as a whole unites in extending sympathy and good wishes for recovery to the vice president.

TOWN RIVER YACHT CLUB

readily sail in the river and besides it would be an able boat so that anyone knowing how to sail could go into the lower harbor with safety. A class of this designed boat was an assured fact and it was expected that there would be from eight to ten boats of this kind next year. The club did not wish to enter into competition with other clubs but desired a boat that could be raced in the river and if they got stuck in the mud could readily be pushed off.

Commodore Whittemore brought the greetings of the Quincy yacht club the parent yacht club of the city. For a club so young to obtain a club house and have it free from debt showed good management and the club was to be congratulated. He had been pleased to see boats flying the Town River club flag at the Quincy club races the past summer. Unlike most clubs, this club had ideal winter quarters and was therefore an all the year club.

Commodore Crane in introducing Representative Piper said that it was well known that a bill for dredging Town river had passed the legislature last year but there was a string to it, and Representative Piper would tell the club how to get rid of that string.

Representative Piper said that it was refreshing to meet as on this occasion and not have it a political gathering. It was his first visit to the club's quarters and he hoped that it would not be his last. A club of this kind was a good thing for the community and the city. Speaking of the dredging bill he said it was with some difficulty that the bill was got by the ways and means committee as there were many other sections looking for money for dredging. When the bill did pass it had a string as the Commodore had stated. That string was that the money should not become available until the Port Directors were assured that a public dock would be maintained by the city. He believed that by another summer this would be done. If not it might be possible next year to have that clause striken from the bill.

Following this came a selection by the Town River quartette, composed of Richard Green, A. Gregory, George O'Donnell, and D. M. Baker who sang "Moonlight Bay." While they were singing the outer door opened and a lady walked in. It was Mrs. Carolyn B. Mellen who came to present in person the trophy donated by her to the winner.

Mrs. Mellen when called upon said that it was not often that a woman invaded a gathering of this kind and she felt particularly honored to be present even for a few minutes, to perform a most pleasant duty. It was with a keen sense of pleasure also that the club had adopted as its flag one of her design, and to stimulate racing she had given the cup. It was a great pleasure to therefore to have the honor of presenting the cup to its first winner, Allan McGeachie, owner of the class A. power boat Sadie who had gained a percentage of 263 1-2 in the three races and she hoped that he would continue his good work and if he had the same good luck that she would have the pleasure of again presenting the cup next year and if not some young woman would perform the duty.

In accepting the cup and blue pennant which the club presented with it Mr. McGeachie said that it was a great pleasure to him to receive the cup from Mrs. Mellen. He felt that the races of the club had been a success the past season and would be more so next season.

The blue pennant was presented separately by Mrs. Mellen who said that it was an added pleasure to make this presentation and hoped that it would hang in the skippers home and that it would give him as much pleasure as it did her to present it. In reply Capt. McGeachie said that it would be a great pleasure for him to hang the pennant in his room.

Commodore Crane presented the other trophies and winners as follows:—

July 4th races. Class A. power boats, blue ribbon, to the Gladys, owned by William Lynch.

Class B. power boats to Starlight of William Kemp.

Sailing boats, to the Olive owned by J. Matherson.

The Commodore's pennant for the Labor Day race for small sail boats was awarded to the Frithja owned by William Kolvig.

The cup for the speed boat race was awarded to the Carolyn, owned by J. R. Mellen.

Commodore E. L. Bean of the Wollaston Yacht club brought the greetings of his club. He also paid a tribute to Mayor Stone and Representatives Piper and Leslie and while this was in no way a political gathering he hoped that Mr. Piper and Leslie would not be forgotten next Tuesday. Quincy he said was one of the greatest yachting centres in the state and this was a most hustling kid. He believed that Quincy was destined to become the leading yachting centre of the state. In closing he said that next year he could assure the Town River club that the Wollaston club would give the special design class a chance to race for a trophy, an announcement that was received with loud applause.

Commodore Crane then read a letter from Representative Leslie expressing his regrets that he was unable to be present and wishing the club all kinds of good luck in the future.

Dock Commissioner Crane spoke of Quincy's unsurpassed water front and the possibilities for development. He said that the matter of selecting a site for Quincy's public dock was then in the hands of a special committee and he believed that it would only be a question of a short time before it would be an accomplished fact.

Councilman Stephen L. Devaney also spoke briefly, congratulating the club on its good fortune in being able to burn the mortgage which had been hanging over it for a year and he predicted a bright future for the Town River yacht club.

During the speaking there was selections by Dennel's orchestra and by the Town River quartette and solos by individual members of the quartette never been a politician but if elected would take off his coat and work for his district.

He denounced the attitude of the majority if the newspapers whose policy was influenced by the great trusts who occupy large advertising space and displayed an eight page supplement to one of the Sunday issues of a Boston newspaper, containing write ups of certain manufactories which he claimed cost the latter $6272.

Colonel Kincaide challenged Wilson as responsible for the loose corporation laws in the state of New Jersey. He characterized Foss as a modern Paul Revere who had ridden up and down the state promising the reduction in the high cost of living but accomplishing nothing. In closing he urged Quincy to pull together declaring that he wore no party collar and promising to do his full duty as he felt it.

John Evans of West Quincy, candidate for representative, referred to the recent newspaper article on "patriotic John Evans," "I would rather be an American patriot," he said "than a Rockfeller, a marquis, an earl or any of the rest of them."

The speaker referred to the national and local political conditions in such an original manner that much laughter followed his sallies.

His opponent Representative was roundly scored for voting in favor of several bills which, the speaker declared, should never have been allowed to go through. Among these was the increased salary of county commissioners.

Candidate for representative Joseph P. Roberts closed the meeting with quotations from the constitution of Massachusetts and urged that all work to revive the true liberty formulated by our former townsman, John Adams.

TURKS IN VERY TIGHT PLACE

Must Strike Soon and Strike Hard to Save Macedonia

ALLIES GAINING MOMENTUM

Country Through Which They Are Sweeping Being Combed of Its Garrisons—Derision of European Military Experts Gives Way to Surprise—Too Late For Intervention

London, Oct. 30.—Turkey must strike soon and strike hard, if she has any intention of making a serious fight for Macedonia. While the successes of the allied armies so far may be regarded as merely preliminary victories yet they are gaining momentum and confidence as they move into and through Macedonia from all directions.

European military experts first expressed the utmost confidence in the Turkish army and more or less derision of the Balkan soldier, with the exception of the Bulgarians. Then they raged at the "faked" dispatches which told of Turkish defeats. Astonishment held them as Kirk-Kilisse fell, and now they wonder where the Turkish army is and figure on how much of a stand it will make at Constantinople.

In the meantime the allies are travelling on, combing the Turkish garrisons out of Macedonia. They are in the rear of Adrianople and have cut the railroad both east and west of Kuleli Burgas, where the Adrianople line branches off to Salonica and Constantinople. A Bulgarian army is threatening the Turkish second line of defense nearer the capital.

Nazim Pasha, the Turkish minister of war and commander-in-chief, with four army corps, is holding the line from Tchorlu to Lule Burgas. He appears to occupy a perilous position, with the Bulgarians on his right flank at Eski-Baba, cutting him off from the army of Adrianople, while the destruction of the bridge over the Tchoorlu river prevents him from obtaining re-enforcements and supplies from Constantinople.

The Servians are moving down the railroad from Uskup toward Salonica, while the Greeks are moving north and are reported astride the railroad at Verria, midway between Monastir and Salonica. They are thus in the rear of Monastir and threatening Salonica and have cut off the Turkish army defeated at Uskup.

The capture of Verria by the Greeks enables them to effect a junction with the Bulgarian army coming down from Novrokop and Drama through the Struma valley, and concentrating at Serres and with the Servians, who are advancing upon Veles. Montenegrins and Servians are chasing the Turks out of Sanjak of Novipazar and the Montenegrins, unaided, appear to be shaking the foundations of the Turkish hold on Scutari.

Active diplomatic negotiations are going on among the powers. The British minister at Cettinje, Montenegro, in company with the Montenegrin foreign minister, visited King Nicholas at Rieka, and this is regarded as undoubtedly in connection with the conversations held with the ambassadors of the powers in London, by Sir Edward Grey, the British foreign minister.

Could the powers intervene now or at the conclusion of a successful war by the Balkan alliance? This question opens up a wide field for discussion. There is no doubt that financial interests of Europe desire the restoration of the status quo ante in Macedonia, no matter what the result in the theatre of war.

With the Christian armies knocking at the door of the chief city of the Moslems, the peril to the peace of Europe would be greatly augmented. Intervention at this time, or later, however, will meet two great obstacles—the armies of the Balkan states flushed with victory and popular opinion in France and Russia.

Under the leadership of Great Britain, Austria and Germany, aided by the financiers of France, might be perfectly willing to replace the cross with the crescent in blood-soaked Macedonia—Austria and Germany because they want to go down to the Mediterranean some day themselves and Great Britain because she does not want a new strong force on her trade route to India.

These interests sought to prevent the Balkan states from taking up the sword by refusing them loans, but without success. Lack of money will not prevent a general war, either if greed leads Austria or some other power to attempt to take coveted lands.

Perhaps no country in Europe showed keener appreciation of the approaching crisis than did Russia, who long before the beginning of actual hostilities prepared for any eventuality.

It has become generally known that every general staff has plans for all sorts of combinations to meet all sorts of conditions.

Quick Action.

"Rube, how cold did you ever see it?" He said. "Well, sir, one time when I was living down in Pickaway county, in hog killing time, we had a kettle of boiling water setting on the stove, and we took it out in the yard, and it froze so doggone quick the ice was hot."—National Monthly.

QUINCY ALLIANCE.

Quincy Alliance held its regular meeting, Monday afternoon, in the parlor of the First church, Mrs. Geo. G. Saville, president in the chair.

The Christmas party was spoken of and arrangements were left in the hands of the following committees: Mrs. Wilson Marsh and Mrs. Frank S. Davis on invitations; Mrs. E. Granville Pratt, supper; and Miss Harriet Pierce, entertainment.

Mrs. Saville spoke of the gift of the late Mrs. Lydia A. Morton very feelingly and gratefully. Mrs. J. H. Emery reported her barrel of clothing as having been sent South. Two barrels are to be sent next week by Mrs. Edward B. Marsh and Mrs. George G. Saville.

Under the auspices of the music committee, Mrs. John D. Buckingham chairman, Miss Amy Fallon, a pupil of Mr. Buckingham, executed very brilliantly and with much expression, the Irish melodies, "Believe Me" and "Gag Owen." The music was much appreciated and received generous applause.

Mrs. Saville then introduced the speaker of the afternoon, Mrs. Lucia Clapp Noyes of Jamaica Plain, who took for her subject, "Alliance Financial Methods." Mrs. Noyes said in part: "I am a firm believer in the work of the Alliance and enter heart and soul into the advancement of its cause. I am absolutely certain we have a message to carry to all parts of the world. The world wants the message, but does not know it, it is for us with the courage and cheer of perfect faith, to face the future confidently and as opportunities present themselves for kindness, helpfulness and generosity, may we be found faithful as alliance members to do our work of service, forgetful of self, with the increasing conviction that we have been enabled to impart to the world a larger faith, a clearer vision and a closer comprehension of the love of God.

"In regard to the financial side of Alliance work, I really enjoy and love to add long columns of figures, so it is no burden to me to serve in this capacity. I have hunted three days for two cents to make my accounts balance, and have been made very happy thereby.

"About $159,000 raised by the Alliance members have passed through the hands of your treasurer. At our headquarters, 25 Beacon street, Boston, two clerks who thoroughly understand Alliance work from A to Z, receive salaries. The work consists of the "Cheerful Letter" correspondence, P. O. Mission, etc.

"The recording secretary has practically full charge, and is a perfect fund of information. $1800 goes for salaries, $700 for printing and Unitarian literature. $1000 for travelling expenses. This seems a large sum but when you consider the large amount of territory covered, through the north west, Canada and the British provinces, in fact in every direction our Alliance work reaches out a helping hand. $400 are given to Grace chapel, Green Harbor, and the little band of worshippers there are very grateful. Our churches in the South are growing and increasing and I always respond to their appeals. Then we are about to build a new church in Jamaica for Rev. Ethered Brown, who is very enthusiastic, and is doing good work among the colored people, and the class distinction is not so strong as in the Southern states.

"We also keep in touch with college girls, Unitarian girls who are away from home influences. We encourage them to show their colors, form Alliances, invite their friends to join and distribute denominational literature, thus doing a splendid work.

"We also assist young men who are desirous of becoming Unitarian ministers. We have given $500. to help build a church at Flushing, L. I., Redwood, N. J., Farmington, Maine, and many other instances I might mention.

"We as Alliance members have every reason to be encouraged, the Alliance is a significant and permanent fact. May we see beneath life's busy activities the great good we are accomplishing among men, and work with renewed zeal for the coming generations."

At the close of Mrs. Noyes' remarks, a social, informal hour was enjoyed during which all had an opportunity to greet and thank her for her helpful talk.

Refreshments were served, Miss Mary W. Holdon and Miss Lucy M. Spear the hostesses presiding at the chocolate urns. Those assisting were Mrs. Ralph L. Lovell, Mrs. Eugene Atwood, Miss Belle Nightingale and Mrs. William Hodgkinson.

—The New Jersey boy of Canadian parentage, who was expelled from the high school because he would not announce his allegiance to the United States, would seem to have a good action at law against the school board, whose patriotism so far exceeded their common sense. It is a poor brand of patriotism, and if the school board were put in the boy's place, they would undoubtedly take the same position he did, on the matter.—Old Colony Memorial.

FATHER AND SON VERY GENEROUS

Kings Cancelled an Indebtedness of No-License League

THEN GAVE $2,000 MORE

The Massachusetts No-License League held its annual banquet in Ford hall Thursday evening and Dr. Charles W. Eliot, President-Emeritus of Harvard and Honorary President presided. At the afternoon session, Delcevare King of this city, chairman of the exectutive committee, presided.

It was announced by Treasurer Theodore H. Raymond of Cambridge that Delcevare King, and his father Theophilus King, had cancelled an indebtedness to them by the league of $7,200, and that in fulfillment of the condition that $4,000 be raised, gave $2,000 more to aid in carrying on the work.

Dr. Eliot said the drink habit was more prevalent in Northern Europe than elsewhere.

Rev. O. P. Gifford of Brookline, spoke on the Bar and Bottle bill and Mayor Barry of Cambridge told of his city's development since it had joined the No-License ranks.

Mayor Connery of Lynn said the No-License League was the greatest organization in the world, except the church, and cited his city as an example of the No-License influence.

John T. Shea, past secretary of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union, and prominent in the affairs of the St. Mary's Catholic Total Abstinence and Mutual Relief Association of West Quincy, also spoke.

Other speakers were President George W. Alden of the Brockton league, Charles A. Bliss of Newburyport and Superintendent Arthur J. Davis of the Massachusetts Anti-Saloon League.

HORSE BOLTED WOMAN THROWN

Latter Fortunately Escaped With Few Bruises

RUNAWAY'S MAD FLIGHT

Mrs. James McDonough of Washington, D. C., who is visiting her parents Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Johnson, Merrymount Road was knocked down opposite 160 Palmer street, Germantown, this morning as she was getting into a buggy, when a horse she was driving started to run away. She held onto the reins and the buggy passed over her and she was slightly bruised, when she was forced to drop the reins.

The horse, with the buggy trailing behind headed up Sea street and when near the Adams farmhouse broke away and continued with the harness flying. She came through the square at a fast clip and when in front of the bank building stepped on a rein and was thrown.

Ernest Bizzozero of West Quincy, who was on the sidewalk, ran into the street and grabbed the reins. The horse was taken to Hall's stable where she was examined and found to be cut on the nigh flank. The buggy was damaged.

MUSICALE TO AID PIANO FUND

Wollaston School Hall Well Filled With Appreciative Audience

An appreciative audience that nearly filled the large Wollaston School hall attended the musicale held Tuesday evening in aid of a new school piano. The affair was a distinct success and the artists and management are to be congratulated upon the series of fine effects obtained.

The program opened with the "Winter Song" by the High School Glee club under the direction of Miss Emma A. Perkins.

Chopin's "Ballade III" was delightfully rendered by William Keim, a pupil of Carl Faelton, his brilliant technique showing prominently in this as well as his other numbers.

Mrs. James H. Slade sang "Chanson Provencale," a soprano solos by Dell 'Oqua most beautifully and maintained the reputation she has gained in Quincy and other circles.

Mrs. A. Isabelle Davis contributed a reading "The white silhouette" with her usual dramatic style. Two flute solos Papillon" by Kohler and "Audalonse" by Pessard were well played by Lucien H. Thayer.

A trio consisting of Mrs. Adelaide Thomas Sutherland, violin; Miss Marion Moorhouse, 'cello and Miss Grace Farrington played the "Allegro" and "Andante." movements of Carl Bohm the harmonizing of the three instruments being perfect.

A duet by Mrs. Slade and Mr. Greene closed the first half of the program, the sympathetic voice of Mr. Greene blending pleasantly with the clear voice of Mrs. Slade.

For the opening number of part two "The Rosary" by Nevin was sung by the High School double quartet, Elton Chase, Leon Randall, Edward Bullock, Richard Larkin, Raymond Cassidy, Camille Fuller, Winslow Weston and Clifton Young, with a solo obligato by Leon Randall.

A group of songs by Mr. Greene and piano solos "Cujus Animam" from the "Stabat Mater" and "Valse Courante Lachaume" followed.

"Jimmy entertains the minister" a humorous reading by Mrs. Davis was replete with ludicrous situations and juvenile revelations.

A solo "Arie aus ill re Pastore" by Mozart sung by Mrs. Slade with flute obligato by Mr. Thayer delighted the audience.

Two numbers by the trio "Ectase" by Ganne and "Grecian Dance" by Wagner brought the program to a close. Owing to the length of the program no encores were given.

Much credit is due to William E. Weston for his fine work as accompanist to Miss Perkins for her careful training of the chorus and Miss Clara Thayer from whose suggestion the affair started received congratulations on all sides.

The following teachers acted in the capacity of ushers: Misses Etta M. Cummings, Evelyn M. Farrington, Gladys B. Goodenow, Charlotte G. Nash, Vera A. Hornar, Beulah A. Sturtevant, Harriett P. Hayford, Annie J. Flieger and Ellen C. Shyne.

Decorations in red and green of palms, berries, geraniums and autumn leaves were in evidence.

ELMENDORF LECTURES.

From beautiful Monterey to the summit of Mt. Hood will be the extent of the fourth illustrated lecture in Dwight Elemendorf's delightful series to be given at Symphony Hall, Boston, next Friday evening and Saturday afternoon. After picturing San Francisco as it was and is today, he will conduct his hearers to San Jose, through the fruit valley of Santa Clara to the famous Lick observatory, and then on to that artist's Paradise, Monterey, with its memories of old Castilian days and its Del Monte, where a rest is taken to prepare for scenes of beauty in the Yosemite valley. Here Mr. Elmendorf will let his pictures tell the message he wishes to deliver. From the Yosemite, the tour is continued northward, showing Mt. Shasta, Portland, the Columbia river to Mt. Hood, Seattle and Mt. Rainier.

HALLOWE'EN WHIST PARTY.

A very enjoyable Hallowe'en whist party was given at the home of Mrs. Edward E. Jameson Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Abigail Phillips Quincy Chapter D. A. R. of Wollaston. About 40 guests were present who were met at the door by a veritable ghost with outstretched welcoming hands.

The house was fantastically decorated in appropriate Hallowe'en fashion with funny pumpkin faces peeping out from behind withered cornstalks.

At a late hour refreshments were served of brown bread sandwiches, doughnuts, red apples and cider.

The lady's souvenir was a droll bisque figure won by Mrs. Theodore DuPlessis and the man's prize, a comical Hallowe'en souvenir, went to Wallace Rood.

The affair was arranged by the Entertainment committee of D. A. R., Mrs. George B. Damon, chairman.

FOSS REPLIES TO WALKER

Willing to Call Session of Legislature Under Certain Conditions

Boston, Oct. 30.—Governor Foss, in a letter to Joseph Walker, his Republican opponent, says he will call a session of the legislature for the enactment of a senatorial primary bill if Walker can secure pledges from the Republican members of the present general court in favor of a senatorial primary and the Republican executive council consents to calling the special session.

The governor's letter is the result of the Walker letter to Charles S. Bird, the Progressive candidate. The governor asks Walker if he has gone over to the Progressives and abandoned Senators Lodge and Crane.

He also says Walker and Crane have been inconspicuous in the movement toward a popular senatorial preference primary hitherto.

POLICEMAN SLAIN IN BOSTON STREET

Gets Bullet In Stomach as He Accosts Two Italians

Boston, Oct. 30.—Patrolman Albert R. Peterson of station 3, West End, was shot by an Italian in Pitts street yesterday morning and died yesterday afternoon. He rallied long enough to tell of the shooting.

Two Italians were walking up Green street. A man and woman passed them and a moment later complained to the patrolman that one of the Italians had insulted the woman. Peterson overtook the two Italians and spoke to them about the complaint and without warning a revolver was pressed to his stomach and discharged. The Italians ran in opposite directions.

Peterson staggered into a restaurant, where word was sent to the police station. About 100 policemen searched the district but found no trace of the missing men. Peterson was 36 years old.

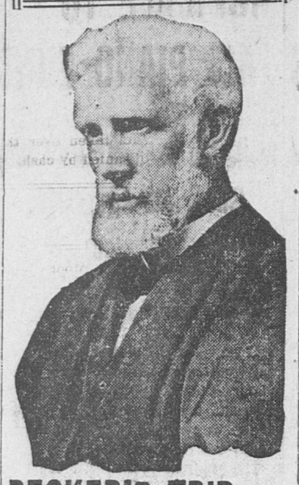
JUSTICE JOHN W. GOFF



BECKER'S TRIP TO SING SING

Will Not Be Delayed After Sentence Is Pronounced

HE DROPS LAWYER McINTYRE

Has Three Other Prominent Attorneys Under Consideration—Shapiro Identifies Four Gunmen as His Passengers on Night of Rosenthal Murder—Will Be Principal Witness Against Them

New York, Oct. 30.—Charles Becker will be sentenced today to die in the electric chair at Sing Sing for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler.

"The death house" at Sing Sing will be Becker's home, beginning not later than Sunday, the state plans. District Attorney Whitman does not want the responsibility of the ex-lieutenant's presence in this city when he places the "gunmen" on trial. The first of them probably will be tried Monday. Sheriff Harburger declares he will not delay Becker's removal from the Tombs.

"The fact that Becker is rather more prominently in the public eye than any other convicted murderer makes no difference to me," said the sheriff. "He is simply a man who has come under my jurisdiction through the channels of justice and will be treated the same as all others."

The convicted policeman is going to change his lawyers. He says he made this decision on account of Mr. McIntyre's physical condition. Lawyer Louis J. Grant had a long talk with Becker in the Tombs, and as a result it became known that Becker is considering either Grant, John A. Graham, or Francis L. Wellman.

William Shapiro, driver of the car which brought Herman Rosenthal's murderers to the Hotel Metropole, signed an affidavit yesterday in the district attorney's office, saying the men in his car on the night of killing were Dago Frank, Gyp the Blood, Whitey Lewis and Lefty Louie. This indentification, so long sought by Mr. Whitman, will make Shapiro the principal witness against the four gunmen at their trial.

From the four came a statement that under no circumstances would they plead guilty and a further protestation of their combined innocence.

The most important development of the day, the identification by the chauffeur of his passengers on the night of the murder, came about after three hours' conference between Shapiro and Whitman. Shapiro was brought down to the criminal courts building in a taxicab from the West Side prison by Detective Thomas. What he told Whitman caused the district attorney to smile a satisfied smile when he came out of his office at the end of the long conference.

In one short paragraph at the bottom of which the chauffeur scrawled his name, Whitman had that which he believes will send the four gunmen to the chair. That paragraph said Shapiro had taken the men to the Metropole and driven them away when the last shot had been fired into Rosenthal's body. It had taken a wearisome time for the district attorney to brace the chauffeur's nerve to the sticking point and he was evidently elated at the result.

ROUNDHOUSE WALL FALLS

Three Men Are Severely Injured, One Perhaps Fatally

Manchester, N. H., Oct. 30.—While at work tearing down the walls of the roundhouse of the Boston and Maine railroad here, which was partly destroyed by fire last spring, three workmen were severely injured.

The men were at work on a portion of the wall on the north side of the building when it fell, burying them with debris.

They were taken to a hospital. Arthur St. Pierre, 35 years of age, is in a dangerous condition, and is not expected to live.

HIT DEPUTY WITH BRICK

Man Not Unused to Prison Life Is Given Another Sentence

Boston, Oct. 30.—Timothy Golden, who was arrested by Deputy Warden Allen of the state prison Monday night after the deputy had been assaulted by Golden, was sentenced to six months in the house of correction on the charge of assault and battery on a prison official.

Golden waylaid Allen on Austin street and threw a sidewalk brick at the deputy's head. The brick struck a glancing blow on the forehead, and the injury is slight.

Golden was overpowered by the deputy in a doorway and given into custody of two patrolmen, who locked him up.

Golden has served threee terms at the state prison. He was last sentenced on June 10, 1903, for larceny and receiving stolen property, to ten to fifteen years and was paroled two months ago.

SHERMAN'S ILLNESS

Vice President's Chances For Recovery Are Very Scant

Utica, N. Y., Oct. 30.—While no vital crisis is expected in the illness of Vice President James S. Sherman for a day or two, his physicians admit he is in a dangerous condition, with the chances against his recovery.

While the kidneys are the seat of the malady, and uremic poison is feared as a result, the physicians announce that the heart and the muscles and arteries surrounding it all are seriously involved.

There is no effort to conceal the facts concerning the vice president's case. On the contrary, both Dr. Peck and Sherman's family concede its critical nature. The doctor says, however, that kidney disease is of such an illusive nature that it is quite impossible to foretell the course of any given case with exactness.

MURDERED ON EVE OF WEDDING DAY

Robbery the Motive For Killing Attractive Young Woman

Chicago, Oct. 30.—The romance of an elopment was wiped out by the murder here of Miss Sophia G. Singer, an attractive Baltimore girl. Several hundred dollars in money and jewelry, brought from her Maryland home to grace her wedding today to William R. Worthen, a street car conductor, was missing, and robbery has been accepted as the motive for the crime.

Worthen discovered the girl's body when he returned home after midnight to the suite occupied by them and two vaudeville performers in a rooming house. Miss Singer had been bound and gagged and struck with a "billy" made from an iron door knob wrapped in a handkerchief. Her body was enfolded in a blanket.

Charles D. Conway, said to be a high diver, and his wife, who also is known as Beatrice Riall and May Monte, a variety actress, who roomed in the same apartments and who had been befriended by Worthen, are being sought by the police in connection with the crime. The body of Miss Singer was found on the bed in the room occupied by them.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

FRESH FRUIT PUDDINGS.

A FRUIT pudding makes a substantial yet dainty finish for a rather light meal. As these puddings, if made with puff paste, are apt to be somewhat hard to digest it is the part of wisdom not to have them with food that may tax the stomach heavily.

With Favorite Fruits.

Orange Pudding.—Take six seedless oranges, six eggs, one cup of cracker crumbs, a cupful and a half of sugar and two tablespoonfuls of butter. Soak the crumbs in a cup of water for an hour, grate in the yellow rind of three oranges and squeeze in the juice of the six; beat two tablespoonfuls of butter to a cream with the sugar; add the yolks of the eggs beaten light and foamy and the whites of three beaten stiff; stir into the egg and sugar mixture and beat again; add the orange and cracker and pour into a large pudding dish buttered and dredged with sugar. Bake in a moderate oven for an hour, then take out and spread lightly with a meringue made by beating the whites of three eggs and three tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Let the oven cool and set the pudding in for the meringue to brown.

Apple Pudding.—Take two cups of breadcrumbs, a cup of brown sugar, a tablespoonful of butter, a quarter of a teasponful of ground cinnamon, four tart apples and a cup and a quarter of hot water. Butter a baking dish and line the dish with one-half the apples. These should have been washed, pared quartered and cored. Then add one-half the breadcrumbs, the rest of the apples and breadcrumbs. Spread the sugar over the top and the butter in small pieces over that. Sprinkle the cinnamon over all. Pour the water in the center of the dish and bake.

Seasonable Desserts.

Quince Pudding.—Take two tablespoonfuls of gelatin, one cupful of boiling water, one cupful of whipped cream, one and a half cupfuls of strained stewed quinces, the strained juice of one orange, grated rind and strained juice of half a lemon and one cupful of sugar. Dissolve the gelatin with the boiling water, then add the strained quinces, sugar, lemon and orange juices, mix and fold in the whipped cream, then pour into a wet mold. Serve with whipped and sweetened cream flavored with vanilla.

Peach Pudding.—Take six large peaches. Peel and stone these and fill the centers with maraschino cherries. Put them on the ice to cool. Make a custard of one cupful of milk with one-fourth of a cupful of sugar, yolks of three eggs and a tiny piece of butter. When this is cold flavor it with almonds. Line a dish with slices of sponge cake or lady fingers and put in the peaches, then the custard. Beat the whites of the eggs stiff and then add them to one-half of a cupful of cream whipped stiff. Sweeten and flavor. Cover the custard with a garnish of cherries and serve cold.

CABBAGE SALADS.

CABBAGE with vinegar is a fine salad to serve with fat or oily food.

Raw cabbage is really much more digestible than cooked.

A hard, crisp head should be chosen for salad, one that has nice white leaves is the best. Soak the cabbage for about a half hour in cold salted water before cutting up on the vegetable shredder.

Several methods of using raw cabbage as a relish are given here.

A Slaw Worth Trying.

Cold Slaw.—Take a small head of cabbage and cut it very fine. Sprinkle with salt, pepper and mustard, pound on a board or table. Put in a deep dish. Then make a dressing of one beaten egg, one pint of vinegar, a small piece of butter and sugar to taste. Let it come to a boil, stirring constantly, pour over the cabbage and set aside to cool.

Pepper Cabbage.—Take a small head of cabbage, a pepper, a quarter of a teaspoonful each of celery and mustard seed, six cloves, six allspice, a tablespoonful each of sugar or salt and a half cupful of vinegar. Chop the cabbage fine and lay in cold water half an hour. Mince the pepper. Drain the cabbage and add the pepper and other ingredients. Mix well.

To Tempt the Appetite.

Cabbage Salad.—Take a medium sized cabbage. Cut it fine. Let it stand in ice water one hour, adding a tablespoonful of salt. Beat two eggs, add to them one cupful of vinegar, three tablespoonfuls of butter, a little pepper and one tablespoonful of mustard. Place the bowl in a pan of boiling water and stir until it begins to thicken. Take from the fire and add two teaspoonfuls of sugar. Drain cabbage and pour the hot dressing over it and let it stand till cold.

Cabbage Relish.—Take a medium sized cabbage and after it has soaked in water for awhile shred on the vegetable cutter. Season with salt and pepper. Make a dressing thus: Take the beaten yolks of two eggs whipped with two tablespoonfuls of melted butter. Add two tablespoonfuls of thick sour cream, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, a sprinkle of mustard and half a cupful of vinegar. Beat this until thoroughly mixed and toss lightly with the cabbage.

QUEER DEATH FROM POISON

Subject of Investigation by the Police of Boston

CYANIDE KILLS A YOUNG MAN

No Evidence Pointing to Murder and No Proof That Victim Took Drug Himself In Apartments of Friend Upon Whom He Had Frequently Called For Past Four Years

Boston, Oct. 30.—Headquarters detectives directed by Captain Armstrong and several special officers from station 5 are investigating in an effort to penetrate the mystery enveloping the strange death of Fred N. Whittier, age 24, whose body is in the City hospital morgue, a victim of cyanide of potassium.

So far, the police have no evidence pointing to murder, according to Armstrong. They are not, however, satisfied with what they have learned so far, and will continue to probe deep to get the details of the affair.

On the other hand, Medical Examiner Leary says there is no positive proof that Whittier committed suicide, although the police incline to the belief that Whittier took the poison himself after he walked into Wilfred J. Litchfield's apartment.

The setting of the strange case is in the apartment of Litchfield, on the third floor of the Hotel Navarre. Whittier called there Tuesday forenoon, found another caller there ahead of him and was ushered into a side room by Litchfield to wait. When Litchfield saw him next, Whittier complained of being sick. A physician was called, Whittier was rushed to the City hospital and died.

Although Whittier had been a frequent caller on Litchfield for the past four years, the police say Litchfield told them he knew very little of his friend.

Dr. Leary is said to have learned the relationship that existed between the two men, after a talk with Litchfield. He is not in a position to make public the result of his long talk.

Detectives who have questioned Litchfield will not talk about the information they obtained.

As a result of the questioning of Litchfield, the police learned that he was introduced to Whittier about four years ago by another friend. Litchfield said Whittier went into the bathroom and, being surprised at the length of his stay there, he rapped on the door. No reply was received and Litchfield entered, to find his visitor very ill.

Litchfield helped him out to a couch in his living room and then ran for a doctor. Dr. J. H. Urich quickly came. He thought at first that Whittier was the victim of opium poisoning, and ordered his hurried removal to the City hospital.

Litchfield, it is understood, has told the police that he did everything in his power for the welfare of his friend. It is said that the police questioned him on his knowledge of cyanide of potassium and its action on the human system.

Litchfield said that he did not know where Whittier lived or was employed. He said he thought he was employed as a waiter.

Following their four-hour investigation at the hotel, the drug stores in the south end were visited by the police without success.

Litchfield has lived at the Navarre for about six years, and has an elaborate suite of rooms all attractively decorated and furnished, resembling the apartments of a college man. He has many callers and a voluminous mail. He is of independent means, is a historian and genealogist, and spends much of his time at the rooms of the New England Historic Genealogical society on Somerset street. He is 35 years of age.

MISS EVANS IS DEFIANT

Suffragette Prefers Jail to Reporting Herself to Police

Dublin, Oct. 30.—Miss Gladys Evans, the militant suffragette, who was re-arrested for failing to report to the police, was discharged last evening, the magistrate holding that the six days she had remained in jail was sufficient punishment.

Miss Evans was sentenced Aug. 7 to five years in prison for incendiarism. After her release again last evening, she declared that no matter how often she was arrested and punished she would not report herself to the police.

Tries Suicide In Cell

Boston, Oct. 30.—Thomas J. Welch, 63 years old, used his necktie to hang himself in a cell of the City hall avenue police station. He had been arrested for drunkenness and was unconscious when cut down by an officer. He will recover.

Attleboro Has $75,000 Fire

Attleboro, Mass., Oct. 30.—Attleboro's business section was seriously threatened by a fire which destroyed the Watson block, a three-story wooden building on North Main street. The total loss is $75,000.

MRS GROVER CLEVELAND

Announces Engagement to Professor Preston

MRS. CLEVELAND TO WED

Widow of Former President Announces Engagement to College Professor

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 30.—Mrs. Grover Cleveland authorizes the announcement of her engagement to Thomas J. Preston, professor of archeology and history of arts at Wells college, Mrs. Cleveland's alma mater and of which she is a trustee. The date of the marriage is not yet determined, but will be announced later.

Mrs. Cleveland is a graduate of Wells college and has been a trustee of that institution since 1887. Her wedding to President Grover Cleveland, which took place in the executive mansion during his first administration, was one of the notable events in the history of the White House.

After his retirement from the presidency Cleveland made his permanent home in Princeton, and Mrs. Cleveland has continued to reside here since the former president died, in 1908. Her two daughters, Esther and Marion, and her son, Richard F., are living with her.

STRANGLED AND LAID BY RAILROAD TRACK

Mysterious Murder of Man Dressed In Woman's Clothes

Chicago, Oct. 30.—A man dressed completely in woman's clothes, skirt, waist, petticoats, corset and corset cover, and wearing over this garb a suit of man's clothing, was found strangled to death near the Calumet station of the Chicago, Indiana and Southern railroad in East Chicago.

Two handkerchiefs, one of them new, were found tightly knotted around the man's neck. He is supposed to have beeen killed and his body placed near the railroad track in the hope that a train would mutilate it and destroy all traces of the murder.

ANOTHER ROOSEVELT SUIT

Prohibition Paper Charged Former President With Intemperance

Indianapolis, Oct. 30.—Clean Politics, a Prohibition newspaper published in Indianapolis, will be given an opportunity to prove its oft-repeated charges that Theodore Roosevelt is an immoderate user of alcoholic beverages.

Colonel Roosevelt sent word here to the effect that he has instructed his attorneys to institute a libel suit against the Indianapolis publication, demanding $5000 damages.

The suit is similar to the one brought last week against George A. Jewett of Ishpeming, Mich., editor of Iron Ore, who declared that the former president cursed and got drunk.

WITHIN TIME NAMED

Commerce Commission Holds That Excursion Tickets Are Limited

Washington, Oct. 30.—Regulations of railroads limiting use of excursion tickets, sold at reduced rates, to the dates shown upon their face, are held by the interstate commerce commission to be just and reasonable.

In a case against the Southern Pacific company and others, where it was shown that the buyers of tickets had not used them within the time limit, but had been compelled to buy local tickets for a part of their journeys, the commission held that the additional fares were exacted legally and properly.

MR. SHAW'S LETTER

assessments, and at least find out where we are at?

Tell us whether you think the sewer assessment rates established in 1899, and which have resulted in setting the city back $100,000 to date, are in need of revision.

We should also be pleased to hear your views upon spending $100,000 of our money to purchase property for experimenting with Quincy as a port of entry; especially as this property is not assessed anywhere near half that amount. This may well become an issue in this campaign. You haven't heard much from some of us who are strongly opposed to any such extravagance, but that is because we haven't felt that there was much danger of the deal going through. Perhaps we were "snoozing" again. We should appreciate enlightenment.

Now, Messrs. Candidates for Office, you are asking us to elect you as our busines managers and representatives for the coming year. Some of us will be unable to be present at the many rallies at which you will undoubtedly speak and define your positions. We are all deeply interested in the welfare of our city albeit our interest may seem a trifle intransitive; and we are all anxious to cast our ballots for the best possible "managers" and "representatives" according to our views and opinions.

Surely you would not ask nor expect us to elect you to office blindfolded? We need some data upon which to base our judgment. Because you are pretty "good fellows" is not going to be any reason for our voting for you this year, so please tell us where you stand upon some of these questions.

It is perfectly easy to claim that present conditions are all due to the blunders and mismanagement of previous administrations; but this bare statement is not enough to satisfy the intelligent, thoughtful voters of Quincy today.

What are you going to do in the way of reform if you are elected to office?

Almost every citizen is satisfied that something is wrong with our City's management. The conditions; tax rate, City debt, high cost of water, poor condition of streets and sidewalks, inequality of valuation,—all point strongly to this fact.

This is no time for glittering generalities and vague allusions to Quincy's undoubted natural advantages. Please be specific! The people await your answers.

Irving L. Shaw.

ROOSEVELT TAKES A REST

Right Arm Likely to Be Disabled For Several More Weeks

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Oct. 30.—Colonel Roosevelt rested yesterday, by his doctor's orders, to save his strength for tonight's speech at Madison Square Garden. For half an hour during the forenoon he strolled about the grounds of his home and afterwards spent an hour dictating letters.

He is still troubled with soreness in his right side, and it probably will be several weeks before he has full use of his right arm. Although he is eager to get back into the fight, his physicians say he is not strong enough to take up the detailed work of management, and probably will be able to do little more than act in an advisory capacity during the remaining week of the campaign.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

TWO DRAMAS PRESENTED

Successfully By Young People at Memorial Vestry

The china committee for the fair, in the Memorial church, in November, gave two dramas, "How the Story Grew," and "Pa's New Housekeeper," in the church vestry Monday evening.

In the first when Mrs. Harvey Holt, who took the part of Mrs. Brown, came in to see Mrs. Alva Beede, who took the part of Mrs. Green. Mrs. Brown told Mrs. Green that a new family had moved into the Smith house, and that when she went over there, no one came to the door. Mrs. Green told Mrs. Bean, and the story went on. They finally had Mrs. Brown shot by the strange tenants of the Smith house, and almost buried, when she appeared. They learned that it was the new minister who had moved to the Smith house.

The cast of characters in this drama were as follows:

Mrs. Brown	Mrs. Harvey Holt
Mrs. Green	Mrs. Alva Beede
Mrs. Bean	Miss Beulah Reid
Mrs. Rice	Miss Mabel Reid
Mrs. Doolittle	Miss Jean Athur
Mrs. Snow	Mrs. W. Hersey
Mrs. Taylor	Mrs. Albert Hall
Mrs. White	Miss Eleanor Nelson

In the second drama Percival Hall, took the part of Pa Jackson, a widower, who had decided intentions to marry again. Miss Hazel Davison, took the part of Mattie Jackson, who didn't understand her father's intentions, at first.

Miss Eleanor Nelson took the part of Mollie Holbrook, Mattie's friend, who got mixed up in Pa Jackson's intentions. Arthur Hall was Jimmie Jackson, who disapproved of his father's intentions, and Frank Doring had the role of Jack Brown, Jimmie's college friend, who helped to thwart Pa Jackson's intentions.

Mollie and Mattie come in, expecting Jimmie and Jack. The maid had just left and Mattie didn't know what she would do since Jimmie's college friend, whom she had never met, was coming for a visit.

Mollie agreed to be maid for the day Jack and Jimmie came in; they had missed the new housekeeper, Mrs Pounce, but had found her suit case Rather than disappoint Pa Jackson Jack agrees to be introduced as the new housekeeper. The audience is kept laughing from the time he appears as Mrs. Pounce, to the end of the play. He is found in Jimmie's arms, smoking, but gives a good excuse for everything.

Pa Jackson proposes to the new housekeeper. But finally, Jimmie takes off Jack's wig and introduces his college friend.

Between the two dramas Miss Margaret Read entertained the audience with piano solos.

These two plays are to be repeated this evening.

DIDN'T NEED A TRUNK.

He Was a Master of the Art of Traveling Without Baggage.

Sir Charles Napier was once delightfully pictured in Punch as setting out for Scinde with "his soap" and very little besides. De Latocnaye, a Breton emigre of 1796, who traveled in Ireland, chiefly on foot and invariably turned up at the houses of his friends with almost no visible baggage, carried nearly as simple an outfit. Yet in some mysterious way he was always able to appear at dinner in full dress In his book "Promenade en Irlande" De Latocnaye tells how he accomplished the feat:

"I had my hair powder in a bag made of a lady's glove. My razor, needles thread, scissors and a comb all went into a pair of dancing pumps. In addition, I carried two pairs of silk stockings, breeches of such fine stuff that they would fold up as small as my fist, three cravats, two very fine shirts three pocket handkerchiefs and a dress coat with six pockets.

"Three of these pockets I kept for letters, portfolio, and so forth; in the others, whenever I was going to call at a decent house, I stowed away my belongings, which were packed some in the pumps, the rest in one of the pairs of stockings.

"At other times," he concludes, with more than French vivacity, "I tied the three parcels in a handkerchief and carried them at the end of my walking stick, on which I had managed to fix an umbrella."

Thus equipped he stayed at Lord Kenmare's for a week, at Hazelwood and at Florence Court for the same length of time, at Lord Altamont's and Ballynahinch for longer still, no doubt to the astonishment of housemaids as well as of hosts. But he was never disturbed by his lack of luggage and steadily refused all proffered loans of clothing.

By the time De Latocnaye got to Sligo the weather had broken, and he was obliged to add a spencer to his wardrobe.

COUNCILMAN BAILEY

not wish their names brought before the public. The investigation was all right, but the business methods used were bad, and the fund suffered.

WATER DEPARTMENT

"During the past year, I have been severely handicapped for money for water extensions and repairs. After thorough investigation, the last Commissioner, Mr. Bainbridge, reported that the City was losing heavily on account of leakage, and the present Commisioner, Mr. Tupper, informs me that this is a fact.

"I had hoped to remedy this trouble to a large extent this year, and I believe that the economy which was used in cutting the appropriation I requested from Thirty-two Thousand to Fifteen Thousand, was false economy for here is one department which in a reasonable time, can be put on a laying basis, and also be made to supply water to the consumers at a much lower rate than at present. In fact, the Commissioner is at present working out a way in which this condition will be brought about in the near future.

"The need of a few thousand dollars in this department has only hindered this much needed improvement but has caused us to be unable to properly supply water to the new buildings which are being erected in Quincy today.

"The Bonds show an increase of $53,000 this year over last year, all contracted before my administration began, and this increase of bonds becoming due this year, together with an increase of $4,000 in interest, accounts for $1.50 of the increase of our tax rate this year.

The interest for 1911 was $93,400, for 1912, $97, 429.

"If one will look in our City Report he will find what goes to make up our City debt.

"Last year the Assessors had the right to take $50,000 in City Receipts to reduce the tax levy, because we had a very large amount come into the treasury from a certain Estate, while this year, the Assessors had only $13,000 of City Receipts to use to reduce the tax levy, a difference of $33,000, which is practically equal to $1 per thousand on a valuation of $35,000,000 so by the increase of debt coming due and the difference in receipts, you can see how the increase of $2.50 came about.

"Take the loans made this year—$38,000 for widening Hancock street this was made before I came into office.

$111,200 has been appropriated for School purposes, $1,200 for Police Department, $6,760 for Fire Department, $1,500 for Athletic Field, $13,000 for Sidewalks, $5,400 for Surface Drainage, $20,000 for Fore River Bridge, while only $7,500 has been appropriated by the Council this year for new streets against 68,258 appropriated last year.

"It is well known that early in the year, I gave my sanction to the plan to refund part of our temporary loans. These loans were caused by omitting to put in the tax levy a sufficient amount to cover bonds and interest coming due, also because the Assessors made very heavy abatements, but these deficits of the past years have been remedied this year, and it is my hope that by our new system of accounts, the tax rate will be an honest one every year.

"I wish to call your attention to the fact that it is easy to find fault, but why don't they give the City credit for the handling of their Trust Funds. Every trust has been kept separate, the collateral are deposited in a safe deposit vault and to obtain access to these collateral to cut off the coupons on bonds, etc., the Mayor, City Treasurer and City Auditor are required to go together.

Councilman Murray urged all the citizens to take an active interest in civic affairs. The lack of this had lead to Quincy's present condition.

Councilman Bailey said he did not agree with a previous speaker in hushing up the city's financial condition. It should be talked over not only in the council but by the public. "The sooner we realize this," "the sooner suggestions and methods for remedying the difficulty will be brought out." He quoted figures which he claimed proved the faulty method of borrowing money in anticipation of taxes and the shortage that resulted when the time came to pay up.

Fall River and Springfield were doing good work in returning their loans and urged that Quincy do likewise. No man should suppose the present administration to blame for the accumulation of years, but "until we root out the trouble we will never get ahead." In all probability the tax rate of 1913 would be higher than this butp robably not much over $23.

From present indications there would be a slight drop from this in 1914 and a decided drop in 1915. With due economy by the council, we ought to reach a reasonable tax rate by 1915.

HELD FOR ASSAULT

Woman a Hundred Years Old Alleged to Have Attacked Minister

Chicago, Oct. 30.—Mrs. Mary Hart, 100 years old, was arraigned in the police court, charged with assault and battery.

The centenarian prisoner, a negress, who was employed as caretaker of a negro church, was charged by Rev. D. J. Clemons, pastor of the church, with assault and battery on him when he endeavored to discharge her.

Mrs. Hart conducted her own case. Clemons exhibited a bruise on his forehead and testified that when he asked the aged woman to leave the church she pushed him violently against a door and he was compelled to leave her in possession.

Seeing that the evidence was going against her, Mrs. Hart demanded a continuance to obtain counsel.

STUBBORN ICE HOUSE BLAZE KEPT THE FIREMEN BUSY

Small Stock of Ice Not Beyond Usefulness Loss Only $800

Dr. Reynold's Car Destroyed Lively Woods Fires

That ice house fires are most difficult to fight, was found to be true by Chief Litchfield, Wednesday afternoon when the ice houses of E. H. Doble & Son off Furnace Brook parkway caught fire shortly before 2 o'clock from a speark from a passing locomotive. There were but two or three layers of ice in the building, but there were quantities of old shavings and sawdust and the fire getting into these was difficult to extinguish. The alarm sounded for the fire at 1.56 and it was not until 3.45 that the recall was rung in. During all of this time dense clouds of smoke came from the building.

Although two hours were consumed in fighting the fire the damage was not heavy. Chief Litchfield estimates that it will not exceed $800 as the ice left in the building can be used. The building however was practically destroyed.

Shortly after 6 o'clock the central station apparatus was called on a still alarm for a lively fire in Faxon park near the Tuberculosis hospital. At one time the shacks at the camp were threatened with destruction and the occupants suffered somewhat from the heavy smoke.

About 8.15 the apparatus at the West Quincy station was called on a still alarm for a fire in what is known as the Pines off Grove street. This fire spread over a large territory into East Milton and the fire department from that station was also called out to fight the flames from the Milton side of the Pines.

While the apparatus was at this fire Mayor Stone in driving through the Furnace Brook Parkway discovered the automobile of Dr. John T. Reynolds on fire. It appears that Dr. Reynold's chauffeur started out in the Doctor's old car. He had not gone far before one of the tires went down. The chauffeur got out and lit a match to see what the trouble was. This ignited some gasoline and in an instant a good fire was in progress. Just at this time that Mayor Stone was passing. He immediately started for the West Quincy fire station. Finding that apparatus out he grabbed a couple of extinguishers and started back. Although the Mayor and others fought the fire it was of no use for the automobile was practically destroyed.

ENGINEER ACQUITTED

Of Disclosing National Defence Secrets In Magazines

Through the efforts of Congressman Robert O. Harris, the case of Joseph Barraja-Frauenfelder, an engineer employed at the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., plant, who was under indictment under an act to prevent disclosure of national defense secrets, which act was approved Mar. 3, 1911, the indictment has been quashed by the Navy Department of the United States on the recommendation of the Judge Advocate General of the Navy, who reported after careful consideration, that, in his judgment, no secrets had been disclosed by Mr. Barraja-Frauenfelder.

The young man is considered an expert in submarine boat construction and he has written many articles for technical magazines on the subject of submarines and submarine boat construction. His articles were taken up by the government and the indictment resulted. The writer submitted facts to the Navy Department to sustain his contention that what he had written was in no sense a violation of the act under which the indictment against him was brought and his view of the matter was accepted by the Judge Advocate General of the Navy after he had gone over the articles in question and reviewed them extensively.

Congressman Harris was moved to act in the case as he was wholly convinced that the writer had in no way revealed Uncle Sam's defence secrets and he felt that to put the young man on trial would be to subject him to needless prosecution. The Attorney General has been requested by the Navy Department to quash the indictment.

TEMPORARY POSSESSION

All That Whittemore Accorded Boston of Quincy Cup

ON TURNING IT OVER

Commodore Ira M. Whittemore of the Quincy yacht club, formally handed over the Quincy Yacht Club Challenge cup into the keeping of the Boston yacht club Wednesday evening at the cup night held by the Boston club at the Boston City club. The occasion was one that called out a large gathering of yachtsmen and was in the nature of a jubilee. The cup was captured after a series of exciting races last August by the sonder boat Ellen sailed by her owner C. P. Curtis, Jr.

Melvin M. Johnson presided, and after briefly tracing the growth of yachting in the Boston yacht club called upon Commodore Ira M. Whittemore to fulfill the duty of handing over, what is perhaps the most sought for trophy in these waters.

This duty Commodore Whittemore performed although he stated, in passing the mass of silver, that it was but temporary for he expected that the Quincy club would bring it back next year.

In accepting the cup C. P. Curtis, Jr., owner of the Ellen announced that negotiations were under way for the formation of a team of three American yachts which will race under the rating of eight meters, in other words about 25-footers, between the United States and Great Britain for a valuable international trophy. Among those called upon for speeches were Vice Commodore Harry G. Crane, and Rear Commodore F. F. Crane of the Quincy Yacht club.

The Socialist party has taken out papers for a mayoralty candidate and also for councilmen at large.

PENNIMAN THE CANDIDATE

Of Local Democratic Hosts in Mayoralty Contest

NEVER SOUGHT OFFICE

All doubts as to the Democratic standard bearer for Mayor at the caucuses was set at rest Wednesday night when James Henry Penniman of Hancock street, Wollaston agreed to become the party candidate and signed the nomination papers accepting the nomination. As there is no contest among the Democrats for the nomination it goes without saying that he will receive unanimous endorsement.

Mr. Penniman has never before entered into politics in any manner although he has been a close reader of national and local political affairs, and is therefore well posted on municipal matters. Politically he has always ben affiliated with the Democratic party although somewhat of an independent not sticking strictly to party lines. He was born in Quincy Dec. 19, 1857 and is a son of James T. Penniman one of Quincy's oldest citizens.

He received his education in the public schools, of the town, and in 1874 entered business with his father under the firm name of James H. Penniman & Co., which firm continues today. At the commencement of their business relations the firm manufactured boot heels from scrap leather and while the manufacture of heels still continues, the scope of the business has been enlarged the firm now being large dealers in scrap leather having an office on High street, Boston as well as a factory on Saville avenue near the Quincy depot.

Mr. Penniman is a member of Wollaston masonic lodge, St. Stephen's chapter and Quincy Commandery. He is also a member of the Granite City club where he served several years as its president. He resides at 853 Hancock street on the handsome estate opposite Merrymount park. He is married and his a wife, a son and daughter.

QUIET WEDDING.

William Teasdale, son of Chairman William H. Teasdale of the Board of Health and Miss Margaret McCarthy of 40 Mosely street, Dorchester, were married at Dorchester Wednesday evening by Rev. Wiliam A. Ryan. The ceremony was quiet and but few knew of the intention of the couple t o be married.

A HARD SUBJECT.

R. C. Drinker addressed the Washington street Congregational church Men's Club Wednesday evening on the manufacture of steel. He went into detail and exhibited photographs of steel in its process of manufacture.

nomination. The statment was greeted with loud applause by about 300.

Mr. Miller also said in regard to the letters appearing in the Ledger on "What is the matter with Quincy that they were inspired by three men in conference at the Boston City Club several times a week and that they had now trotted out their candidate for mayor."

Col. Henry L. Kincaide was not present but all the speakers made special mention of him. Mr. Miller was particularly forceful and urged the Progressive Party candidates election.

The speakers were Lester P. Winchenbaugh of Hyde Park, senatorial candidate; Paul R. Blackmur, James P. Roberts, representative candidate, ex-senator Eugene H. Sprague and John Evans, representative candidate.

Mr. Winchenbaugh severely arraigned Roger Wolcott and gave a most exhaustive talk on his record, his duties to his district which he neglected by voting against the best interests of the state and said that when he was elected he would consider his friends, the entire voters of the district and vote so they would benefit.

Paul R. Blackmur said that Roger Wolcott as a member of the railroad committee boasted that he had caused the withdrawal of a piece of legislation which protected the property owner on petitions for land damages

SQUANTUM SOUNDS WARNING NOTE OF ITS INFLUENCE AND GROWTH

Candidates For State and City Office Heard by Voters of That Section

Mayor Stone Praised and Severely Condemned in Turn

Seventy-five voters and tax payers of Squantum gathered Wednesday night at Lee's Inn at a non-partisan rally conducted under the auspices of the Squantum Improvement association and listened to the leading candidates for public office discuss the affairs of the City of Quincy. From 8 to 12 o'clock, "What's the matter with Quincy?" was expounded pro and con by members of the Quincy City Council and by Squantum citizens.

Squantum citizens gained many valuable points upon Quincy's affairs and the meeting was a great success in every way. The guests of the evening were: George W. Abele, candidate for Mayor; Councilmen Sodergren, Beeman, and Cunningham of Ward Six President Hobbs of the City Council, excouncilman Cherrington, who is a candidate, and Councilman-at-Large, Murray. Representative Leslie, and Ex-Councilman McGilvray, who are candidates for the legislature and John J. McDevitt, candidate for state senator, were also present and spoke.

Invitations were extended to all candidates for public office. The meeting was in charge of Vice President Herbert A. Smith and a lunch was served at 10 o'clock.

The meeting developed into a warm political discussion and Mayor Stone was severely condemned and highly praised in turn by the various speakers. An invitation was sent to Mayor Stone and he missed a valuable opportunity to talk to the Squantum voters in defense of his administration, by not being present.

James Hagan told what Squantum expected of its city officials and public servants. He said that six years ago Squantum was an abandoned farm. Now it has, over $600,000 in taxable property. If Quincy would give its co-operation and give Squantum a few needed improvements the valuation should jump to $1,500,000 or $2,000,000 He scored the policy of the city that failed to provide the simple necessities of public improvement to a community and held back its development. He brought out the fact that Quincy is staggering under a load of debt for improvements made in other sections

NOTICE.

The Ledger is receiving a great many communications these days, the more the better, and is glad to give publicity to the thoughts therein expressed, especially when they are for the good of the city as a whole, believing too much publicity cannot be given under the circumstances. We will accept anything for publication that is honest criticism without malice or personal grudge, provided the communication is sent in with the writer's name and address. It would seem as though it was not necessary for us to again reiterate that we do not accept or use anonymous communications but as we receive unsigned letters most every day whose fate is the waste basket the statement seems necessary. Why not follow the rule of this and other newspapers?

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Quincy is said to have never witnessed such a crowding of Hallowe'en parties. But it is not so surprising when leap year is considered with us.

Even in jail for murder Becker was able to compel the collection of a large sum of money for his defense fund.

That is quite an ambitious scheme suggested by Port director McNary But in those harbor improvement schemes too much enthusiasm cannot be taken for real results.

The prison reform movement has taken on a tangible form. Classification of criminals seems reasonable enough.

Bourke Cockran is credited with saying the slave is happier than the worker. Another flight of oratory which should be accepted at its real value.

The jewelers have decided to reduce the carat weight of diamonds, 2 1-2 per cent which means an increase in the size of the stones as now cut.

If Dakota Dan has not told all he knows and a lot more in that 37 days performance on the stand, he is a wonder. In the interests of humanity, he should be relieved of further grilling.

The Cambridge Police are to be deprived of the advance they received, June 17, all because of the poor financial condition of the city.

The Progressives will whoop it up in Alpha hall tonight.

All parties seem to be making a football of that special session of the legislature. What the people would prefer to hear are the issues of the campaign and what actual remedies for present day conditions can be put in operation. The people as a whole are as intelligent on this special session dodge as the alleged wiley politicians who are sitting up nights digging traps for each other to avoid real live issues.

By all means let the Merrimac river be dredged and let us have some dredging around Quincy without a string tied to the appropriation.

Prisoners do not find it difficult to escape from Deer Island. Those who really remain must enjoy their confinement, now that the winter is coming on better than they could the freedom in the cold, cold, world.

LaFollette only shows a peevish disposition, when he asserts he will not vote for any of the candidates. He magnifies the importance of his vote, or else the newspapers do who have been paying telegraph tolls to receive it from one end of the country to the other.

On the whole very few people will care the flip of penny whether he votes or not.

And the papers are giving space to the same valueless utterance of a Boston clergyman, who declares he finds no candidate who reaches the standard. Possibly he may mean oil, as many of the oil men appear to have the christian tendencies which this preacher says the presidential candidates lack.

ANOTHER CHANCE.

When the Hospital Fund campaign closed it was well known that a certain citizen stood ready to contribute a certain amount of any sum lacking to make up the required $35,000. Many were hopeful of raising $30,000, while it must be acknowledged that there was doubts in the mind of many that the full $35,000 would be raised within the time set for the campaign. With the discharge of the collecting committee there was a little over $7000 lacking for the desired goal.

A large contributor however has generously come forward and offered to relieve the situation.

This person offers to make up $5000 if the citizens will respond with the remaining $2000 before next Wednesday.

The time is short. The collectors performed heroic service. They labored long and diligently. It would be impossible however for them to interview many persons who may have been generously disposed towards the hospital. Here is a chance for this particular class to come as a reserve force in the battle and perform gallant service.

With the limited time at the disposal of the executive committee of the campaign, they would not be able to make another canvass of the city to make sure of interviewing all who had not been seen. A way is offered out of this difficulty. All who desire to aid the cause can do so by calling at, or telephoning to the Y. M. C. A. The telephone number is 252 Quincy.

Or even a letter will answer the purpose. Remember that the committee ask at this time, only a pledge. The amount need not be paid into the hospital before April 1, 1913. So that fully five months is permitted those who desire to contribute to make good their pledges. Let all who feel disposed, send their pledge, or telephone it to the Y. M. C. A., where a complete record will be maintained of it, and thus will the hospital campaign fund be carried to a successful issue and no one need feel that the appeal for the hospital was in vain and that there was any falling short of the amount desired. Now is the time. What you have to offer offer at once. No matter how small the amount, every litle bit helps and when the contest is closed Wednesday the $35,000 will be secured and the hospital will be placed upon such a sound financial basis that those annual appeals will no longer be necessary. Let every one take hold and do their part, whether big or little and the results will be satisfactory to all concerned.

CARRYING CONCEALED WEAPONS.

The cold blooded murder of a Boston policeman, this week, by a person who carried a concealed weapon, has given rise to the agitation favoring more stringent laws governing the carrying of such implements. The lack of adequate regulations governing such conduct is deplorable and in measure responsible for a great many crimes committed, both of the premeditated and the spur of the moment type. Many reputable citizens whose business carried them abroad at a late hour nights, some of the time on which they carried a weapon, preferably a revolver, have had occasion to give thanks to the timely forgetfulness which saved them from committing a rash act. Many men of this class, will furnish evidence of that fact that if on certain occasions, when hard pressed or when there was evidences of personal violence, their failure to be armed at the particular time prevented their performing an act which they would have regretted all their lives. And those are men who are not stirred by evil passions, absolute disregard for law and order, or an inherent hatred of police regulations or interference. They have found themselves in positions, where it seemed as if their actual existence depended upon the use of weapons other than those provided by nature, but when the storm had subsided and they found themselves safe and sound they were grateful that they had been subjected to the temptation which was strong within them to protect themselves even at the hazard of seriously maiming or killing some one else.

Those are incidents which befall the reputable and law abiding citizen. With the tough, the crook, the social outcast, the creatures who lash at police interference and cannot respect either law or order and look upon the policeman as their natural foe, against whom they have a perpetual grudge it is different. This class care little for human life and their regret, just the opposite of the other class referred to is that on occasions when pressed they may not have a weapon with which to wreak their vengeance upon those who interfere with their lawless proceedings.

The Boston officer this week, was pursuing two men who had offered insult to a man and woman whom they passed. The officer gave chase, and one of the pursuers turned and fired at the officer who died later from his injuries. The quarry then separated and sought safety in flight. Persons who use guns for sporting purposes are required to secure a license from the city or town officials in which they live. No such provision is made for those who carry concealed weapons. There is a law against the conveyance of such weapons, but what does the average offender against the law care for this provision. There violation is not discovered until they are apprehended by the police and before this is accomplished they have had opportunity to use the weapon with deadly effect upon some victim.

The law regarding the use and carrying of concealed weapons should go even further than it does.

No great hardship would be done to any one, if a law was enacted which compelled people who sold firearms or other weapons which can be carried concealed, to keep a record of those sales, open to the inspection of the police department from time to time.

The police department could be authorized to issue permits to reputable citizens to have certain weapons of defence in their homes for the better protection of their household and property. This could he accomplished very easily, without a great deal of red tape and not too much publicity.

The recording of the sale of weapons would prove of great benefit to the police. It would enable them to know just who carried such weapons. If they were reputable citizens who had the weapons for what might be termed the legitimate protection of home and family from possible intruders provision could be made by the permission mentioned for them to have the weapons.

On the other hand it would enable the police to locate and root out undesirable persons who went around armed with weapons, with the sole object of using them for revenge, cold blooded murder or to carry out burglarious schemes. Such a law could not work wrong to any one and it would undoubtedly prove of great value in preventing crime and saving perhaps many innocent lives.

BOSTON TERMINAL OPENED.

The new Boston terminal of the Electric Express and Freight was opened for business, Oct. 28, the first regular trip going out for points south on the lines of the Bay State Street Railway Co., at 8.30 A. M. The first car to go out of the terminal was No. 16 one of the series of new cars which have recently been put into service.

While there were some finishing touches still to be put on the terminal, it was sufficiently completed to enable the service to run right along as if nothing had happened. This means a vastly improved service over that which has been given for the past year between this section and Boston, for the reason that the cars can now run direct to and from the terminal in the city itself.

The new terminal will also make it possible to handle freight matter to and from Boston, whereas formerly only express matter could be taken care of. It will open up the carload business for which there has been a big demand. This means that the shipper will have the speed and other advantages of the express service except for the pick-up and delivery at each end at a freight rate. It will be a well rounded out service that it is believed will fit every industrial need.

For the present six round trips are being made from the Boston terminal.

George Dunford, General Express Agent of the Bay State Street Railway Co., who has had his main office in Brockton, will now be located at the new terminal and have charge thereof.

IN PRESENCE OF HIS FAMILY

Vice President Sherman Dies at His Home in Utica

END WAS NOT UNEXPECTED

All Differences Growing Out of Politics Die With Genial Man Who Was Regarded as First Citizen of City—Universal Sorrow Expressed—Tribute From Mayor

Utica, N. Y., Oct. 31.—After a long illness. Vice President James Schoolcraft Sherman died at his home in this city at 9:42 o'clock last night of uremic poison, caused by Bright's disease.

THE LATE JAMES SCHOOLCRAFT SHERMAN.

All the members of the immediate family were witnesses of the final scene.

Soon after Sherman's death, Dr. Peck, the attending physician, who was present when death came, issued the following statement:

"The vice president died at 9:42 p. m. without regaining consciousness for a moment. He was perfectly quiet. He died in the presence of his wife, her brother and sister, his two brothers, and his three sons and their wives. He had been entirely unconscious since 7 o'clock, when he had a period of partial consciousness lasting for about 15 minutes. He died in a uremic coma as a result of Bright's disease, heart disease and arterial sclerosis."

Mrs. Sherman bore up bravely under the shock of her husband's death, as did the other members of the family. Although it was said at the house that the hopelessness of Sherman's fight against death had been realized since Friday, the blow was nevertheless a crushing one.

The Sherman residence is located on Genesee street, one of the city's fashionable thoroughfares, and the arrival and departure of an occasional automobile was the only indication that anything unusual had transpired within the house.

The announcement of the vice president's death spread through the city with great rapidity. Universal sorrow was expressed, and immediate steps were taken for the proper recognition of the sorrowful event. Sherman was regarded as the first citizen of the city, and all differences growing out of politics died with him.

The mayor gave out a statement voicing the general grief, and the big bell at city hall, as well as many church bells, tolled out the doleful news. Not only did the Republican organization take proper cognizance of the event, but the Progressives announced their intention to cancel all meetings until after the vice president's funeral. Governor Johnson, who, so long as Sherman lived, was his rival for vice presidential honors, was to have spoken here tonight in behalf of the Progressive ticket, but his address, like all other events of the kind, has been deferred.

The Democrats also signified their intention of removing a Wilson and Marshall banner which had been flung across one of the city streets and of suspending all political activity until after the funeral.

In the course of his tribute Mayor Baker said:

"Mr. Sherman has long been identified with the business interests of Utica. He was ever alert in taking advantages for the city. His home life was beautiful. It was a model for all American families. He found the greatest pleasure when summoned by those who loved him as a husband and father, and it is there that his genial presence will be missed. Stricken, as he was, with an illness which required constant watchfulness, Mr. Sherman bore it with a fortitude which exemplified the strong characteristics of the man."

The mayor ordered that the flags on all city buildings should be placed at half-staff and suggested that a similar course be followe with all other flags in Utica.

NAME STAYS ON TICKET

Those Who Cast Ballot For Taft Must Vote For Sherman

New York, Oct. 31.—At a conference held in the Manhattan hotel, it was decided not to remove the name of James S. Sherman from the Republican ticket.

The conference took place while President Taft breakfasted with a group of Republican supporters.

The decision to keep Sherman's name on the ticket came after it had been declared by Lafayette Gleason, secretary of the national convention, that the names of the presidential and vice presidential candidates have no legal significance on the ballot, but are only there to guide voters. If either of the candidates should die, the presidential electors are fully empowered to vote for whom they choose.

It was also pointed out, however, that should such a situation arise, a recommendation from the national committee would carry great weight with the presidential electors.

DISTRICT COURT.

George W. Alexander was arraigned or larceny of three watches from C. F. Pettengill. He was found guilty and the case continued for sentence until Nov. 20.

Charles Delorey and Earl Ash were each fined $10 for disturbing the peace at Weymouth.

PROGRESSIVE RALLY

taken in connection with grade crossings and said that the bill had the endorsement of leading attorneys, including Counsels Rich and Coolidge of the railroad and the bar association. He further said he was a Progressive because he believed many laws were old and that the Democrats and Republicans would not change them since they are wearing the clothes of the dead.

James P. Roberts said that the nation was intoicated with the spirit that moves the Progressives so that right will prevail. In relation to his opponent Mr. Piper, he said that he showed by his vote in favor of the New Haven trolley merger bill, and his vote in favor of passing this bill over the governor's veto that he was prepared to surrender the interest of the people of Massachusetts and align himself with the New Haven railroad. He said this was the most important corporation matter before the legislature of 1912 and that its passage surrendered forever the last vestige of competition and turned the state over entirely to the control of the New Haven railroad. The New Haven lobby spared no money and no effort to bring about the passage of this iniquitous bill. Mr. Piper's vote proved beyond a question that he was responsible to the corporate influence which exercies so sinster an influence on Beacon Hill.

Eugene H. Sprague touched on different phases of economics, urged a growing Progressive Party sentiment and told of his reasons for joining the new party. He spoke of papers being muzzled, that he was sure of what he read in only one paper and that his interest in the party was not for what he might get out of it but because of the principles.

John Evans reviewed his impressions of rallies he has attended, talked on business conditions due to the Republican and Democratic parties and touched on the tariff. He said that the Progressive Party was the true Republican Party and that the present so-called G. O. P. was one of Bosses.

A large auto truck carrying a brass band advertising the rally covered all parts of the southern end of the city.

WORLD'S LARGEST WARSHIP LAUNCHED

Sister Ship to the Texas Takes the Water at Brooklyn

New York, Oct. 31.—With her champagne-splattered bow glistening in the sunshine and a pretty girl crying "I christen thee New York" the steel shell of the $6,000,000 superdreadnaught that is soon to be the latest "pride of the navy" slid down greased ways in the Brooklyn navy yard into the East river's murky waters.

At least 100,000 persons witnessed the launching, the most notable being President Taft, who, from a private stand, smiled on Miss Elsie Calder, daughter of Congressman Calder, as she crashed a beribboned champagne bottle against the battleship's steel bow.

The New York is a sister ship to the Texas, launched at Newport News a few months ago. Like the Texas, she will have an armament of fourteen-inch guns. She will also have twenty-one five-inch guns strung along her side.

The New York, together with her sister ship, the Texas, is the largest battleship in the world.

BOY HELD AS SUSPECT

Retired Sea Captain Believed to Have Been Murder Victim

Surry, Me., Oct. 31.—Harry C. Young, a retired sea captain, 58 years old, whose body was found on the edge of a narrow stream in the business centre of this village, was the victim of a murder, in the opinion of County Attorney Graham.

Captain Young was the proprietor of the village store. He left his store for home, taking the day's cash with him. The money was missing when the body was found.

In connection with the death, the police of Ellsworth detained a 17-year-old Surry boy as he was about to board a train for Bangor. The boy had a considerable sum of money concealed about his clothing.

The Ellsworth police say he has told conflicting stories as to how he came into possession of it. He has not been arrested, but the police say he will probably he given a preliminary hearing in the Ellsworth police court.

THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

High School — Public Schools
Woodward Institute — Parochial School

A talk was given before the boys of the High School Wednesday morning by Superintendent A. L. Barbour, on the general matter of choice of vocation and what the different vocations have to offer. The school authorities are planning to organize an employment agency at the High school that will operate to help the graduate and the boy who leaves school at any time, into the right kind of position and that will have a tendency to keep the boy and the school in close touch after the boy has left school as well as while they are still in attendance. One specific aim will be to keep the bright capable boy from getting into the "blind alley" job that leads nowhere and to call attention to the skilled employments where the prospects of advancement and happiness are more sure. The school will endeavor to conduct this work with such care that the employees of the city, mercantile and industrial will turn to it for assistance whenever in need of employees. It is believed that activity in this direction by the High school will be an agency for much good.

The High School Glee club and quartette took part in the concert given at the Wollaston school, Tuesday evening and did very creditable work. This class of musical effort is becoming increasingly common in High schools and deserves much encouragement from all who are interested in the development of the musical life of the city. The greater the activity in musical work and appreciation among the young people, the greater will be the interest in later years.

JOHN HANCOCK SCHOOL.

The best attendance record is held at the John Hancock School by Miss Underwood's first grade; at the Lincoln by Miss Sullivan's third.

Both of these rooms were the winners in attendance for last month also.

The John Hancock School football team had their picture taken by David Rosenberg, one of the eighth grade boys.

WOLLASTON SCHOOL.

The concert on Tuesday evening, in charge of Miss Clare E. Thayer, was a grand success. Nearly eighty-five dollars were cleared. The amount will be spent in purchasing a piano for the lower grades and a stool for the piano in the assembly hall.

Miss Agnes Fisher, master's assistant had the misfortune to sprain her ankle last Friday morning. She returned to school on Tuesday.

The election of the Class Officers 1913 will take place Tuesday. Polls open 12.45 to 1.15 P. M. The Australian system of balloting will be used. The following candidates have filed nomination papers.

President—Dorothy Sprague, Gerald Berry, Theodore Higgins.

Vice President—Dorothy Atwood, Marjorie Fownes, William Mullen, Harold Ewertz, Robert Merrill.

Secretary—Mildred Kingsley, Hildergarde Ducey, Florence Palmer, Milton Moore, George Cropper, Stanley Richards.

Treasurer—Claire Favreau, Helen DeNormandie, Percy Ela, Clarence Cath.

MASSACHUSETTS FIELDS.

The pupils of grade VII are giving Miss Blacklock, their teacher, a Hallowe'en Party, this evening in the corridor of the school. The class of 1910 will hold a reunion in the school corridor on Friday evening.

The election of the Class Officers 1913 will take place Tuesday morning. Polls open 8.25 to 8.55. The Australian ballot will be used. The following candidates have filed nomination papers.

WASHINGTON SCHOOL.

Parents and Teachers' Association. The next meeting will be held Wednesday evening, Nov. 6, at eight o'clock. Mr. J. Gould Spofford, principal of the Industrial School, will speak on industrial schools with special reference to the past time class in Quincy.

A large colored photograph of the Castle of Chillon has been hung in the corridor of the Washington school opposite the west Washington street entrance. It is the gift of the class of 1912, and is of a distinct addition to the collection of casts and pictures already in the school.

ATHERTON HOUGH.

The Soccer team is playing the game this season. Of the five games already played, it has won two, tied two, and lost one. The most closely contested game was played last Monday afternoon with the Washington, when a tie score was the result after playing two snappy fifteen minute periods.

The skilful passing of the ball by Atherton Hough was a strong feature of the game.

IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION

Of Montclair Observed Ladies' Night In Fitting Manner

The first ladies' night of the Montclair Improvement Association was fittingly observed with speaking, feasting and song in the club house of the organization, Wednesday evening. Over 85 members being present.

President Edward F. Parlee opened the meeting with an address in which he spoke of the work of the Association and matters concerning the City Council.

Frederick J. Kessler, the secretary referred to the schoolhouse and the general work of the association's committees. He urged an increase of membership.

Frank Byrne of Winthrop, a past secretary of the organization spoke along general lines regarding the association.

The last speaker was Ex-Councilman John Moir, an honary member, who spoke in a happy vein of the earlier existence and organization of the society.

Between the speeches musical selections were rendered by Misses Ethel Dicey and Nettie Parlee on the piano and Miss Gladys Parlee on the violin. Vocal solos by Mr. Lovejoy accompanied by Mrs. Lovejoy were enjoyed.

Following the program a curtain at the end of the hall was pulled aside and a spread prepared by Edward Morgan, chef of the Wollaston Golf club, who also acts in that capacity for the association, was displayed.

The table was decorated with pinks and candelabra and, lobster salad, chicken salad, rolls, ice cream, cake and coffee were served.

A general good time was enjoyed until after midnight and the association quartette held forth with the now famous "Garten Haus" song of the society.

The affair was in charge of the entertainment committee consisting of Joseph McCabe, Frederick J. Kessler, Edward Sherman and Stephen D. Brown.

TO MAKE HENS LAY.

Poultrymen everywhere have come to know that something more than good food and proper housing is needed to make hens lay to their full capacity, just as good farmers know that something more than rainfall, sunshine and cultivation is needed to bring a piece of land up to its full productiveness. In addition to these, soil, to do its best, must have good fertilizer. And hens, in order to do their best, need Sheridan's Condition Powder. It does for them what fertilizer does for soil.

Considerably more than forty years have passed since this remarkable preparation was first introduced to chicken raisers. Today thousands of them use it regularly. Actual experience, year after year, has shown them how much it means to them in dollars and cents. I. S. Johnson & Co., Boston, Mass.,—Adv.

TELEPHONE GIRL KEPT SECRET

Of Her Wedding From Friends For More Than a Week

The many friends of Miss Mary eVronica Bennett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Bennett of O'Conell avenue were surprised to learn of her marriage to Raymond Joseph Thomas of Boston, on October 21. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Henry T. Grady at the parish house of the St. Mary's church.

The bride was attended by Miss May Quinn of Charlestown and the best man was Frederick McGuire of Somerville. The marriage was witnessed only by the immediate family.

The news of Miss Bennett's marriage was a great surprise to West Quincy people, and up to about two days before the ceremony her parents knew nothing of it. It was the bride's purpose to keep it secret. She is a popular West Quincy girl and has been a telephone operator on the Fort Hill exchange for about two years They will reside in Boston.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

Owing to the very great patronage and popularity of the newly opened reading room of Atlantic at 11 Botolph street, opposite the Quincy school, the smallness of the rooms makes it impossible to accommodate both the children and the grown people at the same time. The grammar school children have, therefore, had to be restricted to the afternoon hours until 5.30. From 3.00 until 3.30 would therefore be a better time for adults to visit the Branch, or during the evening hours, from 6.30 until 8.30.

Through the kindness of the firm of Branscheid & Martens in delivering it free of charge, the Daily Ledger will be found upon the newspaper rack, the publishers having given a copy here as well as at the West Quincy reading room. Our thanks are due to all who are interested in helping make this a success for the Atlantic community as the other has been so notable a one and so appreciated by the citizens of West Quincy.

Patrons of the library from the Norfolk Downs section are cordially invited to register or exchange their books at the Atlantic reading room and enjoy the magazines and daily papers. Begining next week the delivery basket for this neighborhood will leave Mr. Moran's store on Wednesday instead of Thursday as hitherto, and return Thursday instead of Friday.

There is on exhibition in the art gallery of the Public Library a series of thirty-two Japanese color prints. Four of these color prints are genuine, the remainder are reprints. All those interested in this exhibition are cordially invited to visit the library and examine the collection.

YOU need the Ledger every day..

MERRIMENT PREVAILED

At the Hallowe'en Party of the Welcoming Ten

The latch string was out at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Crane, Presidents hill, Wednesday night, the occasion being a Hallowe'en party given under the auspices of the Welcoming Ten, King's Daughters. The house was filled to repletion and smiling faces were in evidence. Mrs. Crane and Mrs. S. I. Wood were the hostesses for the Ten and one and all received a cordial welcome.

An original poem was read by Mrs. Crane, bringing in the program of the evening, which was very witty. A series of tableaux was presented, "Uncle Sam," "Taft," "Wilson" and "Marshall" "Roosevelt and Third Term Bride, Best Man and Maid of Honor." Suffragette Parade" and "Home Rule." These tableaux caused much merriment and elicited much applause from the audience, especially the suffragette parade, which was recalled.

After a short intermission, the play, "When Women Vote," was presented by the folowing young ladies, Misses Esther Beckford, Esther Sidelinger, Florence Sabian, Esther Wetherell and Marjorie Welch. The mothers who were so engrossed in politics that their children were going astray and their homes neglected, were the Misses Beckford, Sabian, and Wetherell, Miss Welch took the part of maid and Miss Sidelinger who for the want of a mother's loving care and guidance was on the eve of an elopement, was the neglected daughter. Each one took her part excellently, and the audience was delighted. The play had its humorous situations and pathetic incidents which were very ably brought out by the talent of the young ladies. They received many compliments from the audience.

After the play the company was invited to visit the chamber of horrors, being strongly advised to follow the rope, and sights were seen which would have made the strongest heart quail if alone, uncanny looking objects, sepulchral groans emitting from them. The party after following torturous paths and still clinging to the rope emerged from that chamber of horrors only to be confronted with a figure draped in white wildly waving his arms. However no mishaps befell the party, and no screams were heard only a few stifled and hysterical giggles, which manifested the strain under which they were laboring.

A room was mysteriously curtained off, dimly lighted, on the centre table appeared to be a cauldron from which issued smoke and fire, and around the table were seated men, with anxious and care worn looks upon their faces the ladies were told to look upon their future husbands. Audible sighs of relief were heard when the curtain was drawn.

Crouched over the dying embers, in the fireplace, was the oracle who came a long distance to be present on this memorable occasion, and who prophesied wonderful and auspicious events to the curious ones.

The interior of the house was uniquely decorated with all descriptions of Hallowe'en reminders, the flower scheme being chrysanthemums.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Crane and Mrs. Wood who are invariably hospitable and charming hostesses. The guests departed with many expressions of approbation for this very delightful evening, and Halloween of 1912 will long be remembered.

The committee was the Misses Esther U. Sidelinger, Florence Sabian Esther Beckford, Marjorie Welch and Esther Wetherell.

SETTLEMENT OF HINGHAM

Lecture By Rev. L. C. Cornish Interesting to Hearers

Rev. Louis C. Cornish, pastor of the First Parish Church at Hingham lectured before about 100 members of the Quincy Historical Society at the First Church here Wednesday evening. He was introduced by Brooks Adams.

Mr. Cornish reviewed the reasons why the Puritans left England and said that it was not solely for religious purposes but that the authority of the king was so great and he so officious that the people objected to his ruling without the aid of a parliment and came to America in quest of a new home, where freedom would prevail.

He pointed out the law which made it possible to prosecute a man for holding an opinion even though it was unexpressed. He showed the location of Hingham, England, on an old map and gave a short description of the town. He then touched on Hingham, Norfolk County and in speaking of the earlier conditions told of the arrival of Rev. Peter Hobart, the first minister and of his efforts to spread the gospel and aid in the bettering of the community.

A stirring recital of Peter Hobart's ride from Hingham to Quincy to install Rev. Mr. Flint, the first pastor of the First church, touched his hearers.

He also gave a description of the Campanile which is about completed at Hingham, built under his direction, and described the 11 bells and their inscriptions. He also read a list of names of Hingham's early settlers and among them were one of President Lincoln's ancestors.

He exhibited a number of photographs which were of material value in helping his audience to more fully remember the details of his description.

HOW TO EXPEND PARK MONEY

Subject of Hearing Before Commissioners in Boston

Mayor Stone, President Hobbs of the City Council, President Hearn of the Board of Trade and Representative Leslie attended the hearing Wednesday before the Metropolitan Park Commission to consider how the money appropriated for park purposes should be expended. Under the bill passed by the legislature this year the Commission has the sum of $200,000 to expend each year on eleven projects among which is the partial completion of the Quincy Shore boulevard.

It was suggested that the project to be taken up first by the commission should be decided by lot. The Quincy men however opposed this plan and argued for the building of the Quincy Shore boulevard from Wollaston beach toward Quincy and also for the completion of the Boston end of the boulevard from Atlantic street to and across the Neponset bridge to connect with the Boston boulevard. The subject was taken under advisement.

Two Policemen Hurt In I. W. W. Fight at Little Falls

Little Falls, N. Y., Oct. 31.—Michael Haley, a policeman, was shot, and Detective John Kennedy was stabbed during a riot in front of the Phoenix mill, where I. W. W. workers are on strike.

Trouble started when Chief of Police Long attempted to break up the massed picketing at the mill entrance. He had an altercation with one of the strikers. A crowd soon gathered and special policemen surrounded him and clubs were soon flying in all directions. About twenty strikers were cut and bruised. The women strikers were in the front of the massed pickets.

A second riot followed the first at the headquarters of the I. W. W. Long and a squad of officers went there to arrest some of the participants in the morning mix-up. He felled a man who, he said, hit him with a stone. The man is now suffering from concussion of the brain.

The strikers were barricaded inside the building and Sheriff Moon, at the head of twenty officers, raided the building. About twenty of the strike leaders were taken into custody.

EIGHT HOURS IN AIR

Aeronauts Start From Pittsfield and Land In a Maine Town

Gardiner, Me., Oct. 31.—The longest ballon trip ever made from one point to another in New England was ended here by William Van Sleet and Jay B. Benton after an eight-hour flight in the balloon Springfield over land and sea. The Springfield ascended at Pittsfield, Mass., and landed at Pittston when unfavorable winds were encountered.

After a two-hour course across Massachusetts the balloon entered a great cloudy area. Ballast was thrown out and the Springfield remained above the clouds for most of the remainder of the trip.

The sound of the surf was heard as it pounded on the shore and the ringing of bell buoys reached the ears of the occupants of the basket. It was not known how far the balloon went out to sea.

A safe landing was made at Pittston when the occupants of the balloon found that they were being blown backward towards the ocean.

SENTENCED TO DEATH CHAIR

Becker Appears Impassive as His Fate Is Sealed

EXECUTION SET FOR DEC. 9

Notice of Appeal, However, Serves to Give Delay of Possibly a Year—Former Police Lieutenant Is Hustled Off to Sing Sing In What Appears to Be Unseemly Hasty Manner

New York, Oct. 31.—Former Lieutenant of Police Charles Becker, convicted of murder in the first degree in having brought about the death of Gambler Herman Rosenthal, was sentenced by Justice Goff to death in the electric chair in Sing Sing prison during the week beginning Dec. 9.

Becker took his sentence calmly, standing impassively. He had no word of protest and the proceedings were absolutely formal. The attorneys for the prisoner made the various motions in low tones and duly noting the exceptions as each motion was denied by the black-robed justice.

Becker stood alone at the bar. His wife had been denied permission to stand by his side. This denial was an act of mercy, as the woman collapsed utterly under the strain as she stood in the sheriff's office and slid to the floor in a dead faint. It was necessary to call a physician to care for her. The doomed man's brothers also remained outside of the court room and his chief counsel, John F. McIntyre, was unable to be with him. The strain of the trial had broken McIntyre.

Becker was not given the usual permission to stay in the Tombs following his sentence. Instead Sheriff Harburger rushed the condemned man to the Grand Central station in the prison van and took him to Sing Sing, thus giving color to Becker's bitter comment of the other day, that he was to be "railroaded" even to the death house.

Justice Goff, in his sentence, made it clear that Becker might remain in the Tombs ten days if the sheriff so willed, but Harburger, who was the court of last resort, decided otherwise. Becker's friends said that his recent bitter verbal attacks on Jews influenced the sheriff, who is a Hebrew, to show the condemned man no consideration.

Almost before the words sentencing Becker to death were out of the justice's mouth, Harburger was fumbling with his handcuffs and was about to snap them on the condemned man's wrists when he was sharply rebuked by the court, who directed him to wait until the legal formalities had been complied with.

The death warrant was signed by the clerk and the justice. Then Harburger put the irons on Becker and he was rushed across the bridge of sighs and given a seat in the sheriff's office to wait the coming of the prison van to take him to the Grand Central station.

On the way to prison Becker was handcuffed to two of the largest of Harburger's deputies. His wife accompanied him to Sing Sing, and it was said on her behalf that she will rent a house in Ossining so that she will be able to visit him whenever permitted by the prison regulations.

Becker's counsel immediately filed with the district attorney a notice of appeal and a copy of it was dispatched to Albany to be filed with the clerk of the court of appeals. This notice automatically acts as a stay of execution.

Under the law Becker has six months to prepare his briefs on appeal and file a copy with the district attorney. At the end of that period the district attorney is allowed time to get his answer and after the issues are joined the case goes upon the calandar of the highest court. It is believed that it will be at least a year before the decision of the court of appeals in the case can be recorded.

Becker Is Convict 62499

New York, Oct. 31.—Charles Becker is lodged in the death house at Sing Sing prison, waiting the outcome of his appeal for a retrial of his case or for the execution of the penalty upon his body.

When he passed into his cell yesterday afternoon his identity as Charles Becker was lost. Henceforth he is No. 62499. His cell is No. 11 in the row of 14. Ten murderers are his only companions.

Zelig's Slayer Escapes Chair

New York, Oct. 31.—"Red Phil" Davidson, slayer of "Big Jack" Zelig, the gang leader, will escape the electric chair. At the opening of his trial he withdrew his former plea of not guilty and entered a plea of guilty to second degree murder. The penalty may be life imprisonment.

A jury was obtained in record time. Justice Goff then called to the stand physicians who had examined the defendant, and on the testimony that he was weak mentally the plea to second degree murder was accepted. Sentence was deferred.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

SAVOY CABBAGE.

SAVOY cabbage is the wrinkled leaved variety. It is the best kind to boil. It has a flavor which is particularly nice with meats.

These close leaf plants require plenty of washing and soaking in salt and water before boiling. The stems should be removed. Then they may be boiled in half a gallon of water, with two teaspoonfuls of salt and a little soda.

Cooking the Cabbage.

Stewed Savoy Cabbage.—Cut in thin slices, wash; then boil till tender. Drain free from water. Put into a clean pot two ounces of butter or fat and a little salt and pepper. When hot add the cabbage and stir it well until nearly dry; then throw in a tablespoonful of flour, keep stirring and add a cupful of either broth, milk or water. Let boil ten minutes and serve.

German Savoy Cabbage.—Take the outer leaves from a head of Savoy cabbage. Cut into small pieces, wash through several waters, put into saucepan, cover with boiling water and boil thirty minutes. Do not cover the saucepan. Drain, mix with the sauce and serve in a hot dish.

For the sauce take a tablespoonful each of butter, flour and lemon juice, a cup of stock or of water and salt and pepper to suit the taste.

Put the butter into a saucepan. When melted add the flour. Mix well; then add the cold stock or water, stirring constantly. Boil two minutes. Add the salt, pepper, lemon juice and grated onion. Boil a minute; then pour over the cabbage.

Highly Seasoned.

Boiled Savoy Cabbage.—Take a small head of Savoy cabbage, a tablespoonful of butter, a tablespoonful of flour, one-quarter cup of cold water, a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of white pepper, a tablespoonful of lemon juice or two tablespoonfuls tarragon vinegar, one-half teaspoonful grated onion.

Wash and cut the cabbage into small pieces, put on in boiling water enough to cover and boil forty-five minutes or until tender. Drain and pour over the sauce, mix well and cook three minutes.

To make the sauce put the butter into a saucepan, melt, add the flour and onion juice and add the cold water, salt, pepper and lemon juice. Stir until smooth and creamy and cook three minutes.

IN TURNIP TIME.

IN the fall turnips are excellent. They may be cooked in a great variety of ways that will bring out their good qualities.

Though they are often watery, yet if cooked with potatoes this deficiency can be greatly disguised.

Turnips must be well salted in cooking because they contain so little of it in themselves. The vegetable can scarcely be said to be nutritious owing to the fact that it contains no starch. It is best eaten with fat meats like pork or corned beef.

Suggestions For Cooking.

Large turnips will have a better flavor if the water is changed once while they are cooking.

When mashed turnips are being prepared add a little potato to them or a little flour before the seasoning is put in.

Mashed Turnips.—Take a quart of yellow turnips, wash and put on with boiling water enough to cover and boil until tender. Drain, mash and add one teaspoonful of salt and a dash of white pepper.

Turnips In Sauce.—Cut the turnips into slices three-quarters of an inch thick, then into small pieces. Cook in boiling salted water until tender, drain and serve with a white sauce made of a cupful of milk or cream thickened with a little flour and seasoned with salt, pepper and butter.

Excellent Recipes.

Turnip Soup.—Take two pounds of turnips, weighing them after peeling, and cut into dice. Simmer for twenty minutes in one quart of water, with four ounces of butter, a dessertspoonful of sugar, some pepper and salt. Then add a cupful of flour, blended with a quart of milk. Boil for twenty minutes and serve with dice of fried bread.

Baked Turnips.—Boil and slice some turnips. Butter a baking dish and put in the slices, moisten with a little milk or meat broth, dust lightly with fine breadcrumbs, salt and pepper and bake in the oven until a light brown.

Detective's Testimony Implicates Secretary of Iron Workers' Union

Indianapolis, Oct. 31.—Robert J. Foster, a detective, testified at the trial of the forty-five accused "dynamite plotters" that Herbert S. Hockin, one of the defendants, made the following statement to him:

"I'm not going to be the only goat. When you take me you'll take the whole bunch. I'll be satisfied if I get off with a few years, but I will not go on the stand. It would be worth my life for me to testify against the others."

Hockin is secretary of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers.

A GREAT DEMONSTRATION

Crowd In New York Cheers Roosevelt For Forty-Two Minutes

New York, Oct. 31.—A crowd that jammed Madison Square Garden from floor to roof and overflowed through three blocks of surrounding streets greeted the leaders of the Progressive party last night at the mass meeting marking the first public appearance of Colonel Roosevelt since the attack made upon him in Milwaukee, Oct. 14.

Governor Johnson and Oscar S. Straus, speaking to the immense crowd before Roosevelt reached the hall, paved the way for a great demonstration for the former president.

Colonel Roosevelt's progress through the streets was greeted with cheers that penetrated into the hall and brought an answering cheer from the inside. He was cheered for forty-two minutes as he mounted the platform.

In his speech, Roosevelt called for justice, saying his party can keep every promise and the task is to profit by lessons of the past. Character in civil life and the best gun in war, he declared, count most in a nation.

"We stand for the constitution," he said, "but we will not consent to make of the constitution a fetich for the protection of fossilized wrong.

"We stand for an upright judiciary. But when the judges claim the right to make our laws by finally interpreting, by finally deciding whether or not we have the right to make them, then we claim the right ourselves to exercise that power."

SIX LIVES SACRIFICED IN ORPHANAGE FIRE

Demonstration of Great Courage by Sisters of Charity

San Antonio, Tex., Oct. 31.—Six Sisters of Charity sacrificed their lives in an attempt to save eighty-seven children in a fire that destroyed St. John's orphanage. They succeeded in rescuing all but two children before they were trapped by flames. Three sisters escaped.

The fire's origin is not yet known. Eighty-seven orphan children, ranging in age from 2 to 12 years, and nine nuns were in the building when the flames broke out. Marshalling their charges to hurry them to safety, the Sisters of Charity remained in the blazing orphanage until the building began to crumble and fall.

The death of the mother superior was the sequel to a demonstration of remarkable courage. She returned to the burning dormitory when she heard the cry of a child who had been overlooked. A few moments later she appeared at a window in the front of the building with the babe in her arms. A ladder was placed against the unsteady wall and Fire Chief Wright scaled it, but before he reached her, the mother superior, with the child, fell back into the flames.

The three nuns who escaped were marching the children across the yard when the walls began to fall.

WARSHIPS RECEIVE ORDERS

Sent to San Domingo to Protect Lives of Americans

Washington, Oct. 31.—Increasing disorder in San Domingo and desperate street fighting in the outskirts of Puerto Plata, jeopardizing American lives and property, caused the navy department to order the immediate dispatch of cruiser Baltimore and tender Yankton to Dominican waters.

They should arrive in Dominican waters by the middle of next week, reinforcing the Prairie with her seven hundred marines. The Baltimore will carry an additional force of 150 marines and it is believed the three vessels will be sufficient to prevent anarchy in the ports.

JOHNSON NOT INVOLVED

Indictments Against Six Alleged White Slavers In Chicago

Chicago, Oct. 31.—Six indictments charging violation of the federal "white slave" statute, none of them, however, involving pugilist "Jack" Johnson, were returned by the federal grand jury.

Immediately afterward the inquisitors summoned Lucille Cameron, the Minneapolis girl whose relations with Johnson brought him to the attention of government officials, to fulfill her promise to tell many more details of her associations with the negro. The case was postponed until Nov. 7.

Grand Trunk Is Acquitted

Portsmouth, N. H., Oct. 31.—The jury in the United States district court here acquitted the Grand Trunk on three counts of violating the federal law. It was charged that the station agent at North Stratford had worked more than the legal number of hours in October, 1911.

Killed While Stealing Ride

South Framingham, Mass., Oct. 31.—While stealing a ride on a freight train, Edward Lovett of Lowell, aged 26, fell under the wheels. Both legs were severed and he died in a short time.

PATRIOTIC TOBY

Perhaps the darkest days experienced by the little army of Washington were those that witnessed the retreat across the Jerseys. New York had fallen into the hands of the boastful enemy; he had taken Forts Lee and Washington and the patriots were on the retreat, with the victorious British, following in their wake.

It was during this famous retreat that the following incidents occurred:

Some time after dark during one of those memorable autumn days the American army began to pass a little hamlet at cross-roads between New Brunswick and Princeton, in New Jersey.

The place did not contain more than twenty houses, and these were so scattered that the collection had never been dignified by a name. The houses were of the old-fashioned kind and several were of stone, and to all large gardens were attacked.

The wagon train, which carried much of the ammunition that belonged to the army, came straggling through the hamlet, guarded by a detachment of the most faithful. As the last wagon reached the place the hindmost axle broke off and the precious contents were dumped upon the ground.

Instantly all was confusion, and the soldiers tried to repair the mishap, but soon discovered that it was irreparable.

The other wagons being some distance in advance, and all heavily loaded, the men decided to bury the powder where it would not be found by the enemy when advancing, flushed with late victories.

The soldiers were discussing the burial of the ammunition when a boy of fifteen appeared suddenly in their midst. He was a stout lad, not very well clad, but bright-eyed and eager to lend a hand in the time of need.

"If you bury the powder here you must take care that the tories don't watch you and turn it over to the British when they come along," said he to the sergeant who had charge of the wagon guard.

"You've got tories here, have you, boy?" asked the Sergeant.

"Three families, sir. You might throw a guard around their houses while you bury the powder, and that will keep them from finding out where you put it."

"The very thing. You're fit to command a regiment," cried the soldier, and then he told the boy to point out the homes of the three tories, which was done, and guards were placed at the houses.

It was far into the night when the wagon guard moved on without the powder, and the boy had been cautioned to keep the secret that had been entrusted to his care.

"I'll do that, sir," said he, his eyes flashing. "You can move on believing that Toby Travers won't tell the hiding place of the ammunition. It's safe here and when you come back you'll find it right where you've hid it."

Daylight saw the headquarters of Lord Cornwallis, established in one of the tory homes, and Tobey saw more redcoats than he ever expected to see.

He was standing in the doorway of his humble home when he espied four British soldiers, headed by a tall Sergeant, advancing toward him, and while he gazed they halted in front of the house.

"You're the Travers boy, aren't you?" the Sergeant said, haughtily.

"My name's Toby Travers."

"I thought so. Well, Master Travers we want you."

Toby started a little, but kept his composure.

"Whatever can you want with me?" he inquired.

"Come along and we'll answer that question in a little while."

Without a word of further explanation he was marched to the tory's house and pushed half rudely across the threshold.

"This is the boy," said the Sergeant, saluting his officer. "We caught him at his home and he is the boy who knows where they buried the powder."

For a moment longer the leader of the British army looked across the table and then said gruffly:—

"Where is it, boy?"

All eyes were riveted upon Toby and the tall Sergeant at the door grinned his delight.

"Aren't you going to tell?" demanded Cornwallis.

"Why should I? If you found the powder you would use it against General Washington."

"Of course we would! That would be paying the rebels back in their own coin."

"Then," said Toby, resolutely, "you can go out and find the powder."

The face of Cornwallis flushed for a moment—his eyes seemed to flash.

"Do you know who I am, boy?" he exclaimed.

"Yes, sir—you are General Cornwallis."

"I am. I command this army and serve the king. I hold your fate in my hands, young sir, and unless you tell where the rebels hid their powder last night you are liable to severe punishment."

"I cannot do that, General," said Toby, resolved to keep his secret at all hazards. "I promised—"

"What's a promise to a rebel?" interrupted the British chief. "Come, sir. We can't wait all day on you. You are delaying the advance of my army and you must tell."

"I refuse to tell you, sir. There!"

"This is treason of the deepest dye!" exclaimed Cornwallis. "I never saw anything like it, and from a boy, too."

"This is too much," ventured one of the other officers in a lowered voice. "You should discipline the young rebel, my lord."

"Just what I am going to do. Here, Sergeant. Take the prisoner and see that he is guarded till night. If he still refuses to disclose the hiding place of this rebel powder, you will stand him up before six soldiers and see that the muskets are loaded with ball."

Toby was escorted to the only empty house in the hamlet, an old stone affair with a clapboard roof and one little window which had been boarded up.

Nearly all day the British force followed through the villiage on its march after Washington's retreating army. All day a tall, gruff, sentry paced up and down in front of Toby's prison. Every now and then he looked in to see that the "rebel brat," was safe, and each time he caught the resolute boy still confined between the four walls.

"Why don't you make a clean breast of it, boy?" said the guard toward evening.

"I am not a tory, sir," came the quick answer.

"Tory or not, it behooves you to tell where the rebel powder is. You know the orders."

Toby turned away and went over the other side of the old house, where he remained, looking defiantly at the guard, who thought him one of the "stubbornest rebels" he had ever seen.

Night came at last, throwing her sable pall over the memorable little place.

The last detachment of the British army had vanished, but twenty men remained to take care of the boy, safe in their clutches. More than once since sundown Toby was visited and urged to betray the hiding place of General Washington's ammunition, but to all the pleadings and threats he turned a deaf ear and was cursed for his refusal.

"We will quit here at nine o'clock," said the Sergeant at last. "It is the last moment of grace you have boy."

Toby listened to the retreating footsteps of the Sergeant, and then the guard resumed his tramp in front of the old stone pile.

"This is Abner Bryant's work," said the little prisoner to himself. "He is mad because they watched his house, and did not give him a chance to tell Cornwallis where the powder was buried. He takes this plan to become a hero in Cornwallis's eye and to show this British commander that he is loyal to the king. Never mind, Abner. We may be quits one of these days, and you may not stand so high in the estimation of King George's General!"

It was almost nine o'clock when the Sergeant drew up his squad and saw that their muskets were loaded with ball.

Abner Bryant and the other tories of the cross-roads stood off a little distance and witnessed this ceremony.

"He'll tell," said the head tory. "The boy will weaken at the last moment, and when the rear guard leaves us they'll take the rebel powder along."

"Certainly. His mother understands this for she won't shed a tear, you know."

"There they go now. The Sergeant is going to carry out the orders if the little rebel still remains defiant."

In front of the stone house the detachment halted and the sentry saluted.

"It is nine o'clock," said the sentry.

The Sergenat unlocked the door, the key grating harshly in the rusty padlock, and the next moment he looked in and called Toby.

There was no reply, and the soldier went inside.

A moment's glance seemed sufficient.

"There's a hole in the roof!" cried he.

"A hole in the roof?" echoed half a dozen voices.

"Bring a light. Quick! The little scamp has escaped.

The utmost confusion reigned.

A light was brought and revealed the interior of the stone pile; a loose clapboard in the roof told that the little rebel had actually taken flight, and the white-faced sentry seemed ready to fall on his knees with fear.

"He was here ten minutes ago. I heard him," he managed to say.

"And ten minutes to him means a good deal. He can run like a deer," put in Abner Bryant.

"It seems to me I heard a horse cross the bridge a little while ago," remarked another, and then the soldiers separated.

The Sergeant and one other hastened to Toby's home and searched it. Abner Bryant ran home to get out his best horse, but a startling discovery awaited him.

The "best horse" was gone.

The excitment that followed Toby's escape was intense. The patriots of the hamlet secretly rejoiced, while the three tories bit their lips with chagrin.

Some months later Abner Bryant received a letter exploiting the good qualities of his missing horse and thanking him for the use of it.

The letter was signed "Toby Travers," and the enraged tory tore it up and threw it into the fire.

What became of the little rebel of the cross-roads? The day after the surrender at Yorktown he was the bearer of a message from Washington to Cornwallis, and the defeated General looked at him with a great deal of curiosity.

"We have met before, my lord," said Toby, with a bow.

"I've been thinking as much," answered Cornwallis, "but just now I cannot place you."

"I'm the Jersey boy who wouldn't betray the hiding place of the patriot powder."

A flush came to the Briton's face and he turned suddenly to the young Captain:—

"We've heard from that powder since. I understand that a lot of rebels afterward unearthed it and used some of it against us in the seige of Yorktown," he said with a smile. Your General nearly lost a young Captain that time; but I commend your courage on that occasion. You deserve to be made a Major."

It was the proudest moment in Captain Toby's life, and the next proudest was when he went back to the little hamlet and turned over to Abner Bryant his black horse, which had carried him to safety on the most eventful night in his history.—Denver Republican.

TURKEY'S FATE IN THE BALANCE

Her Principal Forces Routed by the Bulgarians

ADRIANOPLE IS SURROUNDED

London Experts Think Allies at a Disadvantage Because Turks Have Battlefield of Their Own Selection—Rumors That Bulgarians Have Reached Sea Unconfirmed

Sofia,, Oct. 31.—After two days' fighting the Bulgarian army has gained a complete victory over the principal Turkish forces. The Turks have retreated in disorder. The town of Lule Burgas has been taken.

Public attention has been centred in the operations around Adrianople and the movements of the Bulgarians against Lule Burgas.

This town is an important point in the Turkish second line of defense, which stretches from there westward to Demotioa. Its capture would indicate that this second line had been broken.

Adrianople is now completely surrounded by the Bulgarians, whose attacks are meeting with great success, according to The Mir. The position of the Turks is critical.

By Way of London

London, Oct. 31.—At last the Turk has struck; how hard and with what effect is yet to be determined. If he has played the game well he has accumulated a large force of his best troops to meet the Bulgarian, who, though flushed with victory, must be jaded with the hardships inseparable from the kind of campaign it has waged.

With Adrianople still unshaken, the Bulgarian army must divide its forces. Sufficient men to hold the garrison to its works must remain before the fortress. Has King Ferdinand enough men to do this and meet and destroy the main army of the Moslems as a fighting force? If he has the fate of Turkey in Europe is sealed.

There is no question that, unless the Turkish mobilization scheme has completely broken down and the "Turk of Plevna" is no more, the Bulgarians should be at a disadvantage. The Turkish general has used two strong advanced positions—Kirk-Kilisee and Adrianople—to retard the enemy's advance and hold back a large part of his force, and under this screen has concentrated his main army, presumably, at the point most advantageous to himself. In other words, he has chosen his own battlefield, which King Ferdinand must accept.

The risk of this is that the main army may see the fortresses cut out under its very eyes and the enemy permitted a breathing spell and a chance to concentrate his forces before moving forward. This, however, has not happened. Adrianople still holds out. Its garrison is still intact and is a menace if the armies become locked in a great struggle.

In regard to the fighting now under way there are only dispatches from Constantinople, and these are confusing in the extreme. There is no mention of the big battle except that the Turkish commander says the situation is favorable.

The rumors that Bulgarian troops had reached the sea are unconfirmed, and it is more likely that only roving bands have gone so far south. Sekki Pasha is gathering the remnants of his army in the western sphere of operations at Monastir, to meet the advancing Servians and the allied Bulgarian column.

From Belgrade come reports that the Servian victory over the Turks at Veles was accomplished by the cavalry, which divided the Turkish force while the Servian artillery drove them from their positions. The Turkish troops were compelled to retreat so quickly that they were unable to do much damage to the railroad.

The Turkish troops defeated by the Servians and Montenegrins in the district of Novipazar are arriving in hundreds in Bosnia, having crossed the frontier.

TESTED AND PROVEN

There is a Heap of Solace in Being Able to Depend Upon a Well-Earned Reputation.

For months Ledger readers have seen the constant expression of praise for Doan's Kidney Pills, and read about the good work they have done in this locality. What other remedy ever produced such convincing proof of merit?

J. Fortin, 512 N. Montello St., Brockton, Mass., says: "I was troubled for over two years by attacks of backache. If I arose from a sitting position or stood any length of time, I was caused great pain. There was a feeling of weariness and if I did a hard day's work, I was bothered by lameness and soreness across my back. I finally saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised for such complaints and I got a box and began to use them according to directions. They went directly to the seat of my complaint, relieving me of severe backaches and restoring me to good health. It has given me pleasure to recommend this remedy on several occasions." (Statement given June 13, 1905.)

A SECOND STATEMENT.

Several years later Mr. Fortin was interviewed and he said: "I willingly verify my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills. You may continue to use my reference, as the relief this remedy brought me has been permanent."

Quincy High Team Out of Its Class in Another Game

FAILED TO SCORE

Quincy high lost to Everett high at Everett Wednesday, 74 to 0. It was Everetts sixth straight victory and scored their 279th point without having been scored upon.

The game demonstrated that the local high school team is playing out of its class. In the third period Larkin dropped back for a drop-kick but Quincy's line did not hold long enough for him to get the ball away.

Brickley contributed 24 points to his team score and did as he pleased when he had the ball.

Quincy held Everett for downs but once and during the game the line was like paper. Quincy's made the third down several times but lost on a fumble.

Principal Collins of Quincy was at Everett high last year and faculty manager of athletics.

SPOOKS MARCH NOVEL FEATURE

Of the Murray Club Hallowe'en Festivities

A very enjoyable Hallowe'en party was held at the Universalist church Wednesday evening by the Murray club. The church and vestry were very prettily decorated with Hallowe'en symbols and looked very attractive. Various Hallowe'en games were played by the young people. One of the features of the evening was the spook parade. Miss Harriett Lombard and Miss Edith Hyland costumed as ghosts flirted about the main church, vestry and other rooms in the vestry which had been darkened. The other young ladies of the club were gowned as witches and led by Miss Marion White they marched about the church and chapel. As they groped their way about in the dark the ghosts would suddenly appear causing a chill to run down the spine of some of the timid ones while others gave vent to hilarious screams.

The march of the spooks created a great deal of merriment. Folowing this as stated above there were various Hallowe'en games and ice cream cake and candy was on sale.

ALEXANDER FOUND GUILTY

Of Three Watches From Pettengill's Jewelry Store

WILL HELP RECOVER THEM

George W. Alexander, the young man who it is alleged obtained three watches valued at $150 for C. F. Pettengill last September was brought oveer from Lowell this morning and arraigned before Judge Avery, on two complaints. One charged him with larceny of three watches from C. F. Pettengill and the other charged attempted larceny from the store of T. L. Williams.

When arraigned the young man pleaded not guilty. H. D. Cole, the clerk at Pettengill's store from whom the watches were obtained identified Alexander as the man who got the watches. He also told the court how they were obtained. That the young man claimed he was a well known citizen residing on Bigelow park.

T. L. Williams told how the fellow had come into his store and wanted to buy a watch for presentation at the Fore River. He did not succeed in getting away with a watch however.

In reply to a question by the court the young man said that he was willing to assist the officers all in his power to get the watches back. While he could not give the name of the pawnshop where he had disposed of them or tell the street and number he said that he could take the officers there and would do so.

The court said that there was not sufficient evidence to convict Alexander of the complaint for attempted larceny from T. L. Williams and on this complaint he would discharge him. On the complaint for larceny from C. F. Pettingill he found him guilty and continued the case for sentence until Nov. 20 under $500 bonds. This was in order that the outcome of the cases against the young man in Lowell might be known.

The officers at Lowell and Lawrence were unable to get any information of any kind from Alexander. He told Inspector Goodhue this morning that the reason he refused to assist them was because they tried to bulldoze him. He however said that he was willing to assist Inspector Goodhue in recovering the watches taken from Quincy.

After court Inspector Goodhue, accompanied by the Lowell officer took Alexander to Boston in an effort to locate the watches. The chances are that if the watches are recovered some pawnbroker will find himself in trouble for not reporting the numbers as he is obliged to do under the law.

LURED FROM HOME TO BE SURPRISED

Miss Denneen Presented With Gold Bracelet by Friends

Happiness in abundance was in the air Wednesday evening at Atlantic, the time from eight to ten o'clock; the place Newbury avenue, and there were girls and boys, scores of them from Wollaston and Atlantic, who gave Miss Marion Denneen, a surprise party.

Plans for the event were carried out under the direction of a committee comprising Miss Ethel Jamieson, U. Cunniff and Phillip German, Miss Denneen was lured from home by Miss Ruth Parker and Miss Isabellee Jameson, under the pretense of visiting some friends. Miss Parker discovered she had left her pocket book at Miss Denneen's home, and on returning for it, Miss Denneen found a wonderful transformation had taken place. The house was lavishly decorated with palms and chrysanthemums, behind which were concealed scores of smiling friends, who pounced upon her with congratulations.

The festivities then commenced. About nine o'clock, a halt was called and Miss Ethel Jameison in a neat little speech, presented Miss Denneen with a beautiful gold bracelet, suitably engraved. Miss Denneen though very much overcome briefly expressed her thanks and the festivities were renewed until ten o'clock, when the happy but tired guests, were escorted to their homes by Mr. Denneen and Mr. Cunniff.

SOUNDS WARNING NOTE

of Quincy and that Squantum is now called upon to pay for these improvements while Squantum gets little or no return of the $16,000 paid in taxes annually.

"One of the things that is the matter with Quincy," declared Mr. Hagan "is the fact that no inducements are made to manufacturing to come to the city. Under the present high tax rate it could not be expected. That is one reason why the tax rate should be lowered by business like administration of the city government. Where there is a low tax rate you find prosperity and where the tax rate is high you find business decreasing.

"Give us an accepted street and a few street lights and this community will grow rapidly and where now vacant lots are being taxed for $2 to $5 you will find homes and property that will pay taxes of $200 to $500 a year. That is the way to make your city grow and get Quincy out of the rut in which she now finds herself."

Mr. Hagan was warmly applauded.

Mr. Abele spoke on the efforts of a committee of the Quincy City council to get Quincy's affairs into business-like shape. He spoke of his efforts in behalf of the uniform system of accounting which is soon to go into effect in the city. The carrying of $150,000 loan by the City Council from year to year was a violation of the law, which had become a common practice, and scored the plan of administration of city government which shoved off one load of debt onto the next administration. City departments were in the habit of ordering supplies in November and having the bill dated March of the next year. He scored severely the lack of system and negligence which had prevailed in past years in the administration of city affairs. It was a matter of negligence however as no dishonesty had been found.

Councilman-at-large Murray gave the cheerful prediction that the tax rate for next year would not be less than $23. He spoke of his conception of the duties of a councilman-at-large and said that such an official should work for the city as a whole and not for any one section. He warmly commended Mr. Abele and said he believed that if elected he would made a highly competent Mayor.

Ex-Councilman-at-large Cherrington said in part: "I am opposed to this everlasting condemnations of public officials. I asked a man in Ward 6 the other day, a man whom I know that if he would run, he could be elected Mayor—, if he would consent to run. He said 'I wouldn't run for $10,000.' That is the attitude of the men who would make the most valuable city officials. They will not be held up to the criticism and abuse that is heaped upon a public officials. I believe that Mayor Stone should be given another chance. He took office in one of the worst years that Quincy ever had. He has done well and if given another year will do better. I believe he should be returned to office."

Councilman Sodergren spoke briefly upon his record in the city council.

Councilman Beeman of Ward 6 also spoke in favor of Mayor Stone. He referred to his record regarding Squantum. He said he believed in ward representation and that the representative of a ward should work for that locality. He said that was what ward representation was intended for.

"I believe I know better than the man from Ward 1, what my constituents in Ward 6 have a right to demand. I intend to work as hard as I can to secure those things for my ward which I believe it rightfully entitled to."

John R. Nelson, who is a candidate for councilman from Ward 6, spoke of Squantum's needs and of his ideas of what a city official's duties are.

Ex-President William N. Kenyon of the Squantum Improvement association spoke in favor of additional improvements for Squantum. He said that Squantum needed a school house and more street lights. He decleared: "I walked over the hill tonight with a friend who asked 'where do you live?' I pointed into the vast space of blackness and replied 'down there.' It is an outrage that Squantum should not receive more improvements. We were given a half dozen street lights when we should have had 15 at least."

Councilman Cunningham spoke at length upon Quincy's affairs and made a vigorous attack upon the administration of Mayor Stone.

Councilman Hobbs spoke of his break with the Mayor and favored the candidacy of Mr. Abele.

After lunch was served interesting addresses were made by Representative Leslie, Candidate McGilvary and Mr. McDevitt.

Representative Leslie cautioned the Squantum Improvement association to keep its eye upon the large area of land which has been used by the Harvard Aviation field. He said that the New Haven railroad that owns this land had offered it to the Hamburg—American line for a terminal. He said that the railroad now had a direct right of way part way from Dedham to Neponset and was asking for a through way to the Aviation field. He said that the citizens of Squantum had a right to know just what the railroad intends to do with this land before it secured this right of way.
